There are many skirmishes indulged in between the soldiers and smugglers which belong to the sensational class. The story tells the manner in which a smuggler was saved from jail by his sweetheart. At last they successfully evade the troops and set sail for America. The pursuit of the smuggler takes up the greater portion of the picture. Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark play the leading parts.

"The Toymaker of Leyden." (Powers. Sat., June 5.)—After curing the consumptive, who is the daughter of the toymaker, the doctor marries his patient. This is rather loosely constructed. The Dutch atmosphere is not typical, and some scenes are badly photographed. Ettiene Giradot gives a sympathetic performance in the title part, but aside from this the reel has few merits.

"Park Johnnies." (L-Ko. Sun., June 6.)—Herewith are set down the adventures of a flirtatious policeman and an equally flirtatious bum. The actions of the two are quite funny. As a whole the reel will please. Louise Orth and Fatty Voss are in the cast.

THE MASTER MODEL

Mr. J. E. Bird of the Lafayette Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., writes:

"I cannot say enough in praise of your machine. It gives good service, showing a fine steady picture. I have two of your STANDARDS in use, one of which I have used two and a half years, the other three years. They never missed a day's service in this time. The only repair made consists of a part which was added to the older machine."

To once use a STANDARD means always to use STANDARDS. STANDARD projection is matchless as comparison will show.

Principle of Censorship Is Unfair, Says Harris

Gaumont Editor of United Program Declares That Censors Cannot Look at All the Footage Released and Do It Justice

"THE entire principle of censorship of moving pictures is unfair to the trade and unjust to the people," says C. J. Harris, Gaumont editor for the United program. "Moving pictures have become the one target for the concentrated activities of social reformers, wise and otherwise. It is the one public enterprise which appears to demand rigid and severe legislative consideration.

"The principle is unfair to the trade. No manufacturer of moving pictures offers to the public any of his wares without great consideration. From the time the scenario is considered to the day of the release of the drama, the entire course in production is watched with great carefulness by a large corps of men.

"These pictures often contain points on which all are not united as to worth. But having in mind future trade, no manufacturer will present scenes which are sure to bring upon him public disapproval. When the picture is completed, costing thousands of dollars, then comes along a censor, a State or city official, whose mental and moral character become the standard by which he judges. By his word the manufacturer wins or loses a small fortune and the public is given no chance to consider the quality of the drama.

"The idea is unfair to the public, and the public is a pretty good judge of what is worth while. A bad picture will not draw people and will soon drive itself from the screen.

"Censorship is unreasonable when applied to moving pictures especially. There is no censorship, so-called, of books, newspapers and various forms of public amusement. The worst moving picture that has reached the screen has not approached in injurious moral effect the average cheap novel. While censorship taboos murder, white slave pictures and their kind, the streets are filled with journals of varied tints of yellow and with dime and nickel novels dripping in blood. Rational censorship calls for justice which does not include all forms of journals, magazines and books, as well as moving pictures.

"Local censorship calls for a board in the city which passes on all screen stories before they are exhibited. A committee very often unpaid, but if on salary it would probably not exceed three or five in number. To do honest work as a censor, one must see the whole picture, 50,000 feet means 50 pictures of single reel, and would require at least 12 hours."

Selig

"PALS in BLUE"

In this Selig Diamond Special in three reels, released in Regular Service on Thursday, June 10th, Tom Mix has outdone himself in daring horsemanship. "Pals in Blue" is an exciting story of the Western Frontier. There is an attack on a stage coach by savages, the troopers retreat to the railway station, and the structure is set afire by burning rags tied around wheels which are rolled against the structure. How the machinations of a villain are foiled by "Pals in Blue" goes over with a wallop in every inch of film.

Start a Portrait Contest

THAT WILL PACK YOUR HOUSE

at every performance. You can do this by using a selection from the many portraits in natural color and duotone we offer you.

LISTEN AND WE WILL TELL YOU HOW!

Every one of these portraits is the best that can be produced. The natural color portraits—not merely tinted—are by those very popular artists, Coles Phillips, Stanlaws and Manning. Both natural color and duotone are 11x14 with heavy art mounts and fine for framing. To prove the quality of these portraits and value of a portrait contest, we will send you, prepaid, any two duotones and any one natural color, together with outline of contest, on receipt of 25c in stamps.

The small lot price on natural colors and duotones is 15c each, $1.50 a dozen. Special low prices in lots of 100 or more.

Besides packing your house, the portrait contest will create a sale for these pictures to your patrons. Displayed in your lobby they will sell themselves.

There is a $1.00 to $3.00 profit to you on each dozen you sell. Why let some other fellow make this profit?

The time to sell these portraits is when the people have seen your show, and the desire to have portraits of popular stars is aroused.

Tear the top of this page off across the dotted line, after checking the portraits you want. You will then receive outline of the portrait contest together with pictures, postpaid.

You are sure to make money on a roof show if you install an ESCALATOR

Otis Cleat Type Escalator Leading from Lobby to Center of Balcony, Hippodrome Theatre, Peoria, Ill.

The Escalator overrides the only objection to a roof show—the necessity of climbing stairs.

As has been demonstrated again and again by balcony theatres, the Escalator pays back its small daily operating cost of a few cents many times in additional patrons.

The Theatre Owner contemplating an airdome or maintaining a balcony should lose no time in investigating the Escalator. If this equipment has returned a handsome and continued profit over its installation and operating cost for all theatres where installed, why should it not do as much for Your Theatre?

Young and old alike take to the Escalator—and patronize every time the Escalator-equipped Theatre. Like the moving pictures themselves, the Escalator draws the crowds at first because of its novelty. Once people become accustomed to its comfort, they cannot "see" the Balcony Theatre or the Roof Show without an Escalator.

With the installation of an Escalator, the reputation of Your Theatre for being high class is as good as made —the success of your roof show or your balcony is insured.

Let us send you a free copy of our valuable booklet, "Keeping the Balcony Filled," full information about Escalators. Your request puts you under no obligation. Write to Department 5 of

AIRDOME LIGHTING WITH INCANDESCENTS

By R. E. Harrington

THE motion picture airdome may be divided into three sections with regards to the lighting requirements; i. e., exterior, entrance (ticket office and passageways) and interior.

In lighting the exterior it is highly desirable to provide a large amount of light, as a brightly lighted area attracts the crowds. Today individuals wishing to find a motion picture theatre invariably look for a brightly lighted exterior.

This condition may be readily met by the use of the large sizes of incandescent lamps. Many units are at present on the market for use with these lamps, consisting of a white glass globe with a metal housing.

The globe is used to diffuse the light and is held in place by the metal housing, the latter being so constructed as to protect the lamp and socket from the weather. The fixture or reflector should be ventilated in order to take care of the heat generated.

The complete unit may be supported from the side of the building by means of any of the standard methods of suspenson, such as bracket arms.

In the smaller motion picture theatres the use of two of these large-sized lamps will in general provide sufficient light. In the larger establishments, however, it is unusually advisable to provide a greater number.

The number and size of units will often depend on the location. When situated on streets that are brightly lighted and where there are stores, more light will be required than when located further from the business center. A relatively high intensity is necessary in order that the building may stand out from its surroundings.

It is usually advisable to provide some sort of an electric sign. Going from the exterior to the entrance, we find that many airdomes have their ticket offices so located that there is sufficient light from the exterior units for the ease of entrance and exit of patrons.

It is advisable in these cases, however, to provide a unit in the ticket booth in order to facilitate making change, et cetera. The smaller-sized lamps provided with a suitable reflector, and so located as to direct the light on the change counter, will readily meet these conditions.

In the larger airdomes there is a more elaborate entrance or lobby which should be provided with enough light so that the change from the brightly lighted exterior to the entrance may not be too great. If there is too much contrast the patrons entering the theatre will experience annoyance or embarrassment, due to the inability to see for the selection of a seat.

At present many lobbies are lighted by either the semi-direct or the totally indirect systems of illumination.

In the semi-indirect system a translucent dish is placed between the lamp and the floor. Part of the light is transmitted directly through the dish to the floor, the remainder being reflected to the ceiling and then redirected to the floor.

In the indirect system an opaque bowl is placed between the lamp and the floor. All of the light is reflected to the ceiling and then redirected to the floor.

In using either of these systems it is necessary that the ceiling be of light color in order that the best efficiency may be obtained. These methods of lighting result in soft, pleasing light. In uncovered entrances the indirect and semi-direct methods of lighting are, of course, inapplicable.

The ticket office should be lighted in a manner similar to that recommended for the less elaborate institutions, except that more attention should be given to attractive appearance.

The lighting requirements of the interior of airdomes are somewhat different than in the theatres that are enclosed.

Two methods of lighting at once present themselves. One consists of the use of lighting units located at the sides and rear. If this system is employed it is advisable to use some type of angle reflector so located that the light will be directed from the rear towards the front.

This method will make it impossible for the lighting units to be in the line of vision of the patrons. Relatively low wattage lamps should be used. The illumination towards the front should be of a low value in order not to interfere with the picture on the screen.

It is advisable for the circuits to be so arranged that a majority of the units may be turned off during the showing of the pictures.

The second method consists of the use of low wattage lamps strung from wire cables stretched across the interior. Some type of reflector should be employed in order to shield the lamp from view. Instances of the lighting of airdomes have been noted where this method was in use employing Japanese lanterns; also the use of round bulb, all-frosted lamps, thus giving a decorative feature.

Fixtures Subject to Weather

As the fixtures are always subject to the weather, it is advisable to provide weatherproof fittings, and where such units as Japanese lanterns are employed they should be so attached as to be easily removed.

The units should be hung high enough to clear the beam of light projected from the lantern. Exit lights should be provided in any case.

All of the conditions outlined above may be met by the use of incandescent lamps. In order to designate the latest development in incandescent lamps the trade name Mazda has been adopted by the leading American manufacturers.

At present Mazda lamps may be divided into two classes: Mazda

B and Mazda C. The Mazda B lamp is made in a construction similar to that shown in Figure 1.

Mazda lamps are made in this shape of bulb in a range of sizes from 10 to 250 watts for operation on 105 to 125-volt circuits. These are the types of lamps for use in the interior of the airdome, as they are made in low and medium wattages.

Different Styles of Mazda Lamps

The Mazda C lamps differ from the Mazda B lamps in three respects:

First.—The construction of these lamps is such that they are more efficient than the Mazda B. As a result more light may be secured for a given wattage consumed.

Second.—The color of the light from the Mazda C lamps is much whiter than that secured from the Mazda B.

Third.—The filament of the lamp is operated at a higher temperature giving a more brilliant light. This is of especial importance in exterior lighting.

The construction of these lamps is shown in Figure 2. They are made in sizes ranging from 100 to 1,000 watts for operation on 105 to 125-volt circuits.

The larger sizes, such as the 750 and 1,000 watt lamps, are applicable to the lighting of the exterior as well as the entrance.

In Figures 3 and 4 are shown night views of the exteriors of two motion picture theatres. These are lighted by means of the 750 watt Mazda lamps equipped with white glass enclosing globes.

A flood of light such as that secured surely will attract the attention of the public from a considerable distance.

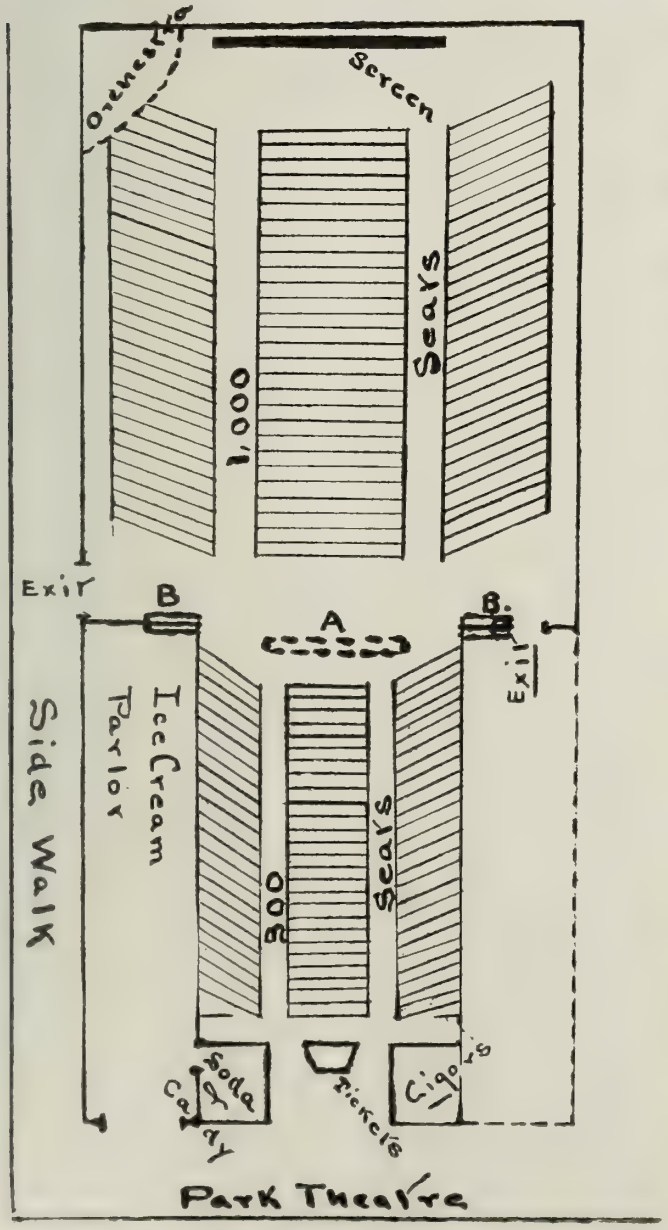
Enclosed Globes Necessary for Larger Sizes

The larger sizes of Mazda C lamps when used for lighting light ceiled corridors should be equipped with enclosing globes or used in semi-indirect fixtures. In Figure 5 is shown a night view of the corridor of a large motion picture theatre in Chicago. In this case 750 watt lamps are used equipped with semi-indirect units.

The smaller sizes of Mazda C lamps and all sizes of Mazda B lamps may also be used for this service equipped with open type reflectors. It is advisable that lamps, if exposed to view, be bowl-frosted; i. e., the lower half of the lamp etched. The lamps should be hung high to avoid excessive glare.

In table No. 1 is given the physical data on the lamps mentioned above. Under the heading "straight side" is given the data on Mazda B lamps, while under the heading "pear shape" is given the data on Mazda C lamps.

The above data gives the general methods to follow in lighting airdomes with Mazda lamps.



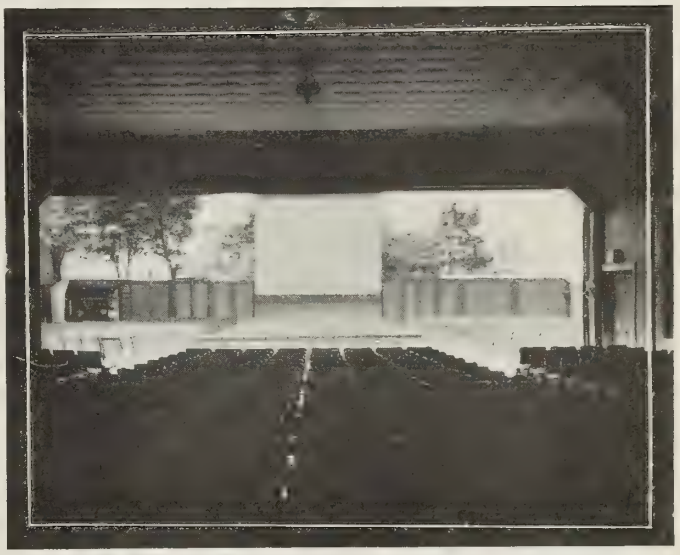
The important points are: A large amount of light for the exterior in order to attract attention; a smaller amount of light in the corridors, but not so low as to make the change from exterior to interior objectionable; a low value of illumination in the interior, with units so located as to be out of line of vision of the patrons.

There must always be sufficient light for ease of entrance and exit.

A Clever Combination of Theatre and Airdome

ONE of the cleverest pieces of theatrical architecture near New York City is that at Cropsey avenue and Bay Twenty-sixth, Bensonhurst, Brooklyn, where a beautiful little community theatre has been combined with an airdome in such a way that the summer capacity is thirteen hundred seats and the winter three hundred.

Under the advice of J. H. Hallberg, Thomas Lewers, who owns the Bensonhurst Hotel, decided to make use of part of his unimproved property so that it would render him an income. The result was the Park theatre and airdome. The question was how to build in order to accommodate the large summer crowds without having waste space in winter, thereby keeping down coal, lighting and other necessary bills. The plans were drawn similar to the accompanying sketch.



FLOOR PLAN, PARK THEATRE, BENSONHURST, N. Y.

The theatre itself is a three hundred seat house finished most artistically in stucco. From the street the whole blends with its surroundings, the lobby being decorated in summer with plants and box trees. On one side Mr. Lewers installed a cigar shop and on the other an ice cream and soda parlor, both of which are most lucrative.

The theatre proper is set in from the side streets so that there is a very comfortable pavilion filled with small round tables where ice cream, soda, et cetera, are served directly from the booth at the front of the theatre. To add to the attractiveness, this is separated from the sidewalk by a box hedge and is covered by an attractive green and white awning.

The theatre itself, which, as stated, seats three hundred patrons, is separated from the airdome by a collapsible wall, which runs back upon itself, as is shown in the drawing at the letters B. The theatre screen is shown by the letter A. This rolls up when the airdome is in use, fitting in a special box which is above the opening in the roof. This opening is necessary because the same projection room is used for the theatre and the airdome, with the exception that the lenses are changed.

LOOKING FROM THE THEATRE INTO THE AIRDOME

THE THEATRE PROPER, SEEN FROM THE AIRDOME

The airdome, like the theatre, is fitted with the standard Polo chairs, so that comfort is assured. At the left of the large open air screen is a covered booth for the orchestra, which, like the rest of the house, is neatly decorated with plants and flowers.

There is another very important point which should not be overlooked and that is that business goes on rain or shine because it takes but a half minute to close the airdome from the theatre and to drop the curtain into place.

MAKING THE ROOF OF YOUR THEATRE PAY

WHILE there are many exhibitors so situated that the operation of an airdome during the hot weather is an easy matter, there are hundreds who find themselves less fortunate. The man who is located in the centre of a city has little chance of finding any vacant land near his theatre which can be used for an out of doors show, or else he must pay an exorbitant rent. Even in the more open portions of the town there are often many obstacles in the way of a ground level airdome. The solution of the summer theatre problem is found in three words—use the roof.

At the outset it should be remarked that the first step in planning to use the roof is to be sure that the construction of the building is such as to make this possible. In most theatres of modern construction it will be found that the load of an audience on the roof will cause no dangerous strain.

If inspection shows that the structure is too weak for this special use a competent builder or architect should be consulted. In most cases it will be found comparatively simple to reinforce the rafters until proper strength is obtained. If the walls of the building do not require any reinforcement, the alterations will not be found very expensive.

The advantages of an airdome on the roof over one in a vacant lot are too obvious to need much comment. The owner of such an establishment is independent of all conditions save those of his own making. Obviously one of the first considerations in operating a roof resort of any kind is the problem of getting the patrons up and down.

As a matter of fact, this can hardly be called a problem in these days. Easily installed and cheaply operated escalators and elevators can be obtained in a variety of models, specially designed for use in motion picture houses. Entirely aside from their practical value, the mere presence of such devices in a theatre stamps the owner as progressive, and so adds to his prestige.

Planning for Roof Shows

Of course the ideal way to arrange for a roof show is to plan for it when the theatre is built. In fact it is foolish to consider building now without planning for this important feature. Each theatre will present its own problems, but much help can be obtained from a knowledge of what others have done. One of the most all-around satisfactory examples of two theatres in one is located at 304 Market street, Newark, N. J., and is operated by W. H. Meier and Martin Singer. In this theatre the ground floor is used as a regulation picture house. The roof theatre is so arranged as to be an exact duplicate in floor plan.

The operators' booths are located one directly over the other, the upper one being reached by a ladder from the lower. This not only gives a convenient arrangement, but makes the handling of films for two shows at once a simple matter. Ample protection from showers is provided by sliding roofing and curtains. The result of this scheme is that instead of finding summer a dull season, the house does just about twice its winter business, since the roof has the same capacity as the main auditorium, and both are usually well filled. The seating capacity of both sections is 440.

By operating two theatres in one in this way the indoor show not only enjoys the patronage of those who prefer it to the one on the roof, but also draws a good attendance from late comers who cannot find room above. Once the roof equipment is ready, the cost of operation is only a trifling amount larger than normal with about double the returns, a situation which is decidedly pleasant.

Same Films Up and Down Stairs

Another theatre run on the same general plan as that mentioned above is the Roof Garden, a part of the United States Garden Theatre, in Elizabeth, N. J. This open air show exhibits the same films which are shown downstairs, and during its first season, which was last summer, did an average monthly business of over $20,000, with a seating capacity of about 1,000.

Another interesting fact about Elizabeth theatre-goers is that in spite of the attendance at the Roof Garden, and a capacity business at two ordinary airdomes, the business of the regular film theatres was almost unaffected.

This seems to indicate what has often been noticed in other cities, namely, that open air theatres create a special line of patrons who are at most only occasional attendants during the winter. Once he has reached these people, any live exhibitor should be able to hold some of them after the open air season is over. This problem is much simplified if they have been attending a show on the roof of the theatre for which the owner wants their patronage in the winter.

There are many other examples of the remarkable value of a roof show. There has been some division of opinion, as to the affect on the business of the ordinary airdome. For the most part exhibitors now favor them, but whatever may be their views in this direction there can be no doubt about the worth of a roof show. When properly conducted it offers the exhibitor a great additional source of revenue as well as strengthens his position. One thing should be remembered. Any attempt to do things in a slipshod or cheap way will be just as fatal on the roof as in the main part of the theatre.

Theatre Deodorizers and Disinfectants for the Summer

NOW that the summer season is at hand, theatre managers are once again up against the problem of how to dissipate the stuffy, close and disagreeable atmosphere so universally met with in the crowded theatre during the summer months.

It is known that well ventilated as the modern theatre is, on still nights when there is no breeze stirring, fans only aggravate the evil smelling atmosphere, and while they undoubtedly cool the air, the odors are not dispelled. Right here is where the deodorizers and disinfectants that have lately come to the fore, are bound to be needed.

There is no doubt that as soon as the theatre proprietors and managers can see the benefits of making good use of this new departure for theatres, they will be quick to take advantage.

There are a number of so-called "theatre sprays" on the market that when sprayed through the theatre, leave an agreeable scent, and yet that is all that can be said of most of them. They perfume the atmosphere for a short time and that is all. The close air has not been dissipated, nor has the original stuffy odor been dispelled for long. And yet there are one or two combinations on the market that combine the properties of a disinfectant and still have an agreeable odor.

The general run of the first mentioned sprays are not disinfectants, and only are good for spraying a lobby or entrance where there is no odor to dispel, but in the theatre proper, they are absolutely worthless as a disinfectant or deodorizer, for their scent cannot be noticed after a short time, say five or ten minutes.

Theatres that remain open for the summer have not alone their regular competitors and the weather to combat and contend with, but this is the season when the open air shows—roof gardens, airdomes and so on—have their swing.

So if the theatre expects patronage it must furnish an agreeable substitute for the outdoor air, in the shape of pure, if not cool, air; scented instead of foul air, and above all this must be evident.

There are a number of concerns manufacturing disinfectants and deodorizers, there are others that make perfume sprays. Some concerns make both. Why not combine a disinfectant with some concentrated extract of Atamol and use it in a sprayer. Take for instance, the product known as Pineofect. This, combined with Atamol in enough proportion to disguise the smell of creosote, or whatever is the unpleasant odor, could be sprayed throughout the house to good effect.

If the theatre floor is scrubbed or washed down, some sort of disinfectant should be used in the wash water, and this would go a great way to tend to purify the air.

The compound known as Pineofect, has four times the strength of pure carbolic acid, but its prevailing odor is pine or creosote. This makes a good deodorizer, and if coupled with some pleasant smelling extract of flowers, etc., and sprayed through a spraying gun, would prove very effective.

Looking at this matter from a box office standpoint, the most that this spray would cost would be five dollars per gallon, or at the outside, six dollars. This might seem almost prohibitive at first glance, but six dollars a week means one dollar a day or ten admissions. If a comfortable theatre otherwise can be made to have a breathable atmosphere at an outlay of one dollar a day, it is not too much to expect that ten times ten extra admissions would be the result.

The Exhibitors' Attitude on the Airdome Question

Marked Variation in Opinion Revealed in Different Sections of the Country—Looked on as Unfair Competitors in Philadelphia; "Pests" in New Orleans; Boycotted in Milwaukee—Omaha, St. Louis, Elizabeth, N. J., Louisville and Cincinnati Find Them Successful, But Mostly as Annexes to Regular Theatres

WITH the many radical changes that have come over motion picture business methods, manufacturing and exhibiting, within the last year or eighteen months, the popularity of the "airdome," or open-air theatre, has suffered an emphatic decline.

Were this decline equally apparent everywhere, it could be dismissed by observing that the motion picture business had outgrown that form of "retailing" to the public for something better.

But the fact is that while the airdome is completely out of favor in some sections of the country, in others it is still in a strong and flourishing condition, though its relation to the "all-year-round" motion picture theatre has undergone a radical change.

The extent to which the airdome has fallen from grace, and the reasons for its altered character, are discussed in the pages that follow by various representatives of Motion Picture News. Much of the information given below will prove of undoubted value to manufacturers and exchange men, both in itself and as a basis for further investigation.

CONCRETE-PAVED, CANVAS-ROOFED AIRDOMES IN NEW HAVEN, CONN.

ONE out of every three neighborhood exhibitors in New Haven, Conn., and vicinity operates an airdome in summer. In addition there are those conducted by men engaged in other pursuits during the winter, so that in all New Haven has about ten airdomes.

Airdomes vary in size and style from small backyard enclosures, shut down in rainy weather, to those seating as many as twelve hundred people, canvas-roofed for use at all times. Of these latter, probably the best is the White Way, which is not run in conjunction with an all-year-round theatre, but opens in spring and plays until late in the season. It has twelve hundred seats, and is as well-equipped in every way as an up-to-date motion picture theatre can be. It is concrete-floored and has all improvements.

Savin Rock has two so-called airdomes—buildings well-roofed and substantial, but so constructed as to permit constant change of atmosphere and keep the interiors cool and comfortable. Both permit smoking, smoke being carried off by gigantic suction fans.

Four airdomes are conducted apart from regular theatres, and being in densely populated centres do a thriving business in New Haven each year. These are the Skydome, corner of George and Temple streets; Stella, 916 State street; White Way, corner Davenport avenue and Kossuth street, and Murphy & Brown's, corner Chapel and Ferry streets.

In the centre of the city the Skydome is the only airdome, and not being very large, is hardly capable of handling the crowds that flock thither nightly. The overflow usually finds its way to Savin Rock.

Neighborhood houses which run airdomes in summer are the Lyric, 158 Dixwell avenue; De Lucia, Grand avenue and Hamilton street; Arcade, 185 Congress avenue; Junction Garden, corner Dixwell avenue and Munson street; Cleary's Orpheum, 1002 State street; Pavone, White City theatre, Grand avenue and East street; Hedderson's Bronx theatre, at the corner of Dixwell avenue and Bassett street.

AIRDOME PRODUCES GOOD RESULTS, DECLARE EXHIBITORS OF ELIZABETH, N. J.

MOTION picture exhibitors in Elizabeth, N. J., are practically agreed that the properly conducted airdome is productive of good results to the business. In Elizabeth there are three airdomes —two in the lower section of the city and one in the uptown district. The Colonial airdome and Shepherd's theatre, both in the downtown section, have facilities for the accommodation of a total of 1,500 a night.

The Roof Garden, a part of the United States Garden theatre, in the uptown section, will accommodate more than a housand. These places open about the middle of May and for five months do practically a capacity business.

A conservative estimate of the aggregate attendance at the Roof Garden for a month during the summer season may be placed at 20,000. The Roof Garden, which is in the heart of the business section, has on each side one of the largest theatres in this city. The natural inference might be that the 20,000 who attend the shows at the Roof Garden each month are taken from the patrons of other playhouses. Figures of attendance, however, would tend to prove that this is not true. The films shown on the Roof are the same as shown in the theatre proper.

No special inducements in reduced prices are offered to attract patrons to the Roof Garden.

What is true of attendance at the Roof Garden is equally true of the two airdomes in the lower part of the city. Both play to capacity houses almost every night and the opening of the airdomes means little change in attendance figures to the theatres in the immediate vicinity. Briefly it means that in Elizabeth about 45,000 more people each month attend motion picture shows in the summen than in the winter.

That means an excess of about 225,000 people during the summer season.

Local managers are unanimous in the opinion that the class of patrons attracted by the outdoor performances is just as desirable as the regular patron of the year-round playhouse. Residents who are seldom seen at a motion picture show during the winter are regular attendants at the outdoor exhibitions. The open air, the privilege of smoking and the general spirit of Bohemianism appeals to the individual as well as to the theatre patron who enjoys belonging to the theatre party. The properly conducted airdome offers pleasing features that are attained with great difficulty by the regular theatre manager. To divert at the end of the season the patronage of the airdome to the regular playhouse is a subject that is being carefully studied by Elizabeth exhibitors.

OPEN AIR THEATRES LOOKED UPON AS UNFAIR COMPETITORS IN PHILADELPHIA

SO far as can be foreseen at present there will be fourteen airdomes in Philadelphia this summer. As all of them are in neighborhoods plentifully supplied with regular motion picture theatres, there is a feeling that they provide competition that is somewhat unfair. And undoubtedly the theatre proprietor has somewhat to complain of. He has to book and pay for his service all the year round; and if he does not provide his patrons with a bonne bouche in the form of a four or five reeler two or three times weekly he loses his business.

The airdome operator is treated much more leniently. He doesn't have to look for an early run service, if he does run a feature he gets it at summer price, and frequently at a much lower rate than is given to the theatre nearest him.

If a wet night happens, then by returning his service he is excused payment; whereas, if in a regular theatre an accident happened that might close the house for the night, service would still have to be paid for.

1914 was a poor season for the Philadelphia airdomes, some failed to last the season out, others left a trail of debt behind, probably not a third of them made real money, yet they operate cheaply enough. The owner of the lot usually exacts the rent in advance, but chairs and machines can be rented. Sometimes there is some little expense for grading, and wiring up, but appearances don't count for much in the dark. Of course where the airdome is an appurtenance to a theatre, conditions are improved, for then on a stormy night the building is opened, and there is no loss of patronage.

There are five such in Philadelphia, distinguished in the following list by the letter T:

Imperial, Second and Poplar, T; Third and Cambridge, Seventh and Poplar, Twenty-sixth and York, T; Thirty-third and Ridge, Forty-fifth and Lancaster, T; Fifty-second and Wyalusing, T; Fifty-ninth and Market, Empire, Frankford avenue, T; Lippincott and Park, Germantown and Diamond street, Broad and Ontario street, N. Chelten avenue, Tacony.

NO SUCCESS TO BE HAD WITH AIRDOMES AT PITTSBURGH

THE airdome business in the Pittsburgh district has never been what might be termed a real success. It has been tried out a number of times and all those who have invested their money in it have found it to be a poor proposition.

In some of the suburbs several of the airdomes have made a little money but not enough to warrant them going to the trouble of running their theatres. In one case in Brookline, one of the men, an experienced motion picture man, made a decided failure of the theatre.

Another case at Dormont, a Pittsburgh suburb, found that exhibitor running about even. He did not make any money during the past summer and will not operate the theatre there this season.

Another exhibitor at Sharpsburg ran motion pictures and vaudeville and he did not clean up much money—not enough to pay him for his trouble. Airdomes have never proved a popular pastime in this section and it is said that there will be fewer of them in this section than ever before.

AIRDOMES PROMISE TO FLOURISH IN THE CAPITAL THIS SEASON

WITH the advent of the warm weather the Washington, D. C., airdomes have already opened their gates. Owing to the fact uncertain weather conditions have caused financial loss in the past few seasons with the managers of open-air shows, these parks, with a few exceptions now adjoin the theatre and both are under the same management. According to the weather conditions, the show is under a roof or in the open. This arrangement has been found more satisfactory to managers and patrons.

The newest motion picture park is Penn Gardens, adjoining the theatres of the same name. With a seating capacity of 2,500, this is most attractive and commodious structure of its kind in Washington. The screen is placed across one of the corners and the seats radiate from this point as in a semi-circular auditorium. To relieve the usual barrenness below the screen a landscape garden of evergreens and palms has been attractively arranged.

The lighting system harmonizes with that of the theatre in its subdued circles around the screen and tall supported globe lights surmounting the enclosure at definite intervals. The ground has been well rolled, making walking easy and noiseless. An excellent orchestra accompanies the pictures.

The uniqueness of Penn Gardens must be accredited to George C. Schulz, its manager.

The Savoy Park, connected with the Savoy theatre, is another large airdome, with a seating capacity of 1,200. This is under the management of Edgar Tracy and has already been in use during the warm weather. While the lighting system forms no decoration it is sufficient for all purposes in clearing the park and retaining a subdued light at all times. The screen is good, the seats comfortable and the aisles broad.

Another airdome that has thrown open its gates is Washington Park, adjoining the theatre of the same name and under the management of A. H. Brown and his assistant, Robert A. Babbett. With a seating capacity of this of 800, neat appointments and an excellent lighting system, this park promises to repeat its popularity of last season.

The Maycroft took advantage of the warm weather to begin its summer shows in the northeast. This park is noted for its family patronage and especially for its baby attendance in carriages, which are provided for at the rear of the enclosure. This airdome is managed by Fred Stein.

The other airdomes, which will be enjoyed this summer are the Apollo, adjoining the theatre of the same name, under the management of Mr. Moorhead; the Truxton, connected with the theatre of the same name; Arcade Gardens, with Norman Luchs as manager; and Liberty Park, under the management of the Biron Brothers. The Bates street park is displaying poster and is ready for summer business. A few other airdomes will be added to the number as the hot weather approaches.

AIRDOMES HAVE PROVEN POPULAR WITH LOUISVILLE PUBLIC

IN Louisville, Ky., it is probable that eight or ten will be in operation. Airdomes have proven very popular with the public of Louisville, where summer nights are exceedingly warm, ever since their institution here several years ago.

Most of the airdomes here are connected with and adjoin motion picture theatres, which works to the advantage of the exhibitor in rainy weather, when he can transfer his show to the inside. The average seating capacity of the airdomes here is about 1,000 while the largest, Woodland, which is not run in connection with any theatre can take care of almost twice that number. The Woodland airdome has taken in at times as high as 1,850 paid admissions in one night. Others in various sections of the city do proportionately as well on many nights during the summer.

The money invested in airdomes in Louisville will run high in the thousands of dollars; how many thousands, it is hard to figure when the upkeep of them and improvements made from year to year is considered.

It is probable that one new airdome, if not more, will be opened in Louisville this summer. The site mentioned is at Fourth and Central avenues near the Churchill Downs racetrack but the plans have not matured as yet. An open air picture theatre in this locality ought to be a winner as it would have all of South Louisville as well as Oakdale to draw from.

NO FAVOR SHOWN TO AIRDOMES IN CANTON, OHIO

THREE years ago the first airdome made its appearance in Canton, O. It was built in the foreign settlement and was closed by Fire Chief Robert Mesnar after operating one night. It was an enclosure formed by a nine-foot corrugated steel fence, with crude wooden benches, a piano for music, a muslin screen and a wooden housing for the projecting machine.

Two years ago the second airdome was built. It conformed more closely to the fire laws of the city and state but charged only five cents admission and used a poor quality of pictures so secured poor patronage. This second airdome still stands, but will not be opened this summer, according to the management.

Motion picture patrons of Canton have shown no favor to these two open air theatres, but both are of a standard generally considered poor.

VALUE OF THE INDEPENDENT AIRDOME IS A MINUS QUANTITY IN CINCINNATI

IN the Cincinnati territory, the value of airdomes, operated independent of any theatre, is considered rather a minus quantity. There are said to be less than 20 of these in the entire district.

Airdomes which are operated in conjunction with theatres and adjoining these theatres for use during the hot weather season have a definite value. There are about ten of these in the territory. Their value lies in the fact that they are operated by a theatrical company which is established and is able to supply for the airdome regular programs and good features which they are able to get because of the fact that they are established.

On the other hand, the independent airdomes fail because of the quality of the service they give. They are considered unreliable by the exchange men and for this reason cannot secure good film service.

An instance of this kind is cited in the losing venture of a number of exhibitors who rented the baseball park here last year and used it as an airdome. They were put to great expense in hiring the park and an appropriate orchestra, but were unable to get first-run film service. People of the territory from which this aidome drew its patronage had already seen the pictures exhibited on this out-door screen, and the venture was not a success. However, the field will be used again this summer as an independent airdome.

A newcomer in the airdome field is the Forest theatre in Avondale, considered one of the most attractive motion picture houses in the country. Its airdome adjoins the theatre so that in rainy weather this summer the crowds may be easily transferred to comfortable seats inside the theatre.

Theatres, such as the Clifton, Victoria and Main, all in Cincinnati, equipped with sliding roofs which enable their owners to convert them into airdomes in a few moments, are considered the best bet along this line. They are always prepared for an emergency.

TOO MANY OTHER AMUSEMENTS IN DETROIT TO MAKE AIRDOMES PROFITABLE

ALTHOUGH Detroit is noted for being a summer resort city, and is no doubt visited by more tourists during the summer than any other town in the country outside of some of the large eastern cities, it is a fact that the theatres do not prosper as much as might be generally expected. In fact, Detroit is really a peculiar city when it comes to summer entertainment. The very enterprises that outsiders imagine would be most successful are really poorest patronized.

The motion picture houses do a fair business on the days when the weather is cool, but when the weather is warm "they starve to death," to use a slang expression. The trouble is that Detroit has too many counter attractions at nearby resorts.

For instance, there is Belle Isle park, owned by the city, comprising 740 acres of beautiful boulevards, lagoons for canoeing, bathing, athletic games, daily band concerts, etc., which draws thousands and thousands of people. Large ferry boats of the most modern type ply between Detroit and the island every ten or fifteen minutes, taking over several thousand each trip. The fare is only ten cents for the round trip. On these boats a large orchestra plays constantly. People are permitted for the ten cent fare to get off at the island and stay as long as they like. Where in the whole world can you get more for your money?.

Then there are dozens of other parks in and around Detroit, where ferry boats will take you for 35 and 50 cents, and which call for a day's outing. Dancing is permitted on the boats. It is estimated that approximately 50,000 people are daily taken away from the city by these ferry boats. Then there are daily excursions to Cleveland, Buffalo, Toledo, Mackinaw Island and other neighboring cities.

You will probably say, "But what has this to do with the airdomes?" Just this. The airdomes have been tried here for the past five years and have never been a success. At the present time there is not one in the city that will be operated this summer. When the weather is warm the people go on the boats where they can ride as long as they want for ten cents and listen to a large orchestra, or they can spend 35 cents and take a moonlight ride where a 12-piece orchestra plays for dancing on boats that are floating palaces. When the weather is cold, they don't want to go to an airdome but prefer to go to the regular motion picture theatres.

MILWAUKEE OFFICIALS AND EXHIBITORS ARE UNITED IN DISCOURAGING AIRDOMES

THOUGH there is no ordinance in force against the erection of airdomes, Milwaukee is one of the few large cities in this country that does not boast of a single airdome within its corporate limits. There are two airdomes outside of the city limits, but these can hardly be called Milwaukee airdomes as a very small part of the population even knows of their existence.

And the reason for this lack of airdomes can be found in the building inspector's office in the person of Building Inspector W. D. Harper. Though, without any ordinance which specifically prohibits the erection of airdomes, Mr. Harper has been able to prevent their erection by insisting that they shall comply with the building code in every particular and with the aid of Mayor Bading, who refuses to license any theatre whose building plans Mr. Harper does not approve of.

Mr. Harper has been fair in his crusade against the airdomes and has had the support of the majority of the Milwaukee exhibitors. "Airdomes are not only dangerous, but it is impossible to take proper precautions to make them safe," said Mr. Harper in explaining his stand against them. "Then, too, it is unfair for us to compel an established theatre owner to spend thousands of dollars in the erection of a theatre that complies with our building code, and then let a man come in next door to him for a few months with a canvas theatre and not have him comply with our code in any manner.

"This is unfair competition and in allowing it a city is violating the federal statute covering unfair competition. It is almost impossible to supply a theatre of this kind with proper exits and here arises the danger from panic which is infinitely worse than the fire danger."

AIRDOME WILL BE EXPERIMENT OF THE SEASON IN MINNEAPOLIS

MINNEAPOLIS is to try the airdome this summer. The out door film show has never had a fair trial here because the larger theatres have managed to keep their patrons fairly cool and no one ever ventured into the new branch of the business.

This year, however, W. A. Steffes, secretary of the Northwestern Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association and some of his associates are to open the airdome at Hennepin avenue and Tenth street, Minneapolis, which was completed last year just at the close of the season. A few plays were shown there and the indication was that there was a field for the business but the promoters went into another line. Mr. Steffes now proposes to take charge and give the coolest entertainment in town.

The airdome is three blocks from the center of the theatrical district, is on the principal car line of the city and is one block nearer the center of the city than the Auditorium, the city's largest hall.

The airdome will be arranged to accommodate 3,000 persons.

AIRDOMES TO BE FOUND ATTACHED TO MOST THEATRES IN ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS is an ideal city for airdomes, and almost every theatre of any consequence maintains an airdome. The climate is favorable, as, after summer is fairly begun there are very few, if any, chilly nights. During the season for 1914 airdomes were open for business from May 1 to October 1. In that time rain prevented outdoor performances for perhaps five or six nights, and on those nights practically all programs were moved to the theatres that maintain the airdomes.

A few airdomes are not connected with any theatre, such as the Hamilton, on Hamilton and Easton avenues. The Hamilton is the largest in St. Louis, seating 4,000 persons, and running an equally divided bill of pictures and vaudeville.

The Lyric Skydome is under the same management as the downtown Lyric theatre and the West End Lyric. All three places will run all summer, and make a specialty of large motion picture features. Both the houses have special air cooling systems that make them ideal summer theatres.

The California Airdome, in south St. Louis, seating 2,500, is managed by the owners of the Euclid theatre and airdome, in the northern part of the city. The California will show only pictures this year, in compliance with the requests of many of its patrons for more and better pictures.

The Eighteenth Street theatre has a large airdome directly in the rear of the house, and was the first outdoor theatre to open this season, on April 18.

Small theatres with three to five hundred capacity are perhaps more prosperious during the airdome season than any other, for it is the rule that an airdome has nearly always twice the seating capacity that the theatre in conjunction with it has, and many airdomes will hold as many as three and four times as much as the theatre.

There are said to be 125 theatres in St. Louis. It is safe to say that seventy-five per cent. of these theatres maintain airdomes, and with the independent airdomes scattered throughout the city, the number of outdoor shows would probably reach 100.

There are perhaps ten or twelve theatres with open sides; both sides can be opened by a system of shutters and transoms from front to back and from roof to floor. These theatres are ideal summer places of entertainment, and usually run all the year round.

The Juniata, the Mikado, and the Gravios are three such theatres, and some of the new theatres in course of construction are being built on the same plan. The new theatres building without the open sides usually put in an air cooling device. The New Grand Central, on Grand and Lucas avenues, has an excellent cooling system, and shows to as large audiences in summer as it does in winter.

OUTLOOK FOR AIRDOMES EXCELLENT IN THE MIDDLE WEST

AIRDOMES in the midwestern territory promise to be more regular factors in the motion picture field this summer than ever before. Several dozen near to Omaha are awaiting favorable weather to begin their season, which will last about three months. Dozens of letters have been received by Omaha exchange managers inquiring about rates.

The airdomes of the central west appear to be greater customers of features than of regular programs. They realize, their managers say, that the season is only temporary, that its chief attraction outside of the pictures is that it is out of doors and cooler, and that an outside crowd needs something more striking to hold their attention.

The most building of airdomes in the immediate territory surrounding Omaha this summer will be by a syndicate of business

Problems that Puzzle Projection People

What Makes a Good Carbon?

THE satisfactory working of projector arc lamps is largely dependent upon the quality of the carbons used. If carbons are made of impure materials, they will jump and flame badly; if not baked properly they may cause annoyance by excessive hissing or flaming, or become too hot because of high resistance.

A free burning, uncoated carbon of medium life should be used so as to give a good quality and quantity of light. By coating a soft carbon with copper plating its life is prolonged without materially interfering with the light.

Molded carbons and some of the forced carbons deposit dust when burned in the open arc. Those depositing the most dust give out the most light, but have the least life. Those depositing the least dust usually have the longest life, but the light is of an inferior quality on account of the increase in the proportion of violet rays.

The quality of a carbon may be quickly tested by a method employed by carbon manufacturers. The important points to be determined are the range, including the hissing, jumping and flaming points, the resistance, and the life.

The range is found by trimming the lamp with carbons to be tested, allowing them to burn to good points and the lamps to be thoroughly heated. Then connect a voltmeter across the lamp terminals and very slowly and steadily depress the upper carbon until the lamp hisses, when the voltage will make a sudden drop.

This is called the hissing-point, and varies according to the temper of the carbon. At this point the voltmeter should indicate between 40 to 45 volts—preferably 42 volts. Then lengthen the arc somewhat, and allow it to become longer by the burning away of the carbons.

Sputtering of Upper Crater

Presently the arc will make small jumps or sputters out of the crater in the upper carbon. This is the jumping-point, and should be not less than 58 or 60 volts.

Then let the arc still increase in length, carefully watching the voltage, and in most carbons there will soon be a decided flaming. This is the flaming-point. This point should give a voltmeter reading of not less than 62 to 65 volts.

The range is important as being a practical test of the purity of the materials used in the manufacture of the carbon, an increase of a quarter of one per cent. of impurity making a very decided reduction in the extent of the range. The hissing-point should be 4 or 5 volts below the normal adjustment of the lamp to insure steady burning.

Resistance is measured by means of the ordinary Wheatstone bridge, care being taken to see that the contact points go slightly into the carbon. A ½-inch by 12-inch carbon should have a resistance of .14 to .18 ohms. The same carbon with a copper coating of four pounds of copper per thousand carbons will have a resistance of .04 to .05 ohms.

Life of a carbon is most easily tested by consuming it entirely in the lamp, observing, of course, the current and average voltage during the entire time. A quicker test for a comparative test of the life of a carbon can be made by burning the carbons to good points, then weighing them. Replace in the lamp and burn them for exactly one hour, then weigh them again. The amount burned by both upper and lower carbons show the rate of the consumption which will accurately indicate the comparative merits of the carbons tested as to life.

Dust from burning carbons may be collected by a paper bag suspended below the lamp. In an ordinary plain molded carbon this dust amounts to 4 per cent. of the weight of the upper carbon.

A variation below this amount will indicate good life, but inferior light. An excessive amount of dust would show a short life, but usually a good quality and quantity of light. Coating a carbon with copper eliminates this deposit of dust entirely. Soft copper coated carbons would therefore seem to be the best to use for the best quality and quantity of light.

Objective Lens to Make Picture Smaller Wanted

J. J. T., Jackson, Minn.—On account of a limited seating capacity, and to allow of patrons being better satisfied when occupying the front seats, I wish to obtain an objective lens that will throw the picture farther away and make it smaller.

The curtain is twelve by fourteen feet, and I want to have it cut down to ten by twelve feet. The throw is about seventy-five feet. Is there an objective lens that will give me this size picture at this distance?

ANSWER.—The change you contemplate making is to be commended and you will discover the advantages to be gained by the placing of the screen back some distance from the front of the stage. Not only will it afford a greater number of desirable seats, but it allows of a better stage setting.

You will want an objective lens for film projection having an equivalent focus of five and one-half inches, and an obective having an eighteen-inch focus for slides to give equal sized pictures at the new projection distance of seventy-five feet.

Cleaning a Projection Machine

D. C. J., Akron, O.—The projection machine I am operating has been in use for some time. I have only come to this new position recently. I want to give it a good cleaning and want to know if there is a way of getting the old grease off without taking the machine all apart?

ANSWER.—If the machine is in good adjustment and parts not worn, a good method to use is to give it a bath in gasolene, or to pour gasoline over and through the mechanism. The machine head is to be stripped of the parts easily taken off and anything to be damaged, such as the objective lens. The final washing should be given in clean gasoline.

Airdome Screens Coated With Non-Peeling Mixture

ONE of the very important points about an open air screen, if it is of sheet metal, is to see that the joints are made just as tight as possible, then two or three coats of a good white paint, with a border of black or dark green, will make a very excellent projection surface. It might seem unimportant to have the dark border, but this will tend to set the picture out clearer and brighter, and will cost but a very little.

The manager of the Sumner, Sumner avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., had, during the first year, a great deal of trouble finding a white paint that would stand the extreme heat rising from the concrete roof of the open air roof garden. The coating broke and peeled off the screen, leaving a bare metal sheet. The Strand Screen Coating was applied the latter part of last year, and it was found just the thing. It did not peel, and even during the winter it did not deteriorate. It gives a clear and sharp picture, both at a distance and close to the screen.

Device Prevents Buckling of Films

ON page 106 of Motion Picture News for March 13, was fully described a device easily attached to any style of projecting machine for overcoming automatically the following defects:

The running of the film on the floor; the buckling of film under guards or fire shields; controlling switch to motor manually; running the machine by motor where switch to motor is controlled; manually operating fire or safety shutter by machine where switch to motor is controlled manually.

During the past few months this device has been tried out and found thoroughly practicable. Among the Chicago Theatres which are using it at the present time are:

The Bijou Dream, the Circle Theatre, Schindler's Theatre, the Austin Theatre, and the Bryn Mawr.

Thompson, Feaster Representative, Reports Good Business

WILLIAM V. THOMPSON, the special representative of the Feaster Film Feed Company, reports from Chicago that the business of the company there is surprising. He has deals pending with large financial interests in the West, which will comprise the sale of the exclusive territory rights for the Feaster film feed machine for six states, namely, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Options are now held by New York parties on New Jersey and New York state, and the Boston office of the company expects to close for the sale of its entire New England territory within the coming week.

Sixty-Four Spokane Operators Get Licenses

Spokane, May 24.

SINCE the ordinance requiring motion picture operators to have city licenses went into effect last November, the city electrical inspector states permits have been issued to sixty-four men, most of whom are at work, while not one license has been revoked for failure to comply with the city regulations.

A. C. Clapp, a Spokane operator, has invented an automatic safety shutter, which drops in case of a fire in the booth and prevents the blaze escaping in the auditorium of the theatre. The inspector says the device has proved so effectual that all of the local houses have adopted it.

Women's Orchestra Furnishes Music in Boston

CONTROLLED by the Keith interests, the Boston theatre, Boston, Mass., after using the submarine pictures and playing a season of English opera, has opened a high-class motion picture program, with music furnished by the Fadettes women's orchestra, led by Mrs. Caroline Nichols.

There is no other motion picture house in Boston where better music is played with the pictures.

Port Arthur Has New Theatre

FOUNDATIONS for a motion picture theatre, to be erected on the pier at Port Arthur, Tex., on the gulf coast, was begun recently.

The building will accommodate five hundred people, with the walls so constructed as to carry the weight of a balcony should it be required, in which three hundred additional seats can be provided.

Action of New Orleans Operators Upheld

UNION operators scored quite a victory in a New Orleans court on May 19. Four of them were discharged from a house that went "non-union," and in revenge the men stuck up posters denouncing that house. The judge upheld the men's actions.

Theatre Building Throughout The Country

MISSOURI

THE Elite airdome opened to the public on May 16, at 18th street and Park avenue, St. Louis, with motion pictures and a dramatic stock company. Five reels of pictures are shown every night, with the addition of a play by the stock company on Sunday and Wednesday, when ten cents is charged, five cents being the price on other nights.

The Delmar airdome, connected with the Delmar theatre on Delmar and Aubert avenues, St. Louis, opened on May 15, with a program of high class motion pictures in short reels and big features. The airdome is connected with the theatre in a manner that allows the patrons to pass from one to the other, and the arrangement is ideal in case of rain, or cold and chilly nights, when the program can be moved into the house at a moment's notice. The Delmar has a very fine orchestra, which is considered one of the features of the program, and is highly spoken of by the patrons of the place.

The Apollo airdome, a new place at Grand and Bell avenues, St. Louis, opened on May 15, with an all picture program of features and shorter photoplays. K. B. Avouris is the manager, and has engaged a fine orchestra to furnish the music for the Apollo.

The Knickerbocker airdome opened with a Broadway star feature on Sunday, May 16, at 3145 Park avenue, St. Louis. Paramount features will be run on Tuesdays and Thursdays, with a "Who Pays?" on Saturday. The airdome is under the same management as the Knickerbocker theatre.

The Rex airdome, connected with the Montgomery theatre, at 2705 North Fifteenth street, St. Louis, opened on May 22 with a mixed bill of motion pictures and vaudeville.

The New Favorite Airdome at Cherokee street and Iowa avenue, St. Louis, opened on May 14, with Mary Pickford in "Such a Little Queen." The New Favorite will show Paramount features, with a musical comedy company on Monday and Tuesday, and vaudeville on Sunday.

MONTANA

Facey and Bruen have opened a new theatre in Denton, Mont.

Kennedy and Gibson, of Great Falls, Mont., are enlarging their Imperial theatre.

A. A. Sandahl, formerly connected with the C. O. D. laundry business in Butte, has taken up the Pantages circuit in Great Falls, Mont., and will use motion pictures with vaudeville for his show.

Attorney B. P. Sandlie, of Saco, Mont., has purchased the "Theatorium," a moving picture house in that city, from V. W. Vaupel, and proposes to change the name to "The Grand." Saco is a small town between Malta and Glasgow, on the Great Northern Railway line.

MARYLAND

Baltimore's newest motion picture theatre opened the middle of last week. It is the Bridge theatre, located at Edmondson avenue and Pulaski street. The structure is one of the most attractive in Baltimore, and was built by Messrs. Rudolph B. Werkmeister, Louis Schlichter and Frederick A. Auman. The Bridge has a seating capacity of five hundred. It also has a large gallery and is the first of the new picture theatres to have a balcony feature.

The Crescent theatre, of Baltimore, which has been renovated and remodeled, was opened this week. The Crescent, of which S. Krauss is manager, is at Lafayette and Striker streets and uses first runs of feature photo plays.

The new Maryland theatre, Hagerstown, Md., opened May 10.

FLORIDA

The Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., is making arrangements for their opening. It is to be one of the finest picture houses in the south. The interior decorating and scenery work is in charge of Victor Gordon, formerly with the Vitagraph Co.

Plans are now being perfected at Miami for a new development of the lot on which now stands the Airdome theatre, on Twelfth street, which will, if carried out, provide the business with a cityfied cabaret. The dance floor will occupy the present site of the theatre, while the theatre is to be pushed back to Thirteenth street and made into a real open air picture house.

EXHIBITORS' ATTITUDE ON THE AIRDOME QUESTION

men from Plattsmouth, Neb., and adjoining towns, who are planning a string of houses through Nebraska and Iowa. They will be known as the Midwest Airdome Co., and will be incorporated, according to plans. Organization and building will begin at once.

W. R. Pramer, whose airdome is at Seventeenth and Vinton streets, and Charles Goff, owner of a large airdome at Fortieth and Hamilton street, Omaha, have made additions and other improvements to their places. Exchange men have heard of a large airdome at Lake Manawa, Council Bluffs, and another at Carter Lake, Omaha, to be erected for the coming season.

D. L. Shlaes, of Plattsmouth, owner of a theatre there, will open a huge airdome at Missouri Valley, Ia., this spring, and R. R. Booth will open one at Nebraska City, Neb., soon. Airdomes are likely to be a fixture of small towns after this summer, breaking all former experiences in the central west.

Airdome business in the central west was knocked out during the opening month, May, by a style of weather as unusual in this section as it was unexpected. Snow flurries and storms, with frost and freezing weather, covered the state and made it too disagreeable to even venture out to the community theatre, much less the airdome.

Charley Franke opened his airdome at Twenty-eighth and Farnam streets, Omaha, only to have to close it because of the weather. He will open again as soon as the weather permits.

A new airdome at Fairfield, Ia., seating 1,200, has been prepared for an opening day by the Orpheum Theatre Co. of that city. It will be opened as soon as there is good weather.

W. F. Stoecker is erecting an airdome at Twenty-fifth and Harney streets, Omaha, that will seat between 500 and 600 people. He has erected the metal fence surrounding the block where the airdome will be located and expects to have an opening night early in June.

Whether the weather has been severe enough to injure crops is of serious concern to the exhibitors, as well as to everyone else. The loss of the crops means dull business. Soon, however, the roads are expected to be in shape so the farmers, after their chores are done, can go in their automobiles to the nearest town and "take in" the motion picture theatres, and business in the middle west will be on the increase once more.

NO DEMAND FOR OPEN AIR THEATRE IN OKLAHOMA CITY

AIRDOMES in the past have not proven popular with Oklahoma City film fans, but whether the underlying cause was prejudice against that class of theatre, lack of service and comfort, or mismanagement, has never been definitely determined. To date, however, none has proven a financial success.

Several years ago, when the motion picture business was in its infancy, and all equipment was poor, resulting in poor pictures, an airdome was started here, and in a sense, flourished for a season. But the second season it lost popularity and later a combination vaudeville and picture house was erected on the site.

In other cities and towns of this state, according to reports, many airdomes prove financial successes each summer.

AIRDOMES LOOKED UPON AS "PESTS" IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS airdomes are to the big exhibitor like the jitneys are to the street railway company. In other words, the large show men look upon them as "pests." And they are successful pests, too, just like their brother jitneys.

As a matter of fairness, it may be stated that airdomes in the Crescent City do not compare as favorably, perhaps, as those in cities of similar size. The reason of this is that the idea has not been pushed. Most every New Orleans airdome shows films that have been run over again and again, and their big features are almost always sure to be repeaters, films that have been shown at the big houses a long time before they went to the small airdome man. Despite this, airdomes of New Orleans enjoy a healthy patronage from a certain class. Women and children and the family man represent their greatest percentage of patrons.

There are about seven theatres in New Orleans exclusively airdomes, and three for negro patrons only. Their seating capacity ranges from 300 to 1,500 though this year at the beginning of the summer season, several are arranging for larger seating capacity.

The largest airdome is at Spanish Fort, the resort of tired

It Means Dollars to the Man Who Knows

"I am one of the owners of the Oregon Theatre at Salem, Oregon, and at present, giving it personal management. Recently I gave your screen some very exhaustive tests to determine just what economy we were getting. The results were not only satisfactory, but astonishing. The layman will not appreciate this as I do, for I am a professional electrical engineer. When I mention a wattage consumption of 45% of what we had with the other screen, it means dollars to the man who knows."

Orleanians, and here in the summer thousands nightly throng the picture place, sit and enjoy cooling drinks and the breeze from the lakeside.

In the country immediately surrounding New Orleans the popularity of the airdomes is unquestioned. Managers have seen the wisdom of the airdome in the country, for it means to them cheaper rent.

Taking it all in all, airdomes in New Orleans are generally successful, but there is much room for improvement in this particular field.

HOUSTON A CITY WITHOUT AN AIRDOME

HOUSTON, Texas, the home of motion picture houses that rival palaces in grandeur of architectural settings and fine furnishings, doesn't boast of a single theatre that can be rightly labelled an airdome.

And the reason of this is simple. The scheme has been tried and found wanting. Rather than lose money, exhibitors have about given up the idea.

The first man who tried out the airdome in Houston was a very progressive exhibitor. He thought he saw the trend of the times towards an airdome in summer. He put money back of his brains, but both availed him nothing.

According to the views of Houston's largest exhibitor, Houstonians don't want airdomes when they have theatres like the Isis and Queen, both the finest types of theatres in the country.

SUMMER DAYS TOO LONG FOR OPEN AIR SHOWS IN WINNIPEG

"WINNIPEG has too many hours of daylight," exhibitors in Winnipeg assert. During the summer months, particularly in June and July, which two months the populace can affect the fresh air, sit out in the parks and be bothered neither by winds, cool air or mosquitoes, darkness does not descend until nearly ten o'clock.

This fact precludes the possibility of out-door motion pictures. Consequently airdomes are unknown in the central Canadian city, and a scheme that the public parks board had under advisement, that of having motion picture exhibitions in the evenings at Assiniboine park, has been abandoned, for the same reason.

NO PROFIT IN AIRDOMES FOR CALIFORNIA

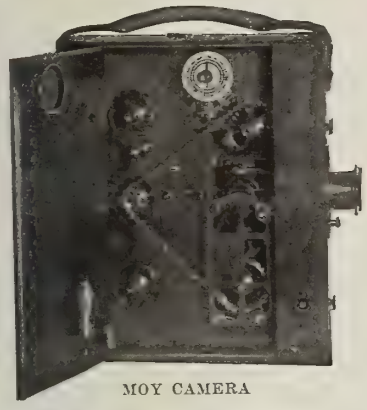
AIRDOMES have not in the past proven profitable in cities along the coast in California because of the cool evenings which continue throughout the summers, and as a result there are very few open air theatres in California, as all of the larger cities are located along the ocean.

In Los Angeles in past seasons, five or six have been operated, with more or less success, but its theatres are comfortable evenings throughout the summer. So far this season but one airdome has opened, and so far as can be learned, no arrangements have been made for the opening of others in this city.

In the towns and cities back off the coast, or those in the San Joaquin valley, which extends about two hundred miles north and south between the ranges of mountains on the east and those on the coast side of the state, and in Imperial valley, to the southeast of Los Angeles, as well as in Arizona and New Mexico, small open air theatres have been conducted with success. Local exchanges have been receiving inquiries from owners of these airdomes and by the time this appears in the NEWS many will be in operation.

OUTDOOR PICTURES FLOURISH IN SPOKANE

THE outdoor picture business promises to flourish in Spokane, Wash., during the summer. The interests which handled them last year made money and plan to proceed on a little more ambitious scale now.



Spokane has no built airdomes, but several privately-owned parks and resorts in and near the city are using motion pictures as a regular attraction.

Chief of these is Natatorium park, owned by the traction department of the Washington Water Power company, and only 15 minutes' ride from the center of the city.

Pictures were an important part of the programs at Spirit Lake last summer, particularly during the Chautauqua. This year the Chautauqua will be held in Spokane, and it is probable that that feature will be retained.

Pictures also may be used at Liberty lake, which is controlled by the Spokane & Inland Empire Railway company.

Building and Furnishings

Ventilating and Heating a Picture Theatre

By PERCIVAL R. PEREIRA

ONE of the subjects that is now being given more and more attention by the owners, as well as by architects of picture play houses, is that of providing adequate, yet economical, methods of heating and ventilation. This is from a standpoint not only of cost of installation, but as well as operation.

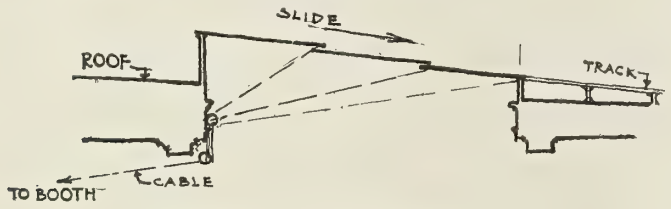

DIAGRAM OF SLIDING SASH

The owner is very often in a dilemma as to the particular type or cost of a plant to be installed for his building, since he is often assured by his architect or his engineer that if he installs a plant of a certain type, which may involve a considerable outlay of money, that this particular type of plant will give him excellent results at low cost of operation, but that if he is unduly careful in his first expenditure that the plant installed may very likely be highly expensive as regards fuel consumption and repairs.

Solving the Problem of Ventilation

There is no doubt that there is a happy medium between the cheap plant and that which is more elaborate in its arrangements. The type of plant to be used for ventilation and heating varies greatly for the size of the auditorium or building in which it is to be installed. For a moderate sized picture house, say one of about six hundred seats capacity, excellent results are often obtained by a semi-indirect system, that is, placing radiators at the more exposed points, such as the lobby and near the doors leading from the lobby and at several points in the auditorium.

The foregoing, of course, does not take care of the ventilating problem, which is solved sometimes in the following manner. Vento stacks or coils are placed in the basement near the boiler room. Steam is run through these coils, thus heating the fresh air which is forced over them by means of blowers. Many excellent types have been manufactured, such as those of the B. F. Sturtevant Company.

The tempered air from this source is then carried, by means of concrete ducts, under the floor of the orchestra (concrete is used where the space under the auditorium floor is not excavated), and from these points it is carried into the auditorium by means of chases and registers in the side walls.

Another and better method of distributing this air, and one which is more expensive, is that of providing a plenum chamber or large air space under the auditorium floor, and from this space providing ducts or mushrooms under a greater number of seats, thus giving a better distribution.

A System Economical to Install

In addition to the foregoing, particularly in theatres where smoking is permitted, it is found advisable to place an exhaust fan in the ceiling. The size and capacity of the blowers and fans of course vary with the cubic contents of the auditorium as well as with the number of times which the air is to be changed. Whereas this system is an expensive one, it is found to be the most practical, both for large and small picture houses.

A more economical system from the standpoint of the cost of installation, is that which is designed as follows:

Radiators are placed about six or eight feet above the floor lines and fans are placed directly above them, the heat of the radiator causing the air nearer the floor to rise by force of gravity and the fan blowing this warmed air toward the center of the auditorium. Then a fan is provided which blows the fresh air from the exterior of the building and another fan is provided in the ceiling at the end of the auditorium, which exhausts the vitiated air.

Of course, there are many variations of these types of heating and ventilation mentioned. In more expensive plants the fresh air is not only passed through the heat coils, but is also strained and washed by means of air washers or sprays of water, thus removing all dust particles.

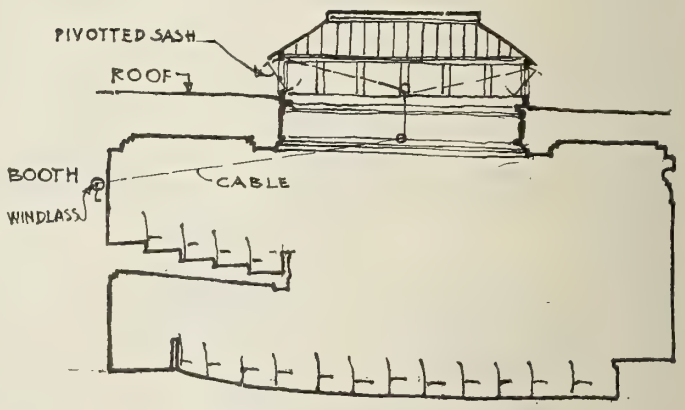

DIAGRAM SHOWING PIVOTTED SASH AT SIDES OF SKYLIGHT

Another phase of the ventilating problem which has presented itself more recently, is that which comes up in the summer.

Many picture theatre owners are now arranging their houses so that the roof may be opened by means of a series of ventilators formed of sliding skylights or panels. These are arranged in sections run on a track, opened by gravity, and are closed by means of cables connected to a windlass in the picture booth. This permits a large section of the roof to be opened to the sky on a summer evening.

Another method used is to provide a large skylight of the usual type, excepting that the suds are provided with pivoted sashes. These also open by gravity and are controlled in the same way as the sliding sash previously mentioned and shown on the accompanying diagram.

The last mentioned type is similar to that manufactured by the Superior Cornice and Skylight Works, New York City, which has been successfully used in a number of roof gardens and theatres, the most notable of which is that of the William Fox's roof garden over the Rivera theatre, Ninety-seventh street and Broadway.

Another type is one with a switch resting in a nearly horizontal position, but is pivoted. These do not present a very sightly appearance, however. At the present time in New York City, as well as many other large cities of the country, a fixed allowance of fresh air must be provided for each occupant of the theatre. This whole subject should be treated from a strictly engineering standpoint, excepting as it affects the appearance of the building.

Artificial Cooling for the Larger Type of Theatre

In the larger type of houses a method of artificial cooling is sometimes employed. This is done by two means. One is to force air through ammonia coils, and into the auditorium by a blower. This plant would be similar to that used in making artificial ice. Another method is to use the air washer, where such has been installed, forcing the air through the water spray, which must be cooled continuously. This is expensive from the standpoint of water consumption, unless an artesian well or other ample means of water supply is available.

So it is advisable that the owner should consult with a competent architect or engineer before awarding the contract.

First Concrete Theatre Under Way In Idaho

THE star Amusement Company, Sandpoint, Idaho, has erected a concrete theatre in that city. The structure is built entirely of concrete blocks, and is probably the first of its kind in this country.

Concrete buildings are of course not new, and nearly every town has stores, dwellings, out houses and other structures made of this material. The use of this substance for building purposes has been beyond the experimental stage for sometime, but it does not appear that concrete has appealed to the amusement guild in theatre construction.

This material should prove cheaper than wood in many localities, particularly in towns remote from lumber districts, where freight rates are also high.

The theatre erected by the Star Amusement Company will have a seating capacity of seven hundred. A feature of its construction is the method taken to insure perfect ventilation. An air space four feet along the sides of the building directly under the ceiling has been provided for. However, this is well fitted with permanent frames and glass, and can be closed or opened as weather conditions require.

$50,000 Theatre for Oklahoma City

REPRESENTING eastern theatrical interests yet unnamed, the Kauffman Investment company, of Oklahoma City, has secured a twenty-five-year lease on property in the heart of the Oklahoma City business district, on which construction of a $50,000 modern combination vaudeville and motion picture theatre will be started within thirty days. Plans for the theatre now are being drawn in the office of a Chicago architect, according to announcement.

It is planned to complete the theatre in time for opening September 1. The new theatre will be 55 by 175 feet in ground floor dimensions, will be constructed along the latest lines of modern theatres and artistically finished throughout. The property fronts on Robinson avenue, and has short alleys on the other three sides, being admirably adapted to theatrical purposes.

Goldstein of Springfield, Mass., Buys Out Schneider

THE Goldstein Bros., of Springfield, Mass., owners of one of the biggest New England amusement circuits and proprietors of the Springfield Broadway theatre, have recently materially extended their activities. They have purchased the entire stock of Chas. E. Schneider & Co., in their city, dealers and distributors in motion picture machines and supplies and general theatre equipment, who have been their only competitors in this line; and they are now the only general wholesalers and retailers in Western New England.

The Goldsteins are also erecting a new theatre, to seat more than 1,400, at Hampton Beach, N. H., where for some years they have controlled the amusements and where they already have the Bijou theatre. The new house, the Strand, will be of most modern design and equipment in every detail, and the firm has just purchased an entire block, on which it will erect an immense dancing pavilion and other new enterprises.

MICHIGAN

The Washington Theatre Co., controlling the Washington theatre at Washington boulevard and Clifford street, Detroit, has again leased this playhouse to John H. Kunsky, the present occupant. Under the terms of the new contract, Mr. Kunsky has full right to operate the Washington until September, 1916, the rental for the 12 months, starting from September of this year, being in the neighborhood of $25,000. By the time Mr. Kunsky is ready to give up the Washington he hopes to have completed what will be the largest motion picture theatre in Detroit, seating 2,800, and located at Broadway and Witherell street. Plans are now in progress in connection with this new structure, which will cost close to a half million dollars, and include a six-story building with stores on the main floor. Most of the building will be devoted to the various Kunsky enterprises.

June 15 is the date set for the opening of the new $75,000 Lakewood theatre at Jefferson and Oneida avenues, Detroit, Mich. It will accommodate 1,500 people. John Cutler is president of the Lakewood Theatre Co., owners of this new theatre.

It is practically assured that Detroit will have a large new east side theatre before another year. At a meeting of the prominent business men of the east side on May 13, over $50,000 was subscribed to the proposed new theatre, which also includes a business block. It is to be located at Chene and Warren avenues, the entire enterprise costing $400,000. The theatre proper will seat 2,000.

A. J. Gillingham, manager of the local office of the General Film Co., has purchased the Park theatre building at 303 Woodward avenue. The property has 21 feet frontage and depth of 110 feet. The theatre is a three-story brick building. The present lease has several years yet to run. Mr. Gillingham makes the purchase as an investment. The property is worth about $75,000.

Announcement has been made by Mortimer Hoffman, of Detroit, manager of the Hippodrome Amusement Co., of Saginaw, that work will start on the $75,000 photo play house here pending the disposal of injunction suit brought by Judge William Glover Gage. Most of the stock in this new enterprise is held in Detroit.

Architect M. P. Carney, of Battle Creek, Mich., is drawing plans for a small moving picture theatre, costing $3,500, to be erected in Albion, Mich. It will be one story, 33 by 88 feet in size.

Architects Williamson & Crow, Grand Rapids, are drawing plans for alterations to the Orpheum theatre in Grand Rapids, that will cost $15,000. This house is owned by the United States Theatres Co., of which A. J. Gillingham is the controlling spirit.

The Walling theatre, Lafayette and Shelby streets, Detroit, which has been operated as a stock burlesque theatre for the past ten months, closing several weeks ago, has been reopened as a photoplay house, featuring sensational film. L. J. Young has taken over the Walling on a percentage basis with the lessees of the theatre. Prices are five and ten cents, and performances are continuous from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

NEW JERSEY

The work on the new moving picture theatre of Hildinger & Papier, Lambertville, N. J., is being pushed in an effort to have it in readiness for business at an early date. It is anticipated that the opening date will be Saturday, May 29.

The Regent theatre, 86-88 Main street, East Orange, opened May 17, The building is 58 x 157 feet and two stories high, costing $50,000. The architect is Henry Baechlin, of Newark. The exterior is of tapestry brick and limestone. The theatre seats nearly 1,000 persons.

The M. & S. Amusement Company has a chain of theatres in Newark and Bayonne. Mr. Martin Singer, of Newark is the president and Mr. Walter H. Meier is the treasurer of the company. This, the latest link in the chain, is the finest house they control.

NEW YORK

The Strand motion picture theatre in Franklin street, Watertown, Harry Stowell proprietor, is to be enlarged to double its seating capacity, with a large stage added in order that vaudeville as well as pictures may be booked by Mr. Stowell from next fall on.

The Dreamland moving picture theatre, at the corner of Oliver street and First avenue, North Tonawanda, has opened for business.

The new moving picture theatre on Delaware avenue, owned by Carl Weisel and William Baur, opened recently. It is known as the Delaware avenue theatre. It has a seating capacity of 300.

A new picture theatre to be built on the southwest corner of Nostrand avenue and Robinson street, Brooklyn, by Glynne & Ward, proprietors of the Alhambra theatre, at the corner of Knickerbocker avenue and Halsey street. The new motion picture house will be known as the Mardi Gras. It will seat 1,500 people.

The projection room will be equipped with six machines, consisting of two motor generators. There will be a balcony at the side of the stage for soloists. Plans are being prepared by Arthur Carlson, architect. The Mardi Gras will be a solid building of attractive architectural design. It will occupy a plot of ground 110 x 100 feet. The cost of the building will be upward of $65,000.

M. Pilnacek, of 425 East 71st street, Manhattan, has filed plans for a motion picture and vaudeville theatre at Steinway and Jamaica avenues, Astoria, to cost $75,000. The building will be of two stories. The theatre lobby will be in the centre of the building on Steinway avenue. The exterior of the structure will be of light brick, with terra cotta trimming. The theatre will have a main floor and balcony, with a total seating capacity of over 1,000.

The entire building will be on a plot 54 by 135 feet. The stage of the theatre will be 21 by 45 feet.

An airdome is to be erected on Main street, Flushing, by Nathan Moskowitz, who conducted the Imperial theatre, at 22 Main street, Flushing, several years, and William Ey, of 368 Bowne avenue.

MISSOURI

A new airdome is being built adjoining the Mogler theatre, 9th and Bremen avenue, St. Louis, that will be a part of the theatre, as the side exits of the house open into the airdome. Mr. Jos. Mogler, owner of the theatre and airdome, says that his reason for building the house and outdoor theatre on that plan, is that he wants his audiences to be seated while waiting their turn to see the show, as well as while they are seeing it. On Sundays the crowd has always been so great that many people do not wait for the show, but go elsewhere.

Under the new arrangement 3,700 persons can be seated in the two places, and during the summer two programs will be shown on Sunday, one in the theatre and one in the airdome, and one admission will include both shows.

The California Garden, at California and Sidney street, St. Louis, has been sold to A. D. Lawrence and Chas. Deveto, who have indeed made a garden of the place, with the large spraying fountain and the many beautiful flowers just back of the seats, and along the sides of the airdome.

A new Minusa screen has been installed, and an all picture bill will be maintained, with many large features. J. C. Scott, former manager of the Euclid theatre, on Easton avenue, has been made manager of the California.

Music and the Picture

Editor's Note.—This department is prepared to answer all questions from exhibitors relating to the use of music in connection with photoplays, and to suggest suitable music for current pictures. Correspondence will be welcomed

CONDUCTED BY H. S. FULD

The Right Kind of Music for Airdomes

NOW that the summer season is at hand, the same unsatisfactory conditions will be encountered by the average picture lover on going to the usual open air picture show. The modern airdome may have every conceivable innovation, every new appliance that would tend to enhance the comfort of its patrons, and yet, lack good music.

The motion picture industry has made such strides since last summer in almost every department, that there would seem to be no excuse for that bugbear, "poor music" this year.

Projection has made such strides that a throw of three hundred feet is no longer improbable, and the new Madison Square Garden show will have the longest throw hitherto attempted.

Many of the new airdomes have retiring rooms for their patrons, cushions on the the seats that take the place of the old time benches, beautiful lighting effects around the enclosure, decorations around the screen, and then all this is spoiled by the management clinging to that most abominable combination, fortunately only met with in airdomes—a piano and a drum.

The old time converted store front theatre is fast dying out, and save for the small towns or in the outlying districts, is almost extinct. These theatres depended solely on the piano and drum combination, and as long as there was some sort of music accompanying the picture it was deemed all sufficient.

Theatres Gaining in Favor

Today the theatre that is gaining most in favor is that of the fifteen hundred to three thousand seat house. These houses have expensive organs and symphony orchestras of from twelve to sixty expert musicians, or both. There are even the theatres seating seven hundred that have a seven to ten piece orchestra. Then why should the airdome that seats as many, and often more than the large theatres, still be content with the piano and drum?

Theatres for the most part have raised the price of admission to ten cents, and on feature nights to fifteen and twenty-five cents. A few of the exclusively feature houses charge twenty-five and fifty cents, and there is one theatre in New York that charges up to two dollars.

The picture loving public being willing to pay these prices to see their favorite on the screen of a popular theatre, why not apply the same logic to the summer place of amusement?

An airdome having the advantage of being in the open, almost always cool after sundown, the men being able to smoke in comfort has, or should have the preference. If the same grade of pictures is shown in the airdome as is shown in the high-class theatre, why not give the patrons the same grade of music, and if necessary charge the same prices?

The show attractions being even, the airdome has the advantage and should be a great drawing card this summer. But this can only be, if the musical accompaniment to the pictures is equal in quality to that in the theatres.

It is doubly imperative in the case of the airdome to have music that can be heard about the outside noises; sometimes it is the rumbling of the overhead elevated road or the traffic on the streets; anyhow, the idea of the piano and drum is inadequate.

The piano can be heard by those in front when played normally but necessarily becomes a pounding when played so that those in the rear can hear the music (?). Needless to add the drum is heard in the rear.

Let us have real music in the airdomes as well as in the theatres.

Orchestra Installed in Spokane Theatre

AN orchestra of twelve pieces has been installed by Manager William Cutts at the Liberty theatre, Spokane, Wash., where a Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones organ has been furnishing all the music.

This is an innovation for this territory. The Arcade, since closed, used an orchestra of three to four pieces at one time, but other picture houses have been content to depend upon piano or organ accompaniment for pictures and vocalists.

The Liberty players are in charge of Charles Glaze, who comes from the Majestic theatre, Portland.

New York Pianist Plays at Minneapolis Theatre

EDWARD B. HORTON, musician at the Princess theatre in Omaha, Neb., has gone to Minneapolis, Minn., and the management of the Princess has been fortunate enough to get Professor Gruendler of New York to take his place.

Professor Gruendler was instructed by his physicians to come West for his health. To the mutual benefit of himself and the managers of the Princess he decided on Omaha as his stopping place.

Symphony Orchestra and Harpist Featured at Globe, Philadelphia

THE Globe, Philadelphia, which since the inauguration of its photoplay policy, draws large crowds, makes a special feature of its music. Besides a concert organ, there is a symphony orchestra of eighteen pieces, of which Chas. Klitsch is leader. Wm. M. Klaiss is organist and Jason Milton Jones, pianist. F. N. Nicoletti, one of America's leading harpists, gives harp solos during the performance.

Chester, Pa., is a town of 10,000 inhabitants, and has a theatre, the Grand Opera House, of 1,000 seats. It was formerly under the management of J. Fred Small, but on May 1 F. J. Myers became lessee and manager. This is a ten-cent house; many of its attractions are booked through the Exhibitors' League of Philadelphia.

Viola Allen as "White Sister" Achieves Great Film Success

Probably no announcement caused a greater stir in the photoplay world than that made recently by Essanay to the effect that Viola Allen had been secured to play the leading role in "The White Sister." Thousands will remember the wonderful part as it was played by Miss Allen on the stage.

The "White Sister" has been made into a marvelous photoplay by Essanay and Miss Allen has given to the world a film record that will be an everlasting tribute to her art.

This is the first and greatest photoplay in which Miss Allen has ever appeared. This wonderful actress received many offers from great film companies to appear on the screen. She refused them for Essanay.

Only the knowledge that Essanay could and would make a master production of "The White Sister" decided Miss Allen to accept the offer. As a friend of the late F. Marion Crawford and his family Miss Allen felt that she could do no more than pay a tribute to the author's greatness by a film record of his most popular work.

Essanay is now offering this greatest of all productions to exhibitors throughout the United States. It is unnecessary to tell you what this stupendous photoplay will mean to you and your theatre. You can apply for bookings now through any branch office of the V-L-S-E (Inc.).

We have secured good advertisers to talk to YOU. Listen to them!

Thumbs Up For "Graustark" and "The Slim Princess"

In the Roman arena the great public sat in judgment on the gladiators who battled for their entertainment. It gave its approval to a favorite by holding thumbs up. Thumbs down meant death.

The public today guarantees the success of a photoplay or signals for its death just as surely as it disposed of a gladiator in the time of Nero.

The public has sat in judgment on Essanay's great feature releases, "Graustark" and "The Slim Princess." Its thumbs are up. These two plays, the former in six acts, by George Barr McCutcheon, and the latter in four acts, by George Ade, have stood the test of public approval.

Essanay has received word from exhibitors from all parts of the country that the public is wild with enthusiasm over these two plays. Theatres where they are being shown are crowded to overflowing.

To you this means big box office receipts. It means that the booking of these plays assures you of great crowds. All you have to do is to count the money.

Present and Future Audiences

IN one of New York's best neighborhood theatres, the other evening a large audience jeered wildly at portions of a high-class foreign feature and sat complacently through as hopelessly mediocre a picture as any of our present day daily-change programs could be guilty of.

Which situation—and undoubtedly a similar one prevails generally—opens up an interesting discussion.

THE foreign feature was unquestionably an artistic production. The audience laughed, in their own ignorance, at its portrayal of social customs which were strange to them and at the deeply emotional acting.

The artistic detail was simply "over their heads."

AND just as unquestionably the other picture was poor. It was hackneyed, wishy-washy melodrama. The acting was amateurish.

One of the principal scenes approached the burlesque; it was worse than the stilted grouping of a cross-roads photographer.

The manager heartily agreed with these conclusions. He would not have booked the picture, he said, had he given it a screen examination. He took his exchange's O. K.

AND yet his audience seemed satisfied. They were far from being hilarious over it; their satisfaction, in fact, was somewhat sodden; but at least their general attitude would indicate that this sort of picture was as good as they expected for their fifteen cents admission.

It is very doubtful if such a picture would go alone, without the impetus given it by the program of which it was a part.

At the same time, it satisfied a large audience in an excellent neighborhood, and so we must regard it as a commercial success. It was a commercial success; and the foreign picture was an artistic success.

FROM which, apparently, we may draw the conclusion that inartistic pictures are successful commercially.

Hence, why criticize them from the higher standpoint; and, since they get the money, why not continue to produce them?

BUT does this view really sound the situation? Does it get under the surface? Is it keen business foresight?

No—and emphatically no.

This mediocre picture was satisfactory simply because the audience was mediocre.

And—this is the point—the audience had become mediocre simply because the theatre had been giving right along a surfeit of just such poor pictures.

MEDIOCRITY begets mediocrity.

If you give ordinary pictures you will gradually acquire an ordinary audience. This applies anywhere.

You get this sort of audience by driving away the more intelligent, even though you attract the latter class irregularly with a good feature, or serial, or topical weekly.

AND so far, so good. Ordinary pictures are commercially successful for ordinary people.

But because these pictures satisfy large audiences, we should not jump to the conclusion that motion pictures need only to be ordinary to be successful.

HOW about the greater—much greater—audience which can only be attracted by better pictures?

We have some remarkably cheap mail order publications with remarkably large circulations.

The people who read them are intensely satisfied with their flabby stories and worn-out jokes.

Their circulations, by the way, according to the publishers' boast, are confined altogether to towns of under one thousand population, to people who are out of touch with better class amusement.

BUT we don't gauge the reading public of the United States by these mediums. The larger, much larger, reading public calls for high-class books and stories.

And this greater population will only be satisfied with pictures of equal artistic and literary merit.

THE great majority of picture theatres can draw these people and acquire greater and better audiences.

Satisfying an ordinary audience with an ordinary picture may be all right from the standpoint of the day's gate receipts; but it is no criterion of what can be done.

THERE are not too many picture theatre seats in the United States.

There are, on the contrary, not enough high-class pictures to draw from the greater public and so fill them.

It is the ordinary—even though apparently successful—picture which is limiting the picture theatre-going population—a population which ought to have scarcely any limit.

Vol. XI June 12, 1915 No. 23

The Kinship of the Printed Word and the Printed Picture

OF the two censorship evils which confronted them, the Massachusetts film men have, at least, escaped the greater.

The legislature capitulated to the group of reformers who waved the negro vote menancingly under their noses, and put the censor "lid" on Boston; but when it became a matter of yoking the entire State to a board of film supervisors, the law-makers apparently preferred to shift the responsibility to their honorable successors.

MEANTIME, the film men and their adversaries are preparing to wage a campaign for the control of public opinion.

The motion picture group have already served notice that they will appeal to the people through the columns of the daily newspapers. The women's clubs and their allies, accustomed to publicity, will not be backward in resorting to some tactics.

The motion picture men's program of education cannot begin too soon, nor carried too far. Such a course is precisely the one MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been urging exhibitors and exchange men in such a situation to follow.

THE public has misjudged the picture—where it has misjudged it—through ignorance, and the impossibility of obtaining accurate information concerning pictures. They have heard but one side of the question—the side of the censorship advocates.

There is another side—and it is just there that, we believe, the motion picture, the newspaper and the magazine meet on a common ground, in a common interest, to resist a common enemy.

The leaders of the motion picture censorship movement have not proclaimed a desire to exercise the same jurisdiction over the daily and the periodical press.

But if the validity of the principle of censorship is once admitted in any particular instance, it cannot be very long before they will demand its acceptance in the field of the printed word as well as that of the printed picture.

ONCE the newspapers realize this, the film men will have an ally whose weight is likely to count even more with the politician than the negro vote.

Meanwhile, the exhibitors and exchange men can make news for themselves and about themselves, by keeping the censor pot boiling, and by making it plain to the newspapers as well as to the city officials that they are disposed to test to the uttermost the power of any individual or group of individuals to interfere with the legitimate exercise of their business.

What the Boards of Trade Are Doing For the Business

A NOTABLE development in this business within the past few months has been the formation, in various important exchange centers, of Boards of Trade.

These associations, composed of the exchange managers in the cities where they have sprung up, owed their rise, primarily, to the necessity for bringing some order out of the chaotic credit conditions which had prevailed in their territory since the beginning of the business.

The value of such organization was immediately demonstrated by the relief they afforded their members on credit problems.

BUT this first function of the Boards of Trade has already begun to be overshadowed by the larger service they are rendering of consistent and efficient co-operation with the exhibitor on all questions of common interest.

Created at first with self-defense as the paramount object, the Boards of Trade are helping to make better exchange men and better exhibitors by broadening the vision of each, by establishing standards of business conduct, by stimulating and circulating new and progressive ideas and by bringing each group to a closer understanding of the other.

BEST of all, the exchange board of trade is drawing the line, as it has never been drawn before, between the permanent, wide-awake, high-grade exhibitor, and the speculator who "takes a flier" into the exhibiting end of the business "to make his pile," as he has heard it can be made, and then withdraw, leaving behind him a trail of dissatisfied patrons, broken down theatres, unpaid rental bills, and damaged films.

THE speculator is not wanted in this business. His money may be good—when he permits anyone to see the color of it—but his principles are bad, his spirit is worse, and his methods are unspeakable.

He demoralizes prices, smashes credit, panders to the worst in pictures and the lowest in patrons, and vanishes with a pocketful of money that can be truly described as "ill-gotten," because bad business policy has earned it.

Until now there has been no effective way of ridding the field of him. The appearance of the exchange board of trade, however, is his cue to move on to some business where a warmer welcome will greet him.

NEARLY a year ago MOTION PICTURE NEWS advocated the formation of a Board of Trade on a national scale, which should undertake a similar regulation of the entire business throughout the country.

The course advocated in these pages at that time is the course that is now being followed locally, and with signally successful results.

State Censor Law Is Warded Off in Massachusetts

Carstens Bill Is Referred by Bay State Solons to Their Successors, Despite the Rushing Through of an Emergency Measure Providing Special Censors for the City of Boston—Film Men Will Wage Campaign of Education in the Press—Capital Censors Organize for Action

Boston, June 2.

MASSACHUSETTS motion picture interests have won their fight against a state-wide censorship law. The Carstens bill, urged by the State Federation of Women's Clubs and by all others who favor state supervision of what the public shall pay its money to see, has been referred to the next legislature.

When the Boston censor triumvirate law was passed last week, attention was immediately turned to the Carstens measure, which aimed to place supervision of films under the State Board of Labor and Industries. The opening skirmish came in the committee. Here was given a sign of ultimate victory for the film men, since it was voted to report "next general court" on the bill. That night the motion picture interests spent hours in gathering Senate support for their anti-censorship cause.

Next day this work bore good fruit, for the Senate first refused to postpone action on the measure, and then, by a vote of 20 to 10, adopted the committee report, ending censorship controversy in the legislature for this year at least.

Both Sides Prepare for Fight

"The Birth of a Nation," of course, was the foundation of nearly all the censorship disturbance in the Bay State this year. When the fight is resumed next year, the film men expect to make use of an aroused public sentiment, since they see the advantage of carrying on a campaign of education in the press. Further than this, they will have had the benefit of this year's skirmishing, and they will have learned with whom they have to deal on the other side of the question.

On the other hand, the State Federation of Women's clubs is not expected to sit back idle during the year. Another such report as its special committee made early this year may be expected again during the next year.

But meanwhile motion pictures in Massachusetts, outside of Boston, answer only to the National Board of Censorship when the question is asked: "Are you moral?" or "Will you offend the colored vote?"

Boston Mayor Will Clean All Shows

Boston's motion picture censor triumvirate has held its first meeting. The Pompey, Caesar and Crassus of the Hub's film world assembled last week in Mayor Curley's office, where, by unanimous vote of Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara and Chief Justice of the Municipal Court Wilfred Bolster, the mayor was made chairman of the board. The first business was consideration of the request for a hearing on "The Birth of a Nation," filed by leaders of the forces which pushed the censor bill through the legislature.

It was decided that each member of the board should witness the Griffith play before next Wednesday, when another meeting will be held and more definite announcement of the board's attitude toward the picture made. The censors will not see the picture in each other's company; they will view it one at a time.

Mayor Has No Mandatory Power

Another feature of Boston's attempt to clean up the whole amusement horizon was a meeting in the mayor's office today, attended by managers of all the amusement places in the city and representatives of several New York booking agencies. The mayor conducted the meeting not as a censor, but as mayor. In the issuing of amusement licenses by Chief Clerk John M. Casey, the approval of the Mayor is required.

Under the law he cannot order anything cut from a performance; he can only request. That's what he did today; and the big point in the list of requests he made for cleaning up shows in Boston is the fact that all classes of theatres are affected by those requests.

So-called legitimate houses, burlesque attractions and vaudeville bills, as well as motion pictures, were represented at the meeting, and managers of all the theatres promised to keep their shows as clean as possible. Until today the Bostonian could have heard stuff put across at the Old Howard and other burlesque houses whose equivalent on the picture screen would have stopped the film show. Now the burlesque and every show must be as clean as the motion picture play. Leslie H. Allen.

Fox Draws 4 More Directors of Note to His Standard

Oscar C. Apfel, Alan Dwan, Raoul A. Walsh and Will S. Davis, Complete List of Nine Celebrated Producers—Production Is Progressing

AN important chapter has just been written into screen history by William Fox, who announces the engagement of four well-known directors; namely, Oscar C. Apfel, Alan Dwan, Raoul A. Walsh and Will S. Davis. This makes nine celebrated producers who are now gathered under the Fox standard, including Frank Powell, Herbert Brenon, Edgar Lewis, J. Gordon Edwards and Marshall Farnum.

Will S. Davis is already hard at work on a screen version of the famous "Doctor Rameau." In this picture an exceptionally strong cast appears. Stuart Holmes is cast for a highly important [illegible] and others in the list of characters include Fred Perry, famous for his notable work in "On Trial"; George Allison, an equally noted player; Dorothy Bernard, who has already appeared in "Princess Romanoff" in support of Nance O'Neil in that Fox production; Claire Whitney, and Harry Spingler. Mr. Davis expects, with the vast resources placed at his command by Mr. Fox, to make "Doctor Rameau" a picture of excelling power and interest.

J. Gordon Edwards and Rex Ingram are busily engaged in putting the finishing touches on the forthcoming "Mother Love," which was especially written to suit the personality and dramatic genius of Betty Nansen, the celebrated tragedienne. Among the other favorites of the screen seen in support of Miss Nansen in "Mother Love" are Stuart Holmes, who has the part of Gaspard, a "heavy" character with some highly original and effective touches.

Frank Powell, the director, and Theda Bara, the star, and the remainder of the company engaged in "The Vampire" suggested by "La Giaconda," the best-known work of Gabriele D'Annunzio, the author of "Cabiria," have returned from the picturesque surroundings of St. Augustine, Fla., where the scenes of this striking production were made. Mr. Powell and his company are now working in the Fox studio in Jersey City.

William Farnum's latest starring vehicle, "The Bondman" from Hall Caine's remarkable novel is progressing rapidly under the guiding hand of Edgar Lewis.

This production abounds with stirring scenes, and employs the services of hundreds of people. Notably in the big scene which shows the summer "People's Parliament" assembled in the Valley of Judgment. During the making of "The Bondman" Mr. Farnum has sustained many narrow escapes from injury.

In one scene he is shown at work as a convict in the sulphur mines. Brutal guards compel him to drive his pick into a thin crust of the volcanic earth. Flames and smoke immediately spout forth, and during the confusion Mr. Farnum, as Red Jason, makes good his escape. The scenes were made with a liberal use of smoke pots, through the dense fumes from which, Mr. Farnum, carrying Harry Spingler over his shoulder, had to fight his way one hundred feet up an almost vertical cliff.

They had gained the summit, when Mr. Farnum, powerful though he is, succumbed to the reeking vapor of the lycopodium pots and keeled over. Harry Spingler was in even worse shape, but a liberal application of water and other restoratives soon brought them round again.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY AGAINST SUNDAY OPENING

A new menace to motion pictures has come in the form of the Women's Interdenominational Missionary Union, in Washington, D. C., which has at present chiefly the aim to close motion picture theatres on Sunday. The organization claims that the shows are sensational and tend to attract the minds of children towards murder, drunkenness and other vicious habits.

"NEWS" EDITORIAL CAUSES STIR ON COAST

Los Angeles, June 1.

The editorial entitled "About Stories," by William A. Johnston, in the May 20 issue of the News has created much comment in local film circles, and the decidedly forceful manner in which the present evil of the business has been pointed out in this editorial has been commended by producers in all quarters.

The editorial is in line with the doctrine of the Photoplay Authors' League, and Editor William E. Wing, of the "Script," the official publication of the league, is using the editorial in full in the current issue.

N Y M P Contracts Habit of Corralling Stage Stars

Orrin Johnson and Katherine Kaelred Are Latest Additions to Long List of Celebrities Signed with Company—Dustin Farnum at Beach Studio

Los Angeles, June 1.

THERE is a general opinion in the minds of the film colony leaders that either an attempt is being made to get a corner on legitimate stage talent for the films or that the heads of the New York Motion Picture Corporation have contracted a habit of engaging high-class talent that they cannot now overcome.

If a habit, the first symptoms were noticeable several weeks ago when announcement was made of the engagement of eight celebrities. Since that time weekly similar occurrences have kept the film colony in a turmoil. If this is an attempt to create a monopoly the manipulators are proving very successful. Within the next few weeks Broadway and Los Angeles may boast of having as many, if not more, stars than another Broadway in the East.

Those of the legitimate stage most recently to feel the attack of this feature company are Katherine Kaelred and Orrin Johnson. Neither of the people will come to the coast for several weeks, but will then be here for an indefinite period, that Director General Thomas Ince may star them in as many features as he may see fit.

Perhaps there is no character actress better or more favorably known than Miss Kaelred, who is perhaps best known for her remarkable success as The Woman in supporting Robert Hilliard in "A Fool There Was." Since that engagement she has been under the direction of Winthrop Ames and appeared in many of the successes of this producer at the New theatre, New York City. Mr. Johnson has long been a favorite of Broadway audiences, where he has won a number of successes. His work as the priest in the James Halleck Reid drama, "The Confession," and as the "tired business man" in the James Forbes comedy, "The Commuters," made him a favorite throughout the land.

Of the celebrities of the theatrical world to be contracted by the Nymp Company, several have already made their appearance at Inceville and are now working in subjects. This list includes Henry Woodruff, starred in "The Beckoning Flame," Lewis S. Stone, Dustin Farnum, and Truly Shattuck, who are now at the Beach studio. Others who are coming in the near future are Willard Mack, Frank Keenan, Julia Dean, Forrest Winant, H. B. Warner, Billie Burke, Jane Grey and others, besides William S. Hart and Bessie Barriscale, who are prominent members of the Ince stock company.

Sunday Opening Lessens Crime, Statistics Prove

Mary H. Sommerville, Lecturer, Known as the "Woman Billy Sunday," Proves That Vice Diminishes Where Motion Pictures Are Freely Exhibited

Boise, Idaho, June 1.

THAT statistics show there is less crime in cities where motion picture theatres operate Sundays, was a statement made here recently in an address by Mary H. Sommerville, better known as the "Woman Billy Sunday," who speaks upon purity subjects and points out the evils which lead to crime and the methods to prevent crime.

Mrs. Sommerville spoke at the Boz theatre Sunday afternoon and addressed a large crowd. She quoted statistics gathered from various cities, showing that there was far less crimes committed in cities where shows operated Sundays than in towns where they were closed. The crimes which had been diminished by picture shows she cited as gambling, pool hall loafing, drinking and other vices.

She declared that if church people would spend their money and efforts in securing good pictures to be shown Sundays rather than in an attempt to close the theatres on that day they would be doing a better work for humanity. She also predicted that within five years motion pictures would be used largely in all schools for educational purposes, and also in the churches in connection with sermons, Sunday school lessons and to teach moral uplift to the young.

Mrs. Sommerville has been making a whirlwind lecture tour over the Northwest, and came here with the endorsement of many ministers, and the large crowd who heard her voiced their approval.

Attack Trade Problems at Capital Dinner

Censorship, Poster Question, Lighting Bills, Better Music, and Closer Co-operation Discussed by Allenbaugh, Herbst, Crandall, Wickham, Mann, Campbell, Osborn, Irvine, Drum, Robb, and Koerpel—George W. Smiley Presides—Favorable Outlook for Advance in Admission Prices—Banquet at Castelli's Well Attended

Washington, D. C., June 2.

CENSORSHIP was the main topic of discussion at the first of a series of banquet-meetings of the Screen Club of Washington, D. C., which numbers among its members exhibitors, theatre managers, managers and assistant managers of the film exchanges and the traveling representatives. The affair was given at Castelli's and was well attended.

George W. Smiley proved his worth as toastmaster, introducing each speaker in a novel way. The first of the speakers was Oliver J. Allenbaugh, of the Metro Exchange, who condemned what he was pleased to term self-imposed censorship created by people who do not want their daughters and children to see this and that picture; who want to make laws as did the Puritans long years ago who were driven from England to Plymouth Rock, where they created conditions worse than those which they had endeavored to escape.

He further condemned censorship on the ground that it will look very much like graft to many officials and to secure such every little hamlet and town will have its board of censors, and often it will be brought about by people who stir things up for the sake of the publicity they will get.

Electricity for Neighborhood House

Mr. Wickham, of the Dixie theatre, gave an interesting lecture on the subject of electricity for the motion picture houses. The cost of lighting the neighborhood houses has long been the subject of complaint on the part of Washington exhibitors, since they are subjected to a charge of ten cents per kilowatt hour. He stated that he had been in communication with several concerns, three of whom had offered to install a plant to furnish light and guaranteed to produce it at one cent per kilowatt hour, for $500.

A plant had been bought for his house, but he later found that he would have to get the signatures from all within 90 feet of the plant and had failed to get one of those in that radius. He suggested that if all of the exhibitors would get together on this common ground, in all probability the lighting company would agree to furnish current at half the present charge, for they are doing so at the present time for the cafes, which do not use one-fourth the amount that the theatres do.

Another feature tending to discourage the installation of private plants is the regulation of the District of Columbia which makes necessary the employment of a competent man to be in constant attendance if the motor is above two horsepower. He said that if any of the exhibitors should happen to apply for a license for such a man, he will find that it will require an expert electrician of the type that generally has a salary of $20 a week or better.

The manufacturers would be of considerable assistance in having this regulation amended so as to enable the exhibitors to put in their plants without having to assume such a high salary expense. There are small towns of 5,000 or less inhabitants that have their own plants generating electricity at a cost so small that the hour-charge could not be stated.

Dr. William P. Herbst spoke on the subject of co-operation among the exhibitors and exchangemen, and incidentally had a few words to say about posters. "The subject that seems uppermost in the minds of a number of exhibitors," he said, "is the question of posters. An exhibitor feels that when he buys a picture it is not complete without posters. It is like buying a pair of shoes without shoelaces; as a pair of laces goes with a pair of shoes, so should posters go with pictures. On their part, the exchangemen complain of the hard usage given posters; the exhibitors will not co-operate with them and return the paper in good shape." He said that the out-of-town exhibitors were the worst offenders.

Co-operation on Both Sides

"If co-operation in the proper use of posters is to be of benefit to us," he continued, "how much more benefit will there be by the proper use of the films. If we will all agree to see to it that our machines are kept in good repair, and that our operators take good care of the reels, and the exchanges are not afraid to clean the films once in a while, there will be no reason why a film one hundred days old should not be in good shape. By co-operating in this respect it will not be necessary to demand young pictures at high prices in order to be able to give a satisfactory show. A good picture should be good at any time, providing it is new to the theatre's patrons.

Dr. Herbst also urged co-operation with the operators with respect to supplying new parts for the machines when the latter recommend them. Co-operation in the use of films, he declared, will save exhibitors thousands of dollars. The matter of keeping a competitor from obtaining a picture furnishes good business for the exchangeman by reason of the opportunity given him for raising the rental price. Programs could be arranged so that there would be an even break; contracts for features could be arranged on an equitable basis, and other things desirable could be worked out.

George Mann, manager for the Paramount Pictures Company, told of the method of distributing films by that concern, and speaking with respect to paper said that the charge made by their offices was the actual cost to them, there being no desire to supply them at a profit, and that the office which supplies its patrons with posters without making a charge for them is doing an injustice to most of the up-to-date exhibitors.

The up-to-date exhibitor, according to Mr. Mann, is he who gets away from the idea that in order to do business he must cover his theatre with posters in a way that makes it closely resemble a circus side show.

Toastmaster Smiley told of an exhibitor who, upon booking a certain feature, asked for 6 six-sheets, 6 three-sheets and a like number of one-sheets, and who, upon being told that he would have to pay five cents per sheet therefor, said: "Well, let me see. I do not think I need that much; perhaps one six, one three and a one will do just as well."

Crandall Criticises the League

President Crandall expressed his doubt as to the knowledge of the exhibitors of just what the word "co-operation" means, pointing to the lack of interest shown in league matters, speaking of the small attendance at the various meetings. Referring to the question of admissions, he said that he is satisfied that the downtown theatres are willing at any time to advance their prices, that he would not be surprised if some of them should do so before the end of the year, and that he expected to be among the first to do so.

Robert Campbell spoke of the possibilities of the enforcement of a Sunday closing law and the damage it would do to the business of the individual theatres, Sunday being a big day in the motion picture business of this city.

Herbert M. Osborn, manager for Pathé, Inc., pledged his aid in bettering business conditions in any way the club might devise, and Norman Luchs told of how he had been successful in raising the price of admission to his house from five to ten cents. His is the only place in the city where an exhibition is given on the second floor.

He also gave his endorsement to the activities of the Screen Club.

William H. Irvine, manager of the local branch office of the Rudolph Wurtlitzer Company, received quite an ovation when he endeavored to talk of how he became divorced from the film business. He took as the topic of his speech "Better Music," and urged that the exhibitors pay proper attention to this very important feature of the motion picture business.

Urges More Permanent Organization

Arthur Robb suggested that a more permanent organization be formed with a view to securing suitable quarters and the selection of definite times at which the members could get together during the day, recommending the election at the annual meeting to be held in June, of Harry Crandall.

Ben E. Drum, manager of the World Film Corporation, extended his best wishes, prior to leaving the city, to the members present and wished them success in their individual undertakings and in the growth of the club.

Manager Koerpel, of the General Film Company, gave an interesting account of the growth of the film business. In speaking of censorship he said the fault was largely with the exhibitors, although not intentional on their part, it is a condition that has arisen and been accepted by them, for if there were no market for films requiring censorship the manufacturers would not make them, and if the manufacturers did not make them there would be no talk of censorship. A better element is entering the business and there was plenty of room for improvement in the manufacturing and distributing of the films as well.

He denied that the poster trouble was as bad as stated by previous speakers, as the exhibitors were using more care in handling them. He said that there were many posters having the same titles and similar climaxes, and that this condition often leads people to believe that they had previously seen a picture that was advertised for future release, this bearing out the fact that there was no need for the extensive use of paper, and that photographs of the stars and the name of the film manufacturers with a simple statement that the films are to be shown would prove sufficient.

Among those present were: President Harry Crandall, Robert H. Campbell, Jr., Ira LaMotte, Fred Stein, Joseph Morgan, Maurice Davis, Miss Hawkins, Mrs. Sturgis, Mr. and Mrs. Schneider, Harry Given, Norman Luchs, J. H. Young, M. Coleman, Mr. Hackett, Dr. William P. Herbst, Mr. Tracy, Norman Weiser, Ned Stein, James and William Wickham, William J. Quinn, Nathan Glaser, R. A. Babbitt, G. C. Schultz, H. C. Bedell, William A. Marceron, Mr. Robertson, J. A. Koerpel, John Payette, Sam Flax, Herbert M. Osborn, Mr. Gross, Mr. Heffert, George Mann, Jerry Payne, Victor L. Abbey, Ben C. Drum, William H. Irvine, Mr. Frain, Alex G. Irvine, Leo Garner, J. Frank Brown, Oliver J. Allenbaugh, Lawrence M. Day, Earle A. Reese, Mr. Schmidt, George W. Smiley, Mr. Lombard, Arthur Robb, Charles Plunkett, Clyde Wrenn, Morris Herman, Mr. Martin and Gardner Mack, of the Washington "Times," and others.

V-S-L-E General Manager Plans New England Tour

Walter W. Irwin, Accompanied by Assistant General Manager Seelye, Will Confer with C. H. Webster, Boston, Representative, Over Situation

THIS week, General Manager Walter W. Irwin, of the V-L-S-E, and Assistant Manager C. R. Seelye will leave New York to look over the New England territory. It is the intention of Mr. Irwin to confer with C. H. Webster, Boston branch manager, in regard to the situation in Boston proper, while Mr. Seelye will assist in the perfection of the service and sales organization, and then continue over much of the northeast territory on a visit to many of the most prominent exhibitors.

"While our Boston branch has been but recently opened and not yet fully organized, its business has been really remarkable," said Mr. Irwin, "and with only five features actually working and these not yet in full swing, the records show an amount of business that is exceedingly gratifying. We are carefully selecting the men to represent us in the field, and as this requires time, we have at present comparatively few men on the road; and when this is considered, the volume of booking on our features is phenomenal

"The service department we are organizing will give to exhibitors the greatest possible co-operation, and when in proper working order, with a full complement of competent representatives in the field, a new era in picture play exhibition will be in full bloom.

"We are gathering together men that are the flower of the industry, and the principal quality that we look for in our representatives is not merely a knowledge of films, but the ability to intelligently discuss local conditions with each exhibitor and advise him of the best means to obtain the greatest financial benefit through the exhibition of our features.

"In most instances where our features have already been shown, exhibitors have followed our suggestions and the results have proved our contention that the business of the average exhibitor can be increased from thirty to seventy per cent. by the introduction of proper business methods in connection with offerings of features high in dramatic and artistic qualities.

"With this phase of the business as our chief concern, we purpose to make the V-L-S-E more than a direct booking company. It will be an organization composed of men who are as proficient in business promotion as they are expert in judging film quality."

HARRISBURG ADOPTS 10-CENT SCALE OF ADMISSION

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Harrisburg, Pa., June 2.

Cut-throat competition in the matter of prices of admittance to the motion picture theatres of Harrisburg has come to an end, all of the exhibitors in the central or business section of the city having agreed to return to a charge of ten cents for all parts of the house.

For a number of weeks, after one Market street house reduced the price to a nickel, some of the houses were charging five cents for all seats, save on Saturdays and Wednesdays, while others were compelled to reduce the price to a nickel in the gallery although maintaining the ten-cent charge for down stairs. The agreement to make a straight ten-cent charge for all parts of the house was reached after the theatre which lowered the price to five cents closed its doors on account of the expiration of its lease on its building.

The Harrisburg local of the exhibitors' league is now working to induce the managers of theatres in the residential sections, where the price always has been five cents, to adopt a uniform ten-cent standard.

Southwestern Film Men Talk of Holding Convention

Exhibitors and Exchange Managers Send Letters to Members of Industry in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana for Meeting in Dallas Next October

Dallas, June 2.

A NUMBER of prominent exhibitors and film exchange men have been talking of holding a Southwestern Exhibitors' Convention in Dallas some time during October of this year, and letters are being sent out to a number of exhibitors in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana to ascertain the sentiment of such an undertaking before definite plans are arranged.

The exchange men of Dallas are heartily in favor of a convention of this kind and they believe the New Orleans exchanges will help to "put over" a good convention. A number of the exchanges in Dallas handle Louisiana in their territory; and some of them handle Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, the Louisiana territory being handled by an office in New Orleans.

It is pointed out that the interests of exhibitors in these four southwestern States are identical and that plans could be worked out for all States at once, and the strength of such an organiaztion would have much weight in legislative matters.

For some weeks the newspapers have carried articles of rumors of a film producing concern to be organized in Dallas to make religious pictures. E. J. Matthews, of Bowie, Texas, a prominent member of the State Methodist board, was in Dallas last week, and he gave out an interview to the press in which he stated that arrangements had about been completed for the organization of the new producing company, which will have a capital stock of $200,000.

It is understood the incorporators will be prominent men in the Methodist Church in Dallas and Fort Worth, with Mr. Matthews of Bowie, Texas.

The new company will arrange a series of pictures to be used in connection with the International Sunday-school lessons in churches of all denominations.

It will be some weeks before incorporation papers are drawn up.

BOSTON SOCIETY LEADER POSES FOR ALL-CELTIC

Marie Rohmere, the Boston society leader, enacted a scene in the All-Celtic's "Rafferty Goes to Coney Island" comedy last week, and liked the work so well that she has consented to appear in another at some future date under the direction of J. A. Fitzgerald.

Universal Beauty Caravan Begins Its Tour

Twenty-one Young Women Accorded the Palm for Unsurpassing Lovliness by Grave Judges of Pulchritude in Spirited Contest Conducted by Fifty Newspapers in Conjunction with Carl Laemmle's Company at an Expense of Thousands of Dollars, Leave New York for Pacific Coast

AFTER a whirlwind campaign of many weeks, conducted for the Universal Film Manufacturing company by fifty newspapers throughout the country, the Universal beauty contest has ended. Thousands of dollars were spent by the Universal in convincing the women of the land that if they were beautiful enough the Universal would tour them across the continent, and give them "the time of their lives."

The selection was made by juries of beauty experts, composed not only of newspaper editors, but of artists, who are supposedly qualified to recognize beauty when they see it. It needed hard analysis to pick and choose, for every man has his own ideas of beauty, but the choice was finally made without violence, and the survivors of the fittest told that they could pack their trunks.

The effect of such a campaign of publicity can hardly be estimated. Universal pictures, Universal City and Universal policy has been drummed into the ears of the nation every day for weeks. If, after this campaign, there is anyone in the United States who hasn't heard of Universal pictures, it is probably because they can't see or hear.

Friday, June 4, was the glad "getaway day" for the caravan. Twenty-one girls, gathered from the Eastern states, assembled on that morning in the president's suite in the Hotel Manhattan, where they were shepherded by Mrs. Rose Janowitz, dean of the chaperons. Later, to take full charge, came President Carl Laemmle and two aide-de-camps, Joe Brandt and Nat Rothstein. Luncheon was served at 12:30 o'clock, to which came many invited members of the local and trade press.

The train on which the through trip will be made will consist of four Pullmans and a dining car of the most luxurious type, and a double berth (half a section will be assigned to each individual).

Trans-Continental March of Triumph

All along the route the beauties will be wined and dined to the Queen's taste. The progress across the continent will be like the triumphal march of an army. Literally and figuratively the keys of every city on the itinerary will be given to them.

Manufacturers and shopkeepers, co-operating in homage to the Venus-ites, will throw profits to the winds and will shower the lucky winners with the fine things beloved by hearts feminine. There will also be wining and dining to an epicurean degree until the appetites of the girls will forever be spoiled for plain home fare.

As sweet as Universal "movies" stories themselves is the sacrifice made by one of the winners.

This girl, who has, through modesty, begged that her name be concealed, has a sister, whose declining health, following an unfortunate love affair, has made a change of scene imperative to save her life.

When the beauty prize was awarded to her sister, the latter, realizing that the glorious trip through the wonderlands of God's country would probably be the means of restoring the other to health and happiness, made the application of sacrifice to the committee of affairs.

This condition, unprecedented in the contest, caused much discussion, but it was agreed that the circumstances merited the transfer. It is now settled that the sick sister will be the guest of the Universal Film Manufacturing company on the tour.

Touching Episode

Another heart interest episode is that of one of the winners who, thanks to the coincidence of the itinerary, will have the opportunity of visiting her brother, whom tubercular trouble has forever exiled him from the climate of the East and his home.

This young man, seeking health, went to Pueblo, Colo., one of the stop-offs on the tour, several years ago, and none of his family has since been able to see him, the expense of the trip being too great for their limited resources. Her old-fashioned mother is busy knitting socks and preparing home tid-bits for the girl to take with her to the son who can never come back.

The beauty contest has evoked much amusing comment among New York's colony of famous actors, the bone of contention being whether a face was more beautiful in pensive stillness or when smiling.

One artist, who has figured prominently in the newspapers recently through troubles with the wife of his house, grimly said that he could see no beauty in a woman with her mouth open. That his marital woes, largely caused through the vitriolic conversational ability of his wife, is explanatory of his views.

Two expositions will be seen by the "Galloping Girls," as a literary man has styled the transcontinental travelers of the Universal caravan. The main fair at San Francisco will consume three days, in which time it is assumed that speedy guides will be enabled to show the shows.

There will be a short "catch-as-catch-can" glimpse of the San Diego exposition, which in a less comprehensive way is quite wonderful, being particularly meritorious in displays of California's wonderful vegetable life.

"See America First"

That the girls on returning home will have ample grounds to justify the "See-America-First" slogan is assured by the fact that the route leads through some of the finest scenery designed by the hand of Deity. Particularly noteworthy is the Grand Canyon of Arizona, upon whose precipice the most worldly and frivolous heart is awed into silence by the magnificence and solemnity.

Another lone pause on this grand march of the "eternal feminine" will be the visit to Universal City, near Los Angeles. Here they will see the "Chameleon City," where the "streets of make believe" are changed while you wait, like a fantasy from the Arabian Knights. Here in a garden spot they will see what Carl Laemmle accomplished with a full set of brains, an imagination and a million dollars and more.

A new beauty test will confront the girls when they arrive at the Coast.

4 Americans Released Direct to Canadian Exhibitors

A Two Reel "Flying A" on Monday, One Reel Beauty on Tuesday, One Reel "Flying A" on Wednesday and a "Flying A" Every Fourth Friday Affected

THE American Film Manufacturing Company, producers of the "Flying A," and Beauty films and American Master Pictures, offers Canadian exchanges opportunity to obtain exclusive provincial rights to the releases mentioned below.

Beginning with the releases of June 14 and thereafter, these regular American releases will not be distributed by the Mutual Film Corporation, as has been the custom for some time past. The Mutual, however, will continue to distribute "The Diamond from the Sky," the American's continued photoplay, and any other special material for which the Mutual may contract.

The regular American releases affected by this announcement are as follows:

A two-reel "Flying A" drama every Monday; a one-reel American "Beauty" every Tuesday; a one-reel "Flying A" drama every Wednesday; a one-reel "Flying A" drama every fourth Friday; American Master pictures, as announced in trade press, after June 14.

Application for territorial rights in Canada on these regular releases should be made to the American Film Manufacturing Company, 6225 Broadway, Chicago, Illinois.

John R. Freuler, first vice-president of the Mutual Film Corporation explained the new arrangement:

"It must be borne in mind," Mr. Freuler asserted, "that the Mutual Film Corporation will continue to distribute "The Diamond from the Sky," produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company. Also, the Mutual will contract for special productions and distribute them as heretofore. The Mutual exchanges in Canada will continue operations, distributing the vast amount of valuable stock on hand."

Grace Schaufele, who won the Cleveland "Leader's "most popular girl in Ohio" contest with over 300,000 votes, will go with the Universal party to the California expositions and Universal City.

The girls winning this trip are Mary Hall, Ruth Reaney and Hazel Ladd, all from Cleveland, and Florence Frey, of Mansfield, Ohio. About 1,500,000 votes were cast in the contests.

Minneapolis Bids Fair to Be a Production Centre

Several Companies Forming or at Work, Chief Among Them the Exhibitors' Photoplay Company, in Which Green and Steffes Are Interested

Minneapolis, June 2.

MINNEAPOLIS, St. Paul and the Northwest are beginning to come into their own in the film manufacturing business and before many months some of the new companies expect to begin staging comedies and high-class dramas generally in a short time.

A. L. Kimball, formerly with the Edison people and later with the Gopher Film Company, has opened a studio in the Eustis block, Minneapolis, and is already getting out a live weekly of Northwest news. He intends to begin filming of plays at an early date.

When another summer season arrives the lakes and famous summer places in the state will have their film stars galore.

W. A. Steffes, H. W. Green and others have formed a company and will erect a studio at Lake Minnetonka. The stock is being taken by exhibitors and when the time comes to produce the plays a market is assured, according to the promotors. The Gopher and Minnehaha companies are already producing plays and the Northwestern Weekly is becoming more popular than ever.

The lake scenes, the pine forests, together with the cities, an ideal farming and mining country and Lake Superior close at hand, give plenty of opportunity for good scenic work.

The company with which Mr. Steffes and Mr. Green are identified is being organized on the co-operative plan, exhibitors being the shareholders. A. G. Bainbridge, Jr., manager of the Shubert theatre, is president. H. W. McCoy, through whose efforts the company was started, is vice-president, and C. H. McCoy, a Minneapolis manufacturing chemist, is secretary and treasurer. With these three officers, on the board of directors, are H. H. Green and W. A. Steffes, president and secretary of the exhibitors' association, and L. L. Stephens, of Pierre, S. D., and D. B. Morris, of Minneapolis. The name is to be the Exhibitors' Photoplay Company.

Exhibitors from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, and Montana are enthusiastic over the plan, as they believe that it will eventually mean the lowering of film prices, which are now said to be almost exorbitant. Many of these exhibitors have taken stock in the company. Stockholders have been promised films at manufacturer's price as well as mechanical devices, advertising and printing.

It is expected that the company will be in a position to begin taking pictures by fall, but this is contingent upon finding a market. The organizers are lining up subsidiary companies in various parts of the country to handle their product. They hope to get at least 35 in the larger cities. When the taking of pictures does start it is the plan to make at least 21 reels a week.

The capacity will be increased and ten companies with ten leading men and ten leading ladies of established reputation is the goal set for the company's development. There will be companies for dramas, melodramas, comedies and outdoor pictures.

Three Popular Women Players Join the United

Florence Hackett, Who Won Popularity in James J. Corbett's Company; Reeva Greenwood, Formerly in "Excuse Me"; and Viola Brown, Sign Contracts

FLORENCE HACKETT, the well known motion picture actress formerly with Reliance and Lubin, has been acquired by the Pyramid company and will in the future appear in two-part photoplays.

Florence Hackett is a motion picture actress of no mean reputation, having starred with Arthur Johnson at the Reliance company and then with Lubin for five years, and having won a name for herself as an emotional artist on the legitimate stage even before that.

Florence Hackett was born in Buffalo, N. Y. When she was fifteen years of age she was brought by her mother to New York, where she attended St. Cecilia's Academy. When she tried out for a part in "Dora Thorne," she won instant popularity. Her second theatrical season with James J. Corbett in "The Burglar and the Lady" was followed by "Rip Van Winkle." The next year she appeared in "The Toymaker in Nuremburg" and "The Happy Marriage" under Frohman, then in Joe Welch's "The Peddler," and one of Olga Nethersole's productions. "The Traveling Salesman" was the last play in which she appeared before joining the Reliance company. She played with James Kirkwood, Henry Walthold and Marion Leonard, aside from Arthur Johnson, with whom she went to Lubin at Philadelphia after one.

Some of the photoplays in which Miss Hackett will be remembered are "The Road of Strife," "Beloved Adventure," "The Intriguers" of George Terwilliger, "Rainy Day" by the same producer, and "The Path to the Rainbow,' which has not yet been released.

Miss Hackett will be a valuable asset to the Pyramid company, which will start work with her advent at the new studio at Ridgefield Park, N. J.

It was "The Road to Happiness," in which Reeva Greenwood, the new leading lady for the Lariat pictures on the United program, played with William T. Hodge that pointed her way to a successful and recognized career in motion pictures. She had already had a position such as comes only to those whose talents have attracted widespread notice on the legitimate stage, having been the hit of numerous Broadway productions, including "Excuse Me," Savage's well-remembered play; in fact, it had been the unusual quality of her work in that success which had drawn the attention of Mr. Hodge to her.

After her season with Mr. Hodge, Miss Greenwood joined the silent drama, entering into a contract with the Vitagraph company, which was relinquished some time later when she joined Kalem.

Viola Brown, the popular actress in the "Heinie and Louie" pictures on the United program, comes from a line of plainsmen and riders, as well as theatrical folk. Her fearlessness in taking many of the risks which are required of her in making the comedies in which she appears is noted.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XIX

Selznick, a Constructionist in Film Operations, Who Has Made His Company an Important Factor in the Industry, Declares That Imitators Cannot Succeed—"Second Runs Worth More Than the First"—A Company Must Be Familiar with Every Angle of the Business

LEWIS J. SELZNICK is essentially a constructionist—a quick one, too. This is best attested by the increase in the receipts of the World Film Corporation, an increase attributed by all to Mr. Selznick's incumbency as vice-president and general manager. It is sure that Mr. Selznick's career and activities have been the cynosure of all eyes since he stepped into the limelight via the World Film.

Better to understand the man, let it be explained that his entry into the limelight was far more sudden than the months of preparation which preceded it. For although Mr. Selznick's name has only been bruited abroad for comparatively few months he has been in the motion picture industry for several years.

Until he felt he had established himself he shunned publicity. So his connection with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, with Warner's Features, Inc., and with the old World's Best Film corporation are not generally remembered.

Although the dominant factor in one of the largest feature distributing organizations and a business man through and through, Mr. Selznick has a saving sense of humor. Now that general recognition of his efforts and abilities has come he goes on as serene as ever and punctuates the laudations by chuckling up his sleeve. For Lewis J. Selznick, despite his sudden leap into fame, still wears the same size hat.

Greatest Industry in the Country

But one should speak of his works and beliefs.

"I think that motion pictures constitute the greatest industry in America," said Mr. Selznick. "That's why I'm in the business. But it has its hardships. I think that in six months from now a great many concerns will be going broke. The trouble is that men with $50,000 or $75,000 think they can follow the lead which I and the World Film Corporation have set with $2,000,000. Now they are beginning to find out that it can't be done.

"The trouble is that these fellows have been imitators and nothing else. They are a bunch of brainless parasites. They have sponged on the other fellow's brains without his resources, either mental or financial. Now they are fast coming to grief.

"I take some credit for the discovery of the fact that a picture is more valuable on its second showing in a given district than on its first run. On October 31, 1914, I committed myself in print saying that second runs were worth more than first.

"All the wise men of Gotham poohpoohed me. Now they are beginning to realize that the word-of-mouth advertising which a picture receives on its first showing makes its return engagement better than the first. If it is a good picture, Bill says to Jack, 'You want to see it,' and Jack sees it the first time he gets an opportunity.

"Marcus Loew is a shrewd showman. He has just booked all our World Film features, starting way back with 'The Lure' for second runs at all his theatres.

"This is a rapidly moving business. It is a constant race. If you don't lead you're lost. There are too many pikers in it to suit me, but I don't think they'll be able to hold the pace.

Competing Against Themselves

"One mistake into which several companies have fallen is that of competing against themselves. First they handle a one and two-reel program of subjects containing picture players. Then they go ahead and put out feature pictures with stage stars. One hand works against the other that way.

"A motion picture company to be successful must own every angle of the business. It must own its producing companies and its distributing organization. I see that many companies which have not lived up to this qualification are hastening to do so. They must do it to be successful.

"Another weak spot is the presence of the 'old time fillum man.' The World Film Corporation has dispensed with that individual. We have no 'fillum men' on our pay roll. When we started dispensing with them they cried aloud. They didn't see how the World Film Corporation was going to get along without them. But we have done very nicely and I think it has been at least partly due to their absence.

"I have come to the painful, to me, conclusion that there are less brains in the motion picture business than in the shoe string business. For many years the business carried itself by its momentum. A considerable proportion of the men who got in the business early made money, not because of their business policies but in spite of them. I defy them to do it again.

"The quicker that everyone in the motion picture industry realizes that it is not a picayune proposition but a great big business, the better it will be for all. The day of the small company is gone. It's an old, old story that a big mule can do more work than a little mule. Just so the big concern can make better pictures and handle them more effectually than the little company can. So it doesn't look so pleasant for the little fellow.

"There are three requisites for the successful business, especially when that man is connected with an amusement enterprise, an enterprise which links art and commerce. They are imagination, brains and foresight. Many of the persons in the motion picture business are sadly lacking in one or more of these qualifications, and without them they will be lost."

Lubin Fewer-But-Better-Pictures Policy Is Effective

Twenty-five Stars and Their Supporting Companies No Longer with the Philadelphia Producer, and Changes Are Also Made in the Business Departments

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Philadelphia, June 2.

SINCE the recent announcement by Siegmund Lubin, of an important reorganization of his entire working plant, several changes have been made and many more are contemplated.

In addition to Marie Dressler, who will begin work this week at the Lubin plant, other well known stars, whose names will shortly be announced, have been engaged under the new policy of fewer companies, composed of the leading lights of the stage and filmdom.

No questions of economy have been considered in making up the new program; in fact, the salary list is, it is said, expected to be increased from $30,000 to $60,000 a week.

About twenty-five of the former Lubin stars, including their supporting companies, are now out of the organization. The Arthur Johnson company was disintegrated through the illness of Arthur Johnson, its director and leading man, who is now recuperating in Atlantic City.

Lottie Briscoe, leading woman of this company, is also taking a rest at the shore. These two stars have worked together longer than any other of the companies, having been with Lubin for more than three years. As soon as his health is restored, it is expected that Arthur Johnson will again be one of the directors under the Lubin banner.

Among those no longer to be counted with the Lubinites are the Joseph Smiley company, the most prominent of whom, besides the director, are Lilie Leslie, William Cahill and John Smiley; the Edgar Jones company, including Edgar Jones, Louise Huff, Justina Huff, Louis Mortelle and other lesser lights; Florence Hackett, Allan Quinn and others among the interchangeable players.

Some of the better known stars remaining are Ormi Hawley, Ethel Clayton, Rosetta Brice, Mary Charleson, Clara Lambert, Joseph Kaufman, George Soule Spencer, Crane Wilbur, Earl Metcalfe and James Daly.

Changes in the business end of the plant have also been effected. Hugh d'Arcy, for four years head of the publicity department of Lubin, has gone to New York. J. Allen Boone, who is already connected with this office, will now assume the management of this bureau.

Ferdinand Singhi, who has returned to the business end of the Lubin interests after an absence of several years, will divide with Ira M. Lowry the general management of the business.

A complete list of the entire organization as it stands at present will be published in the near future.

MARIE DRESSLER ARRIVES AT LUBIN STUDIO

With the arrival at the Lubin studio this week of Marie Dressler, rated as the funniest woman on the stage today, the Lubin company launched the first of a number of big comedy plans on which it has been working for some weeks past. Miss Dressler will begin work at once on a feature comedy picture, written especially for her, in which the famous comedienne will have plenty of scope to display her unique ability as a funster.

MARIE DRESSLER

An unusually strong supporting company has been engaged for Miss Dressler, headed by John C. Rice, the widely known comedian. Howell Hansel, who has achieved an enviable reputation as a producer, will direct the picture. The Lubin company is sparing no efforts to make the Dressler comedies the best ever filmed.

J. F. Skerrett, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, was here last week inspecting the splendid display of this concern in the Palace of Liberal Arts at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and visiting members of the local supply trade. V-L-S-E Will Issue House Organ for Employes

"The Big Four Family" Is Not Designed for Circulation Among Exhibitors or the Public—Will Also Be a "Salesmen's Forum"

BEGINNING this week, the V-L-S-E will publish a weekly paper devoted to the best interest of its employees. This publication will be known as the "Big Four Family," and it is distinctly different from the house organs of other film companies, in that it is not intended for distribution to exhibitors or the public.

Its reading columns will be made up entirely of news on the progress of the V-L-S-E production in all parts of the nation.

It will also contain selling talks for the guidance of its branch managers and its representatives in the field, that will be of invaluable help in carrying out the plans of the company.

The declared policy of the Big Four is to make money by helping exhibitors make more money, and the new publication is intended to instruct the selling forces how best to carry out this intention in every circumstance of their work.

C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager of the company, says: "In order that the entire sales force may work in harmony along definite lines, laid out for the mutual benefit of the exhibitors and the V-L-S-E, the 'Big Four Family' has been brought into existence. We believe in its entire success.

"Through its columns we will be able to address our entire sales force and advise them on all matters pertaining to our productions and affiliations, and keep them supplied with news, personal to the company, that is authentic and first hand.

"Our house organ will also be a salesmen's forum in which every man in our organization may give prominence to any ideas and suggestions of value. In this way the entire organization will profit by the experiences of the individual. I believe that with everybody fully aware of all we are doing, the efficiency of our representatives will be greatly increased, and the best way to keep them advised of all happenings is through the columns of a properly conducted house organ."

The new publication starts off with a force large enough to do credit to any general magazine. Walter W. Irwin is general manager; C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager; C. J. Giegerich, editor, and the ten branch managers are associate editors.

In addition to this, every employee of the V-L-S-E is an honorary member of the reportorial staff.

One Cent Seat Tax Acts as Censor Buffer in Minnesota

Vice-Presidents of Northwest Association in Vigorous Campaign Point Out to Exhibitors' Advantages Derived from Membership in Organization

Minneapolis, June 2.

IN the work of following up the progressive movements started at the semi-annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of the Northwest, the vice-presidents of the several states have begun spirited membership campaigns and are well on their way toward a doubled membership.

President H. W. Green and Secretary W. A. Steffes are soon to make a tour of the district, confer with the district presidents and meet the theatre men in groups. They will help getting the lost sheep into the fold.

Where towns are large enough, local orders are being organized and in other places there are district associations that have regular meetings. These are considered the backbone of the main organization, and Mr. Steffes has learned that it pays to keep in close touch with them throughout the year. They keep on working.

In the campaign for membership, the vice-presidents tell the prospective members to ask any man who belongs to the organization if he thinks his one cent a seat tax is worth the money. They are willing to abide by the answer. This small tax has kept censorship and other handicaps out of the Northwest. R. G. Marshall.

REDUCED PRICE FOR TWO SEATS PACKS HOUSES

E. J. SCHMIDT, representing Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter," went to Washington, D. C., a few weeks ago and thought his visit would be very short, but so great has been the demand for this film among the exhibitors and so frequent has been the return engagements that Mr. Schmidt is still there.

"So long as the field is promising, I am in no hurry to leave,' remarked Mr. Schmidt. "I admit I am surprised somewhat at the exceptional reception given 'Neptune's Daughter' in Washington when it is remembered that it had several weeks' run in one of the local legitimate houses.

"We have assisted in raising the price of admission in the residential sections which has pleased the exhibitors, for the public has been willing to pay the price. One manager offered a bargain in the form of this notice, 'Admission 15 cents, two for 25 cents.' And let me tell you he got the double ticket sale in almost every case. Husbands brought their wives, brothers brought their sisters, young men brought their sweethearts, and men and women came in couples. It was a neat piece of 'live wire'."

MAKES THE LOBBY LOOK LIKE H——!!

C. E. Daffin, manager of the Daffin theatre, Tallahassee, Fla., recently instituted a clever publicity stunt to advertise the Mutual Master-Picture, "The Devil."

Mr. Daffin arranged his lobby with a setting of rock, covered with moss. Red light effects were employed, all of which depicted a most unique entrance to the regions below the earth, as portrayed in the last scenes of the picture.

This novel manner of decorating the lobby created much comment and "The Devil" was a picture largely patronized.

PRIZE ESSAYS FOR "HYPOCRITES"

HUNDREDS of essays were received by the Globe theatre, Philadelphia, in response to the contest announced by its management during the recent run of "Hypocrites."

These essays were turned over to the critics association of the Pen and Pencil Club, who through their president, Mr. Rogers, appointed a committee of three. Messrs. Herbert Dieck, of the "Record"; A. B. Diamond, of the "North American"; and A. D. Ferris, of the "Evening Telegraph," as final judges in the matter of awarding the prizes of one hundred dollars, seventy-five dollars, fifty dollars, and twenty-five dollars, respectively.

When their decision is reached, a special night will be put aside by the Globe and all competitors notified. The awards will be made from the stage.

After the awards are made the winners and judges will be entertained by the management. The Globe is controlled by the Stanley company, and Eugene L. Perry is the manager.

ELEPHANTS IN PARADE FOR WORLD FILM PICTURES

CHARLES RINGSDORF, of the Orpheum theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has engaged all the elephants from a big circus to advertise his theatre during the week that he will have an exclusive World Film program.

The emblem of the World being an elephant, the appropriateness is at once apparent. Advertisements of the features shown will be plastered all over the big animals, and a hay wagon drawn by cows will follow the procession, distributing other advertising matter.

A MILWAUKEE EXHIBITOR'S WAY

A PRIVATE exhibition for the press, clergy and censor board was the way Manager Harry Graham, of the Butterfly theatre, Milwaukee, started his publicity campaign for "Ghosts," the Majestic masterpiece. The result of this little stunt was plenty of free publicity in the form of reviews, written by the leading dramatic critics.

To follow this up Manager Graham kept hammering away in the papers as well as getting out one thousand one sheets. In addition to this he sent out 10,000 blotters to the surrounding offices.

BOX PARTIES MENTIONED IN SOCIETY COLUMNS

BOXES, installed recently at several Houston, Tex., motion picture theatres, are giving the society editors something to write about during the dull summer months.

Society in large numbers have patronized the boxes at the Queen and the Isis and other large Houston houses. The Houston "Chronicle" in it's society columns records regularly the parties given by society folk.

Sharks and Snakes Make It Lively for Fox Players

Then, Too, There Are Beasties to Make Life Interesting for Company in Bathing at St. Augustine—Toe Nipping Crabs with Voracious Appetites

THE company sent to St. Augustine, Fla., by William Fox to film the scenes of "The Vampire," especially written for the screen by Gabriele D'Annunzio, the author of "Cabiria," and based upon his world-famous drama and opera, "La Giaconda," has returned to the Metropolis.

WILLIAM FOX'S "THE VAMPIRE" COMPANY ON THE BEACH AT ST. AUGUSTINE, FLORIDA

Headed by Theda Bara, whom D'Annunzio especially designated as the portrayer of La Giaconda before he would sign the motion picture rights for "The Vampire" to William Fox, the large company of players engaged in this production met with a literally "warm reception" from the St. Augustinians.

On the day of their arrival in the subtropical city, the thermometer registered 96 degrees. However, the company decided to seek solace in the soothing surf. Everybody had his or her bathing suit on, including Miss Bara, who introduced to the amazed eyes of the Augustinians an Italian one-piece bathing garment of a flaming scarlet when Director Frank Powell had to butt in and spoil all the fun.

"Hey, folks," said Mr. Powell, "don't bathe too close in shore, 'cause there are large sand crabs that are liable to nip your toes off."

"That's all right, we'll swim out into deep water," replied Miss Bara.

The director was just about to say "Go to it," when in the offing, appeared one of those well-known triangular black fins, which, as every novel reader knows, are the trade mark of friend shark. Thus caught between the "tigers of the deep," as Jack London would say, and the toe-eating crabs, the swimmers, headed by Miss Bara and Sam Kingston, the business manager of the company, "beat-it" for the shade of the sheltering hotel porch.

Frank Powell would have killed the sharks, he would, only he didn't happen to have the necessary weapon at hand.

Among the trophies brought back by the company to New York were several of the finest cases of early summer sunburn ever seen in these parts.

Frank Powell is authority for the statement that while the locations were being picked by them, he was compelled to sacrifice some of the very best backgrounds for "The Vampire" because of the prevalence of moccasin snakes.

Among the members of the company supporting Miss Bara in "The Vampire" are Robert Douce, Robert Wayne, Victor Benoilt, Edward Duran, Jane Miller, Doris Heyward, Elaine Ivans, and that wonderful child who is the sensation of "The Clemenceau Case," Jane Lee, who, as Little Beata, contributes to "The Vampire," one of the most remarkable child-characterizations ever seen upon the stage or the screen.

BANNER FILM COMPANY JOINS ASSOCIATED

Arrangements have been concluded by General Manager Arthur Bard, whereby the Banner Film Company is to become regular contributors to the Associated Service. The policy of the Banner producing unit will be for the immediate future, at least, to confine its productions to single and double-reel comedies.

William, or as he is professionally known, "Bill" Stinger, heads the organization.

In the support of Mr. Stinger several well-known legitimate performers appear. Among them is Myrtle Pippin, who recently played leads with the American Stock and before joining the picture ranks won an enviable reputation in vaudeville. Henry Seigle, who, it will be remembered, was with the Los Angeles Selig organization until a short time ago, is another member of the new company.

Leroy P. Swayne, who for ten years was a "headliner" on the Orpheum Circuit, is the director, and under his supervision work is progressing on several subjects.

V-L-S-E FILMS IN BIG DEMAND IN CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., June 2.

The contest was somewhat exciting as to who should secure the initial Washington runs of the V-L-S-E pictures, but the honor came to Tom Moore, proprietor and manager of the Garden, Strand, Plaza, and other local enterprises. "The Juggernaut," after having a successful run of four days, has already had a return booking.

"Graustark," with Francis X. Bushman, created such a demand during its initial booking of four days that the picture was retained two additional days with continued capacity houses. A local interest was created in the Washington scenes, which form an interesting touch to the story. The other V-L-S-E features promise to be equally as big successes.

Associated Service Begins Full Time Production

Its Seven Companies Are Hard at Work on Subjects for the Program, and Already 100,000 Feet of Negative Is Finished

Los Angeles, June 1.

THE seven producing companies of the Associated Film Manufacturers, Inc., which will at an early date release the first program of Associated Service, are hard at work making subjects for the program. Already more than 100,000 feet of negative has been completed, which will be sufficient for six weeks' continuous program. The producers desire to give the directors and players all the time necessary for the making of their products so that there may be no imperfections caused by lack of time, and hope to keep far ahead with the subjects. This will be very beneficial in more ways than one, as it will allow more time for proper cutting, a very important part of finishing the film, and likewise will give the advertising department more time in preparing attractive matter for each individual subject.

General Manager Arthur Bard, making a tour of exchanges that will handle the program, is sending in glowing reports of success by mail and wire daily, causing the local officers of the organization to believe the program will soon become an important part of the film industry. The list of officers of the corporation are as follows: President Dr. E. J. Boeseke; vice-president, D. L. Burke; secretary, W. H. Bissell; treasurer, H. S. Lindblom; and the directors, R. H. Mouser, L. P. Swaine and Arthur Bard

Of these the president is head of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture company; Mr. Burke is the producer of subjects released by Pathé and other big companies; Mr. Bissell is treasurer and manager of the Navajo company; Mr. Linblom a former successful Alaskan miner. Among the directors of the producing company are: L. P. Swaine, Charles K. French, Frank Montgomery and James Youngdeer, all well known.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Edgar Selwyn in "The Arab," a June Lasky Film

EDGAR SELWYN, the noted Broadway star, author and manager, will make his first appearance in photodrama under the management of Jesse L. Lasky, in the picturization of his own dramatic success, "The Arab," which is to be released through the Paramount program, June 14. Mr. Selwyn plays the title role.

TWO SCENES FROM "THE ARAB," FORTHCOMING LASKY RELEASE ON THE PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

"The Arab" may be briefly described as the life story of a young Shiek from the desert and the beautiful daughter of an American missionary. The villainous Turkish governor of the district is also in love with the girl, and seeks to take advantage of an order for a Christian massacre to get her into his power. The plans formed for the massacre of the Christians call for the assistance of "The Arab" and his desert fighters.

The young Shiek who has met the American girl becomes so infatuated with her that for her sake he even joins the missionary school and pretends to become a Christian. Though she doubts his sincerity, he nevertheless prevents the massacre and, at the risk of his own life, snatches her from the clutches of the governor, after she has been imprisoned and is about to become a member of the harem.

In addition to Mr. Selwyn, who appears as Jamil the Shiek, the cast includes: Gertrude Robinson, Theodore Roberts, Milton Brown, Sydney Deane, Park Jones, Raymond Hatton, Horace B. Carpenter and Billy Elmer.

Mike Donlin Picked to Star in Baseball Film

MIKE DONLIN, the baseball player, identified with the stage, will be starred in a five-reel feature, "Love and the Pennant," a story by Bozeman Bulger, the baseball writer.

This feature will be the first of a series of releases to be issued by the Reel Photo Play Company, recently capitalized at $100,000, with offices in the Strand theatre building. The officers are: President, Bernard Levey, recently of the Gotham Film Company; vice-president, Chris. O. Brown, the American representative of Hugh D. McIntosh, the Australian amusement king and long connected with the Sullivan and Considine theatrical circuit, and treasurer, Arthur Levey. Work will be begun on the new feature on June 1. The picture is expected to be ready for release about July 15.

Arrangements have been consummated with Marshall W. Taggart, president of the Gotham Film Company, by which all the releases of the Reel Photo Play Company will be issued through this organization. The Reel Photo Play Company has bought the negative and all rights to "The Burglar and the Lady," a feature exploiting James J. Corbett and Claire Whitney. This feature will be released at once.

Another feature to follow later will be "The Man With Nerve," a story by Forrest Halsey, which appeared in a recent issue of "Munsey's Magazine." Efforts are being made to have Richard Bennett star in this subject.

Bernard Levey is a one-time newspaper man, who has taken fliers in aviation. Chris. O. Brown is well known in the theatrical business.

Mike Donlin has been one of the popular heroes of baseballdom for a long time, and has had national publicity through his reputation as a "clean-up" hitter. He has had considerable experience as an actor on the vaudeville circuits.

SCENIC BEAUTY MAKES STRONG BACKGROUND FOR AMERICAN

Admirers of imposing sea coast atmosphere, the terrific beauty of angry storm tossed waves, the tall impassable cliffs, or the calm undulating roll of the peaceful sea, will welcome the unusual settings secured by Director Otto of the American studios for the oceanic subject "The Guiding Light."

This picture has been constructed from a specially written story to conform with the scenic beauties of Point Conception Lighthouse on the Pacific Coast and features Winifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen and George Field, in a series of situations, which show these talented picture players to good advantage.

GEORGE FIELD AND WINIFRED GREENWOOD IN "THE GUIDING LIGHT"

The manner in which the scenic backgrounds rhyme with the story makes the thrilling and dramatic episodes natural and realistic, thereby discording the make-believe, which spoils many pictures embodying maritime settings.

company. He realized that in the picturized drama there is a great scope for talent, and that in this art lay an unlimited field for the further development of his histrionic genius. He possesses a singularly powerful and sympathetic personality, entering whole-heartedly into the spirit of the role he is interpreting, thereby rendering a most natural and not overdrawn portrayal.

NOTED BALL PLAYER TO BE SEEN IN WORLD FILM

Ring Lardner's work is to be seen in photoplay form. The ball player Al, and his pal, who writes the interesting baseball letters that have been appearing in the "Saturday Evening Post," have come through the moving picture world, in the form of one-reel comedies, that are to be released in a series of twelve comedies.

The World Film corporation has arranged to market these unique comedies. The comedies have been made in Chicago, and the direction was in the hands of capable men who have been associated with various film concerns in the Windy City.

VINCENT'S "MELTING POT" REQUIRED PATIENCE

James Vincent, who directed "The Melting Pot," in which Walker Whiteside was starred by the Cort Film corporation, is wearing a very well developed smile this week because of the success of a little scheme which he figured out for the Melting Pot scene, constituting one of the "punches" in the picture.

Mr. Vincent worked out the photographic technicalities of the scene with such good results that he is receiving the congratulations of many friends in the trade. Five exposures of the negative were necessary.

FLYNN SHUTTLES BETWEEN ACTING AND DIRECTING

Emmet J. Flynn traveled from actor to director, and now he is traveling back again. He was prominent in Reliance and Majestic photoplays when he decided to become an assistant director.

He worked with Director John B. O'Brien for some time when he decided to return to acting. He will play juvenile roles at the Reliance-Majestic studios.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

HODUPP GOES TO CHICAGO FOR PATHE

V. H. HODUPP, who has been manager of the Pathé exchange in Syracuse, N. Y., has been promoted to the managership of the Pathé exchange in Chicago. This recognition of Mr. Hodupp's abilities was the result of the splendid work which he has been doing in the Syracuse office. After Saturday night he was able to report to the home office that not a single can of film was left in his exchange. He was able to rent them all.

V. H. HODUPP

It is characteristic of the man that shortly before his promotion he wrote a letter to the head office reading as follows:

"One of our solesman has just discovered a small town in which they have not shown the 'Perils of Pauline.' We are going to get that man."

Mr. Hodupp has not been in the motion picture business very long, starting in only a year ago, placing business for the Pathé News, at that time issued as a daily.

Having nothing to unlearn and bringing to his work a knowledge of salesmanship and sound business judgment gained in other lines, his work soon stamped him as a "comer."

DAVIDSON GOES TO PICTURE PLAYHOUSE

W. S. DAVIDSON has severed connection with Pathe and become a representative for the Picture Playhouse Film Company, of Boston.

DALLAS EXCHANGE LAW EFFECTIVE JUNE FIRST

THE new ordinance regulating film exchanges in the city of Dallas is effective June 1. Among its requirements are a fireproof vault of tile, brick or concrete, 13 inches thick, no film exchange in a building of more than two stories in height, a metal inspection table with metal reel container, etc.

Practically all of the exchanges have made arrangements whereby the entire stipulations in the new ordinance will be carried out.

The film exchanges in Dallas affected by the two-story building clause of the new city ordinance regulating film exchanges, have made arrangements to move or have moved into quarters approved by the municipal authorities.

The Pathe Exchange has moved from 405 Andrews Building to 2004½ Commerce street, where they have much larger and better arranged quarters.

The Apex Feature Service has arranged to move to rooms 204-5-6 1919½ Main street, in which building also is the new Peerless Feature Film Co., on the main floor, and the Progressive Feature Film Co., in rooms 201-2-3 on the second floor, moved from 214-5 Andrews Building.

The Picture Playhouse Film Company has planned to move next Monday from Room 202 Andrews Building, to 1911½ Commerce street.

The Standard Film Company will move from 1027 Busch Building, to 2010½ Commerce street.

With these changes, in the 1900 block on Main street, there will be the United, Peerless, Progressive, Apex, Western Automatic Music Co., Thrash Film, and probably the Dallas Film.

In the same block on Commerce street, the next parallel street, there will be the Metro, World, Fox, Aliance, Picture Playhouse, Consolidated, Southwestern, Paramount and V-L-S-E; while the General, Standard and Pathé will be one block further out on Commerce.

It is understood the Mutual will move from 1807 Main street within the next few weeks, but they have not yet secured a suitable location.

NEW FILM TRADES CLUB HEAD IN NEW ORLEANS

THE sterling qualities of E. Auger, who was born and brought up with motion pictures, have been signally honored in New Orleans, La.

Exchange men of New Orleans, in casting around for a man to head their brand new organization, the Film Trades Club, happily hit upon Mr. Auger, who was then manager of the Mutual's office in the Crescent City. And up to date, he's made them a mighty good president.

It was on May 24, two weeks after Mr. Auger's election, that he was notified that he had been appointed Southern Division Manager of the World Film Corporation, with headquarters at New Orleans, removed from Atlanta. He has borne all these honors with becoming modesty, as has been his wont.

Just a short review of Mr. Auger's film activities will be particularly interesting to those who are not acquainted with this veteran: He started out in Canada at the beginning of the twentieth century, when pictures were so new that they were a distinct novelty, and owned a string of houses in the Dominion. Then he joined the old Ouimetoscope Film in Montreal and became its general manager in 1906. The next year saw him with the Kinetograph Company, which opened up Canada extensively, and after a successful period with them he was installed with the General Film Company in Saint Louis where he made a reputation for himself.

Later Mr. Auger was special representative of Pathe, opening up offices all over the country, and it was with Pathe that he came South, so that he is not new in his present territory. Mr. Auger became general manager of branches for Pathe, out of New York City.

E. AUGER

Recently he became manager of the Mutual's exchange office in New Orleans, and on May 24 was elevated to his present position. He has offices at 834 Common street, and these later are to be remodeled owing to the World's increasing Southern business.

E. Auger he is, and E. Auger he will remain, for despite persistent attempts, he won't tell what the "E" stands for.

MINISTER'S TEMPERANCE PLAY APPROVED BY UNITARIANS

WHILE in Boston, attending the annual meeting of Unitarians, members of the National Unitarian Temperance Society, through the courtesy of Manager Fred B. Mitchell of the New England United Film service exchange, viewed "The Spenders," a film written by the Rev. Charles J. Harris and produced by Joseph Levering, of the United, for use throughout the world in the Unitarian campaign against intemperance.

The ministers say this film contains all the desirable elements of a feature, and none of the undesirable ones. The Rev. Mr. Harris is probably one of the first minister-photoplaywrights.

FRISCO BOARD OF TRADE ISSUES NEW RULING

THE Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco has issued a new ruling to supersede the one scheduled to go into effect May 24 relative to payment for film service. Notices had been sent out to the effect that in the future all film would have to be paid for in advance by exhibitors, but the latter objected to the enforcement of this rule through their organization and took such a determined stand on the question that a modification has been made.

According to this, all bills for service must be paid by Saturday of each week, otherwise film will be sent out only on the cash on delivery basis.

A NEW IDEA IN PROJECTING ROOM

THE Pittsburgh Branch of the V-L-S-E has a novelty in the way of a projecting room. Most branch offices have special rooms set apart for this purpose, but the Big Four office in Pittsburgh is the only one in existence today where a manager can sit at his desk with a prospective customer and while telling him the value of the film, have the picture projected on the window curtain which has been made to serve the purpose of a motion picture screen.

So far, this novel idea has proved most effective in the way of securing quick action.

4 SUB-OFFICES AND 1 BRANCH ADDED TO V-L-S-E

THE volume of business being done by the V-L-S-E continues to increase so rapidly that during the past week four new sub-offices and a new branch have been added to the chain of distributing points.

The new branch office is located in Cleveland at 2077 Fourth street, in the centre of Cleveland's film market, and is in charge of A. W. Goff. The territory to be served by this branch will include the southeastern portion of Michigan, as well as all of the state of Ohio.

Two new sub-offices have been attached to the San Francisco branch. One is located in Los Angeles, California, and the other in Seattle, Washington. The Los Angeles office is in charge of H. D. Naugle, and the Seattle office will be in charge of Tom North.

A sub-office has been established in St. Louis in charge of S. W. Hatch, and another in Denver to relieve the pressure on the Kansas City branch.

PEARSON IS IN CHARGE OF V-L-S-E IN KANSAS

E. R. PEARSON, manager of the Kansas City branch of the V-L-S-E, is a veteral film man who through four years' experience with the General Film company, is thoroughly acquainted with the past performances of The Big Four.

E. R. PEARSON

Mr. Pearson joined the General Film company at Omaha, as assistant manager, in February, 1911. In 1912 he was appointed manager, remaining there until June, 1914, at which time he resigned and accepted the management of the Omaha branch of the Eclectic, later called Pathé. Just previous to accepting his present position, Mr. Pearson devoted his time to the booking of special features.

"In this business there is certain to be a 'tomorrow,'" says Mr. Pearson, "and he who looks into that tomorrow will find practically certain proof of the success of the V-L-S-E."

OREGON TOWNS TAKE TWENTY-NINE KLEINE FEATURES

SOME idea of the progressiveness of Pacific Coast exhibitors may be obtained from the statement of George Kleine's Seattle office that it recently closed three contracts for the exhibition of twenty-nine Kleine features.

Theatres in Prairie City, population 348; Canyon City, population 364; and Burns, Oregon, population 904, have each contracted for the entire Kleine list.

BUTNER IN CHARGE OF MUTUAL IN NEW ORLEANS

J. C. BUTNER arrived last Monday, May 24, in New Orleans and assumed control of the New Orleans office of the Mutual Film Corporation. He succeeds E. Auger, the new Southern division manager for the World Film Corporation, and the newly-elected head of the Film Trades Club of New Orleans. Mr. Butner had only been twelve hours on the job before he had things in splendid working order and the big Mutual force hustling.

Mr. Butner was for a year in charge of the Boston Mutual features department. His appointment to the New Orleans territory was made by Arthur Lucas. When he got in town managers from exchange row extended him a cordial invitation to join the Film Trades Club, the new organization of films managers of the Crescent City now well under way as a power in the field.

ROSENTHAL SUCCEEDS BECK IN ST. LOUIS

A. F. BECK, who has had the management of the Universal exchange at 2116 Locust street, St. Louis, for some time, leaves his present position to become affiliated with the United Film service in New York.

He leaves many friends among exhibitors and others who have had business dealings with him and who gave him a banquet on the night before he left for the east. His successor, Barney Rosenthal, who was assistant manager of the Universal exchange, is a young man of promise and ability, and has been identified with moving pictures for several years.

He is also very popular with the trade, which will aid him materially in the discharge of his duties as manager of the exchange.

FOX FRISCO OFFICE MOVES TO NEW QUARTERS

THE question of securing the additional space, so badly needed for some time at the San Francisco branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has been solved by moving the offices of this concern from 107 Golden Gate avenue to 111 Golden Gate avenue. The new quarters are those recently given up by the Kriterion exchange and are not only much larger than the old ones, but are fitted up in excellent fashion.

Manager William Citron of this branch has made arrangements with the Turner & Dahnken Circuit whereby the attractions of this big concern will be shown at the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco's show house de luxe.

HUNTER IN CHARGE OF WORLD'S BUFFALO BRANCH

C. D. HUNTER has been appointed to a position on the sales force of the Buffalo branch of the World Film Corporation.

Mr. Hunter's experience in the film business should stand him in good stead in his new position. He is popular, a hustler and full of optimism.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, June 1.

GEORGE A. MAGIE, who became general manager of Universal City about April 1, has been recalled by the Universal company to his former position, that of manager of the Middle West exchanges of the company with headquarters in Chicago and Canada. Mr. Magie left the first of last week to resume his former work.

During his administration at the big Universal establishment, Mr. Magie made many innovations in the matter of managing the place all of which have proven of merit, and materially strengthening the producing forces. H. P. Caulfield will succeed Mr. Magie as temporary manager, and it is not expected a permanent manager will be appointed for some time.

Mr. Caulfield has been at the West Coast studios for the past year and a half in the capacity of auditor, and is in touch with all departments and in every way well qualified to successfully manage the plant.

There are a number of new faces on the Universal stages, including Hazel Buckham, formerly with this company, and Frank Elliott, late of the Bosworth-

HARRINGTON GIBBS IN "THE RUG-MAKER'S DAUGHTER" (Bosworth-Morosco)

Morosco. Julian Greenell Furthman and G. E. Jenks, both magazine and free lance scenario writers have been added to the Universal scenario staff.

Ella Hall, the seventeen-year-old leading woman, who has played opposite Robert Leonard for the past nine months in Rex brand Universal features including "The Master Key" serial, has been selected to play the name role in the film version of "Jewel" an adaptation from the Christian Science story by Clara Louise Burnham, which has been prepared for the screen by Lois Weber and her husband Phillips Smalley who are now filming the subject in five reels.

Strong Support of Miss Hall

Supporting Miss Hall an all star cast including Rupert Julian, Frank Elliott, Lule Warrenton, Dixie Carr, Hilda Hallis Sloman, and others. The story is one picturing a house of discord where a smile is an unknown quantity. An eight-year-old child "Jewel," a relative of the family, who has been taught the Christian Science faith, is sent to this home and completely changes it to one of happiness and contentment. The part for Miss Hall is considered by all a very difficult one which will require wonderful child acting in order that the play be made a success, but in this all are confident that Miss Hall will be most successful.

The Robert Daly Joker players are in the midst of filming "Damp Fools," a farce comedy with a moral. The maid and her beau, the ice man, insist upon reading yellow-backed literature, and imagine they are great detectives. Their conclusions bring about many unhappy conditions for the family and numerous mix-ups, which take the entire troupe in a maze of beach amusements and finally ends in the waters of the Pacific. The cast includes Fritzi Brunette, Jane Bernoudy and Thomas Walsh, scenario is by L. G. Jefferson.

Pauline Bush is being featured in the two reel subject "Betty's Bondage," by Ida May Parke. The story is one of sacrifices of one unfortunate sister for another in the hope that she may lead a more happy life.

BILLIE WEST (R. & M.)

The scenes are laid in both small and large cities, and a portion of the script calls for the portrayal of actor life in New York City.

Director Robert Leonard is just completing the filming of "Betty's Dream Hero," a two-reel subject from a story by Witt Cochrane and scenario by Calder Johnstone. This is a story of the Civil War period of a human interest nature and a delightful little romance. Mr. Leonard appears in the part of the hero, Ella Hall as "Betty," and Harry Carter as the girl's father.

Mechanical Doll for Joker

Phroso, well known vaudeville star, who for a number of years played his mechanical doll act on the big time circuits, has been engaged by the Universal and is appearing in a Joker comedy being produced by Allen Curtis. The title of this is "Mechanical Man," and the scenario is prepared by Clarence Badger. The comedy will be complete in one reel.

It relates to the experiences of an inventor who perfected a mechanical doll, and after selling it it refused to work. While repairing same he substituted the janitor of the building. The regular Joker company including Max Asher, Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock support Phroso in this subject.

Al. E. Christie is making an oriental comedy, "His Egyptian Affinity." The exteriors were made on the desert near Oxnard. The Universal camels and all other oriental paraphernalia were used in this, and according to Mr. Christie, this is another crown in the glory of his career as a Nestor comedy maker.

The Flight of a Night Bird" is a two reel subject from story and scenario by H. G. Stafford. The plot of which hinges about a wealthy young happy-go-lucky who is induced to seek employment in order that he make his life really worth while. The instructions come from his attorney.

The youth disappears and secures employment in a factory as a day laborer, and there comes to know the real pleasures of life. There is a good love interest in the story, and the leading parts are taken by Hobart Henly and Cleo Madison. The direction is in charge of Charles Giblyn.

The Victor company in the absence of J. Warren Kerrigan, who is still ill in a local hospital, is producing "A Weird Nemesis" from story by G. E. Jenks and scenario by Jacques Jaccard. The story is one of a girl who avenges the wrongs done her sister by the application of hypnotism.

In the beginning she breaks an engagement in order that she may fascinate the young man who betrayed her sister, and once he falls in love with her she turns his love to hate reminding him in every instance of the girl he wronged. In attempting to escape her the youth falls off a ship and disappears in the water.

Gene Gauntier in Strong Part

The Clark-Gauntier company are this week making the final scenes for the two-reel drama by Ben Cohn, "Mate of the Primeval" in which Gene Gauntier appears in the name role as an insane woman who lives the life of a hermit in the wilds of a mountainous lumber region. The woman is accidentally shot by a physician hunting there, and is thus taken back to civilization.

Her attractive face causes the man of science to give her more than passing interest, and he has operations performed which restores her mind to all its faculties. The instance results in marriage, and following that it is learned the woman became insane from an injury received by a man who wronged her sister and then attempted to escape. The man proves to be a brother of the physician, her husband, and following the disappearance of the woman had reformed and married the sister.

"The Grieving Dryad" is the title of a one reel story being filmed by Sydney Ayres for the Big U Brand. This is a modern mythological drama.

The National Film company will have this week added another producing company to its staff, which is under the direction of Fred Hornby, formerly of the Vitagraph company where he for a time directed Mr. Bunny. The company is now completing its first subject, a four reel comedy, "The Tale of the Night Before," which is under the direction of Bruce Mitchell.

The Famous Players company this week take up a new subject featuring Mary Pickford, supported by Frank Mills, Donald Crisp, Harry Ham, and others. Miss Betty Hart, formerly with the Lubin and Selig companies, has been added to the stock company of the Famous Players, and will make her initial appearance in this number. The title of this subject has not been announced. The scenario has been prepared by Miss Francis Marian formerly in charge of publicity department at the Bosworth-Morosco studios.

Zukor Expected on Coast

Manager Al. Kaufman is anticipating a visit of President Adolph Zukor who will come to the West Coast the second or third week in June for a stay of several weeks that he may give the new plant of the company a thorough inspection. It will be decided during Mr. Zukor's stay here whether the studio is to be kept open the year around or not. At the present time there is but one company here, and either additional companies will be put to work, or the plant will be closed.

In the event it is decided to retain the company at the Coast the year around, all the laboratories of the plant will be put in operation, and all prints necessary from the films will be made.

Mr. Zukor will be accompanied by his family, including Miss Mildred, the fifteen-year-old critic of films.

"The Bad Samaritan," an adaptation from the story by the same name by Eugene Manlove Rhodes is being filmed by the Features Ideal Players under the direction of Carl La Vines, with Norbert A. Miles in the title role, and supported by Hal Wilson and Edna Payne. This is a story of a western bad man who aided unfortunates by the use of his gun. The story is of a decided western flavor, and will be completed in two reels.

Essanay Moves

"Homage," is the title given a two-reel subject being made by the William Worthington Universal company, with Mr. Worthington, Herbert Rawlinson and Anna Little playing the leading parts. The plot is one dealing with heredity in which the son follows in the footsteps of the father prior to the time the father was sent to prison. Upon the parents release from prison he is a reformed man, and with his new views of life is able to put the funds he left that his son still retains to much better advantage. The scenario offers some very highly dramatic scenes.

This is moving week for the Essanay company which has been working at the studio of the Los Angeles Film corporation at 406 Court street, and has leased the old Majestic studio at 651 Fairview avenue. The star of the company, Charles Chaplin, was caused the least inconvenience of the moving because his wardrobe was the least extensive. It consisted of a pair of shoes, one very much "has been" hat, an English walking coat of the vintage of Forty-nine, one dickey capable of being made into a bosom of many colors, a cane valued at 49c., and a collection of cute upper lip decorations. The company has made a long time lease on the Fairview avenue property, and this is to be the permanent home of the two comedy companies.

Mr. Chaplin is the recipient of a very beautiful diamond ring from the members of the Indoor Yacht Club of San Francisco, given in appreciation of his appearance at an entertainment recently given.

Marta Golden, an actress of the legitimate stage of a number of years experience, who succeeded Marie Dressler in the Merry Gambol company, and was late with the Bishop players at the Liberty stock company, is a new member of the Essanay

Comedy companies, and will appear in Chaplin productions. Miss Golden has just completed her first subject, one of two reels entitled "Table Manners." This can be considered of a semi-educational nature in that it gives the correct table manners as taught at Vassar College. The manners are also put on in burlesque.

The Essanay players were the guests of honor at a celebration given at Venice Saturday evening.

The second Essanay comedy company working under the direction of Hal Roach has completed three one reel comedies, the titles of which are "Mustaches and Bombs," "The Tale of a Tire," and "Street Fakers." This company is composed of Bud Jamison, Margy Reager, Jack and Harry Pollard, and James Kellar.

Work was this week taken up on two Mutual Master-Pictures at the Reliance-Majestic studio. One, "Souls Triumphant," is an adaptation from the short story entitled "Little Savior," prepared by Mary H. O'Connor, which will be released as a Majestic. Miss Lillian Gish is being featured in this as the wife who tactfully prevents her husband from being infatuated by the scarlet woman.

Lucas at Reliance for Special Part

The husband is taken by Wilfred Lucas, late producer for Fiction Pictures and especially engaged for this part. He portrays the man easily lured away by the painted face. Miss Louise Hamilton is cast for the part of the adventuress, and Spottiswood Aiken, the veteran character actor, is a member of the cast. This is the fourth Mutual Master-Picture Director O'Brien has made, the previous productions being "The Outcast," "Captain Macklin," and "Her Shattered Idol."

The other Mutual Master-Picture is one of a historical character, "The Martyrs of the Alamo," dealing with the dawn of Texas, and portraying the fight made by pioneers of the Lone Star State for freedom from the Mexicans. In this there are a number of battle scenes in which four hundred extra people will be used, and among the historical characters to appear are Santa Ann, Dictator of Mexico, David Crocket, Silent Smith and Colonel Travis. "The Historical Alamo" will be reproduced and serve for settings for several of the most tremendous battles, serving as it will as a headquarters for the Mexican Garrison until they are routed by Texas Fighters. Sam DeGrass, Walter Long, A. D. Sears, Alfred Paget, Fred Burns, John Dillon, Juanita Hansen, and Ora Carew appear in the principal parts.

"The House Maid" is a one reel Reliance being made by Sheriff Arthur Mackley with Margaret Loveridge, Frank Bennett, Wilbur Higby and May Gaston as the principals. It is a story of a gruff old man whose ways are changed after he has wrought much wrong to himself and members of his family. The story is by Russel E. Smith.

"Pirates Bold" is the juvenile drama of one reel for Majestic being made under the direction of C. M. and S. A. Franklin. The exteriors are being made at Balboa Island. The principals are Violet Radcliffe, Carmen De Rue, Harry Essman, all children, and Elmo Lincoln as the pirate. The scenario is by Chester Clapp.

Komic in "Beautiful Love"

The komic players are making "Beautiful Love," a one reel jingle by W. E. Keefe, late R-M publicity man, now managing a "Nation" attraction, dealing with the subject of suffrage in the year of 1920. A perfectly good automobile will be driven off a high cliff for scenes in this, and plans are being made for some chases with new impediments. The cast includes Fay Tincher, Elmer Booth, Max Davison and Loyola O'Connor.

"Old Batch" is the title given a one reel Reliance subject being filmed by Director F. A. Kelsey. The plot deals with a crusty old bachelor who hates children, who by their playfulness prevent him a big loss when his home is robbed. The children also aid in capturing the crooks, and thus the bachelor sees their usefulness. William DeVaull appears in the character part supported by Mildred Harris and Paul Willis.

For scenes in the Reliance M. M. P. "Pillars of Society," adaptation from Ibsen's play, a large ocean liner was leased for several days, and scenes made several miles out from the coast of a schooner burning and women and children being rescued from the vessel. The camera was located on top of a light house and secured some very exceptional scenes. The direction is in charge of R. A. Walsh. In the cast are Henry Wathall, Mary Alden, George Berranger and others.

Producing Manager Frank E. Woods has prepared scenario for a two-reel Reliance photo-drama, "United Again," now being produced by Frank Powers, recently added to the Reliance-Majestic staff as director. The plot concerns the separation of man and wife because of intervention of busybodies, and shows how they are reunited by the influence of their children. The cast for this includes Billie West, W. E. Lawry, Violet Wilkey, Frank Bennett, and Lucile Young.

Charles West, for the past six years a prominent Biograph leading man, and Margaret Loveridge, recently appearing in "Runaway June" are new members of the Reliance Majestic stock company. Mr. West has played in a number of Mr. Griffith's pictures including "The Battle" which is now to be reissued. Miss Loveridge is a sister of Mae Marsh, the Majestic leading woman, and has been in pictures several years.

Getting Ready to Receive Selig Special

Colonel William H. Selig is perhaps one of the busiest studio managers of the Los Angeles Colony, for he is not only looking after the duties of Manager Tom Persons of both the Edendale and Jungle Zoo

EDDIE LYONS AND VICHY FORD IN "HIS EGYPTIAN AFFINITY" (Universal)

Studios, but in addition is superintending the viewing of all of the finished subjects, engaging new people, and giving his personal attention to matters pertaining to the completion of the Zoo that it may be ready for the public opening by the time the Selig Special arrives in July.

Manager Tom Persons is on a trip through Arizona and New Mexico in search of a suitable location for a western studio for the Selig company. When this is found, the Tom Mix aggregation will be moved there for the making of western pictures. The Selig Zoo has recently been enlarged by a number of new animals including the four trained elephants formerly with the Robinson Circus, five orangoutangs, four llamas, and a number of others.

Joe King, late leading man of the Universal Gold Seal company is now a member of the Selig stock company. The producing staff of the Selig studios now includes nine directors: Colin Campbell, Guy Oliver, George Nichols, Tom Mix, William Chaudet, Tom Santschi, E. J. LeSaint, Lloyd B. Carleton, and Frank Beal, and all are busy at the three studios.

Additional space is needed because of the increase in the number of producing companies at the Nymp studio, and this week a stage 60 feet by 100 feet is being constructed. In most instances this stage will be reserved for use of companies using large settings, and will be so completed that it will be possible to leave the set standing from the time it is first used until the producing company has finished with it. This size stage will accommodate six of the ordinary size sets.

Frank Ricker, former Belasco director and actor, who has been engaged as director of Lasky company, has arrived at the studio and is taking up his first subject this week, "The Secret Orchard." This is an adaptation from the story of the same name. Blanche Sweet will be featured in this subject, with a supporting company of Carlisle Blackwell, Edward Mackay, Gertrude Kellar, and others.

Finishing "The Fighting Hope"

George Melford is making the finishing scenes for "The Fighting Hope" in which Laura Hope Crews is starred. Included in the cast are Tom Megihan, Cleo Ridgley, George Gebhardt and Richard Morris. Mr. Morris has just become a member of the Lasky studio company, and was formerly for several seasons character man with Lubin company.

Miss Charlotte Walker is a recent arrival at the Lasky studio, and this week the filming of "Kindling" in which she is to be starred was taken up. This photoplay is an adaptation from the slum story and play of the same title by Edward Sheldon, and the direction is in charge of Cecil B. de Mille.

Fannie Ward is expected within the next few days for appearance in the leading part of "The Marriage of Kitty," adapted from the play of the same name. It has not been definitely announced who will direct this production, but it is very probable that it will also be in charge of Cecil de Mille who will make two subjects at one time, the other being "Kindling."

Director James Neil is making the final scenes for the detective story "The Clue," featuring Blanche Sweet and Edward Mackay, and will take up a new subject within the next few days.

This is a particularly busy week at the Nymp studio in that a number of Ince features are just being completed, and there is that usual need of speed to keep all matters in readiness for the directors by the stage people and that the scenario department have additional subjects ready for them to take up immediately upon completion of present subjects.

The features nearing completion number three in all, and include the five part East Indian story of romance and adventure, "The Beckoning Flame" with Henry Woodruff, supported by Tsuru Ooki and Rhea Mitchell. This portrays the love affair of an English army officer in the Orient and was directed by Charles Swickard. Another is "The Mating," starring Bessie Barriscale, and the third is "The Man from Oregon" of five reels with Howard Hickman and Clara Williams as principals. All three of these pictures are now partially cut and will be ready for shipment to New York within a week or two.

Bessie Barriscale and Truly Shattuck

Miss Barriscale will next work in "The Painted Soul," an underworld story by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which she will be supported by Truly Shattuck. Miss Barriscale will appear as a woman of the streets, and Miss Shattuck as the mother of a youth in love with the fallen woman. The direction will be by Scott Sidney.

Reginald Baker will next direct "The Iron Strain," a story of New York and the Northwest, in which Dustin Farnum will be featured.

Director Charles Swickard is to produce two subjects, each of two reels at the same time. Both are of the same character with scenes laid in East India. Titles are "The Toast of Death" and "The City of the Dead." The former has a plot woven about the eternal triangle, and the principals are Louise Glaum, Hershel Mayall, and Harry Keanan. In "The City of the Dead," Miss Glaum will also play the lead working opposite Charles Ray. It is a story of adventure in India.

William S. Hart and company of players this week rode horseback to Oceanside where they are making exteriors for "Pinto Ben." At this location excellent scenes of the cattle country are to be secured. "Pinto Ben" is a character sketch of the life of a faithful Western horse.

"The Hammer" is the title of a mystery story of the nature of a detective's adventures, and concerns the proving of the innocence of a young illustrator accused of a capital crime. It will show how a train of circumstances most positive as incriminating circumstantial evidence frequently causes the wrong man to suffer because of accidents. Frank Borsege, Margaret Gibson, Arthur Maud, J. P. Lockney, J. J. Dowling and Leona Huttun are the principals. The scenario is by J. E. Hawks.

Benches galore are pouring into the Selig Jungle Zoo, portending the long-delayed opening of the million-dollar motion picture studio. Colonel Selig will remain for the christening event. Everything is being put in readiness for the comfort and amusement of the multitude when the great art gates are thrown open early in June.

Selig Adds Animals to Zoo

A pair of sacred monkeys from India, with owl-like faces, elongated legs and tails measuring more than four feet, are added starters at the Selig Jungle Zoo. They came high, but Colonel Selig had to have 'em for pictures.

Another addition is a herd of llama. They are disconsolate for one of their number failed to survive the change in climate and passed out. The pecuniary loss to Colonel Selig is heavy, but he still has several of the very finest specimens of these creatures from the far-off Andes, to work in the pictures.

Liberty Rents Complete Studios to Producers

Company Retains the Use of the Developing and Printing Plant—A Farm of 210 Acres Is Connected with the Concern

LIBERTY Motion Picture Company, of 20 East Herman street, Germantown, Philadelphia, has been organized with the following officers: President, T. W. Andrews; treasurer, J. B. Mustin; secretary, M. T. Moringer. The plant is a splendid one, the building 50 x 180 feet, with a lot 60 x 220 feet additional, the whole representing an investment of $175,000. There are large indoor studios equipped with nitrogen, A. and H. Cooper Hewitt, and Aristo lights, also room for five outdoor stages in the yard, besides fire proof vaults for the proper storage of films.

The Liberty has decided for the present to rent the studios to producing companies, retaining for itself the manufacturing end of the business, that is the development and printing of pictures in the open market. For this purpose these is every modern improvement known for the expert handling of films. There is a new idea in a title machine for the making of decided black and white titles.

All the developing tanks are of stone. In the developing room there is a circulating system of air which keeps the developer at the same temperature all the year around. In the drying room the filtered air prevents blemishes on films. To give an idea of the size of the plant, sixteen frames can be developed at one time; there are sixty-two frames in the hypo room, 216 in the wash room, forty-eight in the toning room, 810 in drying room. Sixty people can work at once in the printing room and thirty in the joining room. If necessary a film can be ready in twenty minutes. The total capacity is 1,000,000 feet of film a week.

There is a farm of 210 acres to be used in connection with the Liberty plant. This is at Harmonville, Pa., thirty-five minutes from Germantown, and contains all kinds of scenery suitable for pictures even to a large lake and high cliff J. B. Mustin is general manager of the Liberty, H. G. Bobb has charge of the mechanical end of the business, and J. E. Overton is laboratory superintendent and chemist.

Censor Agitation Threatens Arizona Exhibitors

THE censor "bug" has invaded Arizona, and while it has not as yet spread enough of its virus to cause much of an epidemic, there is no denying the presence of wind by the movement of the straws. In a paper read recently before a Phoenix woman's organization on "Motion Picture Censoring," a woman of much local prominence told all she did not know about motion pictures. Heretofore the censor talk from time to time has emanated from reformers actuated by hopes of positions on censor boards to be created by any law promoted, but this well-known woman's paper puts another aspect on the situation. There is a movement on foot in the ranks of the woman's clubs to stir up a sentiment for a state censor law, but as yet the infection has not reached the law-makers, who are in extra session.

The Phoenix managers are organized as a city protective body, affiliated with the State Exhibitors' League, and at a meeting of the city commission, recently the potency of the organization was given a mighty good demonstration. A committee of three from the Managers' Association was present at a meeting of the city managers and was dumbfounded to hear a woman asking for the privilege of speaking on censorship for pictures. She was a fanatic of no mentality and had no conception of the subject, yet she secured permission to offer her arguments and asked that a censor board of seventeen women, selected by a local club, be appointed by the mayor to visit the picture shows and pass on the screen offerings.

One of the committee asked permission to question her, and was granted the favor. He elicited from the would-be reformer that she was not a resident of the state, that she was not a property holder or a tax-payer and that she did not know where pictures were made or that they were censored by a national board.

The sole object of her desire for a censor board was to gain free access to the picture houses. She admitted on cross examination by one of the managerial committee that she did not go to shows "because the prices were too high, but she thought pictures should be censored." She failed to give a specific instance of a picture that required censoring, but wandered over a lot of abuse of the business and finally resorted to tears and sob stuff, wailing over the little children, "corrupted by terrible motion pictures." She herself was childless.

Following her ineffectual attempt to have a city censor board created, "the Drama League of America" organized a Phoenix chapter, and in the course of the principal address a well-known state educator took occasion to point to the exhibition of "Three Weeks," which was on the screen at one of the Phoenix play houses. He referred to it as a thing to be shunned by mothers and to be denied the children, and while in a measure digressing from the "drama" as outlined by the aims of the "league," he roundly denounced pictures, classing them as cheap clap-trap and hinting that supervision of them should be the duty of a community.

The continual agitation of this subject portends for the state exhibitor trouble at no distant day, and the members of the State Exhibitors' League are making every effort to have the house owners in the state join and take part in the "ounce of prevention" before the cure is needed.

COLLECTORS WILL ENFORCE TAX PAYMENT IN PENNSYLVANIA

The revenue collectors in western Pennsylvania have been very busy explaining to many of the delinquent tax payers that they have been assessed 50 per cent. for non-payment of their taxes when they were due, as many of the motion picture theatre proprietors were under the impression that the 50 per cent. penalty would not be enforced.

Many of the motion picture theatre managers were slow coming to the front with their money. Now they find that they have a greater tax to pay than would have been necessary if they had been prompt.

In addition to the offices established by the revenue service, deputies will shortly be appointed to collect the money from the exhibitors in small towns. Exhibitors will not have to pay at central points.

Sunday Opening in Texas Is Declared Unlawful

A DECISION of far-reaching importance regarding the Sunday closing law was rendered May 26 by the Court of Criminal Appeals at Austin, Tex., in the case of E. L. McLeod, an exhibitor of Fort Worth, Tex.

It was held by a majority of the court that it is a violation of the Sunday law of Texas to operate a motion picture show on Sundays, even though the exhibitor charges no admission. Judge Davison did not concur in the opinion.

The decision came in the case of McLeod, who previously had lost out in a lower court. In the trial court it was shown that no admission fee was charged, and that none was required. However, a glass jar had been placed near the ticket window for the purpose of receiving contributions. It was shown that these contributions had been plentiful.

On Sunday, March 21, donations amounted to thirty dollars. The court held that the glass jar was placed near the ticket window to evade the law, and that it is clear that the legislature intended to prohibit any such place to be run on Sunday when it enacted the Sunday law, and where a remuneration was received or accepted.

"The silent solicitor of contributions is but a substitution for a ticket seller and such attempted evasion of the law cannot be countenanced," says the Court of Criminal Appeals, through Judge Harper, who wrote the opinion.

The Board of Censors of Houston, Tex., is also considerably worrying the exhibitors of that city. Their power to arbitrarily prevent the showing of a moving picture is to be tested in the Sixty-First District Court. Jay Burton, proprietor of the Cozy theatre, has filed a suit against the city of Houston for an injunction to restrain the officials from preventing him from showing "Damaged Goods," the moving picture which came under the censors' ban recently.

Burton declares in his plea that the city cannot arbitrarily declare "Damaged Goods" improper.

ST. LOUIS POLICE WILL PASS ON "NATION"

Charlotte Rumbold, head of the park recreation department in St. Louis, says that she is opposed to the exhibition of the "Birth of a Nation" in St. Louis. She says she bases her opposition on reviews of the play she has read in New York and Boston newspapers.

She said that she understood that the second act of the film deals with the reconstruction period of the South, and she believes that because St. Louis is a city where the sentiment between the North and the South was narrowly divided, it would be inadvisable to present such a show. The members of the board of police commissioners will decide whether or not the "Birth of a Nation" is to be presented in St. Louis.

Express Rate Hearing by Commerce Commission

THE difficulties of the five leading express companies of the country in conducting their businesses under the rates now in effect, were detailed to the Interstate Commerce Commission by their representatives at a hearing before Commissioners Clark and Meyer in the hearing room of the New Willard Hotel last week.

The hearing occupied but a few hours, the carriers merely presenting their case, and, filing several briefs in support of their plea for permission to increase their rates, placed the matter in the hands of the commission. The companies are at present operating at a great loss and claim they will be unable to continue in business unless granted relief. On the face of it, it would appear as though they should be allowed the desired increases for it is to the interest of all concerned that they be not driven out of business.

The maximum amount of the increase contemplated would be on the one-pound packages and would be 5 cents. The 100-pound rates will remain unchanged and as the weight of the individual shipments increases the additional charge decreases at the rate of 1/20 cent per pound. It was because of the smallness of this amount that no opposition was voiced by the shipping interests who were represented at the hearing.

To a representative of this paper, W. H. Chandler, traffic manager of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said that "it is the general impression of the shippers that the continuation of the express companies is of vital necessity and in view of the fact that they have been shown to be operating at a loss since the new rates went into effect, it is felt that it is only fair to allow them sufficient revenue to warrant their continued operation. I believe, and it is the opinion of all with whom I discussed the matter, that if the Commission finds that they are not earning an adequate revenue, they should be permitted the desired increases. We believe that the commission will analyze the facts and figures contained in the carriers' exhibits and will arrive at a proper conclusion."

J. C. Lincoln, traffic manager of the Merchants' Association of New York, supplementing these remarks, said: "The position of the Merchants' Association is that they desire that the express companies be permitted to continue in operation as efficient transportation mediums for the handling of package freight; that if, upon the showing they have made to the commission, they should have and are entitled to increased compensation in order to maintain an efficient service, the association would not object to the advance in rates, feeling that the commission should grant them, particularly in view of the fact that the rate adjustment under which the companies have been operating was a departure from previous methods and must necessarily in some degree have been experimental.

"It is the judgment of the association that the commission, in view of the extensive investigation it made at the time of the previous hearing, is a competent body to deal with the equities of the case."

It is estimated by the companies that there will be derived from the proposed increases an additional revenue amounting to $5,062,634 per year, this amounting to 3.86 per cent of the total annual revenue derived by the companies interested.

Supreme Court Judge Lifts Ban on "The Ordeal"

WITH caustic references to hyphenated Americans, Supreme Court Justice Whitaker recently made permanent in New York City the temporary injunction restraining the Commissioner of Licenses from interfering with the Life Photo Film company's picture play, "The Ordeal."

The play tells the story of a dream during the Franco-Prussian War. A German officer, in the dream, is condemning the sweetheart, mother, and sister of a French soldier to be shot. The father of the family is shot while defending his home. Then the dreamer wakes and is rejoiced to see his loved ones safe.

When the play was first shown Deputy Commissioner of Licenses Kaufman conferred with the National Board of Censors, and it was agreed that the play might arouse bitterness in Germans and German-Americans. Commissioner Bell also took that view, so he ordered the play withdrawn under penalty of canceling the license of its producers. Then the injunction was applied for. In his decision Justice Whitaker said:

"The term 'American' includes all classes of citizens, native and naturalized, irrespective of where they originally came from, whether it be Germany or any other country. The court cannot give judicial sanction to the grouping of American citizens in different classes, and shape or color its decisions in accordance therewith. What has lately become known as hyphenated citizenship has no color or standing. It cannot properly be recognized by the court or any other branch of the Government. The plaintiff should not, therefore, be interfered with in the transaction of its legitimate business because of the supersensitiveness of alien residents."

In reply to the argument that the production of the play might occasion racial differences, Justice Whitaker said:

"Both Commissioner Bell and his deputy, Mr. Kaufman, testified that there was nothing in the picture to which an American could take exception."

PROSECUTOR MOVES TO QUASH NELSON SUIT

San Diego, Cal., June 1.

Upon motion of the district attorney, the felony charges against J. Arthur Nelson, former president of the United States Film Company, have been dismissed. Nelson was charged with embezzling approximately $3,000 of the funds of the corporation. Another charge of the same nature is still pending. No date has been set for the trial.

TIGHTEN FILM RULES IN SOUTH BEND, IND.

Owners of motion picture theatres in South Bend, Ind., must live up to the regulations of the amusement committee of Fred W. Keller, mayor, or they will have trouble with the city administration, is the warning which has gone out here.

Some of the theatre owners are said to be violating the agreement they made with the committee some time ago to show only films passed by the national and the Chicago censorship boards. It is charged by the committee that the small theatre owners have at times resorted to suggestive advertising to attract patrons to their places.

The motion picture houses are permitted to remain open there on Sunday. A veiled threat has been made that this privilege will be taken away from them if they do not obey the committee's order.

EXHIBITOR ARRESTED IN FILM CASE IN OKLAHOMA

On complaint sworn out by Rev. Robert Van Meigs, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Muskogee, Okla., May 26, Manager Mike Irvin was arrested and the films of the five-reel feature play "Three Weeks," dramatized from the book of Elinor Glynn, were seized.

The city officials declared the pictures not immoral, but the county attorney thought different and had the warrant of arrest and seizure of the picture films issued and served. The pictures had been previously shown in McAlester, Okla., without protest and are billed to be exhibited in Oklahoma City, Okla., next week. The outcome of the case is being watched with much interest.

WEBSTER COMPANY TO FILM WHITE HOUSE

Chicago, June 2.

Harry McRae Webster, general producing director for the United Photo-Plays company, will take Gerda Holmes and Wilmuth Merkyl, and about ten more members of his company to Washington, D. C., next week, for some exterior scenes for his six reel feature, "The Victory of Virtue," by Penelope Knapp.

The White House and the Army and Navy Club are to be used as the background for a number of scenes. From there Mr. Webster and his company will go to Lake Keuke, N. Y., for some more exterior scenes.

DRAMA LEAGUE PRAISES GRAND RAPIDS THEATRES

The Drama League inspection committee of Grand Rapids, Mich., reports that the standard of amusements in that city has improved fully 50 per cent. in the last three years. The report shows that there are sixteen more moving picture theatres in Grand Rapids now as compared with a year ago. Nearly all the buildings are new or have been recently remodelled and have plenty of light, heat and ventilation.

The report also says that the character of the pictures have improved immensely, both in photographic art and in subject.

Harris Signs with Knickerbocker Features

Minister Who Became Scenario Writer, Brings Long Experience in Pulpit and as Man of Affairs, to His Work

REV. CLARENCE J. HARRIS, writer, editor and critic, has been secured by Knickerbocker Star Features. Rev. C. J. Harris has an unusual record as a scenario writer and man of affairs. He has preached since he was eighteen years of age; he is now forty.

During his ministry his work was of a very varied nature, all of which makes his work as a photoplaywright the more valuable. In his early days he had charge of the Chinese missionary work in one section of Boston. He was also a prison missionary and besides devoted considerable time to slum work in Boston.

REV. CLARENCE J. HARRIS

His first preaching was in northern New England, after which he went South, working among the poor whites. Afterward he became a Southern missionary, helping to establish a white theological seminary. He has worked also in the Middle West, Colorado, California and Oklahoma. His churches have been in prominent places during the past ten years and in San Diego, Cal., and Oklahoma City, he was identified with all social and literary movements.

Mr. Harris' first work as a scenario writer began about two years ago, with a drama, "The Trail of the Lost Chord," which had a remarkable reception in Europe and this country, and, according to reports, from the producer, "Brought fame to producer and company in Europe and America." This work had back of it ten years of considerable literary work, in which Mr. Harris wrote and preached constantly, contributed to papers and magazines, and lectured on many lines.

The success of the first drama prompted Mr. Harris to write more, and he has a record of having sold nearly all he has produced since his first success.

Mr. Harris' drama, "The Footprints of Mozart," created a great deal of interest among music lovers throughout this country and England.

As the writer for Knickerbocker Star Features, Mr. Harris will offer an unusual line of three-reel stories, varied in thought and ideas. In a recent interview he said, "I do not want to be known by my stories; I prefer to have each story have individuality, than to embody all individuality in myself, and have the many stories express the one."

The first Knickerbocker Star Features story, "The Kick-Out," will be followed by the most dramatic and intense story ever written by Mr. Harris called "The Cup of Chance," which will be followed by others already in course of completion, as "The Fools' Paradise," "The Edge of Night," "The House With Nobody In It," "Like Viper Eyes" and "The Tigress and the Cub."

PLANS ON FOOT TO ENLARGE UNIVERSAL CITY

Los Angeles, June 1.

Universal City in several respects has not proven adequate to the demand of the ever increasing needs of the Universal Company, and plans for additional buildings are being made. Besides the erection of an additional enclosed studio with sufficient capacity for five or six companies, plans are now being made for additional dressing rooms for the front stage.

The present double row will be practically doubled, making a total of about one hundred. This will be accomplished by the second story being built on the entire building.

Myrtle Tannehill Is Glad to Be Bad Film Prophet

Kalem Star, Sorry She Failed to Enter the Field Eight Years Ago, Now Realizes That Photo Drama Is Not a Fad

THERE is one star of the legitimate stage who admits being a mighty poor prophet. And in making this admission, she asserts that, had she been able to look into the future, she would have become a motion picture player eight years ago.

The actress in question is Myrtle Tannehill, who recently made her screen debut in Kalem's three-act Broadway Favorites feature, "When the Mind Sleeps." And although she has cored successes both here and abroad, she frankly admits regretting not having entered the silent drama sooner.

"It was this way," Miss Tannehill explained recently: "Shortly after I made my debut upon the legitimate stage I was approached by a motion picture director who wanted me to join the company he was forming. I was playing with William Gillette, in 'The Admirable Crichton' at the time.

"Convinced that I had a most promising career before me," Miss Tannehill went on, "I declined the offer. As a matter of fact, one of the principle reasons which led me to turn my back upon the offer was my belief that the motion picture was merely a fad and would presently die out."

PAULINE MORAN (Keystone)

The charming actress then went on to say that the ensuing years convinced her of her error. One by one, the brightest stars of the legitimate firmament drifted into the motion picture fold. Once she was on the verge of following suit, when she received an offer to appear with George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones." She accepted this engagement and the long run achieved by this success caused her to forget all about the silent drama.

MYRTLE TANNEHILL

Then came engagements in "Snobs," which was presented at the Hudson theatre, and in various other successes. According to Miss Tannehill, the productions in which she appeared were so uniformly successful that she had no time to think of the screen. Later, the talented player was sent to London, where she was starred in plays that had scored here.

When the Kalem company made Miss Tannehill an offer for her appearance in "When the Mind Sleeps," the star promptly accepted it.

MORRIS TRAVELS 800 MILES TO SEE PICTURE

Gouverneur Morris visited the studios of the Vitagraph company last week, making a trip of eight hundred miles from his home in Aiken, S. C., to Brooklyn in order to see the first five chapters of "The Goddess" produced.

Mr. Morris wrote "The Goddess," and was so anxious to see the first work of his pen produced on the screen that he decided to take the long trip.

The author expressed himself as greatly pleased with the work that Ralph W. Ince had done in directing the picture under the supervision of A. E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton, and he had high praise for Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, who played the leading roles. Mr. Morris arrived in Brooklyn in the morning and departed the afternoon of the same day on the return trip.

ARTHUR S. KANE IS OFF ON TOUR OF THE COUNTRY

Nine months ago Arthur S. Kane and his family caucused and decided unanimously to take the summer of 1915 for their own. Consequently, they began appropriating it Saturday, May 29, when they left for Washington, D. C., and Chicago, to be followed by Kansas City, Topeka, Omaha and Fort Dodge. Mr. Kane is well acquainted in those sections, both with film and theatre men, but perhaps not more so than in the Pacific Northwest, where he will arrive the middle of July after visiting Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. Following a month in Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and nearby places, he will spend the latter part of August and part of September in California, visiting the Expositions and calling upon friends and acquaintances in San Francisco and Los Angeles. While in California Mr. Kane expects to visit most of the big producing plants.

On his return to New York, about September 15 or October 1, Mr. Kane expects to resume his activities.

From time to time during his trip Mr. Kane will write articles analyzing business conditions as he has observed them, and these will be published exclusively in Motion Picture News.

HAZEL DAWN LEAVES STAGE FOR FAMOUS PLAYERS

Closely following the announcement that the Famous Players had secured the exclusive motion picture services of Pauline Frederick for number of years comes a statement from that company that it has induced Miss Dawn, who made her screen debut under its management, to abandon the stage permanently and devote all her time to the production of an elaborate series of photoplay features under its direction.

Hazel Dawn attained popular prominence as one of the foremost of the younger stars of the American stage through "The Pink Lady," and more recently completed a successful tour in "The Debutante." After her first film characterization, as "One of Our Girls," she attracted such wide popularity that the Famous Players at once re-engaged her for a second screen appearance.

A number of important dramatic and literary successes are being secured by the Famous Players as screen vehicles for Miss Dawn, notable among which are "The Fatal Card," in which she will co-star with John Mason, "Clarissa," based on Ronald MacDonald's strange story, "Gambier's Advocate," and "The Dainty Boss," a unique comedy-drama appropriately suited to the capabilities of the star.

With the acquisition of the permanent service of Miss Dawn, the Famous Players now control the exclusive screen management of the greatest array of stage and screen favorites ever assembled under one banner, including Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro and Gaby Deslys.

EMPRESS-UNITED COMPANY IS ENLARGED

With the return of Joseph Levering, director of Empress pictures which are a part of the United program, from a Western trip, the Gaumont company studios at Flusing, L. I., have been enlarged. An outdoor stage has been built, and the work of making first class photodramas has started with a boom after a four weeks' vacation.

The outdoor stage, furnished with every modern improvement, has been constructed so large that twelve sets can be placed at the same time. The company, composed on Mr. Levering's departure of Marian Swayne and himself, in the leads, and Flavia Arcora and Fritz Orlamond as a supporting cast, has been enlarged since Mr. Levering's return to include Mrs. Mary Baker, Bessie Keene, Madge Orlamond, and T. Mose Kaupel.

Mr. Levering has on hand a splendid list of exceptionally strong sociological and psychological plays, written expressly for him by Rev. Clarence J. Harris, the Empress editor, who has left the pulpit to write plays for the United.

EDNA PAYNE HAS APPEARED IN 200 ROLES FOR IDEAL

Edna Payne's parents were both of the theatrical profession. She started in at a very early age to play juvenile roles in the stock companies in which her parents played the leads. Before she reached the age of twelve she appeared with the Spooner, Payton and Gotham companies in Brooklyn, New York, and on the road.

While she was playing on the Keith time circuit in Philadelphia the chief director of the Lubin company, struck by her simplicity and charm, engaged her for ingenue roles. Miss Payne's natural artistry, winsome face and attractive mannerisms immediately made a splendid screen magnetism, and during her two-year stay with Lubin she endeared herself to thousands of motion picture fans. When the Ideal Western contingent was formed two years ago, the charming ingenue was picked as leading lady and during her two years has appeared in two hundred film pictures for the Ideal on the United program.

One of the most attractive photodramas in which Miss Payne will soon appear will be "Shadows of the Harbor."

BERST OF SELIG DISCUSSES FILM CENSORSHIP

Declares That Freedom from Questionable Scenes in Pictures Would Have Favorable Bearing on Attitude of Public Demanding Supervision of Film Drama by Authorities—Testifies to Laudable Efforts of the National Board—Maintaining the Quality of Selig Pictures

FILMLAND'S authorities considered it "big news" when J. A. Berst became affiliated with the Selig Polyscope company as vice-president and general manager. Students of the animated screen sat up and took notice.

It was the greatest compliment in the world to Mr. Berst that he was engaged by Mr. Selig to aid in guiding the destinies of the Selig company and to lift some of the administrative burdens off the shoulders of Mr. Selig who had uncomplainingly carried them for so long.

Mr. Berst submitted to an interview the other day. This is news in itself for Mr. Berst believes in action first, just another expression, perhaps, for "safety first." Interviews with Messrs. Selig and Berst are difficult to obtain.

"I am in favor of motion picture censorship," said Mr. Berst, "but I am not in favor of unfair censorship. I do not believe in the state, county or municipal censorship which in all of its ramifications cannot but be unfair to the manufacturer and to the exhibitor. And it should be noted that it is the exhibitor who ultimately pays the cost of upkeep of all these various censor boards.

"The National Board of Censorship was formed in the correct way, and I wish to add my testimonial to the careful and proper methods that have been employed by the national board. Selected with a personnel of enlightened men and women, serving without financial remuneration, their rulings, for the most part have been consistent and beneficial."

What Ought to Be Censored?

"Are you a supporter of the idea of a board of censorship selected by the Nation Congress?" was asked Mr. Berst.

"I am not in favor of such a censorship body," was the emphatic reply. "One reason is that politics may enter the organization of such a body; another reason is that a federal board of censorship would have little power over the states and that the state censors would flourish as of yore and the situation would not be remedied in any detail.

"There is another angle to this censorship question that has not been seriously considered, to my mind. It is this: Certain manufacturers cry to high heaven against the rulings of the censors; they write essays; grant interviews; foster legislative opposition and then—they turn right around and release an occasional motion picture that razes the structure of opposition that has been so carefully upbuilded.

"In other words, their theory and practice is dissimilar. Motion pictures fostering race prejudice; encouraging undue familiarity with the underworld; containing suggestive actions and scenes. These motion pictures ought to be censored.

"The way to combat unfair censorship; the method to foil politicians; the way to free the exhibitors and the public from unjust taxation; the manner in which to pave the way for an object lesson showing that censorship in many of its forms is useless and ridiculous, is to produce motion pictures which are free from doubtful detail. Until this is accomplished we will have a swarm of censors in cities, counties and states, most of them poorly equipped to perform most important duties.

Aim of Selig Releases

"Mr. Selig and I have endeavored to release productions which cannot be criticised in any detail from a standpoint of censorship. That we are succeeding will be proven by the fact that the Selig releases contain a minimum of cut-outs in Chicago, the most difficult city in the world in which to please the Powers, and also in Canada, where censorship is unusually strict.

"We are working night and day to make the Selig productions worthy. During the past few months such distinguished stars of the spoken drama as Tyrone Power, Harry Mestayer, Otis Harlan and others have been added to our companies of artists. Such well known directors as T. N. Heffron, Colin Campbell, Marshal Neilan and others are working on meritorious productions and, other than these, many versatile actors and actresses have been engaged to make the Selig plays worthy.

"We have engaged the services of the best writers, in fact the Selig company claims a 'corner in authors.' Such writers as Anna Katherine Green, Meredith Nicholson, Louis Joseph Vance, Edward E. Rose, Rex Beach, Robert Hitchens, Mary Roberts Rinehart, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Gilson Willets, and others, are contributing to the worthiness of our stories.

"We are also devoting careful attention to our releases in three, two and one reels and we are not sacrificing the general excellence of these productions in any way, shape or form.

"The new Selig Diamond Specials in three reels at present have all my attention. The exhibitors are certainly getting unusual value in these productions. Originally planned as features we thought that the merit of these Diamond Specials would prove to the exhibitors that our regular program is being consistently upheld. 'Pals in Blue' and "The Quarry,' Selig Diamond Specials, were recently shown in our projection room to exhibitors and they were very kind indeed with their compliments.

"The favor with which our Red Seal plays are being received is indeed gratifying and supports us in our theory that if time, care, thought and expense are all crowded into a production, that the action will be appreciated.

"'The Carpet from Bagdad' immediately became popular and prints cannot be issued fast enough to supply the demand. 'The Millionaire Baby' is a strong six-reel drama, released May 31, and is a great big production handled in a great big way. 'The Rosary,' a wonderful picture directed by Colin Campbell, and 'A Texas Steer,' featuring Tyrone Power, and a great number of other Red Seal plays are to be released one every month."

Ince Sees Union of Silent and Speaking Drama

"The Alien," at Beginning of Long Run in New York, May Prove to Be Pioneer in New Type of Amusement

"THE more than expected success of 'The Alien' formerly 'The Sign of the Rose,' which combines for the first time the spoken drama and motion pictures, indicates a general desire on the part of the theatre-going public for more of these plays," says Thomas H. Ince, director-general, New York Motion Picture corporation.

The play is now appearing in New York City with George Beban in the leading role, supported by little Blanche Schwed and Thelma Salter, Jack Nelson, Hayward Ginn, Andrea Lynne, Jack Davidson, W. J. Kane, Fanny Midgley, Edith McBride, J. Frank Burke and Ida Lewis.

"There is nothing to my mind more replete with tense and binding interest than the sudden, unexpected metamorphosis from the picturized play to the old footlight drama, during which the various principals figuratively step out of the screen and onto the stage to enact their parts in real life.

"The effect of this magic change in 'The Alien' is instantaneous and is accomplished so quickly that when the screen is lifted, transforming the flower shop into actual material being, the transition actually takes one's breath away, and the sound of the voices of the players who but a moment before were screen phantoms, creates an entirely weird but nevertheless pleasing effect.

"If the drama, under present conditions, is destined to decline, then I say that such an innovation as a merger with motion pictures, along the lines as indicated in 'The Alien,' will certainly serve to prolong its life and may still insure its permanency as an institution.

"The idea, of course, is but yet in its infancy, but from the extremely favorable comments of the press and dramatic critics there appears to be a strong likelihood that the day is not far distant when motion pictures and flesh and blood drama will walk hand in hand together."

SELIG WILL LOCATE TWO COMPANIES IN NEW MEXICO

Because the city of Las Vegas, N. M., has taken the trouble to tell the motion picture world about the advantages of the surrounding scenery, it is to have two companies of players working under the banner of the Selig Polyscope company, one headed by Tom Mix, the dashing cowboy actor whose feats have thrilled the world.

Manager Thomas Persons, of the west coast Selig studios, visited Las Vegas last week and, after carefully considering the adaptability of the country surrounding the city to motion pictures, decided to move two companies from the Los Angeles plant. June 1 is the date selected for the change and the stay of the two companies will probably be of indefinite duration.

"Prohibition" Placed in 16-House Chicago Circuit

Aaron J. Jones, Who Consummated the Deal, Plans Also to Show the Picture in the Studebaker for a Run of 4 or 6 Weeks

HIGHLY significant of the esteemed commercial value of "Prohibition," the six-reel film, is the sale of that feature for exhibition by Jones, Linick and Schaefer, of Chicago, in that territory.

This deal was consummated last week by Aaron J. Jones, representing the Chicago vaudeville magnates, and J. L. Kempner, associated with Robert T. Kane, representing the Prohibition Film Corporation at 220 West Forty-second street, Mr. Jones having made a special trip to New York for this purpose.

This theatrical firm operates sixteen theatres in and about Chicago and is a big lonk in the Marcus Loew vaudeville circuit. "Prohibition" will be played in all of its houses and in other towns where it does not own theatres.

The picture will be exploited in a big showmanlike way and all of its highly theatrical advertising possibilities will be pushed to the limit.

Mr. Jones believes in the film as a great working man's picture. He argues that the working man has not the time, the money nor the inclination for clubs or for any other greater vital interest than that of his home and his family.

"The strongest element in favor of 'Prohibition' as an entertainment is that it is an entertainment and not a sermon, and that it is a story, sufficiently strong to draw in its own merits, independent of the dynamic moral lessons contained.

"It is possible that I will play the picture for a run of four or six weeks in the Studebaker or La Salle Theatre, which correspond in importance to the Broadway theatres in New York. As a showman I would certainly not put a picture into such houses at such expense if the picture itself was not 'there,' and would not stand up under the fire of newspaper criticism and that still more important criticism—the box office receipts.

"If there is any territory left I expect to acquire other states on the same picture quickly.

"I have found that the screen is important in the presentation of a picture. I am a 'show me' showman and I wanted to know all about all screens before I formally adopted one. The Radium Gold Fibre Screen is in every one of my theatres and will stay there. They will be installed in any other theatres in which I ever present motion pictures. It is unqualifiedly the first aid to exhibition."

90 Per Cent of Public Wants Short Films, Says Goetz

Secretary of United Motion Picture Producers, Returned from Tour of the States, Says That One and Two Part Subjects Are Most in Demand

"NINETY per cent. of the motion picture audiences throughout the United States prefer the short one and two part photodrama to the so-called 'feature picture,'" says Harry Goetz, closely associated with the United Film service in the capacity of secretary of the United Motion Picture Producers, who recently returned from an extensive tour of the United Film service exchanges through the United States and Canada to study the situation regarding public demands.

"In a recent census conducted by the United exhibitors covering 6,000 motion picture theatres to ascertain whether or not the popular demand warranted the extensive output of features at the expense of the short story picture, it was found that 90 per cent. of the audiences prefer the one and two-part photodrama to the long, pretentious one.

"The United Film service realizes the possibility of the short story photoplay, and in their fight for its quality they are championing a cause which is being unwisely slighted for the over-production of a less popular form of photodrama. The public is tiring of the over-exploited multiple reel drama, and is leaning more and more to the high class, concise one and two reel play and since it is the likes and dislikes of popular sentiment which gauge the box office receipts, there is no doubt that the shorter form of photodrama is coming into its own.

"The fact that a photoplay consists of only two parts does not necessarily mean that it is any less of a 'feature' than one of five or six parts," says Mr. Goetz. "It is only the exceptional screen drama which is of enough interest to hold audiences spellbound through more than two or three parts. The obvious 'padding' grows wearisome to spectators.

"On the other hand, a short-story play may have just as big a subject, just as expensive settings and as highly paid players as a so-called 'feature.' But that fact that only the tense, dramatic situations are shown, without 'padding,' without needless entrances and exits, holds the breathless interest of the audiences through a story which would put it to sleep if dragged out at length. The average five and six reel pictures are probably 2,000 or 3,000 feet too long."

Seven Screen Stars in V-L-S-E June Releases

AN analysis of the features scheduled for release during the month of June on the V-L-S-E program, shows the same even balance and variety of subjects that characterized the April and May releases, and in addition to seven of the screen Viola Allen and Rose Coghlan, the distinguished stars of the speaking stage, will be seen in the leading roles.

The first release of the month is Lubin's "The Sporting Duchess," Cecil Raleigh's successful comedy drama, with Rose Coghlan, Ethel Clayton and George Soule Spencer in the principal roles. In this production a phase of ultra-fashionable life and amusement has been handled by Director Barry O'Neil in a masterly manner.

For the week of June 14, the Vitagraph's "The Sins of the Mothers," introduces Earle Williams, Anita Stewart, Paul Scardon and Julia Swayne Gordon. This production is from the winning script in the Vitagraph Evening Sun $1,000 prize contest. It was produced under the direction of Ralph Ince, and deals with the question of hereditary influence. No attempt is made to solve this interesting problem, but the vivid manner in which the theme has been visualized, classifies the production as a picture play with strong dramatic action, and a distinct moral purpose.

Essanay's "The White Sister," with Viola Allen, the world famous star, in the leading role, a portrayal she made famous on the stage, is scheduled for the week of June 23. The intense human appeal in this drama was evidenced during its run on the speaking stage.

"The Rosary," Selig's five-part production, released the last week in the month, is from Edward E. Rose's drama of the same name, and features Miss Kathlyn Williams with her supporting company.

UNIVERSAL WINNER OF BEAUTY CONTEST IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, La., June 2.

Mabel Jackson, of 631 South Dupre street, New Orleans, has been named the winner of the Universal Film company's popularity contest, held in conjunction with the New Orleans "Item."

Miss Jackson polled the remarkable total of 4,275,722 votes, outdistancing her nearest competitor, Miss Helen Schonekas, of 129 South Genois street, by more than 2,200,000 votes.

Miss Jackson is 21 years old, and a splendid type of dark haired Southern womanhood. She is a working girl, and has been for several years an employee of the Havana-American Tobacco company.

She attributes her success to hard work, while others say that her beauty made it a cinch that she would capture first prize. She is to leave for Chicago next week, there to join the fifty other winners aboard the Universal Beauty Special.

"You can just tell the Universal Company that I'm going to work hard to become a motion picture actress," Miss Jackson said.

Golden Gate Hums With Convention Activity

League Committee's Offices on Market Street, San Francisco, Alive with Preparations for Gathering of Exhibitors in July—Nearly All Floor Space Is Sold—Many Film Stars Will Be Present—No Exorbitant Hotel Charges Need Frighten Members—Exposition Day an Added Attraction

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Cal., June 1.

PREPARATIONS for the National Convention of the M. P. E. L. of A. are going forward vigorously.

In San Francisco the local exhibitors are enthusiastic and eagerly awaiting a chance to commence active preparation for entertaining their visitors.

An efficient office force has been organized at Convention Headquarters in the Mechanics' building, 948 Market street, and a local committee of San Francisco exhibitors, headed by H. L. Beach, president of the California State League, and Ralph L. Marks, State secretary, and other prominent San Francisco exhibitors, have been appointed to assist Chairman Cory.

Practically every booth in the Exposition salon has been sold at the present time. Only one of the large ones and three small ones remain open at the present date. Every film concern, with one exception, has signed up for a booth and are arranging an elaborate display.

The committee is confident that the one film concern above mentioned will fall into line within a few days and make it unanimous. The local exchange managers are trying to outdo each other in arranging entertainment stunts and are eagerly rendering the committee every assistance to make the convention a grand success.

California Exhibitors Enthusiastic

The exhibitors throughout the State of California are fully as enthusiastic as the San Francisco exhibitors. Great preparations are being made in Los Angeles, and practically every exhibitor in Los Angeles and San Diego will be aboard the special train when it pulls out from the Angel City. The exhibitors of Sacramento and other large towns are arranging to attend in a body.

If the present rate of applications for membership continues from the country exhibitors, it seems certain that every exhibitor in California will be a member of the State League before the first of July and will attend the convention.

Excellent reports are also being received from Oregon and Washington. A large attendance from these States is assured.

The grand ball with which the convention closes Friday night, July 16, is receiving the most careful attention of the committee. It is planned to make this ball set a mark that will stand for years to come and be hard for any succeeding convention to surpass. Every condition seems to favor such a result.

Many Film Stars Will Be Present

The new Civic Auditorium, in which the ball is to be held, is undoubtedly the most magnificent structure of its kind in America. The dance floor is 197 feet square and is entirely unobstructed by pillars or posts.

A special committee will leave in a few days for Los Angeles to arrange for the attendance of a large number of actors and actresses. The presence of Mary Pickford, Frances Bushman, Charles Chaplin and other famous stars is already assured.

Owing to the unexpected heavy demand for the privilege of exhibiting feature pictures by the various feature producing companies, also the desire of the different machine manufacturers for an opportunity to give actual demonstrations of projection machines, it has been found necessary to arrange for the operation of three miniature theatres during the convention, instead of two.

It is also practically certain that some of the trade who have neglected or delayed contracting for floor space are going to be disappointed. While the exposition salon is larger than any heretofore, the unprecedented demand for space is sure to cause a shortage.

A new feature has been added in the form of a Panama-Pacific Exposition Day. Saturday, July 17, the day following the closing of the convention, has been officially designated by the Panama-Pacific International Exposition management as Motion Picture Day, and an elaborate program of appropriate events is being arranged.

Special Trains Down to Los Angeles

These events will be participated in by the screen favorites who attend the ball, permission having been secured from the various managements to allow them to remain in San Francisco until Sunday morning.

The various special trains will leave San Francisco Sunday morning for a visit to the Los Angeles studios; thus it will be necessary for visitors to spend the entire week in San Francisco to avoid missing part of the big time.

The other arrangements remain practically the same as previously published in the tentative program.

No Exorbitant Hotel Charges

The Special from New York, Chicago and eastern points will arrive in San Francisco, Monday, July 12. The executive board of the National League will meet during Monday afternoon, and Monday will be spent by the trade in putting the finishing touches on their exhibits in the Exposition salon. The Exposition salon and miniature theatres will be thrown open Monday night for informal receptions and exhibition of pictures.

The convention will formally open Tuesday morning, July 13. Special trains from Seattle and Portland, also from Los Angeles and Southern California points, will arrive Tuesday morning.

Hotel rates in San Francisco during the convention will not be exorbitant. The Convention Committee will make hotel reservations and guarantee the rates. Accommodations can be secured at any price desired; for one person in a single room without bath, from $1 up, with bath $1.50; two people in a room with bath from $2 up. To be sure of satisfactory accommodations, those who plan to attend the convention should advise the Convention Committee and have reservations made at once.

First of New MinAs Promises Success for Series

Encouraged Over Its Reception by Exchange Men at a Trade Showing, the Centaur Company Will Push Comedies with Big Publicity Campaign

THE first of the new series of MinA films, made in the Los Angeles studios under the direction of Milton H. Fahrney, came through last week and were shown at a special gathering of exchange men in New York. As a result, these well-advertised one-reel comedies took a decided jump in popularity.

If the manner in which the new subjects were received by the exchange men may be taken as an indication, the MinA films should go to the front with a rush. When old-timers who gaze at the screen day in and day out are moved to laugh out loud and to wax enthusiastic in their praise, there must indeed be merit in the offering.

And that is just what happened when the new MinA subjects were shown. One of the audience, a man who selects the films for one of the biggest chain of theatres in the country, remarked that the new MinAs were "most refreshing in novelty and wholesome fun."

Since the advent of the long feature film there is a greater demand than ever for the good one-reel comedy, but exhibitors have almost despaired of securing consistently funny comedies, outside of a few popular brands of which there are not nearly enough to go round, to satisfy their needs.

"WHEN IT STRIKES HOME" GETS REPEAT BOOKINGS

W. W. Drum, of the World Film Exchange staff, reports excellent bookings on the Pacific coast for the company's recent release, "When It Strikes Home," made by The Charles K. Harris Photoplay Company. Other districts are also forwarding to the New York office reports of a demand for this feature that enables the World Film heads to predict a highly successful career for the film.

Equally gratifying are the repeat booking from various New York theatres where the film has already been shown. These facts leave no doubt as to the popularity of the feature.

THE STRAND EMPLOYES PAY TRIBUTE TO ROTHAPFEL

S. L. Rothapfel, of the Strand Theatre, who has resigned his post of managing director there to build and manage the Rialto, formerly called Hammerstein's Victoria, remodeled, was treated to a surprise, Saturday morning as he was directing rehearsals for his last show in the big picture house.

The entire body of the employees and the members of the orchestra came on the stage, several of their number bearing a table on which were five large silver vases filled with roses, the central vase being joined to the others with silver chains.

While Rothapfel was recovering from his surprise the Cerberus of the stage door, Henry S. Heil, delivered the presentation address, expressing to the retiring director the appreciation of the many kindnesses he had shown his assistants.

In accepting the gift Mr. Rothapfel said he looked upon it as emblematic of the silver chains of friendship and affection which had always joined him and the men who worked with him, and who, by their devotion, had helped to make his success possible.

The donors yelled their appreciation, and after the orchestra had played "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne," the rehearsals proceeded.

"THE SPENDTHRIFT" TO HAVE PRIVATE SHOWING

The doors of the Candler Theatre, New York City, will be thrown open Monday morning, June 7, at 10:30 a. m., for a private exhibition of George Kleine's latest feature, "The Spendthrift," scheduled for release June 21. The performance will be given for the benefit of exhibitors and their friends, all of whom are invited to be present.

"The Spendthrift" was recently completed at the Kleine New York studios. It is founded on the celebrated stage drama by Porter Emerson Browne and features an all-star cast, including Irene Fenwick, Cyril Keightley and Malcolm Duncan. The subject has been made in six parts.

FRISCO SCREEN CLUB WILL "HOUSEWARM" THIS MONTH

San Francisco, June 1.

The Screen Club of San Francisco is planning a high jinks to be given at its new Eddy street quarters some time in June, to which friends of members will be welcome. A beautiful carpet has been laid in the club rooms and a clock, donated by Leon Boreis, of the General Film, has been placed in position.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors, R. B. Quive, who is now with the V-L-S-E, was chosen a director to succeed Tom North, who has left for Portland, Ore.

"THE COUNTRY GIRL" IS THANHOUSER RELEASE FOR JUNE 15

Edwin Thanhouser is beginning to make it evident that he will resume his policy of issuing at intervals a play taken from a book or stage production. The first announcement comes with "The Country Girl," a farce comedy which Director Sullivan is now engaged on at the Thanhouser studio. The old-time theatrical folk will remember this charming little play, which was first given in America at Daly's theatre, now a landmark of New York City.

FLORENCE LA BADIE AS "THE COUNTRY GIRL"

Ada Rehan appeared in the part of Peggy when it was first presented here.

The situations are very clever and one of the novelties in the picture is when Miss Florence La Badie, who plays the title part, dresses in the clothes of a young English youth of that period. Carey Hastings, Harry Benham, Morgan Jones, Justus Barnes and Claude Cooper make up the company, and the little country girl finally marries a young man to her liking.

A novelty in the production is the introduction of an epilogue; this is in the form of a speech by the character Peggy, and while she speaks, the words appear on the sheet. "The Country Girl" will be in two reels and will be released on June 15.

NEW YORK LEAGUE MEETS

A meeting of New York Local, No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was held Thursday, June 3, in the Candler theatre, 224 West Forty-second street, New York city.

Addresses were made by leading city officials and refreshments were served.

MARION FAIRFAX, DRAMATIST, IS WITH LASKY

The Lasky Feature Play company has entered into a contract with Marion Fairfax, the New York dramatist, who will leave for the studios in Hollywood, this week.

The scenario department of the Lasky Feature Play company is completely in charge of William C. De Mille, known as the author of such successful plays as "The Warrens of Virginia" and "The Woman."

Mr. De Mille already has the assistance of Miss Margaret Turnbull, known as a dramatist of success, and Hector Turnbull, until recently dramatic editor of the New York Tribune.

It must also be remembered that Cecil B. De Mille, director general for the Lasky Comapny, also takes occasion to do scenario work for the company.

Miss Fairfax's first play, "The Builders," was produced at the Astor Theatre in New York City in 1907. This was succeeded by "The Chaperone," in which Maxine Elliott starred.

UNITED BOOKING IN QUAKER CITY TAKES LARGER OFFICES

The Philadelphia United Booking Office Feature Film company, Chas. J. Kraus general manager, has moved from the Keith building to 27 North Thirteenth street, right in the film district. Mr. Kraus has had wide experience in the vaudeville line, controlling the United Booking office of America in eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia, and for six years has been the biggest small time agent in Philadelphia.

Mr. Harry Breins is manager of the Modern Film corporation, which has also moved to 227 North Thirteenth street from 1135 Vine street, which quarters became too small for the growing business of the Modern.

"JUGGERNAUT" IS RE-BOOKED IN LOUISVILLE

The re-booking of "The Juggernaut," for the fourth time covering a period of nine days showing, by the Mary Anderson theatre in Louisville, Ky., establishes a world record for picture play re-engagements.

The genuineness of the success is made more pronounced by the absence of any special promotion schemes, other than the regular billing, press notices and advertising.

"The Juggernaut" is first of the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features, and gives to this company's contributions on the V-L-S-E program, a most auspicious introduction.

WILL COLOR PATHE FILM

Pathé has made an innovation which will attract much attention and may prove to be a permanent feature of its program.

It is a one reel drama entitled "Man to Man," made by Balboa, which was sent to France to be colored. It has been put down for release the week of June 14. The result of the coloring has been so satisfactory in this instance that it is probable that other Pathé American-made pictures will be similarly treated.

REEVES COMPANY WORKING IN ATLANTIC CITY

Billie Reeves, the internationally known English comedian and pantomimist, who is being featured in a series of one reel comedies by the Lubin Company, is now in Atlantic City working on some new laughable adventures in which the ocean itself will play an important part.

Reeves and his company of acrobatic funsters have been at the Southern Lubin studio at Jacksonville, Fla., this winter making one reel comedies. The studio was temporarily closed this week and the company moved to the Lubin studio at Atlantic City. In the company that came north were Billie Reeves, Arthur Hotaling, the director, Patsy De Forest, Mae Hotely, Jack O'Neil, Bobbie Williamson, Harry Nelson, Billy Potter, Johnnie Doyle, Charles Griffiths, Mary Hartwell, Amy Forrest and Amy Webb.

Extensive alterations are to be made to the Southern studio during the summer and this fall the Lubin company will send there some of the best known comedians in the country who have lately signed contracts.

JOHN BARRYMORE AND EAGLE RETURN FROM CUBA

A company of the Famous Players, headed by John Barrymore, under the direction of Oscar Eagle, last Tuesday returned to New York from Cuba, where they went about a month ago, to produce a feature film version of Richard Harding Davis' famous adventurous romance, "The Dictator."

Although "The Dictator" is known to be one of the greatest stories ever written, the company engaged in filming this work experienced a few thrills that were not contained in the play.

Among other interesting facts connected with the production is that a number of the supers used in the ensemble scenes were veterans of the war with Spain.

William E. Gonzalez, the American Minister to Cuba, kindly permitted Mr. Eagle to use the American Legation for his Consulate scenes.

SIMONE LEAVES THE CENTAUR

Charles Simone has resigned as secretary and supervising director of the Centaur Film company, Bayonne, N. J., in order to devote his time to directing big productions.

Mr. Simone had been with the Centaur company, of which David Horsley is the founder, since its inception over six years ago. When Mr. Horsley began producing Nestor comedies Simone went along with his old employer, acting in the capacity of general manager for the Nestor company. With the reorganization of the Centaur Film company about two years ago, Mr. Simone became secretary and supervising director, which position he held until last week.

During the last year Mr. Simone has directed most of his attention to producing special feature pictures of a dramatic and educational nature, but inasmuch as the Centaur company will not make any features, for the present at least, Mr. Simone decided to make a change to a place where he might carry out his plans. Among the pictures he has directed and produced are "The Gypsy's Revenge" and "Il Trovatore," a five part version of Verdi's opera.

He has received offers from several organizations to direct productions, but so far he has accepted none of them. It is quite likely, however, that within a few days announcement will be made of his connection with one of the big picture corporations. Mr. Simone's chief eagerness right now is to get busy directing big productions.

FORMAN'S ACTING IS NOTABLE

The Lasky Feature Play company wishes to call particular attention to the notable work which is being done by Tom Forman, the young juvenile of the regular Lasky stock company.

Mr. Forman first came under the direction of the Lasky company at the time of the production of "Young Romance" with Edith Taliaferro as the star, in which Mr. Forman played the role opposite Miss Taliaferro with such a genuine sense of comedy and such earnestness in the dramatic passages that he really divided the honors in that film successes.

Mr. Forman's second role under the Lasky management was that of Robert

TOM FORMAN

Hayes, the young attorney in the Lasky-Belasco production of "The Governor's Lady" and this was followed by the part of Sir Spencer in "The Gentleman of Leisure" the comedy picture in which Wallace Eddinger played the stellar role.

When Ina Claire was engaged by the Lasky company and cast to make her debut in the picturization of "The Wild Goose Chase," it was finally decided that Mr. Forman should have a second opportunity as leading man for a noted star.

Mr. Forman plays important roles in a number of productions to be released during the summer by the Lasky Feature Play company. Among these are the characters of Lieut. Von Mitter in "The Puppet Crown" and Detective Clark in "Fighting Hope" and the French valet in "Chimmie Fadden."

EDWIN ARDEN FINDS PICTURES AID TO ACTING

Edwin Arden, the famous star of the "legitimate" now featured by Pathé, relates how he happened to get into motion pictures. He was a number of years ago playing under the management of the late Charles Froham in the big Drury Lane melodrama, "Hearts Are Trumps," in which occurred a scene where he was taken by a motion picture camera.

Curious to know how his acting appeared in his own eyes, he had the strip of film projected on a screen. The result was valuable to him; for the first time he became conscious of certain little ways in which he could better his interpretation of the part.

He then decided that motion pictures were most valuable as a means of education to the actor determined to improve, and that at the first good chance he would take up the new profession.

Thus when the opportunity was given Mr. Arden to go with Pathé, he was very easy to persuade into signing a contract.

"DAWN OF TOMORROW" IS ANOTHER PICKFORD VEHICLE

Mary Pickford adds another striking characterization to her repertoire in the Famous Players Film company's five-part adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's drama, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," to be released on the Paramount program June 7.

In this celebrated play, which gladdened the hearts of so many when created on the stage with Eleanor Robson, and the screen version of which will cheer as many thousands more, Mary Pickford portrays the weird and wonderful character of Glad, the beautiful and ragged girl of the London slums, whose unfaltering faith and heroic courage even starvation and deadly peril are unable to quench. The delicacy of Miss Pickford's portrayal and the forceful symbolism woven about the drama will undoubtedly make an unforgettable impression on the spectator.

GEORGE BEBAN IN REAL LIFE AND IN FOUR CHARACTER POSES FROM "THE ALIEN," THE INCE-SELECT FEATURE

"THE ALIEN"

(Ince-Select—Nine Reels and One Act)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE ALIEN" offers Broadway the most novel theatrical venture of the season, a perfectly blended combination of the silent and the spoken drama. The production was first shown to the public in New York on the evening of Memorial Day at the Astor theatre, where it succeeded the Famous Players' big spectacle, "The Eternal City."

The nine reels of pictures culminate in a climax enacted by several of the players in person. However, "The Alien" is also complete as a picture, but will not be released as such until the present combination has seen its day.

As is widely known, "The Alien" is based upon George Beban's vaudeville playlet, "The Sign of the Rose." This subject gained its star, Mr. Beban, countrywide fame, and was later enlarged and presented as a complete drama.

Here Mr. Beban appears in the third version of his sketch. As Pietro, the alien, the famed character actor renders his familiarly sympathetic and heart-rending performance throughout both the picture and the act. Mr. Beban's carefully studied expressions, gestures and actions, made perfect by long years of experience, are reproduced with admirable skill on the screen.

The story may well be related in brief. Pietro is thought to have kidnapped Griswold's daughter, being accused of the deed by the American's dissolute brother Phil. Griswold, in haste to locate Pietro, dashes madly through the city's Italian quarter in his machine. He runs down and kills Pietro's little daughter, Rosa.

The denouement arrives when the alien is openly accused of having kidnapped Griswold's daughter. This scene and the remainder of the action is laid on the stage. After he had undergone a most trying ordeal with a detective, the confession of Phil is announced, and then comes to Pietro the knowledge of the cause of Rosa's death. Whereupon the Italian delivers his final speech, beseeching Griswold to be more careful in the future.

The first-nighters who filled the theatre at the premier New York exhibition were several times moved to tears by the picture. In every respect it has been handled well.

Clever contrasts between the homes of the rich and the poor, human scenes between the alien and his little Rosa and then the unspeakably pathetic finish. The situations have been admirably well conceived. Deserving especial praise are the happy scenes immediately preceding the accident, then the admirably well-executed accident itself, and the subsequent fearful scenes as Pietro returns to his home, expecting to discover Rosa awaiting him.

It is truly a great production, about the best Thomas H. Ince has given us, fully deserving the prominent place in theatricals that it is receiving. It is a production that will bring tears to the eyes of the most hardened. As shown at the Astor theatre it was ideally presented.

The music was most appropriate, and of equal importance was the natural connection between the last scene of the film and the act.

A well-selected cast supports Mr. Beban. Blanche Schwed as little Rosa is just the type for the part and an excellent actress. The other child is Thelma Salter, a juvenile performer of ability.

Her parents are well played by Hayward Ginn and Andrea Lynne. Howard Hickman as the profligate Phil is excellent, while his unwilling accomplice is well interpreted by Jack Davidson. Edith MacBride as the cashier of the flower shop gives a fine performance, largely on the stage, but some on the film. W. J. Kane, the detective who appears in the act, is excellent, while Edward Gillespie is also good.

It is pleasing to be able to note that the photography and lighting have been admirably well attended to, making the offering just about perfect. The scene showing the birth of the Saviour is smoothly worked into the story and one of the best pieces of biblical screen depictions that we have ever seen.

The run of "The Alien" at the Astor seems likely to be of indefinite length.

"LOVE, SNOW AND ICE"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

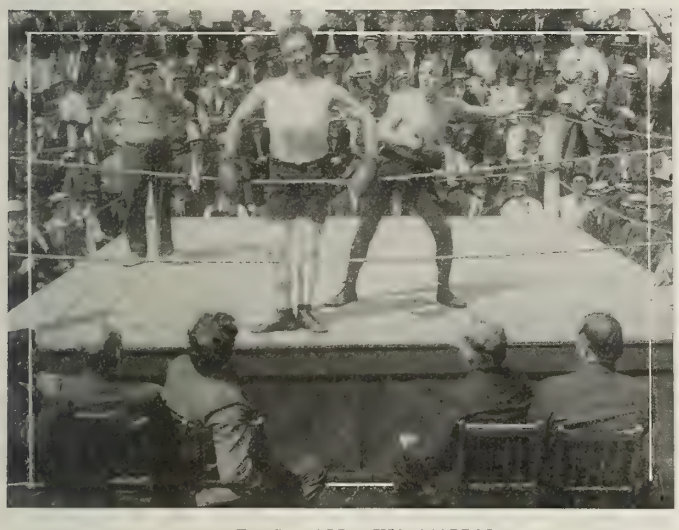
A MERRY, care-free comedy is here enacted with Saranac Lake, New York, in mid-winter, as the setting. Each and every scene of the picture is very beautiful. The photography throughout is excellent, no static appearing at all.

The comedy being merely a version of the old story of rivals in love, many innovations had to be instituted to complete the three reels.

OFF FOR A SPIN IN THE ICE-BOAT

Skating, tobogganning, ice boating and other sports are shown and are exceedingly attractive to watch. A view of the Ice Palace is also given, the procession of floats, and last but not least, everyone appearing in the picture, actors and spectators seem to be thoroughly enjoying themselves.

It is really a very delightful subject. Wally Van produced it with a cast of capable comedians, including himself, Nitra Frazer, Albert Roccardi and Donald MacBride.



"NEARLY A PRIZE FIGHTER"

(Lubin—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IN this story by Francis Edwards, Billy Reeves has good scope for his inimitable fun making.

Traveling around with his pal in tramp fashion, Bill gets to a town where a prize fighter has disappointed his backers, and Bill takes the vacant place, instructing Mike to jab an iron spike through the floor from below, to help overcome the opponent. But Bill is himself caught in his own trap.

When, later a goodly wad, the loser's share, is brought in by Mike, a big celebration is in order.

Johnny Doyle and Bill Potter are the foils to Billy Reeves in this laugh-begetting picture.

"WORMWOOD"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

MANY a tear bore silent witness to the dramatic strength and emotional power of this adaptation of Marie Corelli's famous book, "Wormwood," at the pre-release invitation showing at the Broadway theatre, New York City.

HELOISE PLEADS WITH THE GIRL

"Wormwood" is a pitiless dissection of the soul of an unhappy man and woman with a strong hand wielding the scalpel. On the eve of his wedding Gaston Beauvais learns that Pauline has given her love to Silvion, Gaston's closest friend. Gaston becomes an absinthe fiend.

His soul and body undergo a transformation for the worse. He denounces and leaves Pauline at the altar. She becomes an outcast, a Parisian street singer. Beauvais, sinking lower and lower, unshaven and disreputable, takes the life of Silvion. Pauline learns of this when she meets Beauvais on the Pont Neuf and takes her own life by leaping into the river below. The other characters, including Heloise, Pauline's closest friend, a girl who loved Beauvais, hurry on to unhappy ends.

Ethel Kaufman and John Saintpolis play Pauline and Gaston. Charles Arthur is Silvion. Stephen Grattan is a priest, Edgar Davenport Pauline's father, and Philip Hahn is an artist and absinthe user. Lillian Dillworth, an able recruit from the legitimate stage, glorifies the part of Heloise, Gaston's good angel, one of the three important parts of the picture.

One important factor in the picture is W. C. Thompson's camera work. There are 118 double exposures, including several scenes where Gaston sees a leopard after him and a very pretty double exposure taken against the surface of a pond, which brought a round of applause. Marshall Farnum directed the picture, his first for the Fox Film Corporation.

"THE GODDESS"

(Vitagraph—Chapter Four)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

OPENING with a beautiful scene of the Goddess being conveyed across a pretty lake in a canoe of Stilleter, this chapter continues to be marked with the same effective situations, acting and direction that distinguished its predecessors.

Things of a most important nature occur continuously throughout this number. Stilleter brings the Goddess out of the woods, through a group of country bumpkins, boarding a train and finally reaching the city.

CELESTIA TAKEN TO THE HOSPITAL FOR OBSERVATION

To see Miss Steward parade serenely through the Pennsylvania station still in her garb of filmy drapery, a large throng following after, is both humorous and wondrous. However, she is arrested for disturbing the peace and detained in an asylum.

In the meantime Tommy regains his clothing and hastens after Celestia. He is allowed to remove her from the asylum because he claims her as his fiancee.

Again in these two reels there is much that is humorous. Donald MacBride, the Vitagraph handy man, is introduced as the star reporter of Wayhocus county weekly, and is responsible for much laughter. But the remarkable time of the story's situations is in turn also responsible for a great amount of humor. The scenes are so well evolved and so unquestionably new that it is small wonder "The Goddess' has already achieved such popularity.

One Man Orchestra Gains in Popularity

WHILE numerous theatres are installing organs and orchestras for their musical equipment, an equally large number are favoring the "one-man orchestra," whereby one person at a keyboard can have the combination of orchestra instrumentation, and the straight pipe organs, as in the case of the "Bartla." Statistics would probably show that there are more theatres putting in these "one-man orchestras" than there are putting in the pipe organ alone.

"THE WILD GOOSE CHASE"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WILLIAM C. DE MILLE'S comedy on which this picture is based is not of a variety foreign to motion picture scripts; in fact, it is of a very familiar nature. In this instance, however, this fact does not detract one whit from the value of the comical situations that appear in the course of the story's development.

The capability of the cast, which is headed by Ina Claire and some strikingly original and funny situations, are responsible for the picture's unbounded power to amuse. Unlike many pictures of feature length offering comedy as a side line, "The Wild Goose Chase" is almost totally a comedy. The love story is perhaps the most serious thing in it.

The story runs as follows. Two old Frenchmen conceive the plan that it would be nice if their grandchildren were to marry and consequently offer them a large sum of money to do so. Over in America Betty Wright and Bob Randall, the two children in question, meet incognito and fall in love.

Not wishing to carry out the plan of their grandfathers, as neither realizes who the other is, they run away and join a road show, belonging to that species of traveling dramatic troupe that rarely possesses more than two and a quarter after the pockets of all the members have been squeezed.

After experiencing untold trials and tribulations which have just the opposite effect on the spectator, both pairs of parents appear and acquaint the young people of their relation with one another. And happy is no word for the ending of the picture.

Ina Claire looks very sweet and plays very well as Betty, while Tom Forman in the opposite role makes a most human figure of Bob. It remains for Theodore Roberts to appear as Horatio Brutus Bangs, the manager and leading man of the stock company, and a most comical figure Mr. Roberts makes of the role.

Lucien Littlefield as the Grind is very good, and so is the person who appears as Betty's maid. The parents of Betty and Tom are excellently burlesqued by four people who know their parts.

For a refined and really funny comedy, enacted by an enthusiastic cast and produced exceedingly well, "The Wild Goose Chase" has no superiors that we have seen.

"THE PRETTY SISTER OF JOSE"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT'S play, "The Pretty Sister of Jose," is laid in Spain and contains all the fixtures of a superb romance. Matadors, worshipped by the populace, midnight serenades rendered under the light of the moon, benevolent padres, beggars of the highroad, love, revenge and penitence—all the essentials of a delightful drama are present en masse in "The Pretty Sister of Jose," with the result that as a romance the picture attains practically the height of excellence.

In considering every point of the five reels, one wonders on whom to bestow rightful praise. Author, director, star, supporting cast and cameraman have all contributed largely to the success of the visualized play. To single out any individual for especial credit would hardly be fair to the others concerned, and the term of "all-around excellence" best sums up the merits of the romance.

The story concerns Pepita, who, much impressed by her father's desertion of her mother, nurses a fierce hatred and scorn for all men. Sebastiano, a famous matador, loves Pepita, even verbally acquaints her of this fact, and when she insists that she hates him he leaves for other parts of the country, warning her that some day she will regret. Only at his depature does Pepita realize her love for Sebastiano.

Much later Sebastiano returns to Madrid with the woman he intends to make his wife after his next encounter with the bull. Pepita is heart-broken, but repairs to witness the combat. In the ring Sebastiano is mortally wounded. He is carried to the home of Pepita where he breathes his last. And so the story ends—Pepita had loved and lost.

Marguerite Clark, dainty, dark eyed and vivacious, embodies all the characteristics of the title role and at all times performs with a most pleasing grace. As Jose, Jack Pickford has the chief comedy character of the picture and renders a fine performances throughout. Ruper Julian as Sebastiano acquits himself very creditably. Teddy Sampson, Gertrude Norman, Dick Rosson, William Lloyd and Edythe Chapman perform sincerely and well.

Of considerable weight is the realistic atmosphere of the picture. Allan Dwan made it on the Pacific Coast. Photography, locations and costumes are noticeably pleasing. It's a safe assertion that no one will go wrong in booking "The Pretty Sister of Jose." Its first public exhibition was at The Strand.

COAST FILM FOLK FLOCK TO STATIC CLUB DANCE

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

The music was furnished by the Rutherford Dancing Academy orchestra of sixteen pieces, and among the new dances introduced were "The Directors' Slow Step," "Brides' Glide," and a 1915 Movie Dance.

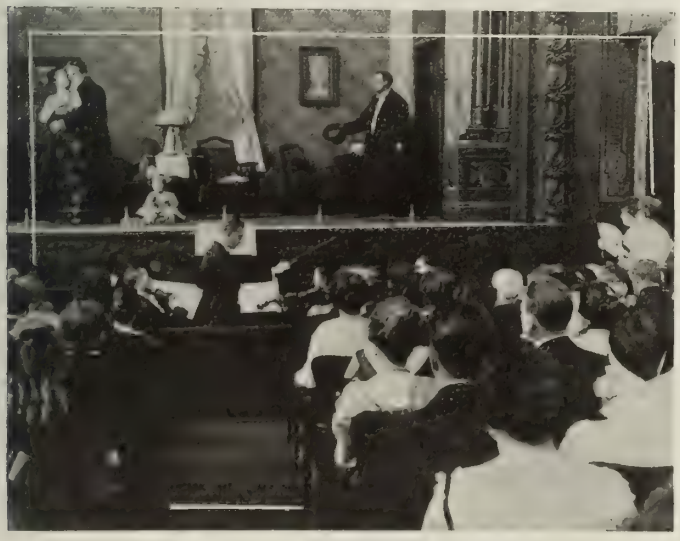
"THE MILLIONAIRE BABY"



(V-L-S-E-Selig—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Millionaire Baby" combines a novelly conceived plot and most pleasing direction. The story which was adapted for the screen by Gilson Willets comes from the pen of Anna Katherine Green, and while the element of mystery that characterizes the greater number of this writer's works is not present in the offering in hand, the picture does not fail to create suspense, sufficient to ever retain the interest.

The situations of the story are extremely unusual. An author deserts his wife, an actress, and enters into the employ of Ocumpaugh, a millionaire, as his secretary. Mrs. Ocumpaugh is childless and in desperation over the fear that she will lose her husband's love, she bribes her doctor to find her a baby that she may call her own.

The doctor forces the deserted actress to part with her child, which he in turn gives to Mrs. Ocumpaugh. The secretary of course knows nothing of the proceedings. Ten years later the actress has retired, having inherited a fortune. She rents the house next door to the Ocumpaughs and unknowingly becomes intimately acquainted with her own child.

Finally the actress demands that the doctor return her daughter. At a reception she meets her husband. Later in the evening the child disappears. A number of people are thought to have stolen it, until Mrs. Ocumpaugh confesses to the deed. She had hidden the child to prevent the doctor taking it away. Then follows a family reunion between the secretary, his wife and child. The Ocumpaughs are finally reconciled.

Two good thrillers are registered in the burning of the cabin in the rain and the rescue of Ocumpaugh by the secretary and again in the death of the rascally doctor, who falls from a balcony while attempting to escape from a detective. The settings are excellent, the ball room scene being most realistic, while good photography dominates the entire picture. A few inconsistencies in regard to the detail of the production appear.

Of the cast Harry Mestayer playing the secretary and Charlotte Stevens appearing as the little girl, are by all means the stars. Mrs. A. C. Marston is the weakest member of the players. As Mrs. Ocumpaugh she shines rather dimly. Others that appear are Grace Darmond as the actress, Frederick Hand as Ocumpaugh and John Charles as the doctor.

"The Millionaire Baby" will in all probability attain great success. It has unconventionality combined with a heart-interest story a fine combination.

"THE MELTING POT"

(Cort Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THOSE who knew Israel Zangwill only for his irony and delicate humor unrelieved by deep sentiment, as exemplified in such of his works as "The Premiere and the Painter," were surprised to learn, some years ago, when "The Melting Pot" was put on the speaking stage, how capable he was of stirring the tender emotions.

THE SOLDIERS BEGIN THE POGROM

Catherine Carr has preserved the spirit of the original play in her scenario, and the directors, James Vincent and Oliver D. Bailey, alive to the possibilities of the script, have produced a photo-drama of unusual merit.

The theme is mighty in conception. Zangwill saw in America a huge crucible in which the nations of the earth would blend into one race of lofty ideals and altruistic aims.

An impressive pictorial characterization of this idea, impossible except with photography, shows a large melting pot into whose depths descend the various peoples coming to the shores of America as a refuge from oppression and a land of golden promise.

The realization of the hopes of one survivor of the Kishineff massacres develops Zangwill's theme. The contrast between violent scenes in a land of espionage, intrigue, interference with personal freedom and religious liberty; and the peaceful scenes in a country whose boast is equality, and justice for all, has been drawn with telling effect in this play. On the one hand is organized murder of the inoffensive and humble by the officials of their own government, the slaughter of helpless women and innocent babes, and on the other the quiet life under normal conditions in America.

While the sufferings of the characters in the play will move the people in the audience of kindred tie with all the intensity for which it is evidently designed, it also has the power to move to sympathy spectators of an alien faith and arouse their indignation at the indefensible enormity of religious persecution.

Walker Whiteside as David Quixano, the young man who flees to America, after escaping from the massacre, in which mother, father, brother and sister are struck down before the very eyes of the musician, plays a difficult part with sympathetic insight.

Valentine Grant gives a pleasant rendition of Vera Ravendal, daughter of the Russian official, used by the imperial government as the deadly instrument of its unmitigating vengeance—the girl who casts off the faith of her fathers in a deep love for a worthy man among the persecuted.

Fletcher Harvey as the Baron, gave an excellent representation of the narrow-minded official whose perverted sense of duty makes him think that he must carry out at all costs the orders of his cruel superiors.

"THE PATRIOT AND THE SPY"

(Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

REMARKABLE night battle scenes actually photographed at night, in which the players and gun firing stand out silhouetted in sharp relief against the blackness, giving the impression of actually beholding a small segment of a mighty conflict, are a notable feature of this production.

The effectiveness of these scenes is astounding. They are more realistic than the usual scene "tinted for night" in that the eye sees on the screen about what it really would see at night. The action in the battle scenes is excellent; one is able to tell which way the tide of conflict is flowing. In addition there are daylight scenes with considerable perspective, evidently taken of an encampment of real troops.

THE BURNING OF THE CHATEAU

The story is laid in a country at war, any country, nothing unneutral. The patriot, played by James Cruze, cannot join the army because of an injured foot. So he stays at home with his wife, played by Marguerite Snow, and the children. The rejected suitor, played by Alphonse Ethier, joins the army, is captured and turns spy. Returning home, as a spy, he poses as a hero.

The spy plants some troops near a bridge and then gets the patriot to try to dynamite the bridge. The patriot is caught and sentenced to be hung. Meanwhile the spy makes forcible love to the patriot's wife. As the patriot is being hung from the bridge the rope breaks and he escapes by swimming. He hurries home. Pursuing troops shoot the spy by mistake, seeing him silhouetted against the window of the patriot's home. Just as the patriot is about to be captured, he is saved by his country's troops, who are chasing the enemy.

The unusual night scenes make this an exceptional as well as a thrilling and satisfactory feature.

"LITTLE MISS BROWN"

(World Film Corp.—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

ADAPTING for motion pictures so tenuous a farce as Philip Bartholomae's "Little Miss Brown" necessitates the weaving of a fabric thin at its best. But James Young, the director, has done his best and, to say the least, "Little Miss Brown" provides a vehicle admirably suited to the blonde, pert, prettiness of Vivian Martin, one of the daintiest of the stars which the screen has won away from the stage.

Miss Martin plays little Miss Brown, who is blessed with two suitors. She loves Robert Mason, but flirts with Joseph Clews. She even plans to meet Clews and marry him. Going to a hotel to wait for Clews she is mistaken for Mrs. Dennison, the estranged wife of Richard Dennison..

The Dennisons must be on good terms, apparently at least. if they are to receive a legacy from his uncle. When the real Mrs. Dennison, the uncle and Miss Brown's suitors arrive there is a fine tangle. But everything is straightened out. Mason wins Miss Brown and the Dennisons get their money.

Considerable comedy "business" is worked in by the bell boy, the hotel clerk, the crabbed uncle and the thin, real Mrs.

LITTLE MISS BROWN'S BIRTHDAY PARTY

Dennison. The comedy is the kind rated as "sure-fire" and undoubtedly will please future spectators.

Next conspicuous to Miss Martin are Chester Barnett as Mason, Craufurd Kent as Clews, Charles Dickson and Ethel Lloyd as the Dennisons, W. J. Ferguson as the uncle, and Ned Sparks as the night clerk.

"THE RIGHT TO HAPPINESS"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is a simple but thoroughly interesting story with its scenes laid in the West. It is well produced with uniformly good photography and is ably acted by a cast including Joe Galbraith, Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson, Louise Lester and Harry Von Meter.

A young broker unjustly accused of the theft of some valuable bonds and believed to be guilty by his wife leaves for the West, where he settles in a small mining town.

The innkeeper's daughter attracts his love, and learning that his wife has secured a divorce, he marries the Western girl, thereby incurring the enmity of her Mexican suitor. Later the Mexican revenges himself by imprisoning the husband in an abandoned mine pit, where he remains for four days.

Almost dead from hunger and exhaustion, he is rescued in the nick of time to save his life. In the meantime his first wife had refused to sign the final divorce papers, and discovering her husband's innocence through the confession of the real culprit, she sets out to find him. She arrives on the scene in time to observe the happy family re-union after the husband's rescue. Her heart touched, she decides to go back East and complete the divorce, leaving her husband his well-earned happiness.

"THE HAUNTING FEAR"

(Kalem—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

AUTHOR, C. Doty Hobart; director, Robert G. Vignola, a clever combination, and one to be desired, if all their work is to be judged by this latest release of Kalem.

The story of the country girl lured to the city and her subsequent wanderings has been used over and over again, but this one has such twists, such clever handling on the part of the author and director as to put it in a class by itself.

Alice Hollister plays the part of Katherine, the country girl, and never has she "done herself more proud." Her acting is a masterpiece.

Lured by Diana (Anna Nilsson), Katherine leaves her country home and meets Mace (Harry Millarde), a man-about-town, and is infatuated with him. Drawn into the city's whirlpool and learning Mace's real character, she stabs him. Believing herself a murderess, she seeks refuge in a convent, where Mace on recovering seeks her out in an attempt to kill her.

MACE SEEKS KATHERINE

The stabbing of Mace had been witnessed by a demented doctor, who, recognizing him as the betrayer of his daughter, takes him into his home and prepares to revenge his daughter's shame. He doctors him and keeps him prisoner, until one day Mace overpowers the doctor and escapes.

Forcing his way into the convent to where he has traced her, Mace comes upon Katherine praying in front of a shrine. Her words move him so that, though intending to shoot her, he stays his hand.

She, learning that she is not a murderess, takes the denouement as a direct answer to her prayer and a sign of divine forgiveness. Mace sees a new light and, finding that Katherine still loves him, goes to the good father of the convent, repents his sins, and is married to Katherine then and there in the convent.

Good acting on the part of the principals, clear photography, marked attention to detail in all the interior settings, and a story far ahead of the average plot make this release a sure fire hit.

"PALS IN BLUE"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

WHEN a picture can draw unrestrained laughter from an audience composed of callous critics, startle them into involuntary exclamations of excitement and dim their eyes at times, one can be certain that it contains rare combination of humor, thrills and pathos, and a combination as pleasing as it is rare.

"Pals in Blue," to be released June 10, is such a picture. The story written by Tom Mix is full of human interest and also contains plenty of opportunities to display the kind of Western action that has made his pictures so popular. He has produced in a natural way under natural conditions relying upon real horsemanship and real ability rather than trick photography to register the thrills.

He himself takes the principal part and receives able assistance from a band of trained cowboys in addition to the regular cast. The costumes, settings and the actions of the cast serve to clothe the picture in an atmosphere that makes it most realistic.

Tom and Jerry, two happy-go-lucky and care-free cowpunchers, are stranded with a wild west show. By selling their saddles they raise funds to go back to the ranch and the life they love. Before leaving two girls pick them up, relieve them of their roll and are the cause for their shooting up a saloon, which unusual feat lands them in jail for fifteen days.

At the end of this time, penniless they enlist in the army and are sent to a Western cavalry post where they are trained into full fledged soldiers. The captain of this post is in love with the wife of the lieutenant, and in order to get the lieutenant out of the way he treacherously notifies a hostile band of Indians that the lieutenant is returning with the pay roll, guarded by a scanty escort.

In the very exciting and realistic fight which follows the Indians' ambush of the party, Tom and Jerry volunteer to ride through the lines and secure reinforcements. Jerry is shot, but Tom arrives in time to save the party and also to save the lieutenant's wife from the attentions of the captain. He is the hero of the post, but this does not mitigate the sorrow he feels over the loss of his pal.

The overturning of the stage coach going at break-neck speed, the dragging of a man from the stirr-up of a runaway horse, the burning of the stage house by blazing arrows and by cart wheels on which are tied oil-soaked rags are a few of the unusual things one sees in this picture, but the interest of the story does not depend entirely upon these.

The whole production is skillfully done and is not in the least overdone from start to finish. It certainly deserves a high place in the better type of Western pictures.

"TODAY AND TOMORROW"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

PROCRASTINATION is only another name for lazy selfishness, and the dire effects which it may have are well depicted in this picture. The girl is typical of hundreds of present-day young women whose only thought is to do exactly as they please at the time and let every real duty slide until tomorrow.

The attitude of such persons has become so fixed against doing anything which causes disarrangement of their plans that they oppose the wishes of others almost mechanically. Unfortunate results are inevitable, and this story simply shows a rather extreme case of misfortune arising from a commonplace sort of selfishness.

Julia Monroe is the heroine, and she is a girl whose only principal in life is to do exactly what she pleases. Stubbornness and sudden bursts of extravagant affection serve her in ruling her father and sweetheart.

When the men at the oil wells wreck the mess shack in a final burst of anger over bad food Julia's father realizes that they are not in a mood to be trifled with, and sends his superintendent, who is his daughter's sweetheart, to town for a new supply of food. The orders are to have it at camp in time for supper without fail.

Julia meets her sweetheart in town, and by her usual wiles succeeds in inducing him to postpone his return to the oil wells until the next day. While she is amusing herself with the young man the maddened employees all but kill her father, and in the excitement the place is set on fire and she arrives in the morning to find the family fortune gone up in smoke.

Her sweetheart is dismissed, and her father faces life penniless in his old age. All is due to her selfishness. The preliminary incidents showing the girl's character are very well handled. As usual Ruth Roland and Henry King are featured.

"COURAGE AND THE MAN"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IF women in real life admired moral courage above physical as they do in fiction there would be fewer deserted homes and suffering children, but as a matter of fact they usually love the handsome villain. Such a plot always makes an interesting photoplay and this scenario by Shannon Fife is no exception.

Edgar Jones seems particularly well suited to the part of the strapping woodsman, but in the part of Travis in this film he is the villain, not the hero. The latter is taken by Arthur Mathews as Dr. Ned Reed, a semi-invalid who is ordered to the Canadian woods for his health. His wife goes along as a good wife naturally would, but way in this neck of the woods trouble begins.

As fate would have it, here also lives Travis, a former sweetheart of Ethel and an enemy of the doctor. He has actually killed the doctor's younger brother, though this is not suspected by anybody, not even by his cabin mate, another husky fellow, named Rogers, portrayed by Louis Marlette.

The story develops several climaxes. The physician becomes absorbed in his work and his books and his wife turns to Travis, who deliberately woos her, though repeatedly warned against such action by Rogers.

THE DOCTOR ORDERS REED TO THE WOODS

The way Travis and Rogers become mortal enemies and fight to the death, the way Reed sees this and by sheer moral courage prevents Travis from shooting him, the way Travis commits suicide gives occasion for many a "punch," also some well taken pictures of the big woods.

The scene of the landslide, carrying Rogers' supposed corpse to the very threshold of Travis is particularly exciting.

But only the villain dies, for the doctor drags Rogers back from the jaws of death. His reward comes in the doubled love of his wife, brought so close to disaster by Travis's lawlessness and her temporary weakness.

The cast did itself credit, particularly Justina Huff.

"A STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE"

(Imp-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE foundation of this picture is a story by Anna Katherine Greene, of the same name adapted for the screen by Raymond L. Shrock. The plot has not been overworked for film purposes and in its entirety it makes a picture capable of creating enough suspense to sustain the interest from first to last.

George Lessey produced the picture here in the East. There are a number of little flaws throughout the offering which could have been avoided, but considering merely the salient features of the drama it is pleasingly acceptable, regarded from the angle of direction.

Evidently from the costumes and interiors the time is back in the early days of New York City. No touch of modernism is to be observed. And the scenes are always appropriate. Chiefly realistic is the living room of the inn, and the various apartments of old Blake's residence. In photography, too, the picture is good.

The story concerns the troublesome love affairs of a wealthy merchant's son, Andres. His father, nearing his last days, desires him to marry any woman save the girl with whom he is in love. At last to please his father he takes as his wife, an innkeeper's daughter who had once saved his life.

Later she believes that her husband does not love her and returns to her father, who holds her prisoner, hoping to obtain a large sum of money from her husband for her release. Andres, searching for the girl, goes to her father, and a fight ensues in which the husband is rendered unconscious. His rescue is effected by detectives.

The cast is headed by King Baggot, who appears as Andres. Ned Reardon as the tavern keeper and Harry Gripp as his son, render some most effective work as the rascally conspirators, while Jane Gail, as the daughter, wife of Andres, is very good. Frank Smith is the father of Andres, while Edna Hunter, as Evelyn, completes the cast.

"THE TURNING POINT"

(Empress-United—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE plot of this drama is not essentially new, but the film is well done, and makes a story which will please most audiences. The problem which the picture treats is one which is perhaps more common in real life than most of those depicted on the screen. It is that of the husband whose interest in his work is so great that he needlessly neglects his wife, and comes to the point of a separation through the most unnecessary sort of misunderstanding.

A business man, a part played by Joseph Levering, is intent on building up a fortune. He devotes himself so closely to work that his wife, who is entirely devoted to him, is not only deprived of his society, but is forced to find her amusements by herself. One evening she goes to a friend's home, and having been unable to induce her husband to accompany her is taken home by her hostess' brother. The latter tries to kiss her on her own steps, and is seen by the husband, who thinks his wife has offered the man encouragement.

This leads to a suggestion by the husband of divorce. The appearance of the superintendent of a mill which the business man has ordered closed leads the wife to make an appeal to her husband on behalf of the employes who face a winter without work. This unexpectedly leads to a complete reconciliation and an understanding which the couple have never known before.

Marian Swayne makes an attractive leading woman, and her acting is as pleasing as her appearance.

Carelessness about many details of the settings mars a number of the scenes. This is so easily avoided that it seems quite unnecessary.

"COHEN'S LUCK"

(Edison—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS feature is notable in more ways than one. First of all it marks the beginning of Edison's new policy of releasing a four-reel picture at regular intervals on the General Film program. Such pictures as well as the three-reelers naturally mark a considerable change for a studio which formerly limited itself to two-reel subjects.

Another interesting point about "Cohen's Luck" is the nature of the story. While it has many dramatic and even tragic moments, the essential idea is that of comedy, an element less common than it might be in films of this length.

As might be supposed from the title, the story deals with the Jews of New York's East Side, and is taken from the play of the same name by Lee Arthur. Clever work is done by almost all the members of the cast.

William Wadsworth takes the part of Cohen, and Lillian Devere is seen as his wife. Viola Dana and Harry Scherr appear as the younger Cohens. Others in the cast are: Duncan McRae, John Walker, Jessie Stevens, Edward Lawrence, Frank Lyons and Robert Brower.

Abe Cohen is fired because he is getting the votes of the Buttonhole Makers' Union for a candidate unfriendly to his boss, a sweatshop owner. This results, however, in his being set up as the proprietor of a kosher restaurant. After many hardships he and an Irish woman, Mrs. McGee, win $10,000 in a lottery. The tragic infatuation of Cohen's daughter and her later happy romance makes a strong dramatic portion of the story.

The exteriors taken in the New York ghetto are as interesting as authentic.

ADVANTAGES OF "TWILIGHT SLEEP" SHOWN IN FILMS

THE Motherhood Educational Society is at present promoting a movement by which it may receive permission to exhibit at special women's matinees the "Twilight Sleep" pictures, recently photographed in a Brooklyn hospital under the direction of Dr. Kurt E. Schlossingk. It is the object of the Motherhood Educational society to reach as many women of the country as possible, that they may have brought before their eyes the actual and proven benefits of the drug scopolamin when administered to women during the period of childbirth.

Dr. Schlossingk is an associate of Professors Kronig and Gauss of the Frauenklinik, Greiburg, Germany, where the remarkable powers of scopolamin were brought to light by Professor Freiberg.

The scenes which were taken under his personal supervision, are absolutely authentic. The various stages through which the patient must pass after first taking the drug until she has painlessly emerged from the entire period are exhibited on the screen.

On the other hand pictures are shown of the natural mother suffering the pain that now may be eliminated by the use of the harmless drug. The contrasts between the peaceful composure of the woman under the influence of scopolamin and the suffering experienced by the natural mother is most striking.

The woman under the care of Dr. Schlossingk is not even conscious of the fact that she has given birth to a child until after coming out of the temporary unconsciousness caused by the drug. Again the rapidity of the recovery of the "twilight" mother as compared to the natural mother is well brought out.

Another sincere point which the films successfully bring out is the fact that the babies born of the "twilight" mothers are in no manner at all harmed by the effect of the mother's lapse into unconsciousness.

It is further intended by the members of the Motherhood Educational society that Dr. Schlossingk deliver a lecture together with the exhibition of the picture, as he has done in all the showings up to the present time. The doctor has been in the United States for almost a year and has been delivering lectures before numerous medical societies as well as directing clinics in the prominent hospitals of New York City.

"THE VENGEANCE OF THE WILDS"

(Carl Ray—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS film is a melodrama and as such it deals with the favorite subject of melodramas, the deception of an innocent girl by a roue from the city, and the resulting scheme of revenge planned by the victim's former sweetheart. However, this familiar story is presented with novelties of action, setting and construction which combine to make an attractive feature.

The most conspicuous departure from the ordinary is the splendid use which is made of wild animals. For realistic effect the screen has seldom seen the equal of the attack on the heroine's father by lions, and the death of the villain in the leopard's cage. The former is particularly well done. Even better than these scenes is the one wherein the villain is attacked by a lion and saved by the hero. The animals are so cleverly handled that positively startling results are produced.

BROWN FINDS HIMSELF WITHOUT AMMUNITION

The three leading parts are well acted. The heroine is played by Lorraine Otto, while the villain and hero are portrayed by Charles Wheelock and Harry T. De Vere.

The daughter of an African settler is engaged to the son of a widow who lives nearby. A collector of animals camps in the region, and meets the girl, when her sweetheart saves him from death when attacked by a lion, and he is taken to her home to be cared for.

Becoming infatuated with him she disregards her father's story of the mistake her own mother made, and goes away with the stranger. The saddened lover follows, saying that he saved the coward's life. At home the hunter throws the girl aside, and she then discovers that her marriage was a faked one.

Her former sweetheart goes to the menagerie where the villain keeps his animals, and a terrific fist fight takes place. Blinded by pain and fear the man runs into a leopard cage where he is quickly killed. Realizing their mistakes the two lovers become reconciled and return to their African home together.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK FEATURED BY MACK SENNETT

Los Angeles, June 1.

THE producing staff at the Keystone has recently been materially increased. Raymond Hitchcock has arrived and is now being featured together with Mack Sennett in a two-reel film comedy.

Mr. Sennett is rapidly making a real photoplayer out of the late Broadway star, and is having no difficulty in removing the rough edges which to some extent mar the work of the stage actor in pictures. Mr. Hitchcock has proven so interested in the work that he arrives at the studio in the morning with the janitor. Other stars added to the Keystone staff are Don Barclay, late successful burlesque player; Charles Arling, formerly with Francis Wilson, and Harry Booker.

George J. Summerville (Slim), Keystone comedian, has joined the ranks of the benedicts, and no more is seen along the Rialto in the evening. Photoplayers claim this is another proof that an Indian can be civilized.

"UNDER THE CRESCENT"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Chapter Three)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE preceding narrative of Princess Ibrahim Hassan told the manner in which the three fugitives from the royal palace successfully evaded their pursuers. Here we discover that they have taken refuge in the interior of one of the old pyramids. For a long time their hiding place remains a mystery to the soldiers of the prince who attempt to find them.

At length they are discovered and after a fierce combat between the American and the soldiers they are forced to give themselves up and return to the rascally prince, the enemy of all three.

This is a most interesting narrative and deserves praise in both the construction of plot and the direction. The settings representing the interior of the pyramids are stable in appearance and apparently are realistic enough to create the desired illusion. The exterior scene showing the base of the pyramid is another admirable bit of technical work.

THE REFUGEES DISCOVER A HIDING PLACE

The fight between the American and the hirelings of the Turkish prince is most exciting, being produced in a very realistic manner.

In regard to the acting too, the series continues in a favorable manner, Princess Hassan, Edna Maison, Edward Sloman and William Dowlan continuing in the principal roles.

"GUARDING OLD GLORY"

(F. O. Nielsen—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

WITH talk of war in the air and doubt in the minds of many as to the United States preparedness to enter the world's struggle, this picture is full of timely interest. Everyone will welcome the opportunity to become acquainted with the military activities and resources of our Government, and F. O. Nielsen presents this opportunity in five reels of most interesting and instructive film.

It shows how the future officers are trained at West Point, how men are enlisted at recruiting stations; the bringing together and training of the officers and men at the army post; the manoeuvers of the infantry, cavalry, artillery and signal corps; the aviation corps both on land and sea; how mines are used in naval warfare and upon the land; our submarines and our battleships as they are in peace and as they would be in war; the work and play of the blue jackets on shore and on board ship; the mobilization of the troops in the various parts of the country and equipping and boarding the transports.

In short, everything which pertains to the working of our army and navy and the preparations which Uncle Sam is ever making for war will be shown. All these pictures are actual photographs taken by expert camera men and the photography is unusually good throughout. While they are not connected by a plot, each one is in itself so entertaining that the series will hold any audience intensely interested from beginning to end.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Instalment Fourteen)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

QUEST'S laboratory and the home of Professor Ashleigh constitute the greater number of scenes in this chapter, which brings all the characters back to New York again. These two reels are noticeable for the same good quality of direction that has marked the preceding episodes. The electrical storm and its nearly disastrous consequence is exceptionally well handled in respect to effective lighting.

In New York Craig meets and cares for his young niece. Quest suspecting that he will attempt to escape and disregard his promise to meet him, has him continually shadowed by detectives. Before departing to meet the criminologist Craig makes a will in which he leaves all his property to his niece.

That night a severe electrical storm rages. In the professor's house previous to the arrival of the party which is to hear the confession of Craig, the mysterious pair of hands arranges a steel plate under the table, to which are fastened wires leading to another plate half protruding from the window.

When Craig meets Quest he refuses to tell him anything because of the fact that the detective did not trust him. However, Quest brings Craig into the room where, Lenora, Laura, the inspector and the professor are seated near the table. At that moment the lightning strikes the plate setting the table on fire. No one is injured but Craig is accused of arranging the contrivance.

QUEST ARRANGES A TRAP FOR CRAIG

Following this Quest attempts to force Craig's confession by means of electro-thought transference, but in the midst of the process the poor man dies.

"THE LONESOME HEART"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS is an interesting combination of a child story and a romance. Margarita Fischer plays Samanthy, a little foundling in an orphan asylum presided over by a cruel superintendent, Sarah Prue, played by Lucille Ward. Samanthy runs away and is found by George Stuart, who seems to her to be a Fairy Prince.

George takes the girl home with him. Under the influence of good clothes she blossoms forth into a regular beauty. Then the father steps in and returns Samanthy to the orphan asylum.

THE PUNISHMENT CAUGHT PLAYING TRUANT

Then the plot is unraveled. Samanthy was the daughter of Stuart, Sr.'s, partner. When the partner died Stuart, Sr., left the baby on the asylum steps. Sarah Prue, knowing that the girl was the rightful heir to the fortune Stuart was enjoying, was blackmailing him. But Stuart, Sr., undid his wrong by baring Samanthy's identity. Samanthy celebrated her emancipation by taking all the "kiddies" from the asylum over to a soda fountain and treating them.

"ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Part Ten)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IN this part, "The Unsparing Sword," a sad fate seems closing in on poor, childish Alene. In spite of unselfish efforts on the part of Dane and Daisy, the speedy trial of Alene for the murder of Gilbert Jerome results in a verdict of "guilty" and she is sentenced to be hanged.

We can hardly wait until next week, but feel sure Dane and Daisy must find some way to keep her from such a doom. Dane sells a chemical formula, worth a fortune, for one thousand dollars with which to pay Alene's lawyer. A new element of interest in the story is the regeneration of Daisy's character through association with Alene and her secret love for Dane.

Although many minor characters are introduced and a well directed court scene brings in hundreds of extras, Crane Wilbur, Mary Charleson and Rosetta Brice dominate this episode.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode Twenty-three)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FOR this chapter of the serial the title of one of Edgar Allen Poe's short stories, "The Tell-tale Heart," has been chosen. Poe based his story on the way in which a criminal betrayed himself by his own imagination. In this story modern science makes use of this well-known nervousness which underlies the most stolid demeanor on the part of a criminal. Also there is a large amount of thrilling action which almost leads to the capture of Wu Fang.

The Chinese criminal plans to destroy Elaine's eyesight as a means of revenge. To do this he sends a friend of "Innocent Inez," who in the guise of a fortune teller is to bind Elaine's eyes with a handkerchief which contains a poison planned to destroy her eyes gradually if she wears it for three minutes.

Jameson doing some detective work on his own hook discovers part of the plot and sends for Kennedy, who discovers the rest. Fortunately Elaine, who is fooled by the supposed fortune teller, substitutes her own handkerchief for that supplied by the woman, and thus escapes the danger.

Later Kennedy and Jameson subject Inez to a test on the Sphymograph for the purpose of learning the headquarters of Wu Fang. The latter breaks up the investigation and almost kills Elaine. He escapes, but is wounded by Jameson as he runs down a fire escape. The episode is well done throughout and entirely in keeping with the excellent standard established by the preceding chapters.

"THE ROMANCE OF AN AMERICAN DUCHESS"

(Essanay—Two Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is adopted from a "Smart Set" magazine story which, though slightly involved, is interestingly filmed with the aid of an excellent cast well fitted to portray the different characters.

Richard C. Travers plays the English nobleman who wins the love of an American heiress, a part charmingly executed by Ruth Stonehouse. Sydney Ainsworth is the unscrupulous titled adventurer and Estelle Scott is the countess who jealously loves the English nobleman.

The settings laid chiefly in and about wealthy homes are invariably well staged.

"THE CONFESSION"

Unlike the conventional English duke with impoverished estates, this one marries the American heiress for love rather than money. Nevertheless on bringing her back to England she is led to doubt this and her suspicions against her husband are strengthened by the adventurer who unsuccessfully attempted to win her hand and fortune and the countess who is still in love with the duke.

These two working together plot to estrange the duke and his wife by bringing another woman into the case. After the duke has rescued his wife from the power of the adventurer, this woman confesses and everything ends happily.

WILKESBARRE THEATRE ENLARGES CAPACITY

PLANS have been made to increase the seating capacity of the Savoy theatre, Wilkesbarre, from 900 to 1,600 during the summer, by extending the building 56 feet to the property line in the rear. A new organ will be installed.

Manager Nace, of the moving picture show in the Broad theatre, Allentown, on Saturday night closed the theatre for two weeks in which time he will thoroughly renovate it.

"The Battle." (Biograph. Fri., June 11.)—This is a reissue of a picture made some years ago under the direction of D. W. Griffith and featuring Blanche Sweet, Charles H. West and Robert Harron. The story is a fine one of the Civil War. It shows the regeneration of a coward by the love of a brave woman. A battle takes place near the girl's home, and her sweetheart runs away in fear. The girl inspires him to be a man, and he not only returns to the fight, but proves himself the great hero of the day. Contains some excellent battle scenes.

"Up in the Air." (Edison. Wed., June 9.)—A very amusing comedy in which rival suitors for the hand of a crafty farmer's daughter are seen helping the old man out with his work. Two of them undertake to shingle a barn roof with the most laughable results. Raymond McKee and Arthur Housman are seen as the amateur roof menders. A third suitor attempts to dig a cellar and uses dynamite to help the work along.

"MacQuade of the Traffic Squad." (Edison. Sat., June 12.)—A police story with an automobile crash as a climax. MacQuade is a motorcycle policeman, whose sweetheart has a brother who is driving a car for a gang of burglars.

By taking the girl for a ride the thieves throw the officer off the scent on one occasion. Resolved to redeem his reputation, MacQuade discovers the gang at work, pursues them, and climbing from his motorcycle to the speeding automobile, engages in a terrific fight.

The car plunges from an embankment, but the officer stays with it and captures the crooks. In the cast are Pat O'Malley, in the title role; Bessie Learn, Jessie Stevens, William Ruge, William Fables and James Harris. Eugene Nowland directed the picture.

Joe Bocko in "A Close Shave," and Dreamy Dud in "Lost in the Jungle." (Essanay. Wed., June 9.)—Amusing and clever cartoons drawn by Wallace A. Carlson, which will particularly delight children. They picture first the story of Joe Bocko, the barber, who tells his prowess as a ball player while shaving a justly indignant customer, and then comes the ludicrous adventures of Dud and his dog Wag in a jungle.

"Sweedie's Finish." (Essanay. Thurs., June 10.)—A Sweedie comedy in which a fireman does not return Sweedie's ardent love until he learns that she has inherited a fortune. Then his cold attitude changes and they celebrate their engagement by a wild ride in Sweedie's new car.

"The Greater Courage." (Essanay. Three acts. Sat., June 12.)—The timid and retiring of two brothers, both in love with the same girl, eventually shows his questioned courage by taking the blame for the murder of a man who had insulted the girl, when the crime was really committed by his brother. He goes to prison, but later his guilty brother confesses, and the girl realizes that she had loved the former all the time. A well constructed drama with the suspense held until the end. Edna Mayo, Bryant Washburn, Thomas Commerford and Sydney Ainsworth are in the cast.

"Her Husband's Honor." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., June 7.)—A rather clever story of the U. S. Custom's office in which the daughter of a "prince of smugglers" marries a customs inspector without his knowing of her smuggling operations.

Her subsequent reformation on the brink of her husband's disgrace, and the happy ending of the story, marked a decided care as to detail and realism on the part of the director. A change from the regular run of smuggler stories, good acting on the part of the principals, excellent photography, make this release bound to please any audience.

"Ham at the Fair." (Kalem. Tues., June 8.)—This latest of the "Ham" and "Bud" series is one of the best yet. And, besides being clever comedy throughout the entire reel, there are some good views of the San Diego Fair, which are used for a background.

After several attempts to enter the fair grounds without paying admission, and after gaining admission through the finding of a roll of money the fun follows thick and fast. A swindler, his fair accomplice in the person of Ethel Teare, finally gets all the money.

"The Money Leeches." (Kalem. Two reels. June 9.)—As the title infers, this is a loan shark story. Gordon Stanley is a Jekyll-Hyde banker and loan office owner. Molly, the girl detective, gets a position in the loan office and senses Gorden's connection when she sees a scarf pin she knows to be his on the floor. Bob, an employee in the bank, is in debt to the loan shark and has been robbing the bank.

When exposure by Molly is imminent the two men involved in the loan business attack her. But her assistant comes to her aid and Gordon withdraws the charges against Bob. Marin Sais is the girl detective. Others are Arthur Shirley, W. H. West, Thomas Lingham, Edward Clisbee and Ollie Kirby. This picture should be received especially eagerly in the cities where campaigns have been conducted against loan sharks.

"The Pay Train." (Kalem. Two reels. June 12.)—This is another episode in the "Hazards of Helen" series. Helen's marksmanship contributes to the climax. When Helen is imprisoned in a box car, and the pay train is approaching, she levels her revolver and shoots at the wire controlling the semaphore signal. The fourth shot cuts the wire and the arms swing up, signalling "Danger" and stopping the train. Helen Holmes is Helen. Others are G. A. Williams, Leo D. Maloney, M. Murchison and Edward Gibson.

"The Cornet." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., June 11.)—A man's love for his cornet to the selfish exclusion of his wife and child causes a quarrel at home and desertion by the husband.

After a long struggle he has saved up for a new cornet, but gives the money to a street waif, crying, because she has no money to buy flowers for her sick mother.

The child proves to be his own, and thus a reconciliation is effected with his wife, and all ends as it should. Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe do their usual good work, and dear little Dorothy De Wolf is the child. Arthur Johnson directed.

"Tap! Tap! Tap!" (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., June 9.)—The gnawing of a man's conscience after many years of enjoyment of ill-gotten gains, his final restitution and death, form the theme of this scenaria by Marc Edmund Jones. There isn't even a love element to weaken the force of the strong moral lesson taught.

Winston Hedges, an idle rich young man, while on a yachting trip taken to remove him from temptation, goes ashore in time to see the death of Peters, the lighthouse keeper, while alone in his cottage. Peters shows Winston where his government bonds are, which he has (unknown to any one) saved for his little girl.

Winston succumbs to the temptation, secures the fortune, and is forevermore haunted by misery. Every sound is to him the tap, tap, tap, of conscience. When Helen, the daughter, grows up, fate leads her to the employ of Winston, and finally to his confession and restoration of her money before his death. Wilbert Maelville produced the picture, and the cast includes Lucille Younge, Meelvin Mayo, Sidney Hayes and Louise Dunlap.

"He's a Bear." (Lubin. One reel. Tues., June 8.)—Pat Rooney is persuaded to impersonate an escaped bear for the sake of the reward. While doing his stunts at the zoo, his chum Ralph almost captures Pat's girl. Pat's adventures, his escape and return in time to win back Marion, form the main episode of the plot. Marion Bent and Clara Lambert, William Duncan and William Cohill are the others in the cast.

"The Web of Crime." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., June 7.)—A crook story familiar in many respects, but exciting enough as produced and enacted to discount conventionality. The scenario was prepared by Will M. Ritchie, who has managed to instill in the story a large amount of thrilling action.

A girl reared among crooks manages to break away from her surroundings. She seeks refuge in a sea coast town, where she falls in love with a young fisherman. Then comes the usual ending. An old pal turns up, threatens her, but is killed by the lover before he does any further harm.

"Saved by Her Horse." (Selig. Tues., June 8.)—In which a clever horse appears. His owner is captured by Indians, but the horse returns to camp with the girl's hat and leads a rescue party. A novel drama, which should entertain all audiences.

"Willie Goes to the Sea." (Selig. Wed., June 9.)—Willie is a fop and very much the sissy. He secretes himself on board ship in order to be near his sweetheart. He studies the art of boxing and places a horseshoe in his glove, easily defeating all his opponents. A comedy of average merit containing a number of very funny situations.

"The Journey's End." (Selig. Sat., June 12.)—Rather a morbid theme forms the basis of this reel, and despite the story's gripping power it is quite disagreeable. Some of the inmates of the Selig Zoo, including two tigers, are introduced with sensational results.

"Mrs. Jarr and the Beauty Treatment." (Vitagraph. Mon., June 7.)—Mr. Jarr continues to have a rather stormy life in the tenth of the series concerning his family. While Mrs. Jarr and Mrs. Smith are both at the beauty parlor undergoing tortures, their husbands are arrested as the result of a harmless attempt to help the children have a good time. The usual cast is seen.

"Spades Are Trumps." (Vitagraph. Wed., June 9.)—An amusing comedy of the disappointment of a spinster who thought to marry a cousin in order to inherit a fortune. Whichever one refuses the other loses the money, according to the terms of the will. As the young man is engaged he and his sweetheart take advantage of his Italian-sounding name, and making up as ignorant laborers, shock the spinster until she leaves in disgust. Billy Quirk and Constance Talmadge are the principals.

"Mr. Blink of Bohemia." (Vitagraph. Thurs., June 10.)—A young man falls in love with a girl who paints portraits and is strong for the Bohemian life. He tries to show her that he has art in his soul. His plan does not work just as he intended, but as he wins the girl all is well. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are seen as the lovers.

"Fair, Fat and Saucy." (Vitagraph. Fri., June 11.)—A Persian Prince looking for a fat wife pays the closest attention to a plump married woman while on a visit to this country. As a means of fixing him the woman's husband arranges to have him meet a fat Irish chef, who is attired as a woman. The prince is charmed, but when he tries to kiss his charmer he has trouble which he never forgets. Hughie Mack is seen as the chef and Nicholas Dunaew as the Persian.

"Bunny in Bunnyland." (Vitagraph. Wed., June 2.)—This is a remarkable full reel of animated cartoons depicting the imaginary adventures of the late John Bunny in Bunnyland. Not only is there an amusing story of exciting adventures, but the mechanical effects add to the interest. The drawings are the work of Carl Lederer.

"Sonny Jim at the Mardi Gras." (Vitagraph. Thurs., June 3.)—Sonny Jim runs away from his home for the afternoon in order to attend the Mardi Gras celebration at Coney Island. He has a fine time, during which many views of the famous resort are shown.

"Jones's Hypnotic Eye." (Vitagraph. Fri., June 4.)—This is an excellent comedy concerning the fondness of Mr. Jones for psychic research. His particular obsession is hypnotism, and he practices this in many places. He unfortunately never produces the sort of results which he anticipated. Finally his wife forces him to give up the pastime after an outing has been spoiled by her husband's attempts to hypnotize a cow. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are played by Mr. Burbridge and Mrs. Jay Hunt.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"A Versatile Villain." (Keystone. Sat., May 29.)—For a Keystone comedy this is poor. No familiar faces appear while the direction is quite bad, the action being ineffectively timed. The story chiefly concerns a dainty bandit who finally gets cornered and blown up with a dynamite storehouse.

"The Man of It." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., May 29.)—A girl from the mountains has left home with a man who promptly abandons her. Later she marries a man who is sent to her home town on an engineering job.

He meets the girl's younger sister, and not knowing who she is because of the assumed name under which his wife has been living, starts a flirtation which leads to an infatuation. The girl is about to become a mother, and to complete the horror she learns that her lover is her brother-in-law. She then commits suicide.

Her brother follows the blackguard to his home, and is about to kill him when he sees the happiness of his older sister with the man and decides to let him live. A most unpleasant and useless sort of plot. Jack Conway and Margerie Wilson do good work in the leading parts.

"Those College Girls." (Keystone. Two reels. Mon., May 31.)—The janitor in the girls' college is continually getting himself into trouble with the young ladies and his wife continually chastises him.

Added to this is a bellboy, whose face has been painted with stove black, attempting to elope with one of the girls and the result is a very fine comedy. Charlie Murray appears as the janitor, who similar to the Nestor janitors, has the kindly habit of wandering freely around in the girls' dormitories.

Slim, the bellboy, is a laughable figure at all times, while the very pretty Keystone leading girl appears again. This should make a hit anywhere, as it contains much that is original and much more that is uproariously funny.

"The Race Love." (Reliance. Mon., May 31.)—A white man and an Indian fall in love with an Indian girl. Each describes the happiness which he says will be hers if she choses him. The girl realizes that she will do best to marry one of her own people, and so accepts her dusky lover.

"Her Filmland Hero." (Majestic. Tues., June 1.)—A juvenile subject featuring Billy and Olive, who previously appeared under the Universal-Sterling brand. Olive being very much in love with Billy, the hero of the films, dreams about him as a miner, her refused lover as a villainous Mexican and herself as the charming maiden. A burlesque on the Western melodrama, handled well from every angle.

"One Who Serves." (Reliance. Wed., June 2.)—In order to raise money for his sick baby a poor man joins a crook in burglarizing a doctor's home. After he has knocked the man down he discovers by a note in his hand that he was just on the point of going to the aid of his own sick child. In hasty repentance he revives the physician and takes him to his home.

Then he goes after his confederate and recovers the loot by a hard fight. This he returns to the doctor, who has just managed to save the life of the little girl. In the cast are: W. E. Lowery, Catherine Henry and Richard Cummings.

"A Freight Car Honeymoon." (Thanhouser. Sun., June 6.)—This is a pretty and novel comedy romance. A train dispatcher is fired on his wedding day. He and his bride take some supplies and board a "side door Pullman" for the only sort of honeymoon they can now afford. The bride makes a hit with the train crew, who allow the couple to enjoy their humble quarters.

By cutting in on a wire the husband orders the car cut out on a siding in an attractive country place. The chief dispatcher learns of the peculiar order, and going out to see what is wrong discovers the couple enjoying their novel honeymoon. The bride's coffee and the husband's explanation that he owes them a honeymoon win the boss over, and admitting the joke is on him he restores the dispatcher to his place.

"The Six Cent Loaf." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., June 8.)—This film shows the suffering which the recent rise in the price of bread brought upon one family, comprised of a working girl and her little brother and sister. The case finally is brought to the attention of the bread king's wife, who proceeds to bring her feminine influence into play, with the result that the old price is again established.

A sympathetic subject well worked out and appropriately acted. Flo La Badie, Helen Badgely and Leland Benham are the leads.

"The Right to Happiness." (American. Two reels. Mon., June 7.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Redemption of the Jasons." (Beauty. Tues., June 8.)—A young wife, deserted by her husband, leaves her baby on the doorstep of a house wherein live two elderly and wealthy bachelors. She later secures from them the position of nurse. After several weeks her husband, who has been laid up in a hospital, arrives on the scene and causes complications. Webster Campbell and Neve Gerber appear in the cast.

"The Soul of the Vase." (American. Wed., June 9.)—An artistic potter, who loves the clay he models better than his wife, dreams that his wife has given up her soul for the glaze on the perfect vase which he has been striving for. He is so happy to find it a dream that his attitude toward her changes. Robyn Adair, Beatrice Van and Joe Harris act this unusual and interesting story.

"The Pathway from the Past." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., June 11.)—A familiar crook story of average interest is presented in these two reels. There is a lot of exciting action and a considerable amount of acting that is praiseworthy. Estelle Allen appearing as Molly Kane renders a most sympathetic performance, while Thomas Chatterton, Jerome Storm and Jack Nelson perform pleasingly.

Molly is accused of being one of a band of robbers by a spurned lover. She is obliged to serve a prison term, but on her release she secures employment in a country general store. She falls in love with her employer, who, contrary to most motion picture heroes, loves her just as much after he has discovered her past. An exciting gun fight between the girl's brother and the crook in which both men perish puts an end to the reel.

"An Unlucky Suitor." (Royal. Sat., June 12.)—Two men play against each other in both the stock market and in love. A burlesque poorly acted and developed.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Man to Man." (Pathé. One reel.)—Made in this country, this drama was sent to France to be colored by the Pathecolor process. It is a good story of a man driven to attempt robbery for his family. He meets the owner of the house and loses his nerve when the man dares him to shoot. This leads to a long conversation, during which the two men meet as man to man, and the rich one decides to help out the unfortunate intruder. The color work is excellent.

"Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves." (Pathé. Three reels.)—The Sherlock Holmes stories are travestied in a most pleasing way in this detective comedy, produced at the French studios of Pathé. The adventures of the amazing detective are so startling and complex that they cannot be very clearly described.

He changes disguises while sitting behind a newspaper, and no matter how sudden a coup the masked thieves put across, he always goes them one better. The construction of the story is so excellent that at first the spectator does not realize that it is intended as a comedy. "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves" is a film which can be most highly recommended. It will please any audience, but should be particularly successful in high class theatres which cater to audiences who appreciate subtle humor.

"Pathe News, No. 41. —This reel includes the third series of the new war films showing scenes taken by special permission of the Allied officials. Among them are some fine views of the idol of France, General Joffre. Pro-war demonstrations in Italy are also depicted. There are also a number of scenes in this country of considerable interest.

"Pathe News, No. 42."—The views from the Allied armies include some remarkable scenes in the Vosges mountains. The Alpine Chasseurs are shown before and after a battle. Other scenes are from England, Australia and this country. A section is devoted to early fall styles in hats.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"Hungry Boarders." (Starlight. One reel.)—One of the Heinie and Louie comedies, in which there is the usual wild burst of slapstick work. The two soldiers of fortune attempt to obtain free quarters in a boarding house which is run along strict profit-making lines. They wind up in a cell after having nearly wrecked the boarding place.

"When the Call Came." (Ideal. Two reels.)—A young man steals in order to get money for his starving old mother. A real thief follows him and is arrested for the act, although actually innocent. Being freed by the confession of the other man, the thief reforms and cares for the unfortunate's mother while he is in jail. He also locates the two men who have stolen the booty from the original thief, and returns it. Having made good at honest employment, he gets the honest boy a place on his release from jail, and all live happily ever after. George Larkin is seen in the leading part.

"Horseshoe Luck." (Gaumont. One reel.)—Heinie starts a restaurant and his friends give him a golden horseshoe for good luck. Bad luck seems to follow, although Heinie tries hanging the horseshoe in various position. Such incidents as a waiter spitting on a plate and wiping it with his napkin represent the character of the comedy in this film.

"The New Photographer." (Superba. One reel.)—This is a very clever and decidedly novel comedy. In showing the results of a green camera man's work some surprising and highly entertaining trick photography is used. Scenes appear on edge and at all sorts of angles as well as wavering back and forth. The picture being made is "Agnes' Awful Adventure," and is a good travesty.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 169." (Wed., June 2.)—Memorial Day parade in New York City; the funeral of the late Charles Frohman, with many notables in attendance; the Pan-American conference in Washington, at which the President was a prominent figure; and Cornell's varsity crew losing to Harvard on Cayuga Lake, for the first time in the history of the colleges, are the outstanding features of this number. Of course, the war news is not lacking, while a few minor happenings and Hy Mayer's cartoons complete the reel.

"The Lover's Lucky Predicament." (Joker. Sat., June 5.)—His daughter's lover is not looked upon with any great favor by the sheriff, but when he captures the much feared Alfalfa Bill he has his own way. This is inferior to most Jokers, some of the scenes being rather vulgar. William Franey as Alfalfa Bill is very good. The rest of the cast includes Max Asher, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock.

"Through the Swinging Doors." (Big U. Two reels. Sun., June 6.)—An old waiter sees his daughter drinking champaigne in the restaurant where he is employed, and in a mad rage he rushes up and attempts to kill her escort. When explanations are given all ends well. This offering is very poor except for the character portrayal given by Murdock MacQuarrie as the waiter. The first part of the picture bears little relation to the termination of the story, while the plot is not smooth or satisfying.

"A Daughter of the Nile." (Victor. Three reels. Mon., June 7.)—A young man entering the diplomatic service falls under the spell of a woman intimate with the Russian ambassador. However, when she sees the suffering his infatuation causes his fiancee puts an end to the proceedings.

An engaging drama with Mary Fuller in the role of the adventuress. The part is not like any she has appeared in before, yet her performance is most pleasing. Matt Moore is the young man. The settings are lavish in this and the photography good. The drama ought to please, as the cast is accomplished. Elaine Sterne prepared the scenario.

"How Billy Got His Raise." (Joker. Mon., June 7.)—Billy, the office boy, studies hypnotism and soon his boss, the stenographer and the boss's wife are under his influence, so he is able to command what salary he will. William Franey is hilariously funny as the office boy in this, while Max Asher, Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock are the other principals. This is one of the best Jokers.

"Under the Crescent." (Gold Seal. Adventure No. 2.)—Reviewed at length in issue of May 22.

"The Struggle." (Rex. Tues., June 8.)—Industrial strife, raging between the employees and owners of a railroad company, is brought to a close by a little thought on both sides.

The president is a G. A. R. man, and thoughts of the olden times during a Memorial Day celebration are responsible for his change of heart towards his workers. An incoherent drama, hardly well enough produced to give the desired comparison between the Civil War and industrial strife, besides there is a superfluity of characters and scenes. Pauline Bush is in the cast.

"Their Friend the Burglar." (Nestor. Tues., June 8.),—A young pair desirous of eloping make use of the confusion caused by the presence of a burglar and successfully escape from the girl's parents. A fairly good comedy with Billie Rhodes and Neal Burns playing the lovers.

"From the Shadows." (Laemmle. Wed., June 9.)—A crook melodrama produced by Frank Lloyd which will offer very good entertainment of its kind. An ex-crook whose daughter is engaged to an honorable man is discovered by an old pal, who attempts to blackmail him. A gun fight results in the old man's death and puts an end to the other man's schemes. Frank Lloyd, Marc Robbins, Helen Leslie, Millard Wilson and Gretchen Lederer are the principals.

"Billie's Blighted Career." (L-KO. Two reels. Wed., June 9.)—Ritchie in the role of an artist and minus a good bit of his usual getup, uses another man's wife as his model. Another artist in the same apartment is doing the same thing with Billie's wife, and these two precarious situations mixed in with any number of scantily draped models cause great commotion.

Strange to say the funniest part of the picture is the chase which brings it to a close. It is in these scenes that Ritchie puts across his most humorous incidental capers, which are sure to create laughter. The rest of the picture we regret to say, shows a reversion of form on the producing company's part. A good many of the scenes are disgusting in their suggestiveness and spoil any humor that might be in the actions of the players. Some of them will doubtless be eliminated.

"The Valley of Silent Men." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., June 10.)—Believing her husband dead, when in reality he was shanghaied, the girl marries again that she may have a happy home provided for her child. She is living happily when her husband returns, transformed from a drunkard into a man. He learns of the situation from his wife, and then sees it best that he depart. A pleasing story, which is mindful of the pathetic "Enoch Arden" poem of Tennyson. Ben Wilson appears as the reformed husband and Dorothy Phillips is the wife.

"In His Mind's Eye." (Big U. Thurs., June 10.)—An exceedingly sad topic is dealt with in this reel, but it is capably handled and interesting in its entirity. An old, blind fiddler sits on the street corner and plays and dreams over his past. Among other things he sees how his daughter was practically sold to a young man by her step-mother.

At that moment his daughter walks by, gaudily clad. The man recognizes her footsteps and takes her home with him, where she keeps him in ignorance of her occupation. Murdock MacQuarrie gets in his usual good work as the violinist and Agnes Vernon holds the daughter's pathetic role.

"Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" in "The Sign of the Sacred Safety Pin." (Powers. Thurs., June 10.)—The second of Allen Curtis' burlesques on the serial photoplays, with Max Asher, Gale Henry and William Franey leading the cast. The exaggeration of the salient features of the continued pictures makes this reel most laughable from start to finish. Neither the crooks nor the detective gains any advantage, yet their endeavors to frustrate one another's plan are very humorous.

"A Strange Disappearance." (Imp. Three reels. Fri., June 11.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"Mumps." (Victor. Fri., June 11.)—The author and her secretary are quarantined because the maid contracts the mumps. During the confinement, the two fall in love. A Harry Myers-Rosemary Theby comedy which is just as funny as these two know how to make it, which, be it known, is very funny.

"The Circus Girl's Romance." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., June 12.)—The daughter of the circus owner is despised at boarding school until she saves one of the inmates by catching her runaway horse. A Henry McRae picture, many scenes of which are laid beneath and about the circus tent. Realism of the most interesting kind predominates in these scenes as a real circus was filmed.

There is another story in the picture concerning the unsuccessful efforts of the villainous circus manager to force the girl into a marriage. This is a very good number, although it does not measure up to the best of the Bison company's pictures. Marie Walcamp, Rex deRoselli, Sherman Bainbridge and Wellington Playter are in the cast.

"The Woman Hater's Baby." (Powers. Sat., June 12.)—An old and rather ill-produced picture with Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark in the principal roles. A destitute widow leaves her child on the steps of a bachelor's home. He adopts it and applies for a nurse. The mother is employed, with the result that soon afterwards a marriage takes place. This is a comedy-drama and not a very good one.

"When Ignorance is Bliss." (Joker. Sat., June 12.)—A rube comes into a fortune, and two swindlers succeed in robbing him of it, when his sweetheart comes to the rescue. A typical Joker comedy of the burlesque variety. Ernest Shields is most eccentric as the rube, effecting some uproariously unconventional comedy bits. His scenes with the adventuress are the best, if one may discriminate.

"Across the Footlights." (Big U. Two reels. Sun., June 13.)—A brilliant young actress marries an actor of mediocre talent. In time he becomes popular through her teachings, while she gixes up her career. The ending to this is quite apart from the plot proper and rather poor, as it comes unexpectedly.

The two reels are quite largely padded, but the story will afford fair entertainment. Adele Lane and William Dowlan lead the cast. The boarding house scenes and those which take place back of the stage are noticeable for the minute and correct attention to detail.

"Little Mr. Fixer." (Laemmle. Sun., June 13.)—A simple yet attractive comedy-drama illustrating the manner in which a little newsboy reconciled two lovers. Gordon Griffith as Billy makes a charming and human figure of the boy, while Millard K. Wilson and Olive Fuller Golden render most pleasing performances. Frank Lloyd directed this and has produced another excellent one reel subject.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

"Two for a Quarter." (Wizard-World Film.)—Two penniless hoboes contrive to procure a square meal. At last they discover a very large suit, so both of the gentlemen enshroud themselves therein and repair to an eating house. Their ruse is discovered, but not until they have well appeased their appetites.

This reel features two capable comedians, one long and the other short. Their antics throughout the picture, chiefly while encased in the suit are uproarious. For a slapstick comedy this well fills the bill, and as the offensive is almost totally lacking it should prove fit entertainment for all classes of houses.

"The Tangles of Pokes and Jabs." (Wizard-World Film.)—Another riotous slapstick featuring the same two comical gentlemen who appeared in "Two for a quarter." While not possessed with such an original plot, the actions of the comedians are productive of much laughter. This film was shown for a week at the New York Hippodrome, where it well upheld the comedy end of the bill.

THE MASTER MODEL

Mr. F. C. Hock of the Central Amusement Hall, Goshen, N. Y., writes:

"I have two STANDARDS in use, one is three years old, the other one year; both are giving as good a picture as when first purchased. I have examined other machines, have seen them work and used them myself but I would not trade my oldest STANDARD for a new one of other makes. My operator, who has seven years' experience, is of the same opinion."

If you know of a STANDARD at work near you get the opinion of the exhibitor and of his operator. The first-hand information you will thus obtain will convince you that the STANDARD is the projector you should buy.

Let us tell you about our marvelous MASTER MODEL motion picture machine. Send for particulars.

WILL SHOW LADY MACKENZIE ANIMAL PICTURES AT LYCEUM

When the Lyceum theatre reopens on Monday evening for its spring and summer season it will be with the first public presentation of Lady Mackenzie's big game hunting pictures, with which she has just returned from East Africa after a year's thrilling experience in the jungle.

Lady Mackenzie, who is known among the big game hunters of this country and Europe as "the foremost woman hunter of the world," succeeded in bagging specimens of every known animal in that part of Africa, not only with her rifle but with the moving picture camera as well.

Although highly educational, the pictures are more than that inasmuch as they show the bravery of this modern Diana in a most exciting lion hunt, in which the great king of the beasts charges straight at Lady Mackenzie and her man hunter, and the only rhinoceros charge ever filmed. The huntress has also some remarkable views of herds of buffalo and zebra, of elephants, giraffes and baboons, of wild dogs, and the other rare fauna of the country.

MELVILLE'S YACHT WILL CRUISE TO LOS ANGELES

Captain Wilbert Melville, manager of the Western Lubin Studio at Los Angeles, Cal., who is now in the East on a business trip, has become the owner of a new steam yacht which is at present being fitted out in New York for a moving picture cruise around to Los Angeles.

Shortly after Captain Melville arrived at the Lubin studio in Philadelphia he received word from Los Angeles that his steam yacht "Lucero" had been blown ashore during a heavy gale and wrecked. Almost immediately Melville got into communication with yacht brokers in New York and the following day he purchased the 165-foot steam yacht "Vergana." This yacht is especially equipped for deep sea cruising and at present is being fitted out for the long cruise through the Panama canal and up the Western coast to Los Angeles. A camera man will take pictures en route and when the yacht reaches its new home port, she will be used extensively in a series of Lubin productions.

Captain Melville, with one of his companies from the Western Lubin studio, will join the yacht at San Diego, Cal.

McGARRY HURT BY HORSE

A tragic note deeper than any written in the manuscript was struck during the filming of "Hearts Ablaze," the Vitagraph three-part Broadway Star feature, produced under the direction of Lorimer Johnston, in a fall from a horse by Garry McGarry, one of the Vitagraph players, the day the Lusitania went down with his friend, Elbert Hubbard, Mr. McGarry, in the chacacter of an Italian nobleman, riding to hounds, in a scene at the Brokaw estate, was required to enact a fall from his horse, and at the third trial, because of the nervousness of his mount, was thrown, dislocating his hip.

He underwent an osteopathic operation that was successful and was preparing to remount to continue the scene, when news of the probable loss of Mr. Hubbard reached him. His own hurt sank into insignificance at the news, as, only a few days before he sailed, Mr. Hubbard selected Mr. McGarry as the one to carry "A Message to Garcia" in pictures.

NEW ORLEANS COMPANY MAKES FILM FOR ALLIANCE

New Orleans, June 1.

New Orleans, La., got into the spotlight as a producing centre on May 18, when the Coquille Film company released its first picture, a one reel comedy staged entirely in the Crescent City, at Pearce's Trianon theatre.

It is entitled "The Studio Dandy," and was written and directed by William Morgan Hannon, a well-known New Orleans attorney who forsook his law business for the time being to try picture making. The comedy features Leatrice Zeidler, a New Orleans society girl, Klas Van Heel, Andrew Rogers, Lawrence Carey and Mr. Hannon.

The first general release of the Coquille Film company is a three-reel drama, "The Link." It is being released for the United States and Canada through the Alliance Film corporation.

JITNEY BUSSES CLOSE NEW ORLEANS THEATRE

New Orleans, June 1.

An exhibitor of this city, who previously operated an all-night motion picture theatre, has been forced to close down by the ever increasing jitney buss tidal wave.

The house is located a short distance from the municipal limits, and in the evening, while passengers were awaiting the owl cars, they were wont to drop in and see the show. Now, with jitney busses running every five minutes, the exhibitor says his business is ruined.

PAGEANT OF LEXINGTON PRODUCED BY VITAGRAPH

Lionel Belmore, the Vitagraph director, has been selected to direct the Pageant of Lexington on June 21, 22 and 23, commemorating a century of peace between the United States and England. The celebration will be held in aid of the Red Cross.

Mr. Belmore was selected from the many hundreds of directors in the United States and he will have complete charge of the producing of the spectacle. About seven hundred persons will take part in the many scenes.

HANCOCK WAS PROMINENT IN TRENTON

Trenton, N. J., June 1.

William S. Hancock, one of the principal owners of the Trent theatre and Taylor opera house, whose death was recently announced, was buried May 29. He was, aside from being prominently identified with the local theatrical business, heavily interested financially in many of the leading manufacturing establishments.

RAIN BOTHERS PRODUCERS ON WEST COAST

San Francisco, June 1.

The late rains that have been experienced this year in California have interfered sadly with the production of motion pictures and a number of features cannot be released at the date originally set. The rainfall for the month of May has been about four times the normal and much cloudy weather has been experienced in Southern California. Charles Chaplin went to Los Angeles recently to do some work, but for twelve days no pictures could be made.

The California Motion Picture Corporation, of San Francisco, has had a similar experience, and its latest production, "A Phyllis of the Sierras," is still incomplete. This was to have been shown at a cinema dansant at the St. Francis Hotel about the middle of the month, but another attraction had to be substituted.

ONE KEYSTONE A WEEK AFTER JUNE 14

Charles O. Baumann, on behalf of the Keystone Film Company, announces a change in the plan of release for Keystone features. The Keystone two reel features will be released one each week, beginning June 14, instead of twice weekly as heretofore published.

"Our reason," said Mr. Baumann, "for this amendment to our original plan is due to our insistence upon quality in these important features. We find that because of the high quality of these specials, as well as their length, they take more time to produce than we had anticipated. In order not to disappoint our public we have, therefore, concluded to release one two reel Keystone feature each week, and by so doing we can assure the motion picture world that the high Keystone standards will be maintained and perhaps exceeded with these new offerings."

NAVAL OFFICERS SEE LUBIN SUBJECT

A number of officers from the League Island Navy Yard at Philadelphia attended a private showing of the Lubin naval drama, "The Insurrection," at the Lubin studio last week, and pronounced the picture one of the best of its kind they had ever seen.

"The Insurrection" is a three-reeler.

CORDRAY RESIGNS AS HEAD OF OREGON THEATRES

Portland, Ore, June 1.

John F. Cordray, for several months general manager of the People's Amusement Company, operating the People's and Star theatres, Portland, as well as theatres in La Grande, and other Oregon towns, has resigned his position with the People's, to take effect immediately.

A new manager has not yet been appointed, but announcement of his successor will no doubt be made in a few days. Mr. Cordray operates the Oaks, a summer amusement resort, and will now devote his entire time to this enterprise.

Vitagraph Co.:

A note of appreciation from an exhibitor who has hesitated for some time because being a woman and one unusually young to be in this business alone, but with the help of the General Film Co. of Detroit and back of them the excellent programs put forth by the several companies on their list I have made a success of my house, where the men before me failed.

I have and still am using every Vitagraph produced and would not give up one single reel for a great deal.

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

MICHIGAN

C. A. FISKE is having a moving picture theatre built for him at Albion.

Permits for the construction of a new theatre for McCreery and Clark and a large addition to the Orpheum theatre, of Flint, have been issued. The cost of the new theatre is $13,000 and the addition to the Orpheum will cost $6,000.

The Norwood theatre, Woodward and the Boulevard, Detroit, costing about $75,000 and seating 1,000, held its opening on Thursday evening, May 27. The place was packed, hundreds being turned away. The Norwood is being managed by W. H. Irons, formerly associated with John H. Kunsky in Detroit. Charles Rall is the owner of the new playhouse.

The Ferry Park Theatre company, of Detroit, has been organized with a capital stock of $100,000 to erect a new moving picture theatre at Grand River avenue and the Boulevard. Fifteen thousand has already been paid in. The stockholders are: Frederick Riddell, Robert M. Drysdale and Theodore L. Smith.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Maxine Theatre, Inc., Detroit, the following officers were elected for the coming year: A. Arthur Caille, president; Walter I. Owen, vice-president; Theodore L. Smith, secretary, and Walter R. Smith, auditor. Ed V. McGrath was reappointed manager.

NEBRASKA

The Omaha, a new theatre at Fortieth and Dodge streets, Omaha, Neb., was opened Saturday, May 22, with the very best program Manager Theodore Thomas could secure, with music and with capacity attendance. The theatre, which seats 400 people, is the very latest possible in ventilating, seating and cooling facilities, introducing several ideas new to Omaha and middle Western houses.

Manager Thomas says he will show pictures exclusively. He has an objection to vaudeville being mixed in. He has been traveling over the country for the last three months picking up ideas regarding the erection and management of a motion picture theatre, and is ready to enter the business for his first venture with a belief that he can make it go. He is showing Mutual and feature films.

Messrs. Albright and Whirry have taken over the Edison theatre, at Hastings, Neb., and during the last two months have overhauled and redecorated it, increased the seating capacity and held a big opening day Saturday, May 22, which capacity crowds attended. The house is equipped up to the minute, and seats 600. Omaha men who attended the opening say it is one of the finest equipped and best appearing in the middle west territory.

Ernest Pollard is the manager of a new $15,000 public subscription opera house that opened in Nehawka, Neb., Saturday, May 22. Two World Film corporation features were shown on opening day—one in the afternoon and the other in the evening. The theatre, although located in a town of only 300 people, has a seating capacity of 600, and has a complete electric lighting plant of its own, with up-to-the-minute cooling and ventilating plants. Highest class features will be shown every Saturday. This is one instance showing how the small towns of the middle west are growing in importance in the motion picture world.

"ARE WE READY?"

(Standard Newsfilm—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THE producers of this series have endeavored to present in a comprehensive manner the present condition of the military and naval defensive organization of this country. Series one comprises the recent review of the Atlantic fleet in the New York harbor, and the naval parade passing in review in front of President Wilson. The photography is good and the entire film is bound to please.

The titles carry a running presentation of the entire scope of the fleet; each division is shown and also the destroyer and submarine flotilla. Some of the most interesting subjects are a demonstration of the periscope on a submarine, a drill with a six-inch and a twelve-inch gun. Series 2 is to be devoted to the Pacific fleet, and 3 and 4 to the army.

Again! 7 Smashing BIG Features on the Regular UNIVERSAL Program

"CONSCIENCE"

A Most Unusual Four Reel Imp Drama with Wm. Welsh, Frances Nelson and Allen Holubar.

In this gripping drama an innocent man is sent to the electric chair on circumstantial evidence, which to the jury seems conclusive proof of his guilt. In a series of remarkable scenes the story is told with a realism that includes many remarkable views taken in Sing Sing prison. Later is shown the reopening of the case; some remarkable detective work, the "scientific" third degree and the confession—all too late—of the actual perpetrator of the crime. One of the most absorbingly interesting photoplays ever filmed.

"A BOOB'S ROMANCE"

A Genuine Comedy. Two Reel Laemmle Comedy Drama, with Robert Leonard and Ella Hall.

Here is the real thing. Fun, fast and furious. Bob Leonard is a comedian with a funny personality, facial expressions that fit the scene. There is no slap stick nor dependence on grotesque make-ups in this screaming comedy. Bob is a genuine boob, who, when chance offers, proves himself a hero and gets a chance to be something more than a boob. Genuine comedy means thrilling, intense scenes, where "laughter is akin to tears," and they are there with a punch in this remarkable photo comedy.

"For the Honor of a Woman"

No. 4 of the Gorgeous "Under the Crescent" Gold Seal Series with Princess Hassan.

The apex of photoplay realism is reached in this remarkable release. A sand storm on the desert staged in a real California desert easily leads as a photoplay natural spectacle anything ever thrown on the screen. The efforts of the Princess Hassan to escape from the clutches of her husband, Prince Tousson, son of the Khedive of Egypt, together with Harem scenes that are marvels of scenic embellishment and the beauty of women. A distinct addition to a notable series.

"CIRCUS MARY"

Spectacular Three Reel Victor Drama with Mary Fuller and Matt Moore.

Here is a distinct treat for the millions of movie fans who worship at the shrine of sweet and popular Mary Fuller. The development of the plot reveals Mary taking the role of a circus rider, and in the spangles of the saw dust ring her beauty is more marked than ever. A novel plot and brisk action make this a worthy vehicle for Miss Fuller's marvelous talents.

"Larry O'Neill, Gentleman"

Clever Two Reel Imp Comedy Drama with William Garwood and Violet Mersereau.

Larry is a worker in the steel mills. For the purpose of an experiment his "big boss" provides him with money and makes a "gentleman" of Larry. How handsome Larry's innate gentility and fine character develops makes an intensely interesting story. A pretty love story adds to the charm of this splendid feature.

"THE TEST OF A MAN"

An Unusual Western Two Reel 101-Bison Drama with Wellington Playter and Marie Walcamp.

They tried to put it over on the young civil engineer just out of college, but even the bullies of a railroad camp were no match for his wits and muscle—"brain and brawn." Introducing a railroad wreck and dynamite explosion in a realistic scene. A corking play.

"THEIR SECRET"

Two Reel Big U Heart Interest Drama with Wm. Dowlan, Allan Forrest and Violet MacMillan.

Their secret marriage seemed doomed to wreck on the rocks of separation, but the darling baby won grandma's heart and all ended happily for a loving young couple.

With never a suggestion of preaching, these three acts, throbbing with emotions and motives that have wrecked untold lives, appeal with trueness of sympathy that comes only when the wells of human hearts are probed with an artist's hand. Edward Earle, as the man who would not know a God, is an embodiment compelling, while Gladys Hulette, persecuted for love of him, is a pathetic figure that silently creeps into one's heart. Twilight Sleep

"The latest really great discovery in the world of medicine"

A subject of vital importance, not only to every woman, but to every man in America for it removes from the heart of woman all dread of the pangs of maternity.

There could be no clearer way of explaining this merciful gift to womankind than through the medium of motion pictures. Dr. Kurt E. Schloessingk, of Freiburg, Germany, associate of Drs. Kroenig and Gauss, discoverers of The Twilight Sleep treatment, was sent here to conduct clinics in America's leading cities, and has prepared this lecture and motion pictures explaining the technique and details of this treatment.

"Come, let's go to the house across the street — I don't like the pictures here."

MANY a remark like this is made in these days of keen competition, Mr. Exhibitor—and nine times out of ten the criticism expressed is not of the "pictures" themselves but of the manner in which they are shown.

VALUES in film, as far as subject matter and photography are concerned, are much the same these days—and the open market makes it possible for an exhibitor to buy practically where he pleases.

WITH perfect film, however, much remains to be done if pictures that satisfy your audiences are to result.

IF you start with perfect films it makes a world of difference whether you project them on a white-washed wall or on a surface scientifically prepared to show them off to best advantage.

AND by the same token, it makes a world of difference whether you project these same films on the ordinary "patented" screen or on the screen that, during years of service, has convinced thousands of exhibitors the country over that it is the

J. H. HALLBERG

WE take pleasure in announcing that with the June 19th issue of the "News" Mr. J. H. Hallberg assumes charge of the Projection Department.

There is no need of introducing Mr. Hallberg to anyone interested in the accessory end of the industry, for he has been one of the leaders since its inception.

In assuming this new responsibility, Mr. Hallberg will conduct a series of articles which will be virile and full of actual and material information to every theatre owner and operator. These articles will be authoritative.

Mr. Hallberg will also conduct in this department a section devoted to questions and answers and it is his desire that every theatre owner and operator who has any question, no matter how trivial, which has to do with general equipment, projection, wiring, etc., shall call upon him for help. As Mr. Hallberg is an authority, he will answer all questions himself from actual knowledge and experience.

Mr. Hallberg and the "News" both hope that you, wherever you are, will take full advantage of this opportunity and obtain any help which you may desire.

THE THEORY AND NATURE OF LIGHT—III

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The first article in this series appeared some weeks ago as extracts from a lecture of Sir John Tyndall, the noted English scientist. The article in this issue is a continuation of the same subject.

VARIOUS instructive experiments with a looking glass may be performed and understood. Note first, when a candle is placed between the glass and the eye, so that a line from the eye through the candle is perpendicular to the glass, that one well-defined image of the candle only is seen.

Let the eye now be moved so as to receive an oblique reflection, the image is no longer single, a series of images at first partially overlapping each other being seen. By rendering the incidence sufficiently oblique these images, if the glass be sufficiently thick, may be completely separated from each other.

The first image of the series arises from the reflection of the light from the anterior surface of the glass.

The second image, which is usually much the brightest, arises from reflection at the silvered surface of the glass. At large incidences, as we have just learned, metallic reflection far transcends that of glass.

Operators can learn much from drawing a few exercises in determining the position of images in a plane mirror, the position of the objects being given, if they have fully understood the law of reflection shown in Figure 2.

The image is always found by simply letting fall a perpendicular from each point of the object, and producing it behind the mirror, so that to make the part behind equal to the part in front. We thus learn that the image is of the same size and shape as the object, agreeing with it in all respects save one—the image is a lateral inversion of the object.

Effects of Lateral Inversion

This inversion enables us, by means of a mirror, to read writing written backwards, as if it were written in the usual way. Compositors arrange their type in this backward fashion, the type being reversed by the process of printing. A looking-glass enables us to read the type as the printed page.

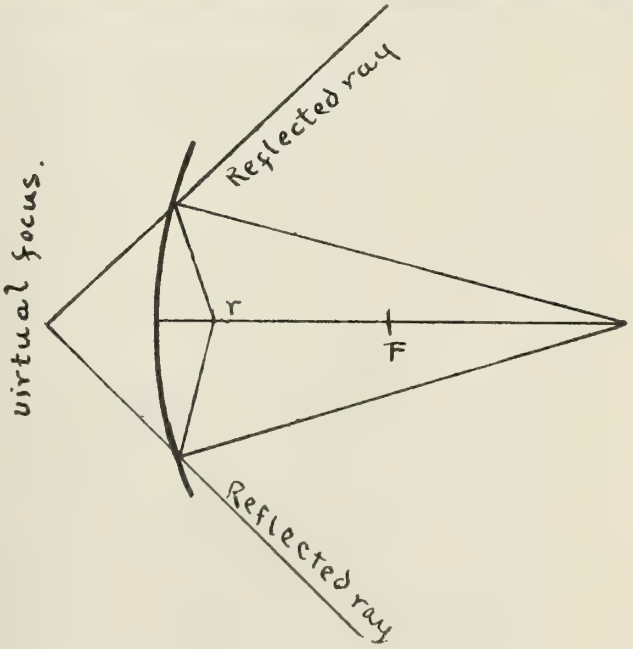
Lateral inversion comes into play when we look at our own faces in a glass. The right cheek of the person, for example, is the left cheek of that person in the mirror. The hair parted on the left of the person is reflected as parted on the right of the person in the mirror.

In a mirror inclined at an angle of 45 degrees to the horizontal, the image of an erect object appears horizontal, while the image of a horizontal object appears erect.

An object placed between two mirrors enclosing an angle yields a number of images, depending upon the angle enclosed by the mirrors. The smaller the angle, the greater is the number of images.

When the angle becomes O—in other words, when the mirrors are parallel—the number of images is infinite. Practically, however, we see between parallel mirrors a long succession of images, which become gradually feebler, and finally cease to be sensible to the eye.

Reflection from Curved Surfaces.



It has already been stated and illustrated that light moves in straight lines, which receive the name of rays. Such rays may be either divergent, parallel or convergent.

Rays from the sun, or stars, are sensibly parallel from the immense distances of these objects.

By suitably reflecting them, we can render the rays from terrestrial sources either parallel or convergent. This is done by means of concave mirrors.

The general action of a sperical or concave mirror may be understood by regarding it as made up of a great number of small plane mirrors. Referring to diagram, Figure 1, the letters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, may represent a combination of small mirrors arranged on a curved line of a sphere, or a curved mirror. From the point R, rays eminate and strike upon these. The different degrees of obliquity under which they fall upon the mirrors cause them to follow new paths after reflection, so that they converge to the point S, as a focus.

In its reflection from such mirrors, light obeys the law already enunciated for plane mirrors. The angle of incidence is equal to the angle or reflection.

Finding Angle of Incidence for Small Mirrors.

This may be found for the several small mirrors by first drawing a perpendicular to the surface at the point of impact of the ray. Then draw a line on the opposite side of this perpendicular so that the angle is equal to the ray of light.

If this be done the rays will be found to meet in one point, as S, in the diagram. If the rays coming to the mirror be parallel rays, then this point is called the principal focus of the concave mirror. The distance of this point from the centre of the mirror is called the focal distance. After reflection, parallel rays intersect each other at a point midway between the mirror and its centre axis.

In optics the position of an object and of its image are always exchangeable. If a luminous point be placed in the principal focus the rays will, after reflection, be parallel. This law is made use of in searchlight projectors, and in the diagram, Figure 2, shows the usual position of the arc light when sending the light at the greatest distance.

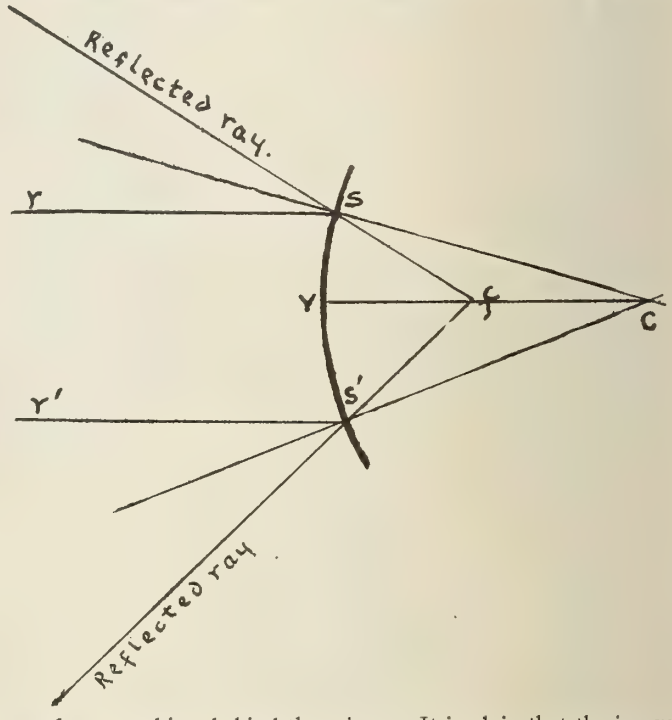
The arc light is placed at the point F, when the reflected light rays will leave the projector in parallel beams. When an object is small, and at a relatively short distance, then the lamp is changed to a point a little further away from the concaved mirror. The rays will then be converged to a point. This point will alter according to the distance at which the light is placed from the mirror.

Divergence of Rays After Reflection

If the light be placed between the principal focus F and the mirror, the rays after reflection will be divergent—they will not intersect at all—there will be no real focus. But if these divergent rays be produced backward, they will intersect behind the mirror, and form there what is called a vertual, or imaginary focus. This fact is shown in Figure 3.

When a light is placed somewhere beyond the principal focus the rays will converge, after reflection, at another point. The focus thus formed will be in a line drawn through the luminous point and the centre of curvature. In other words, if the luminous point lie in the principal axis, the focus will also, if the luminous point lie in any secondary axis, the focus will lie in the same secondary axis. The distinction between principal and secondary axis is almost wholly one of convenience.

Rays diverging from B will form a focus at b. The angle of incidence being necessarily equal to the angle of reflection, it is evident that rays diverging from b would form a focus at B. On account of this relation between two such points, they are called conjugate foci. Therefore, conjugate foci are two points so related that each forms the image of the other. This is illustrated in Diagram 4.



Concave mirrors give rise to two kinds of images, real and virtual, depending upon the location of the object, or light, to the concave mirror. When it is beyond the centre of the mirror, an inverted real image of the object, diminished in size, will be formed between the centre and the principal focus.

If the object be placed between the centre and the principal focus, an inverted and magnified image of the object will be formed beyond the centre. The positions of the image and its object are, it will be remembered, convertible.

When the Object is Virtual

In the two cases mentioned, the image is formed in the air in front of the mirror. It is a real image. But if the object be placed between the principal focus and the mirror, an erect and magnified image of the object is seen behind the mirror.

The image is here virtual. The rays enter the eye as if they came from an object behind the mirror. It is plain that the images seen in a common looking glass are all virtual images.

All that has been said regarding the gathering of rays to a single focus by a spherical mirror is only true when the mirror forms a small fraction of the spherical surface. When a large fraction of the spherical surface is employed as a mirror, the rays are not all collected to a point, their intersections, on the contrary, form a luminous surface, which in optics is called a caustic.

Gentlemen:

Yours of May 19th at hand. In regards to placing my order for new machines, I wish to state that I have had Motiographs in my theatre for three years or more, and, if you remember, I just recently had them overhauled at your factory, and I want to thank you for being prompt and the good work you did. They are the same as new machines now. If you remember, I am the party that concluded to replace my Motiographs with ——— ——— — and had already installed two new ——— ——— —, to my sorrow, as I could not get the light. I had all the trouble I ever want to have. They were in just one week and I could not get my Motiographs back quick enough.

Me for the Motiograph. They can all talk about their steady pictures and all of that, but I like to be able to see my pictures as well as have them steady, and with the Motiograph I have bright, clear, steady pictures.

I will again thank you for your speediness in repairing my two machines. I had them shipped out of here on Monday and they were back and in use on Saturday night the same week, and the ——— ——— — yanked out and returned to the dealer.

Yours for success,
(Signed) C. E. HUTSENPILLER, Prop.,
Virginia Theatre.

If you have a machine that is not giving a bright, clear picture it will pay you to install the MOTIOGRAPH—It is noted for its long life with small up-keep, besides giving a rock-steady, clear picture.

Problems that Puzzle Projection People

Use of Economizer and Grid Rheostat

H. J. L., Columbus, Ind.—I am operating a projector with a grid fixed rheostat using direct current at 110 volts using sixty amperes. I have been told it is better to use one of the economizers giving a voltage of about sixty volts.

I contend that it may be cheaper to use one of these outfits by the energy saved that would otherwise be lost in the grid rheostat but that I can get a beter light from using the rheostat. Is there any argument to back my idea of a better light?

ANSWER: Yes, you can get a better light from using the grid rheostat. When using sixty amperes or more with a rheostat in circuit the voltage across the arc is greater than sixty volts and the carbons can be separated to a greater extent.

A "set" to the carbons can then be had, making the crater come into full view toward the condenser lenses and the lower negative carbon entirely out of the way to not obstruct any of the rays of light or casting any shadows on the lenses.

The arc can be burned at and above the flaming point of the carbons, which gives a very steady even flame and not any danger from the arc traveling around the carbon points. The separation is so great that the distance from the center and the outer edges of the positive carbon to the negative is comparatively the same. Hence, the elimination of travel of the arc around the positive carbon.

This feature of a better light when using a rheostat is the more noticeable as the current strength at the arc is increased. Current strengths of seventy to ninety amperes give excellent results in this respect.

Defining Principal, Equivalent and Back Focus

T. O. W., Denver, Col.—Our projection distance is about eighty feet and we obtain a screen picture a little over sixteen feet wide. The Mirroroid screen that we have will only take a fourteen-foot picture. We want to exchange the objective lens to that of another focus to make the screen picture come a little less than the fourteen feet. What size lens will we need and what is the difference in the terms principal focus, equivalent focus, and back focus?

ANSWER: The catalogues of several of the leading lens manufacturers give a list of objective lens with detail information arranged in columns giving the equivalent focus, back focus, diameter of lenses and the style of mount. Under the column heading—Equivalent Focus—the numbers refer to the distance the film has to be from the middle of the lens barrel.

The equivalent meaning, that it is the same, or "equivalent distance" as when a single lens is used, that is, the same distance for a single lens to the film. It is only in connection with objective and photographic lenses made up of several individual lenses, held in a mounting, that the word equivalent is used.

When a single lens is used the term would be, for this distance, the principal focus. Exactly, the principal focus of a lens means the distance from the lens that parallel rays of light are refracted to a point back of the lens. Back focus of a lens is the exact distance the rear edge of the mount is from the film or slide.

For trade purposes it is a useful figure, as there may be mechanical or structural hindrances within this distance. This term is not used in any way for determining the distance to the screen, or for the size of the projected picture. The equivalent or principal foci figures are used in these formulas.

You will want an objective lens having an equivalent focus of 5½ inches to correct the size of the picture to the fourteen-foot screen.

Difference Between Auxiliary, Inter Pole and Commutating Motor

D. S. L., Seattle, Wash.—Will you please explain the difference between an auxiliary-pole, an inter-pole, and a commutating-pole motor? What is the particular use to which these motors are best adapted and what change is necessary in order to reverse the direction of rotation?

ANSWER: All three terms are used to designate the one and the same type of motor. This type of motor has the usual multiple pole pieces as are used in the other types of direct-current motors, and then in addition to these are added other pole pieces of smaller dimensions and placed between them. Hence, the use of the two terms auxiliary-pole and inter-pole.

The third term, commutating-pole, is the preferable term to use, as it conveys some idea of the nature for these auxiliary-pole pieces. The windings on these small field pieces have wire or copper strip conductors large enough to carry the full armature current and are connected in series with the line and the brushes.

An ordinary shunt-wound motor operating under a wide range in load or by varying its speed with resistance in the field circuit will spark excessively, at the brushes, unless it is rated considerably below its normal capacity.

The sparking is due principally to the weakened field and to the distortion of the field magnetism by the large armature current. The use of an auxiliary field, by correcting this condition, produces sparklesss commutation and a fixed point for the position of the brushes.

To reverse this type of motor it is only necessary to transpose the two wires leading to this auxiliary field and the brushes. It is not necessary to alter the position of the brushes to secure the same operating conditions in the reversed rotation, as these poles act in exactly similar relation to the armature conductors in both directions.

Meaning of One-Half Size Explained

P. H. C., Spokane, Wash.—I am operating a Motiograph, and the objective lens is called a ½ size Gundlach. What is the meaning of the ½ size? Does it refer to the diameter or to the focus of the lens?

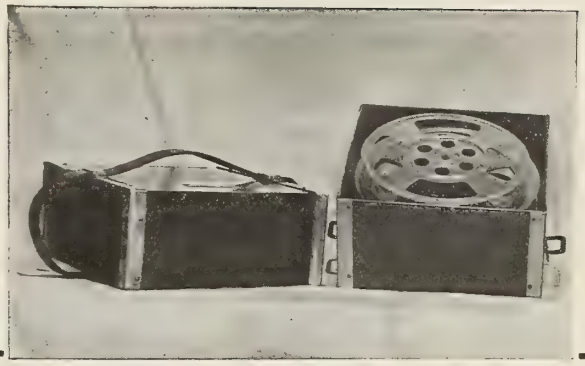
ANSWER: The designations of ¼, ½, ¾, 4/4 size to lenses are handed down from the earlier photographic terms referring to the size of photographic plates the lens will sharply focus over.



These terms are now used with projection lenses and do not refer to the focus of a lens but to the size of the mountings, or what is the same thing, the diameter of the lenses. The short focus lenses are generaly mounted in ¼-plate barrels and the longer focus lenses in ½-plate barrels.

The larger diameter lenses formerly afforded by the 4/4-plate plate mountings, though still necessary in photographic lenses, are not necessary for projection work. The diaphragm opening of the projection lens need only be large enough to receive the full diameter of the light cone coming from the condenser.

St. Louis Jeweler Becomes Screen Manufacturer and Joins Minusa Company

THE lure of the motion picture field and its co-industries has attracted another prominent and successful business man to its ranks. Fred W. Drosten, for forty years the leading jeweler of St. Louis, president of the F. W. Drosten Jewelry company, director of the Franklin Bank, is the most recent of those shrewd investors who see the advantages offered by the industry.

Mr. Drosten has just purchased a large block of stock of the Minusa Cine Products company, makers of the Minusa Gold Fibre screen and has become a member of the board of directors. The business of the Minusa company has increased so rapidly that expansion was necessary and its force of employees has twice doubled during the last three months.

Mr. Drosten achieved a very enviable distinction among diamond merchants and importers during the World's Fair at St. Louis by purchasing the famous World's Fair collection of diamonds.

This collection consists of a perfect stone of every known color from a pure blue white to a dark coffee color, including pink, green and yellow, twenty-one in all. In purchasing this collection, Mr. Drosten outbid the entire world of collectors and importers, and now has the collection on exhibition at his store in St. Louis.

THE Day and Night Screens, Inc., have been conducting experiments for some time in an effort to produce a perfect screen for rear projection of daylight pictures. By increasing the dispersion, the difficulty heretofore experienced, of the audience seeing the glare of the arc through the screen, has been eliminated.

While not generally on the market, screens have been installed successfully for the Bioplasticon Company, Inc., at Forest Park, Chicago, and Luna Park, Coney Island, N. Y.

The theatre, modern in design, seats 2,500, the admission prices ranging from ten to twenty-five cents. Leon Kelmer is in charge. The program is to be changed twice a week. Fox, Paramount, George Kleine and V-L-S-E features will be shown.

Practicability of Film Feeding Machines Demonstrated

IN the issue of May 29 there is a statement made that devices for eliminating rewinding were for many reasons impractical. We would call our readers' attention to the article which appeared in our issue of April 24, which describes the film feed machine made by Byron Chandler, Inc., the efficiency of which has been amply demonstrated.

THE THEORY AND NATURE OF LIGHT

The interior surface of a common drinking glass is a curved reflector. Let the glass be nearly filled with milk, and a lighted candle placed beside it, a caustic curve will be drawn upon the surface of the milk. A carefully bent hoop, silvered within, also shows the caustic very beautifully. The focus of a spherical mirror is the cusp of its caustic.

The inability of a spherical mirror to collect all the rays falling upon it to a single point is called the spherical aberration of the mirror.

Concave spherical surfaces are usually employed as burning mirrors. By condensing the sunlight with a mirror three feet in diameter and of two feet focal distance, very powerful effects may be obtained. At the focus, water is rapidly boiled, and combustible bodies are immediately set on fire. Thick paper bursts into flame with explosive violence, and a plank is pierced as with a hot iron.

Second Kind of Curved Mirrors

The second variety of curved mirrors is the convex, or the outer surface of a sphere. Their chief properties are as follows:

When parallel rays fall on the surface of a convex mirror, as in Figure 5, they become divergent after reflection. Let s s′ be a section of such a mirror and r s, r′ s′ rays parallel to its axis falling on it. Let c be the centre of the mirror. Drawing the lines c s c s′ which are the radii of the circle these will be perpendicular at the points the light rays strike the surface. Then, for the reflected rays, make the angle equal to that formed with this perpendicular and the light rays r r′. It is then shown that the rays, after reflection, will be divergent and also that if they be produced through the mirror till they intersect, they will give a virtual focus at the point f half way between the vertex of the mirror, v, and its centre, c, so long as the mirror is of a limited aperture.

In a similar way it may be proved that divergent rays falling on a convex mirror become more divergent.

IMPROVED AIRDOME WITH DAYLIGHT PICTURES

By PERCIVAL R. PEREIRA

IN speaking of airdomes, the general public, as well as those connected with the moving picture industry, associates the name with the usual unoccupied plot of ground in a partially developed section of a city, bounded by board fences, covered on the outside by advertisements of So and So's soap, injunctions to use such and such for the hair, teeth or stomach, and the interior is filled with what appears to be endless rows of shabby benches or chairs.

At one end we see an improvised picture screen supported on a weather beaten board framing. During the performance, if the weather is threatening, each member of the audience, as well as the proprietor, keeps an eye open for rain.

However, all of the foregoing disadvantages may be relegated to the past, along with the earlier crude beginnings of the picture playhouses which were opened in makeshift auditoriums.

The up-to-date airdome, where conditions of climate, lease, etc., permit, presents an entirely different appearance and its business is also less affected by the weather. Modern improvements and the addition of other attractions have made this a more certain form of business investment.

In the first place the modern airdome need not be run merely after dark, since the invention of the daylight picture screen permits the exhibiting of pictures in broad daylight, where a shallow shadow box or black frame is placed about the screen.

For this type of screen the operator and machine are placed at the rear, on the side opposite to the audience, and the space between the projecting booth and the screen is enclosed in light, tight walls and ceiling.

Since the distance required from the screen to the rear of the machine booth requires about 20 to 28 feet, depending on the size of the picture, the spaces at the sides and back of the screen may be utilized for dressing rooms for performers, toilet rooms or spaces for candy and soda concessions.

Use of Daylight Screen

By the use of a daylight screen, which may also be used at night to the same advantage, the proprietor will find that a season which might ordinarily prove disastrous financially, will be turned to a profitable one.

As a further aid it has been found that where a good sized plot is available, by arranging for raised covered sections at the sides and rear, but open to the main seating space, a good place is provided for tables and chairs.

Here a portion of the audience can sit comfortably, and enjoy both refreshments and the entertainment.

In cities where temporary canvas tops are not permitted, these spaces will also provide adequate temporary shelter in case of a shower.

Hard-headed business men are beginning to appreciate more and more the commercial advantages derived from artistically designed and executed buildings. One may observe this in all of the more recent commercial buildings, as well as in the theatres and picture theatres.

This applies equally well to the airdome. Of course the length of the lease or the commercial value of the property should govern, to a great extent, the amount to be expanded for embellishment.

However, an airdome may be made beautiful as a summer garden by the addition of inexpensive plants and shrubbery, and as in the more elaborate ones, the spaces at the sides and rear, devoted to tables, may be treated as pergolas, with wood or cement columns and exposed wood rafters.

These places may be well lighted in the evening, and in most localities will be well patronized to the financial advantage of the owner. They also afford pleasant, shady, lounging places during the day.

The loss in seating capacity, if the plot is a wide one, is more than offset by their obvious advantages. However, the special conditions arising in every problem of this sort cannot be covered within the limits of this article.

Planning the Aisles and Exits

In planning an airdome one should arrange for aisles and exits with the same regard for the safety of patrons as in a playhouse, making due allowance, however, for the difference in conditions.

One or more side exits, as well as main exits, should be provided. These should have exit signs and red lights as in a theatre, and the passageways to them, as well as the exits, should be at least five feet in width.

The aisles should not be spaced more than sixteen seats apart and should start at three feet in width at the narrowest part, and increase proportionately to their length toward the rear or the main exits or entrances. The rows of seats may be spaced from twenty-eight to thirty-two inches.

The side spaces, or pergolas, should be raised about ten or twelve inches above the remainder of the seating spaces, and may be floored with wood on sleepers, or in more permanent places built of concrete and finished off in cement.

The aisles should also have wood or cement paving. Generally speaking, painted seats or benches will always present a better appearance than those that are varnished, for wood will discolor, even through the varnish when exposed to the sun.

I might say in closing that the majority of picture-theatre operators would be surprised at what little cost an attractive and remunerative airdome may be constructed. However, to do this properly one will need to use considerable gray matter, as well as have special training and experience.

$26,000 Motion Picture Theatre for West Lafayette, Ina.

CHARLES C. RHODES and his associates are just completing one of the most elaborate theatres in the state. The structure alone will cost $26,000, not including any equipment or fixtures. Mr. Rhodes is at the present time looking over the market for the best accessories and equipment to be had.

The men interested in the enterprise are of broad business experience and insure success in their latest undertaking.

"Island of Regeneration" Paper Makes Hit

THE value of attractive paper, backed by a production that lives up to the opinion it creates, is shown by an interesting incident that occurred last week in Pittsburgh.

A gentleman from the ultra-fashionable East End of the city, called at the Pittsburgh branch office of the V-L-S-E and stated that he had read the book, "The Island of Regeneration," three times, had seen the picture five times during the two days that it ran at the Lyric theatre. He also stated he was particularly impressed with the fine lithographs, and purchased, for the purposes of showing to his friends, a one-sheet, a three-sheet and a twenty-four-sheet.

CALIFORNIA

A. G. EDWARDS, who was associated with W. J. Fulkerson in the negotiation of the ground lease of the building site, 100 x 100 feet, at the southeast corner of Third and C streets, San Diego, and the erection thereof of a $40,000 building, has sold the building and the lease to the Broadway Amusement Company for $52,500. The Superba theatre is in the building. G. A. Bush, president of the amusement company which operates the Broadway theatre, says that the company will conduct both theatres, billing only the best picture productions.

R. Midgley, proprietor of the Franklin theatre, one of the leading theatres of Oakland, Cal., given over exclusively to moving pictures, has taken over the Alameda house of Turner and Dahnken, and will conduct this in conjunction with his present house.

A lease has been taken on the Alameda theatre for a term of twenty years, involving a rental of almost one hundred thousand dollars for the term specified. Mr. Midgley, who came to Oakland from Salt Lake City, Utah, about a year ago, is one of the most prominent exhibitors on the Coast and has an established reputation for presenting pictures in their true atmosphere, making a specialty of fine music.

The Western States Vaudeville Association of San Francisco, which conducts a Hippodrome theatre at San Francisco and at Los Angeles, has secured a lease on the Liberty theatre at Oakland and will open this under the same name as soon as extensive alterations are completed. This house was the only one at Oakland where moving pictures had never been shown and had always been given over to stock productions.

A disastrous fire occurred at Ellis and Fillmore streets, San Francisco, on May 17, causing a loss of about $30,000. That the loss was not heavier is due to the fact that the conflagration was stopped on the south and west by the fireproof walls of the Garrick theatre in Ellis street and the New Fillmore theatre in Fillmore street, two leading moving picture houses. Neither of these were damaged.

The finishing touches are now being placed on the new theatre being erected for Joe Louis at Oak Park, Cal., and this house will soon be occupied. The building is of brick construction and will have a seating capacity of 720.

CONNECTICUT

There is some talk of starting an airdome theatre in Chester, but the plans for it are not fully matured as yet.

FLORIDA

Lake Worth is to have a new motion picture and vaudeville theatre to cost $4,000 for the building without the equipment.

KANSAS

A contract for a $75,000 real estate transaction involving East Douglas avenue business property, Wichita, has been made. The three-story brick and stone business block at 406-408 East Douglas avenue, owned by L. M. Miller, proprietor of the Princess theatre, was purchased by Marcellus Murdock and Victor Murdock. The deal was handled by George K. Spencer, investment and insurance, of South Market street

L. M. Miller is interested in a new theatre project for the third block on East Douglas avenue, Wichita. He and other Wichita capitalists plan to build a motion picture house on the south side of Douglas east of the Barnes block.

KENTUCKY

The Ada Meade theatre, at Lexington, Ky., will join the ranks of motion picture theatres this week and continue that policy until the regular vaudeville season opens in the fall. The management announces that a high class film program will be given daily.

Tony Sukedum, of the Crescent Amusement company, of Nashville, Tenn., has added another house to his string of theatres, having purchased from Ben Ransom the Citizens theatre at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The theatre will be remodeled and will be reopened in a few weeks, under the management of Oscar Altman, at present in charge of the Princess at Murfreesboro.

A new airdome has been built at Fern Grove, Ind., fourteen miles above Louisville, on the Ohio river. Free motion pictures will be provided every night for excursionists to this resort.

C. O. Brown and B. Riddle have opened a new airdome at Corbin, Ky., under the name of the Fairyland theatre. Messrs. Brown and Riddle are also erecting a new picture theatre at Corbin which will be opened in a few months.

Woodland Park, which has the largest airdome in Louisville, Ky., opened for the summer season the past week. Several free attractions, including dancing, are provided for patrons nightly after the picture show. Admission is five and ten cents.

MAINE

Fred Chase, the proprietor of the Orono picture theatre, Bangor, Me., has leased the opera house in Camden. Camden is one of Maine's leading summer resorts, and Mr. Chase anticipates good business. The house is attractive, although not built especially for pictures. It has a seating capacity of 1,200. The General Film company's service and Universal features will be used.

J. A. Guthrie is to open his airdome at Bar Harbor, Maine's leading resort and one of the premier summer places of the Atlantic coast, June 7. This is his second season, and owing to the fact that the war will keep the wealthy people of this country at home, Bar Harbor is facing what everybody believes will be a record breaking season.

The cottages are all let, and even now the hotels are well booked up. A large summer colony means a lot of money in the town and good business for the picture houses. There are two with an opera house, which is used for feature films at times. Manager Guthrie will use an entire Universal program.

The Pastime theatre at Northeast Harbor, which is another fashionable summer resort, where John D. Rockefeller, Jr., ex-President Elliot of Harvard and many other notables have summer homes, has reopened after being closed because of an epidemic of diphtheria in the town.

J. A. L. Terrio, of Bangor, is to open Reed's hall in Westbrook for the summer. The hall is a large one with a 90-foot throw for the machine, and it has a seating capacity of about 1,000.

Hussey and Terrill are about to open a picture house at Verona park, a summer resort and spiritualist camp ground on Penobscot bay.

MASSACHUSETTS

P. J. Nalty and J. J. Mulhall have leased from Hammer Bros. the vacant store in their block in Railroad street, Great Barrington, and will open a moving picture theatre. The room will seat 275 and will be attractively fitted up. The Barrington Building Company will do the work. Mr. Mulhall will act as manager.

Work on the new theatre to be erected by T. F. Murphy in Southbridge will start immediately, and the building now standing on the spot where the new theatre is to be erected will be torn down.

Plans have been made for a new two-story building between B. B. Smalley's and C. H. Faunce's buildings on Broadway, Chelsea. There will be an entrance from Broadway through the street floor of the proposed building to a theatre which is to be erected in the rear and having a seating capacity of about 1,100 on the floor and in the balcony. The building will be three stories in height and there will be apartments in the upper stories of both buildings. The interior of the theatre will be fitted up in a neat and attractive manner and it is intended to run motion pictures and vaudeville.

The owner is Mr. F. A. Noyes, of Boston, who owns the large apartment house on Cherry street, and the architect is his son, F. A. Noyes, Jr., who is living here and taking charge of the work. The entrance from Broadway will also serve as an entrance to the apartment house, instead of being from Fifth street, as at present. It is expected that the new theatre will be completed on or about October 1.

MISSOURI

The new Nebraska airdome, a beautifully appointed show place at Park and Nebraska avenues, St. Louis, opened to the public on May 23 with a specially selected program, consisting of speeches by prominent St. Louisans, several photoplay features, and songs by the popular Verdi Quartette. St. Louis Building Commissioner James L. McKelvey made the opening remarks, which was followed by a response from Gus Bauer, Alderman of the Fourteenth ward.

There were other speakers, among whom were Dr. L. E. Lehmberg and Henry Hoffman. J. William Deubach, treasurer of the Olympic theatre, is manager of the Nebraska, and his policy is to maintain only first run high class features and pictures, with the best singers and quartettes obtainable. An orchestra composed of the best musicians in the city furnish the music for the airdome.

The Crystal Feature, another new airdome just opened at Delmar and De Baliviere avenues, St. Louis, is running high class pictures exclusively. "The Fifth Commandment," with Julius Steger in the lead, was shown as the special attraction on the opening night. The Crystal is also running the serial, "The Goddess," on Monday nights.

A new airdome on Olive street near Grand avenue, St. Louis, called the Olivette, opened on May 24, featuring Holbrook Blinn and Alice Brady in "The Boss." The management of the Olivette will maintain an exclusive feature program, with stage favorites as leading players in the photoplays always preferred.

The Maryland airdome, a new place at 1910 South Thirteenth street, St. Louis, opened with an all motion picture program on May 22.

The Mozart airdome, at 4800 Delmar avenue, opened on May 22 for the summer with an exclusive motion picture bill, featuring multiple reel photoplays. The capacity of the Mozart is 2,000 seats with a ten cents admission fee.

The Woodland airdome, on Morganford and Gravois avenues, which opened recently, was turned over to the Morganford School Patrons' Association on the night of May 21 for the annual school entertainment. In addition to the regular moving picture program there were drills and games and recitations by the school children.

A lease by which the St. Joseph Amusement Company is to occupy the property owned by the Tootle estate, now known as the Majestic theatre, St. Joseph, for twenty years at an annual rental of $6,120 was filed today in the office of the county recorder. The lessee is the St. Joseph Amusement Company.

MINNESOTA

A new theatre with a seating capacity of 2,500 is being planned for the old library site at Seventh and Wabasha streets, St. Paul. George E. Lennon, owner of the lease covering the property, and Herman Benz, of George Benz and Sons, are planning to build the theatre.

OREGON

C. E. Smith and L. E. Partridge, partners who have been operating the Gem and Star theatres, Tillamook, Ore., jointly, have decided to dissolve partnership, and hereafter Mr. Smith will operate the Star and Mr. Partridge the Gem.

NORTH CAROLINA

Lenoir now has a new and up-to-date moving picture theatre, The Universal. The company is composed of twelve of the leading business and professional men of Lenoir and they have incorporated with an authorized capital of $5,000, with $1,200 or $1,500 paid in.

CONDUCTED BY H. S. FULD

Maine Pianist Arranges Successful Score for "Damon and Pythias"

AUGUMENTED by an orchestra of twenty-five pieces furnished by the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias, the spectacular photodrama of "Damon and Pythias," Universal, filling an engagement at the Park theatre, Bangor, Me., recently, was unusual in many ways. It has the distinction of being one of the first of the photoplays to appear there at an advanced admission price of twenty-five cents, and it filled the theatre to capacity at each performance.

Local members of the order of the Knights of Pythias attended in a body, and during the engagement the theatre was tastefully decorated in red, blue and yellow, the colors of the order.

The incandescent lights in the large electric sign flashed the colors and near the entrance a large Pythian flag was hung. Inside long streamers of red, blue and yellow bunting added to the general attractiveness of the theatre.

Betty Bogrett, a lyric soprano, the wife of Manager Stephen Bogrett, of the Park theatre, aided in the musical program, and the twenty-five-piece orchestra gave a preliminary concert and furnished the incidental music for the production.

The arrangement of the incidental music follows:

Part I.—Overture to William Tell, Rossini.

Part II.—Intermezzo, Astarte, Mildenberg; March from the Symphony, Lenore, Raff; A Dervish Chorus, In the Soudan, Sebek; Idyl, Softly Unawares, Lincke.

Part III.—Suite Sigurd Josalfar, Grieg: 1. Introduction; 2. Intermezzo, Borghild's Dream; 3. Huldigung's March; Battle Music, Lake; Minuet in G, Beethoven; Reverie, Extasie, Ganne.

Part IV.—Pomp and Circumstance, Elgar; The Chase, Koelling; The Cherry in the Glass, Lincke; Valse Triste, Sibelius; Exerpts from the Ballet, La Source, Delibes; 1. Scarf Dance; 2. Danse Circassienne.

Part V.—Prize Song from Die Meistersinger, Wagner; Visions, Tschaikowsky; Grand March from the Opera Aida, Verdi; Melodie, Friml.

Adelbert Wells Sprague was the conductor.

Unusual interest is being taken in "Damon and Pythias," according to Manager Charles Stern of the Bangor office of the N. E. Universal Film exchange in this city, who has recently returned from northern Maine where he has booked it for a circuit of the smaller theatres there.

It is a more expensive production than the managers in that section have been accustomed to handling, but "Knights of Pythias" lodges in Presque Isle, Fort Fairfield, Houlton and Caribou have made a guarantee to the theatres of a certain amount of the expenses in order that the film might be shown there.

Introduces Organ Music at Harrisburg Theatre

PETER MAGARO, manager of the Regent, 410 Market street, Harrisburg, Pa., introduced organ music in his theatre May 31 when an opening recital was given by J. Granville, formerly of the Strand theatre, New York City.

The instrument is a fine one of the Möller make, equipped with chimes and echo effects. It also has the unit orchestra attachment.

He proposes to have daily recitals during the regular performances and also to use the organ as an accompaniment to the pictures thrown on the screen.

Two Next Door Harrisburg Houses to Combine

TWO of the largest motion picture theatres in Harrisburg, Pa., the Photoplay and the Victoria, in adjoining buildings at 221 and 223 Market street, which for years have been operated under separate managements, are to be combined and altered so as to form one theatre which will be the largest house in the city, devoted exclusively to motion pictures.

James and Athens George, proprietors of the Victoria, the pioneer film men of Harrisburg, have announced that they purchased the Photoplay.

The two theatres are in the heart of the business district and each is on a lot a full block deep. The work of throwing the two houses into one will begin next week and will not interrupt the performances in the Victoria until the work is nearing completion and then it will take but a few days to combine the two houses, making of them one theatre that will have a seating capacity of close to 2,000.

The theatres are on the same floor level and have practically the same lines of construction. The George Brothers, a few weeks ago, took over the William Pen theatre, Thirteenth street and Thompson avenue, in a residential section.

ILLINOIS

The Ottawa theatre, Ottawa, which has practically been out of use for the last couple of years, is about to take back its old place as one of Ottawa's chief amusement places. Burton S. Jordan, proprietor of the Orpheum theatre, has secured a lease on the building, and will move the Orpheum there from its present location on La Salle street.

A. O. Ely, sergeant of police, has secured a building permit for the erection of an airdome and moving picture theatre at the corner of Fortieth street and Waverly avenue, Sandsdown. The estimated cost is $1,500.

The Irving, Buchanan, Boos Theatre Company of Chicago has leased the Dixon opera house for a year and will reopen the playhouse Sunday, May 30, with a high-class program of pictures and tabloid stock productions at popular prices. Davis Boos will be resident manager of the firm, which controls the Verdi and Mabel theatres in Chicago.

The airdome season has opened in Central Illinois and indications, so supply men say, are that the number of open air picture theatres will be larger this year than ever before.

Two airdomes already have opened in Springfield and both are doing good business. Henry Smith has opened an airdome at Ninth street and North Grand avenue and is showing to good crowds every evening. The Family Airdome at Eleventh street and South Grand avenue, has opened for the summer season. George Hopper, who managed it last year, is again in charge. He is showing Universal programs.

Thomas Scott opened his airdome at Jacksonville a few weeks ago, and reports a big early season business.

Ben Ferebaugh plans opening a motion picture theatre at Bushnell, Ill.

William Lambert, of Carlinville, Ill., is to open a motion picture theatre shortly.

Patrick Cody, of Virden, Ill., has begun the erection of a $9,000 motion picture theatre building at Kinkaid, Ill.

THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE

THE CONCLUDING CHAPTERS OF THE EXPLOITS

Now comes the final triumph of Elaine!

After her desperate dangers, her narrow escapes from the highly intelligent and malevolent enemies who for months have beset her, she becomes Elaine the victorious.

All the millions who have so breathlessly followed her in her vicissitudes wait to see her in this, the happy conclusion of her escapades and her exploits. Elaine's trials and tribulations are drawing to a close.

Through her love she has suffered.

Now through her love she will triumph.

Does she marry? Does society claim her? Do art and literature make her life? Or do home and children? ? ? ?

The final reels of the ROMANCE OF ELAINE will tell everything—of how she gains her peace and happiness.

Elaine has transformed many poor days into big days for you—now let her make big days into biggest.

Elaine was given to the public with a blaze of attention-compelling publicity, but—

Publicity alone could not drive the crowds to see these great pictures week after week and month after month. The later interest, the later curiosity and the later desire were aroused by the quality of the pictures themselves. Elaine's success is due to Elaine's own greatness.

The ROMANCE OF ELAINE is written by Arthur B. Reeve, dramatized by Charles W. Goddard, and produced by T. W. & L. D. Wharton. It features Lionel Barrymore, the justly celebrated star; Miss Pearl White, whose popularity is nation-wide, and Creighton Hale.

Two parts every week, each installment the best that money, brains and artistic talent can produce, and—

THE STORY IS TO BE FOUND EACH SUNDAY IN THE BIG HEARST NEWSPAPERS. It is also appearing in hundreds of other newspapers all over the country.

Book this truly biggest and best of all serials NOW through your nearest Pathé Exchange.

A Selig Red Seal Play released directly to Exhibitors through V-L-S-E, Inc., and branch exchanges. A story of heart-felt interest sincerely endorsed by those of every religious faith. Released Monday, June 28th.

"The Millionaire Baby"

It is the consensus of opinion among film reviewers that "The Millionaire Baby," picturized by Gilson Willets from the famous novel written by Anna Katherine Green, is one of the strongest film dramas of mystery, adventure and intrigue ever released. Mr. Harry Mestayer takes the leading role and is supported by Miss Grace Darmond and a versatile company of players. The question is: "Who Stole the Millionaire Baby?" Did Valerie Carew, former burlesque queen, prompted by mother love, abduct her own child? Did Marion Ocumpaugh, caught in the net of intrigue, cause the disappearance of little Gwendolyn? Did the scheming Dr. Pool finally accomplish his avowed purpose? Did Justin Carew, father of the child, take her in charge? The problem is satisfactorily answered in this gripping Red Seal Play released directly to Exhibitors on Monday, May 31st, and now proving the one big drawing card in the best theatres.

Viola Allen's Genius Makes "The White Sister" a Living Work Of Art

"The White Sister" is more than a photoplay.

The genius of Viola Allen has lifted this wonderful drama into a thing of art, throbbing with life and action. Her mastery of expression has brought out the dramatic situations with a realism so intense that hearts throb and hands clench with a responding sympathy.

Imagine a young officer and a princess, bound by an infinite love, brought suddenly to the realization that they are forever separated.

The officer is reported slain in battle. The princess, overwhelmed with grief, takes the veil. After five years the officer returns to look for his betrothed. He comes suddenly face to face with her in a convent in the garb of a white sister.

Their hearts surge with a wonderful joy at the reunion. Then comes the terrible realization of a separation in life, a separation more terrible than death, that paralyzes all hope and leaves their hearts blanched.

None but a genius can reproduce such a situation. This is what Viola Allen's genius has done for "The White Sister." It has made of this greatest work of F. Marion Crawford, a thing of life that grips the spectator with breathless interest.

This six reel Essanay feature can be booked through any of the V-L-S-E Inc., branch offices.

Announcing "Scandal"

Lois Weber

A Life Drama—announced for early release on the regular Universal Program.

An unusual story. Adjectives cannot do it justice. It is too real, too human, too big, for mere words.

It hits you! It hits me! It hits our neighbors! It touches the quick! It makes us remember (and regret) every word of idle gossip we have ever repeated.

Not scenically spectacular—but emotionally superb.

Written by

LOIS WEBER—Author of "HYPOCRITES"

And bigger than "Hypocrites," it is the biggest thing this wonderful woman has ever done!

She has taken common people—you and me—and the folks next door—and put us all into a play that simply keeps us, and all the rest of the movie fans, up to a high pitch of emotional tension for five full reels.

"Scandal" Is Beyond Question One of the Greatest Features Ever Produced Anywhere

There's not a break, nor a breathing space, for a full hour of solid moving picture enjoyment in the swift and unexpected plot development.

MOVING UNIVERSAL PICTURES

a Great Picture

A DRAMA YOU'LL NEVER FORGET

Crystal clear photography; homey, everyday realistic and intensely interesting settings give this superb production a finish that entitles it to first rank among the big special feature pictures of all time.

From plot to production this film satisfies.

It cannot be advertised too strongly. It will go big and pack any house to capacity.

No feature recently issued by the Universal has offered such opportunity for strong, high-pressure, business-getting publicity.

Two Princesses Make Two Royal Photoplays

Is there anything more fascinating than the love romance of a princess? You spent hours pouring over these stories when you were a child. You are still thrilled by them in book or play, no matter how occupied your time with the more serious things of life. For everyone must relax and everyone has a basic love for romance.

"Graustark," that wonderful 6-act photoplay by George Barr McCutcheon, is a story of a princess who loves a man because he IS a man and marries him too, in spite of all opposition and the traditions of royalty, that a princess cannot wed an American without rank.

"The Slim Princess," the beautiful 4-act comedy-drama by George Ade, contains a most human little princess who has acquired a taste for pickles, despite the fact that it makes her thin, which is next to a crime in her country. Then she wakes up to find that there is a fairy country, America, where slim persons are most beautiful. And she finds her prince charming in a rich American also.

These two great Essanay photoplays need no introduction to you. They already are thrilling thousands of persons all over the country. It is no experiment to book them. They have already proved that they contain that quality of human interest that holds every audience, children and grown-ups, rich or poor.

They will make money for you. Book them now through any of the branch offices of the V-L-S-E Inc.

Pictures and Publications

AGAIN we take occasion to point out the close analogy between the business of motion pictures and the business of publishing magazines, books and newspapers.

The two industries are exceedingly alike in their vital phases and the sooner we realize this fact, a clearer idea of the future and a closer grip upon the present will be had by exhibitor, producer and distributor alike.

THE broad principle of the publishing business is to amuse and instruct the reading public. Editors and publishers are successful largely in proportion to their grasp of what the public wants.

The business of the motion picture is also that of amusement and instruction—and along very similar lines.

It will be a greater business because its appeal is to a greater public—the seeing public, which embraces the reading public. But the motion picture must compete directly with the publication; and its producers, just as in the publishing business, will be successful in proportion to their grasp of what the public wants.

TRUE, the exhibition of motion pictures is a show business; and more and more the distribution of pictures is following the established lines of the theatrical business.

But we must not continue to consider the motion picture only in relation to the stage and the standards of the stage. We must not gauge its present and future phases and values only in this light. The stage with all its traditions is only part of the motion picture's sphere and but one element in its competitive field.

IN the beginning the motion picture created an audience all its own—an altogether new theatre-going audience. It did not attempt to be dramatic and so the picture theatre did not compete with the legitimate.

But the competition was shortly to begin. It came about with the introduction of the dramatic feature, and it is in full sway now. All over the country the road show business has declined in large measure as the audience of the picture theatre has increased.

BUT are we to stop here and limit the picture theatre audience to the show-going public—to those people who are used to getting their amusement from the stage, and in the ways of the stage?

By no means. The greater audience consists of those people who look regularly to books, magazines and newspapers for their laughter, instruction and thrills—for the portrayal of life in its most absorbing phase—namely, life as it really is.

This is the greater motion picture audience. These are the people to whom we must look, in very large measure, to fill the picture theatre seats, too many of which are now vacant.

BUT to attract these people regularly we must give them as high an order of entertainment as they have been getting from the printed and illustrated page.

It won't do simply to put a star in a picture.

The story must be there, a story as logical in its situations and as excellent in construction as the best printed stories.

Famous plays will not make a picture succeed unless, first of all, they lend themselves to picturization and then are picturized with the realism and other elements made possible only by motion photography.

IN other words, we must break sharply from our blind worship of the standards of the stage and also follow the standards of literary entertainment. As a matter of fact, whether we realize it or not, we are doing this right now.

We have serials, brief and rapid in action like the short continued feature fiction of the daily newspaper here and abroad. And we have a picturized novel, handled just like the continued novel in the magazine, with synopses of preceding chapters. We have animated comics and cartoons, women's fashions, news events, etc.

THE Strand style of program, now so popular in the larger theatres, is formed like the make-up of a popular magazine.

The instantaneous and striking success of this style of program is due to its broad appeal—its appeal to people, very largely, who never before went to see motion pictures.

And so we shall have new program successes, not by following narrowly the prescribed standards of the legitimate and especially the vaudeville field, but by broadening the picture to include the successful phases of a much greater world of entertainment—namely, that of books and journals.

TO do this we must have stories as good as the best printed; they must be expertly adapted to pictures needs; and over every picture made there must be a final editorial censorship as critical and as able in every way as that enjoyed by every worth while publication.

Pictures made in this way will add millions to our present theatre-going population; and the full field of the picture theatre will not be covered until we have them.

Why the Educational Film is Popular; Some Opinions to the Contrary Notwithstanding

A PERIODICAL devoted to chronicling the affairs of the two-a-day, the tan-bark, the carnival, street-fair and other allied lines of enterprise, has of late been advising exhibitors to beware of the educational film.

"If there is one thing," observes this journal, "that a showman knows he may not indulge in, it is teaching or preaching.

"His patrons pay him for entertainment, pure and simple. They are quick to detect and quicker to resent a sermon or a lesson. . . . A film is either entertaining or it is not. If it is educational, it decidedly is not."

THE periodical in question is primarily a show paper. It is devoted almost entirely to the stage and kindred amusements. Its standards are those of the theatrical business, as they have always been. And its attitude toward motion pictures is, that pictures are nothing but the newest form of theatrical entertainment.

This may be quite correct—as far as it goes. But it does not go far enough to include the possibilities of the picture; it does not even do justice to their present achievements. Such an attitude belongs to the days when pictures were a novelty, and any motion picture would draw a crowd simply because it was a "moving" picture, so-called.

THE motion picture industry has left that phase of its development as far behind as it has left the weekly whose advice is here quoted.

And in its progress, it has widened the gap between it and the stage until it is as distinct and individual a recorder of life as the book or the magazine.

The picture, in other words, has outgrown its merely theatrical character and taken on one that, for want of a more intelligible designation may be called "literary."

IT is the development of the picture along the lines of the magazine story or the long novel, and away from the theatrical production, that has won the attention of a larger public.

The magazines have a far greater following than the stage. And the photoplay theatres can claim a larger patronage than the so-called "legitimate" theatres—and for precisely the same reason. That reason is because they appeal to the reading public in a way that the stage can never employ, but which is and always has been employed by the magazine.

THE secret is merely in the power of narrative which the motion picture possesses. It is this power of narrative—the possibility of telling a story interestingly in pictures—that differentiates the picture from the spoken drama, and identifies it with the book and the magazine.

A photoplay is all that a stage drama is—and more. On the stage you cannot tell a story.

You can construct your action and phrase your dialogue so that your audience will be able to deduce for themselves the story that is the foundation of your drama. But that is all. The story, like the foundation of a building, is beneath the surface.

But on the screen, you can tell a story that is nothing but a good story, however full of dramatic episodes it may be, and tell it as completely, and in the same manner, as it would be related in a magazine.

NOR is this power of narrative confined to fiction—and that is precisely where our contemporary has missed the point.

You can take a narrative of a purely informative nature—the story of a building, of a plant, of a mine, of an animal's life, of an industry—translate it into pictures, and it will not only be as entertaining as it is in the form of an article in the magazine, but many times more so.

THE enjoyment of such articles, when appearing in the periodicals of the day, depends primarily upon the number of illustrations. However interestingly and clearly they may be written, they become more interesting, more clear, the more thoroughly they are illustrated. Every illustration spares the reader the necessity of stopping to visualize, in his own imagination, the operation or situation described in print.

Translate this article entirely into pictures, and you place the information it contains before those who are seeking it—and they are many, even though our contemporary may not be aware of their existence—in the most entertaining and most intelligible manner possible.

Thousands do and will read such articles in print. Witness the popularity of such magazines as "Popular Mechanics," "World's Work," "National Geographic Magazine." Many more thousands will "read" such articles when they can be "read" in pictorial form, where every point can be made directly through the eye to the brain.

THE "educational," the scenic, the travel film is most decidedly wanted by the patrons of motion picture theatres. What better proof than that the best, the highest-priced theatres all over the country, beginning with the Strand and the Broadway, New York, have made them a permanent feature of their program?

The stage, the circus and the carnival are one thing. The motion picture theatre is quite another—and there is less and less similarity between them all the time. The sooner the periodical in question realizes this, the less liable they will be to make such an error of judgment as this last one.

Middle West Breaks Own Attendance Record

Prosperity Wave Resulting from Good Crops, Excellent Outlook for Farm and Ranch Cattle and Market Prospects of Unusual Promise, Raises Popularity of Photo Drama to the Highest Point Since the Introduction of Motion Pictures in That Part of the Country

Omaha, June 9.

MIDDLE Western exhibitors are experiencing the best late spring and early summer business since motion pictures were started in that part of the country. Exhibitors, exchange managers and traveling film men declare it to be a record breaking wave of prosperity.

Following in the wake of repeated victories against censor legislation and Sunday closing elections, the promising attitude of the public bids fair to make this the best part of the country for motion picture prosperity this season.

F. A. Van Husan, Jr., manager of the Laemmle Film service at Omaha and the branch at Sioux Falls, S. D., has just returned from an extended trip throughout South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska with reports of better conditions. For instance:

"I audited the accounts of our branch at Sioux Falls, established about six months ago. The growth in business there has almost been amazing. The Dakotas, especially South Dakota, are the greatest supporters of the motion picture business I have seen for a long time. The most pleasing feature of it, outside of the popularity of the business, is the increase in admission, until ten, fifteen and twenty cents is universal.

"I stopped at Sheldon, Ia., one rainy night. Buntley brothers, in their new $40,000 theatre, the Lyric, filled every one of their 410 seats twice that evening. They run Universal pictures. They charge a regular admission of fifteen cents, regardless of a recent cut-price campaign started there which reduced the admission in other theatres to two people for five cents. The popularity of this brand new theatre would be a marvel in any other part of the country except the Middle West, where such things are getting common."

The June 1 reports of the various exchanges, now about completed, show an increase of between fifteen and twenty per cent. in the business done out of Omaha, over the reports at this time last year. A few of the exchanges claim more remarkable growths than this.

A. Chapman, representing the picture playhouses of Omaha in the Kansas City headquarters, was in Omaha last week. He said the censorship in Kansas gave a severe set-back, but that the prosperity of southern Iowa and in parts of Missouri has surpassed anything in his experience.

Good crops, a fine year for farm and ranch stock, and excellent market prospects for the farmers are held up as responsible for such fine business. Farmers of the Central States, many of whom have automobiles, are being advised by consistent advertising to set aside regular "show nights" each week, when they go to town, taking their family, and attend the motion-picture theatres.

On the wave of good business comes the news of new airdomes that will be opened just as soon as the early season rains stop. Joseph Kohlberg, former proprietor of a motion-picture theatre in Omaha, has given out the detailed plans for his splendid new airdome at Twenty-sixth and Farnam streets.

It will seat eight hundred people, will have a weather top on it and will have a one hundred-foot frontage on Farnam street, the principal thoroughfare of the city. He will show World films, believing the all feature shows will better attract an airdome attendance.

"Daddy" Frank E. Goff, said to be the pioneer motion-picture man of Nebraska, will open a new airdome, seating 1,200 people, at Twentieth and Paul streets, Omaha. He has another airdome at Fortieth and Hamilton streets and is proprietor of the Franklyn, one of Omaha's best residence district houses. He says the present season is the best in his memory and he was in Omaha in the business when motion pictures were still more of a curiosity than an entertainment.

Ottumwa, (Ia.) exhibitors are lining up for an election, soon to come, to reinstate Sunday shows in their city. Ottumwa and thereabouts is one of the best prosperity districts in the Middle West.

Iowa City has a new theatre, seating six hundred, and T. A. Hanlon is proprietor. It will be completed early in June, and Hanlon is planning an opening day that will make the territory sit up and take notice. He claims his new house carries out the standard that every theatre built in the Middle West must be better than the one built before it.

Special pictures, being shown in legitimate theatres now closed for the season, or made the subject for special advertisement and special shows in motion-picture houses, are enjoying better runs in the Middle Western States than ever before. Educational films, including six reels and an entire show, are patronized by crowds that grow larger every day.

The first week of clear, early summer weather bids fair to see Middle Western exhibitors welcoming the best season they ever had, if all indications are carried out. Then the airdomes will open up, the roads will be excellent for the automobiles of the farmers, school will be out so the youngsters will not have to "stay home and study." The young people will stroll from the soda fountain to the motion-picture theatre, and a note of prosperity will arise from the Middle West and captivate the ears and minds of the motion-picture industry throughout the United States.

New Censorship Agitation Looms in Philadelphia

Catholic Theatre Movement Seems to Indicate Dissatisfaction with Rulings of the Censor Board—"White List of Theatres"—Exchange Men Meet Censors

Philadelphia, June 9.

OF making censors there is no end. The latest addition to Philadelphia's burdens in that line is the Catholic Theatre Movement, endorsed by no less a personage than Archbishop Prendergast himself. In addition to compiling a "white list of plays," the committee in charge has now extended its activity to motion pictures.

It is pointed out, however, the impossibility of censoring all films on account of their vast numbers, so a "white list of motion picture halls" is the method proposed. To facilitate such an end, committees will be formed in each parish who will visit the managers of the theatres in their district, and ask that no objectionable films be presented. These committees will then become censors of such theatres. If anything objectionable from the committee's viewpoint is discovered, the theatre is forthwith dropped from the "white list." The committees are urged, however, to act prudently and make some allowance for mistakes which inadvertently occur.

No clash with the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors is anticipated, but evidently the Catholic Theatre Movement is not satisfied with the censors' judgment, or it would not thus set up standards of its own.

The meeting with the censors called by Attorney General Brown was attended by representatives of several of the prominent exchanges in Philadelphia, as well as by Mr. Breitinger, Mrs. Niver and Mr. Breitinger's lawyer. The standards and regulations of the censor board were the chief topic of discussion.

The exchangemen had a chance to file objections to those articles which seemed to them unjust, and grievances were aired from every angle.

Another meeting will be held shortly, and a final adjustment of the differences is anticipated.

Meantime the managers of the leading exchanges have held several meetings amongst themselves, which have resulted in much good. The managers are very anxious for business to go forward without friction or interference, and to that end are agreed to give all possible assistance to carrying on expeditiously the censorship work which the law has put on them.

A. E. REEVES VISITS ESSANAY STUDIO IN LOS ANGELES

A. E. Reeves, of the sales department of the Essanay company, with headquarters in Chicago, spent several days of the past week at the Los Angeles studio of the company.

HILL RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS BEE STINGS

Los Angeles, June 7.

Ray Hill, business manager of the Masterpiece company, was recently almost stung to death at the studio while supervising the reconstruction of the plant. A swarm of bees attacked him twice, and for three days his life was despaired of, the poison of the stings having penetrated the skull through the eye and below the ear causing paralysis of the motor cells controlling lung and heart action.

Mr. Hill is now sufficiently recovered to superintend the work of building two new stages and all new prop houses, which, when finished, will make it possible to triple the capacity of the studio affording ample room for four companies.

Special Pictures Take Well in Omaha Territory

"Adventures of a Boy Scout," for Arousing Recruiting Interest Among Youth, and the Williamson Submarine Pictures, Are Two Successful Films of This Kind

Omaha, June 9.

THE most remarkable of recent motion picture events in the Middle West have been the successes of special pictures exhibited in this territory. In particular this includes the World Film corporation's pictures, "The Adventures of a Boy Scout," and "Your Girl and Mine," and the Universal Film Company's pictures, Williamson's submarine films and the Stephansson expedition. Scott's expedition to the South Pole and the feature film, "Uncle Sam at Work," have been others to create sensations.

The Boy Scout picture will be in Omaha June 24, 25 and 26, when Mayor Jim Dahlman of the Middle West exchange center, head of the Boy Scouts of the city, will introduce it. The picture will be shown in a natural amphitheatre in Hanscom Park, Omaha, where outdoor plays are frequently held. The proceeds will go toward buying outfits for poor boys who want to be Boy Scouts and cannot afford the expense, and to pay the expenses of the annual Boy Scout outing. There will be recruiting stations for Scouts throughout the city, and parades will be held daily.

Shows all over the territory are not only calling for the picture, but in towns where such a plan cannot be arranged, ministers, doctors and others interested in the welfare of boys are booking the picture. The Rev. W. S. Sylvester, of Creston, Ia.; Dr. H. F. Thompson, of Forest City, Neb.; the Rev. Neal C. Smith, of Bassett, Neb.; the Rev. W. A. McKee, of Lyonsville, Ia.; and ministers at Augustana, S. D., and Williams, Ia., have arranged for the show.

"Your Girl and Mine," of paramount interest to suffrage workers, has been boosted to a marked success in the Central West.

The submarine picture put out by the Universal and backed in this territory by F. A. Van Husan, Jr., manager of the Omaha exchange, has created a sensation that reached its height when the "World-Herald," a big daily newspaper of Omaha, published a page feature story about it in a Sunday issue. M. R. Henratti has been managing the picture for Van Husan. The Universal will also put on pictures of Stefansson's expedition, said to be even better than the submarine pictures, and Van Husan confidently predicts it will even excel the other in popularity.

The independent pictures of Scott's expedition and of "Uncle Sam at Work," shown in Omaha theatres under the auspices of newspapers and taken out into Nebraska and Iowa to be shown to great crowds, are also setting new marks for pictures of this character throughout this section.

Theatre Building in Michigan Is on the Increase

"Gee, Another," Everybody Exclaims Incredulously on the Completion of Each New One in Detroit—and Then Rushes in to See the Pictures

Detroit, Mich., June 9.

LAST week a list of the various new theatres under construction in Detroit and other parts of Michigan was published in these columns. It certainly showed that the motion picture industry was flourishing in the Wolverine State. It is a positive fact that despite the number of theatres in Detroit, there is not a single manager of the better class of playhouse who does not report a very satisfactory business. And yet every time someone announces a new theatre a hundred of his friends will remark, "Gee, another one!"

In addition to the list published last week, here are a few more: The Ferry Park Theatre company has incorporated for $100,000 to construct a photoplay theatre at the corner of the Boulevard and Grand River avenue, Detroit. The principal stockholders are A. Arthur Caille, Theodore L. Smith and Robert Drysdale.

From reports this new theatre will be modeled somewhat after the style of the new Majestic theatre, at Woodward and Willis avenues. The Harris and Warren Amusement company has increased its capitalization from $25,000 to $85,000. This concern is building a new playhouse at Wyandotte, Mich.

The Elk Photo Play company, of Flint, Mich., has changed its name to the Strand Photo Play company.

It is also reported that Mr. Caille is behind a project to build a new photoplay theatre at the corner of Grand River and Fourth avenues.

The Wagner Baking company, at Grand River avenue and Fifth street, has leased its plant, and states that the lessees plan to remodel a portion of the building into an up-to-date motion picture theatre.

Kleine Wins "Beetle" Suit Against Polacoff

Claims of Infringement Made by Producer Who Took Out Copyright on Cines Film on April 20, 1914, Is Upheld by U. S. Court

WHAT is generally recognized as one of the most important decisions in the history of moving picture litigation has just been handed down by Judge Hand, of the United States District Court for New York, in the suit brought by George Kleine against Abraham Polacoff, doing business as The Quality Feature Film Company, for infringement of the plaintiff's copyright on the film called "The Golden Beetle."

The decision upholds the claim of the plaintiff and directs the entry of a judgment for the costs and counsel fee against the defendant, Polacoff.

The interesting feature of the decision is found in the fact that it throws out the defense made on the basis that at least parts of the plaintiff's and defendant's prints of the film were made from different negatives.

"The Golden Beetle," produced by the Cines company, of Rome, was imported by George Kleine and copyrighted by him at Washington, April 20, 1914. In August an unauthorized print of the film appeared in New York and was seized by the United States marshal upon complaint of Mr. Kleine, as owner of the copyright.

The question of the validity of this action (in regard to the copyright) was brought up before Judge Hand, and the defendant attempted to show that his film was different from the copyrighted picture. According to his own witnesses, however, at least sixty per cent. of the scenes were identical, and the others, although evidently not printed from the same negatives, nevertheless were so similar as to leave no doubt that they were different "takes" of the same story.

After Mr. Kleine's attorney, George F. Scull, proved the facts upon which his case was based, and showed the exclusive rights of Mr. Kleine in regard to the film, Judge Hand made his decision. During the course of the hearing the defendant testified that he had bought the unauthorized print from George Brandenburgh, of Philadelphia.

MOROSCO MANAGERS HUNT TALENT IN NEW YORK

Los Angeles, June 7.

Frank Garbutt and Charles Eyton, managers of Morosco-Bosworth companies, are in New York City, making another raid on legitimate stage talent for appearance in early releases. Scarcely five months ago Mr. Garbutt made his last visit to the eastern clearing house of big theatrical talent, and since that time a stage celebrity has arrived every few months, and the number contracted is not as yet exhausted.

It is understood that a complete program for productions for the next six or eight months has been made out and the present visit of the managers to New York is to secure stars at once for these photoplays.

Universal Beauty Tour a Transcontinental Fete

Prize Winners Create Stir from the Moment They Are Seen at the Dinner in Hotel Manhattan, New York—Special Car Takes on Board the Successful Ones in Each State as It Passes Through—Joe Brandt "Releases" a Speech

"ATHING worth doing at all is worth doing well," said the heads of the Universal organization, whereat they sumptuously dined a collection of pulchritudinous maidens, winners of several branches of the Universal beauty contest, at the Hotel Manhattan, New York, before their departure to Universal City and minor points in California. The date was Friday, June 4.

This luncheon was the last of a number of bright events arranged by the executives of the big film organization, which did much to enliven the stay of the far-famed beauties while in New York.

The beautiful ones present at the repast had gathered from a number of states in the east, in response to the demand of their home town newspapers which came out with the obviously truthful fact that the girls from their respective metropolis were the most beautiful in the world.

Some were there from all the states in New England, some from New York, others from New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware. A special train conducted the party to Chicago and points west immediately after the ceremony. The aggregation will be heavily chaperoned by Joe Brandt and Ed. Rothstein. At each stop another beauty will be added to the throng.

The luncheon given in the private dining room of the Hotel Manhattan was a congenial affair from the well-known soup to the equally popular finale. And of course there were plenty of beauties from the Universal home offices to aid in making the time pass happily.

And it is only fair to mention that the gentlemen of press did their share.

A Joe Brandt "Release"

Joe Brandt released one of his paternal talks before the departure, requesting the young ladies to stick together and do what the chaperones told them. Then the procession paraded to the Grand Central Terminal and embarked on the two o'clock train for Chicago. Jack Cohn was kind enough to see that everyone was shot with the camera as the crowd passed through the station.

On arrival at Universal City it is the plan of the promoters to place all the young ladies in a picture and then to select one as "Queen of Beauty" to be retained as a star of the organization.

Those present at the New York dinner were Mollie Julian, May Oliver, Lillian Baltz, A. Pauline Westphalen, Margaret McDonough, Agnes Cheney, Forestine Dennison, Frances Hamilton, Margaret Hague, Marie Forham, Anna Schrader, Alice Matthews, Gertrude Regan, Peggy Dolan, Esther Sutton and Nellie Bell. John Clymer and Paul Gulick, of the Universal, assisted in the entertainment.

The arrival of the girls in Chicago was quite an event in the Windy City. They were greeted by a brass band at the La Salle street station and then traffic was halted a while during their march to the Hotel Sherman. Here the eastern group met the middle states aggregation comprised of Jean McNicol, Gertrude Fonda, Ursula Sigrist, Alameda Holcombe, Mabel Jackson, Edith Mass and Nellie Bell.

Entertained by Margaret Anglin

Those from the State of Illinois were Irene O'Connor, Anna Nessel and Gwendolyn Morgan. In the evening the entire party went to the theatre to see Margaret Anglin in "Beverly's Balance." After the performance they were entertained by Miss Anglin and then repaired to a midnight dance at the Cotillion Club. At two o'clock the next afternoon, after a reception held at the Hotel Sherman, the party went on their way to California on the Beauty Special.

Among the chaperones are Mrs. Anne Hamilton Pitzer, Mrs. Pauline Smart and Miss Frances Wayne, three women of social prominence.

At Las Vegas the galaxy of beauties will witness the New Mexico Cowboys Reunion, an affair said to rival the California Rodeo in thrills and various feats of horsemanship. On the arrival in Los Angeles the party will immediately be transferred to Universal City where a varied program has been arranged for their benefit.

The party arrived at Kansas City at 7:30 a. m., on June 7. Here the prize-winners were joined by Pauline Turner, of Kansas City, the Kansas prize beauty; by Madeline Skinner, of Houston, Texas; Paula Jorgensen and Marguerite Rhodes, of Cheyenne, Wyoming; Daisy Fulwiller, of Oklahoma City, Okla.; Opal Crumbles, of Omaha, Nebraska; Mary Kidwell, of Wichita, Kansas; Anita Lieberman, of Boise, Idaho, and Madge Henry, of Sioux City, Iowa. After Kansas City had given the girls a royal welcome all again boarded the transcontinental special for Denver at 3:30 p. m.

At every stop along the route the special and its precious human freight attracted much attention. Moving pictures of the crowd which gathered about the train at all hours of the day and night were taken while inside Joe Brandt spent his time reading the manuscripts of the many photoplays which have been submitted to him as vehicles for the fifty-odd beauties to appear in later in the month at Universal City.

Mr. Brandt will feature the girls in a two-reel feature and the most beautiful girl of all will be starred in a one-reel production designed especially for her.

On June 8 the party arrived at Pueblo, Colorado, where, owing to the insistent demands of a large crowd which gathered despite the early hour (5:30 a. m.), several of the beauties were required to array themselves in their morning gowns and come to the rear end of the train.

The train then passed on to Colorado Springs, the home town of Mrs. Annie Hamilton Pitzer, sister of Mrs. Champ Clark, one of the chaperones of the party. The beauties disembarked at the Springs and after a short visit climbed aboard the special, rather wearily, and were off to Denver, where they arrived at dinner time on the same day. At Denver the following joined the party: Gertrude Fonda, of Seattle, Wash.; Clara Hoopes, of Carson City, Nevada; Bessie Davis, of Phoenix, Arizona; Ruth Safford, of Santa Fe, N. M.; Florence Boring, of Denver, Colo.; Mrs. Francis Wayne, of Denver, (chaperone); and Dr. Edna Carver, of Denver, (chaperone), completing the party with the exception of the California prize-winner who joined the prize winners later.

Denver gave the girls a reception they will never forget for the Denver Post who conducted the Colorado beauty contest, was determined to do the occasion "up brown." After leaving Denver the party made limited stops at Las Vegas, Lamy and Albuquerque in New Mexico and arrived at the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona at 7 a. m. on June 10. When last heard from the girls were still exploring the canyon on board the upperside of two score tough little mules.

CLEVELAND LOCAL GIVES SMOKER

Cleveland, O., June 9.

President S. E. Morris and Secretary Walter H. Horsey called a special meeting and smoker for Cleveland Local No. 1, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, last Tuesday. Invitations were extended to every exhibitor in Cleveland, as many important film questions were discussed. Ben. J. Sawyer made an address on conditions that have arisen in the city and state to concern the motion picture theatre business.

An election may be held in the near future, as it is thought that a change in officers will incite renewed activity in league affairs.

Geraldine Farrar Begins Trip of Queenly Triumph

Operatic Star Leaves New York for Los Angeles Amid Remarkable Demonstrations of Enthusiasm by Host of Admirers

GERALDINE FARRAR, the world's greatest operatic star, left New York last Monday in her special car, surrounded by an elaborate entourage of managers and attendants.

Miss Farrar will arrive in Los Angeles, where she is to have her first experience posing before the camera, as a Lasky star, on Friday afternoon at 2:30. Miss Farrar will remain at the Lasky studio in Hollywood for a period of eight weeks, and it is now officially announced that the first vehicle for her use will be a dramatic version of "Carmen."

Cecil B. De Mille, director general of the

GERALDINE FARRAR BIDDING FAREWELL TO HER ADMIRERS

Lasky company, will himself take full charge of the Farrar productions and has, as a matter of fact, been making preparations for "Carmen" ever since the day the contract with Miss Farrar was signed.

It will be remembered that Miss Farrar's greatest success of the last season at the Metropolitan Opera House was in "Carmen," and that all the critics declared her creation of the torrid Spanish beauty to be even more striking than the famous characterization by Calve.

It is therefore particularly appropriate that Miss Farrar should make her first appearance on the screen in this same role, which is fortunately replete with the finest opportunities for dramatic action and elaborate production effects.

Miss Farrar started on her trip from the Jersey City station of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at 11:50 Monday morning. The prima donna and her party occupied the private Pullman car Superb. Accompanying her were her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Farrar; Morris Gest, her personal manager, and Mrs. Gest; Mrs. David Belasco, Frank Connors, James Sullivan and William A. Page.

Her retinue of servants include four maids, two cooks, and her own Italian hair dresser from a Fifth avenue establishment.

The scene of her departure was almost like an affair of state. She was presented with a wonderful bunch of American Beauty roses by the Eastern representatives of the Lasky company, and she was literally besieged by newspaper men and motion picture camera men of the various film news services.

Upon arriving in Los Angeles, Miss Farrar will be met by Jesse L. Lasky, Samuel Goldfish, Cecil B. De Mille, and the other heads of the Lasky organization, together with the mayor of the city and a delegation from the chamber of commerce.

Five thousand school children will give Miss Farrar a "flower shower" as she emerges from the Los Angeles depot.

On Saturday evening she will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given her party by Mr. Lasky and Mr. Goldfish. The other guests will include three hundred permanent players now engaged at Hollywood, together with the mayor of Los Angeles, and a number of other promiennt officials.

During her stay at Hollywood Miss Farrar will occupy a beautiful villa which has been specially leased for her by the Lasky company.

THE DIVA SURROUNDED BY A GROUP OF FRIENDS

Among the friends who saw Miss Farrar off at the Lehigh station were Maurice Farkoa, Josephine Jacoby, Mrs. Alf. Hayman, and Charles Ellis. One of the most beautiful bunches of flowers came from Dr. Karl Muck, director of the Boston symphony orchestra.

HOUSE WARMING DANCE HELD IN SELIG ZOO

Los Angeles, June 7.

The mammoth dancing pavilion of the Selig Jungle Zoo was given a house warming by members of the Selig producing companies, Tuesday evening, when Col. William H. Selig himself acted as host of the many photoplayers employed at the three studios.

Sunday the members of a Jewish society were permitted to use the grounds for a benefit, and raised a goodly sum to be forwarded to sufferers of the European War zone.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. THE VICTORIA, ROCHESTER, N. Y., ADVERTISING "CHAPLIN WEEK" IN ELECTRIC LIGHTS

CHAPLIN MECHANICAL MAN PULLING AUTOMOBILE

TO advertise Charles Chaplin week at the Victoria theatre, Rochester, New York, Manager John J. Farren uncovered a clever publicity stunt recently. A mechanical man ten feet high, much resembling the renowned comedian, pulled an electrical automobile on which the week's pictures were advertised, through the streets of the city.

The scheme met with great success, as the pictures played to large audiences at every show. Mr. Farren is one of the pioneer film men of Rochester, and in the Victoria runs the largest house in that city. The General and Universal programs are used, the pictures being changed daily.

OFFER FREE USE OF THEATRES FOR JULY 5

MANAGERS of the twelve motion picture theatres in Elizabeth, N. J., have offered them free to the city on the morning of July 5. The offer is for the purpose of co-operating in the plans for a municipal celebration of Independence Day. The total seating capacity of the local playhouses will exceed 20,000.

Mayor Victor Mravlag, in a letter of thanks, accepts the offers of the theatre managers, and says a program of patriotic pictures will be supplemented by lectures and addresses. The exercises, which will be conducted between the hours of ten and twelve, will be especially for the school children and their parents.

In addition to the free use of the playhouses the theatre managers have volunteered to furnish, without charge, suitable and appropriate films for the occasion.

RUN "GODDESS" IN BOTH HOUSES SIMULTANEOUSLY

JOSIAH PEARCE & SONS, owners of the Pearce string of theatres in New Orleans and surrounding territory, have adopted a very unusual method of showing "The Goddess," in conjunction with their newspaper advertising campaign.

So favorably impressed with the film did they become that they contracted for two films, to be run simultaneously in their Trianon and Bijou Dream theatres. This is the first time such high indorsement of a picture has ever been given in New Orleans.

INVITATION TO TAKE BILLS—NOT DOLLAR BILLS

HARRY COWDUROY, proprietor of the Elite No. 2 theatre, at 1318 Farnam street, Omaha, Neb., has bills printed each time he has a special picture. He hangs the bills, with a neat invitation to "Take One" out where the passing public can take them.

No one takes a bill unless he wants to read it. Cowduroy says it is a paying way to advertise.

USES STRING OF ELEPHANTS IN PARADE

THE Alhambra theatre, 735 South Hill street, Los Angeles, has become the permanent home for V-L-S-E features here, being shown in connection with the Vitagraph Serial, "The Goddess." The first subject shown was that of "Graustark," an Essanay subject featuring Francis X. Bushman.

The business was almost capacity all week, which is phenomenal for this theatre because of its location. These subjects are being shown at increased prices, the former prices being ten and fifteen, which have now been increased to ten and twenty-five. This week the Selig production, "The Carpet of Bagdad," forms the principal part of the program, which will be followed by "The Juggernaut," next week.

Manager Harry Naugle pulled a good advertising stunt, in a political parade, when he secured the use of the herd of elephants from the Selig Jungle Zoo from Colonel William Selig. They appeared in the parade with bright banners advertising the "Carpet of Bagdad." The Plaza theatre at San Diego has booked this series of features, and first runs are being booked in practically all the important cities of southern California, Arizona and New Mexico, the territory allotted the local office.

CHAPLIN AUTO ATTRACTS LARGE CROWDS

ALIVE St. Charles street exhibitor of New Orleans, La., has taken a life-size photograph of Charlie Chaplin, mounted it on stiff carboard and, with an electrical attachment, makes Chaplin parade before passing chowds. He runs an electric wire direct to Charlie's tie, in which blazons forth a tremendous "diamond," the brilliancy of which is aided and abetted by the electric light.

This same exhibitor was one of the first to see the advantage of six-sheet posters in advertising Chaplin. Whatever is put in printer's ink, he thinks, is the very best investment possible. And his returns more than justify the expense.

Hugh Farley, of the Empire theatre staff of Montgomery, Ala., was a New Orleans visitor, calling on the exchange men of the Crescent City this week. He says Montgomery cities are clamoring for Charlie Chaplin, so, therefore, he booked Charlie for all his coming releases through S. T. Stephens, of 200 Weis building. Mr. Farley is the exhibitor-manager who made "'Phone 1700" famous.

HE CANNOT GET ALONG WITHOUT IT

J. Bonoff has been added to the World Film Corporation's branch in Omaha as salesman. "One of the first things I was told was that my services would be more efficient if I read all the trade papers," Bonoff said. "Since I have started reading them, I find I can talk with exhibitors with more insight into the actual conditions.

"I also find it convenient to frequently urge exhibitors to read the trade papers like the 'Motion Picture News.' I simply cannot get along without it as well as with it, and I don't see how an up-to-date exhibitor can."

Irwin Outlines to Employes the V-L-S-E Policy

It Is Based on Integrity and Merit, With No Exhibition of Favor Toward the Manufacturing Units of Releasing Company

THE internal policy of the V-L-S-E as revealed by General Manager Walter W. Irwin's address to the employees of the company, is one that reflects great credit on the heads of the Big Four organization.

Mr. Irwin in outlining the V-L-S-E organization attitude toward its employees lays as much emphasis upon the company's obligations as he does upon the duty expected of its selling and clerical forces.

Mr. Irwin considers each employee a member of the family—The Big Four Family—and his address to them, as printed in the company's private publication is worth quoting in full, as follows:

"The policy of this company is founded upon two principles, first, integrity; second, merit. The first ought and must exist in the family relations, as well as in our relations with the exhibitor. This means that the V-L-S-E organization is and will continue to be absolutely devoid of politics.

"It also means that the home office will not play politics with any of the manufacturers, nor with any individual or group of individuals in this organization. Nor shall any individual or group, ever feel it necessary or desirable to play politics with the home office, or with the manufacturers.

"As the success of a salesman largely depends upon the degree of confidence and reliance placed in him by his customers, so, too, the success of sales organization must rest upon the reliability felt by each part of it in the whole, and vice versa.

"In short, this company purposes to perform but two duties:

"(1) To get the utmost results for each manufacturer, without fear or favor, consistent with fairness to the exhibitor.

"(2) The square deal to each representative.

"Necessarily, it follows, that merit shall be the sole test of recognition and consequent advancement. And merit as applied to our product, plus confidence in the organization, honesty with the exhibitor, must make for success.

"At all times, the company will conduct its business on a basis of economy, except in one respect, and that is in respect of proper compensation for meritorious services.

"In this respect, it is the intention of the company to build up a high-class permanent organization; and it recognizes that no representative can produce the best results nor be retained unless his compensation in dollars and cents is commensurate with his services.

"Likewise, at all times, the home office not only welcomes, but requests either through this medium or by mail, frank, serious suggestions for the improvement of our entire business, or of any part of it; or for the simplification or betterment of our system. In fact, this is a duty imposed upon each one, for the home office must gain its information from the branches, and from the thought of the entire organization distributed to all, shall the best results be derived."

Universal Is Back of Coupon Plan for Exhibitors

Robyn-Kander Movie Ticket Corporation, the Distributing Agency, Makes Arrangements With Mercantile Manufacturers for Reaching the Public

A GIGANTIC coupon scheme will very shortly be put into actual operation by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and the Robyn-Kander Movie Ticket Corporation, a concern with head offices at 30 East Forty-second street, New York City, which the Universal is backing.

The Robyn-Kander Movie Ticket Corporation will distribute tickets good for five cents at moving picture theatres. The exhibitor may redeem these tickets for cash at any Universal exchange, whether he shows Universal pictures or not.

The ticket distribution will be national in scope. Arrangements have been made with several manufacturers of nationally distributed merchandise and with local packers of such articles as soap, coffee, tea, starch, breakfast foods, crackers and household necessities to pack a whole five-cent coupon or a fraction of one in their products.

Local retailers are also active and will give away the coupons over their counters just as the United Cigar Stores give away coupons or as trading stamps are handled.

The tickets themselves are composed of a heading, which contains explanatory matter, and twenty little coupons. A heading with twenty coupons is good for five cents. The coupons are gummed for pasting up.

Robyn-Kander will provide a standard measure or cash-till for the tickets so the ticket seller will have no reason to hold up a waiting line while she counts the coupons; she can measure them up in a fraction of a second. She simply accepts a strip of paper about ten inches long, printed on the finest kind of bond paper. Then the exhibitor can put the tickets in his cash drawer and exchange them for cash, singly or in large numbers, at any Universal exchange.

The history of the premium plan shows that business created by premiums is extra business. In other words, a patron who now attends a motion picture theatre three times a week, by saving the Robyn-Kander tickets, will attend four times a week. It doesn't cost the patron anything but means money for the exhibitor.

Further, the money stays in the town where the patron lives. For he makes his purchases at his local stores and his local exhibitor cashes in the coupon.

Robyn-Kander only ask a little patience. They feel they may be a few months in covering the country, that for the first ninety days or so the admissions may come in slowly, but, after that, they feel that the plan means a harvest.

Hundreds Make Reservations for Selig Flier

Tour of Western Part of the Continent by Enthusiastic Travelers Promises Entertainment of Varied Interest—Booklet Issued by the Company Tells Advantages of Trip

THE tour of the Selig Exposition flyer through the western states and California promises to be one of the most successful expeditions of its kind ever planned. Hundreds of ladies and gentlemen have booked Pullman reservations on the train de luxe, which will leave Chicago, Ill, on Thursday morning, July 8. The cars will not be of the "tourist" variety but standard Pullmans of latest design.

There is yet plenty of time to book reservations. The sum of $128 covers all expenses excepting meals. The fare includes Pullmans going and coming, hotel accommodations, and all side trips.

Two great expositions, the national convention of motion picture exhibitors at San Francisco, tours of Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Barbara, and other points are included in the itinerary.

Western cities are planning receptions to the tourists, and the Selig Jungle Zoo, recently completed at Los Angeles, will be thrown open to the Eastern guests, and motion pictures in the making will be seen and personal meetings with notable motion picture stars will be part of the entertainment. The Selig company will send an artistic booklet for the asking. It is entitled "We Want You with Us in California."

WHAT WOULD YOU NAME THE BABY IF IT WAS YOURS?

A baby puma was born Sunday at the Bostock animal show of David Horsley, and is said to be the first animal of any species to see the light of day since the big collection became the property of the present owner.

Mr. Horsley is very busy now searching for a proper name, but with numerous friends ready to give a helpful suggestion he should have no trouble.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, June 7.

JACK CONWAY, for the past six months leading man at the R-M studios has been made a director and is now engaged in filming his first subject, "The Old High Chair." The story is one with an intensely human interest theme, dealing with the pleasant and unpleasant memories of a sweet faced gray haired mother as she looks upon the high chair in the attic and recalls incidents in the life of her family. The birth and growth of her children, their country's call to arms, the death on the battle field of the father and one son, the prosperity of one of her children who has gone to the city, and the gay life of adventure of another son who has made the sea his home.

Her retrospect is finally pleasantly broken when the latter son returns to his home to remain his mother's companion during the remaining days of her life. The part of the mother is taken by Gladys Brockwell, W. E. Lawrence and Elliott Griffin are two of the sons, Margaret Loveridge is the wife of one and Ray Myers is the father.

Prior to the time Mr. Conway became associated with this company he was leading man for the Bosworth company in the filming of Jack London subjects, following a stage career of a number of years. It is predicted that he will make a very successful director.

"The Woman from Warrens" is a two-reel Majestic subject being filmed under the direction of Tod Browning, and will serve to introduce Charles West, former Biograph leading man, as a Majestic player. In this Mr. West appears in the part of the young man who forgets his obligations to the shop girl he wooed in his youth, the "Woman from Warrens."

The woman learning of his perfidy finds him at a summer resort, where he is courting the daughter of the hotel landlord. She exposes him in such a manner as to cause him to realize his duty and become a man with respect to his word. Lucille Younge appears as the woman, "Billy" Hutton as the landlord's daughter and F. A. Turner as the landlord.

Powell Filming "Wolf Man"

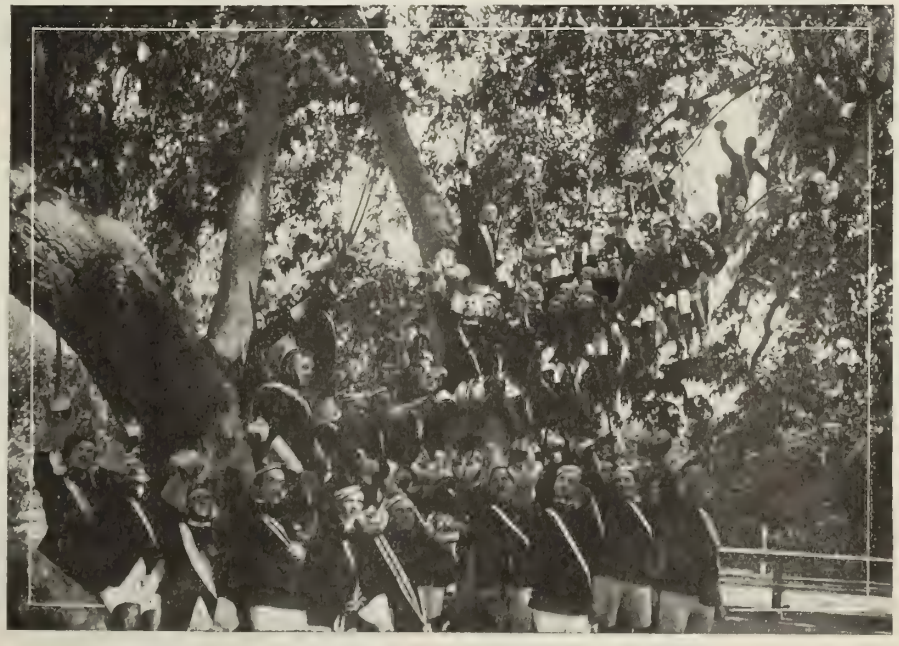
Reliance Director Paul Powell is in charge of filming the two-reel subject "The Wolf Man," from scenario by Chester B. Clapp, which is one of many dramatic scenes. Ralph Lewis appears in the name role, a man who has no respect for the feelings or rights of others, and by bringing about an explosion succeeds in gaining control of a discovery of an old chemist who had perfected a very valuable formula.

The explosion causes the death of the chemist, played by Richard Cummings, and a neighbor learning of the true happenings, aids the grand children to regain the formula which will revolutionize the pottery industry by the new process of obtaining glazing. Others in the cast are "Billie" West and William Hinckle as the grandchildren, Jack Brammall, Alberta Lee, and William H. Brown.

Director Frank Beal, a recent addition to the Selig staff, is producing a three-reel subject, "Smouldering," from a scenario by William E. Wing. This subject features Eugenia Besserer, the French actress who in numerous roles has proven emotional parts to be her forte. In this she plays the part of a mother, with sufficient means for her comfortable living, who, in order to prevent disgracing her only son because of her drug habit, permits him to be adopted by relatives with the promise that she will never make an attempt to see him or tell him of her identity.

When he woos and wins a girl of fortune and fame, the parents of the bride-to-be demand that the mother, in order that they learn of her, shall attend the prenuptial announcement. At the request of her son's adopted parents she deprives herself of the drug in order to be able to make the required appearance in society. This she does with success and so well portrays her good breeding that the parents of the girl give their consent to the marriage.

But on her return to her home, there is a collapse of her faculties and she dies. The supporting cast consists of Helen Aubrey, Will Scheerer, Fred Huntley and Frank Mayo. Mr. Scheerer was formerly a member of the Ideal Features staff and Mr. Mayo was with the Balboa company. Both are now permanently with the Selig company.



One-Reeler Features Messenger Boy

"Jimmie" is the title of a one-reel subject being produced by Director Guy Oliver. This features Roland Sharp, a Los Angeles messenger boy, who appears in that role and serves to reunite two lovers, played by Edith Johnston and C. C. Holland.

Joe King, late of the Gold Seal Universal company, is now leading man for the E. J. LeSaint Selig company, playing opposite Stella Rosetta.

Director G. P. Hamilton of the Albuquerque company is making a one-reel Luna comedy, "Lena's Heroes," featuring Dot Farley as a Swede servant girl, who cares for the children of a wealthy eastern family when they come west on a vacation trip. During her stay on the western ranch she learns of a road man, or highwayman, and induces all of the boys of the village—the store keeper, the sheriff's son and a cowboy, to attempt to capture him on the promise that she will marry the successful one.

The Albuquerque company will soon release a three-reel subject featuring Winnie Brown, champion relay rider, who captured a first prize at the Los Angeles Rodeo. This has been titled "When Quality Meets." A strong cast of western and eastern characters appear in this striking subject.

William Clifford, for three years with the Universal 101 Bison company, and recently appearing in character parts of the Gold Seal brand, has accepted a place in the stock company of Quality Pictures and is now playing the part in the "Second in Command," played by John Drew in the original stage production.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pollard, (Marguerita Fischer in professional life,) late of the American company studio at Santa Barbara, are now on their way to New York where it is understood they will accept important places on the staff of a feature producing company.

Centaur Studio Formally Opened

Lucy and Gloria Peyton, late of the Ricketts American feature company are in Los Angeles and will in all probability appear in MinA subjects.

Jack Pickford has departed for New York City where he will appear in Rolfe subjects.

With the arrival of David Horsley at Los Angeles, New York commuter from his most recent trip to the releasing metropolis of filmdom, the new studio for MinA subjects was christened. On this day the one company under the direction of "General" Fahrney did its first work at the new Horsley studio, Washington and Main streets, Los Angeles.

This company has heretofore been working at the old Universal studio at Hollywood. On the same day the double lens camera invented by Mr. Horsley was given its first use at the studio, which enabled the company to make ten scenes in about as many minutes after rehearsing had been completed. The comedy company is making one-reel farces which are given their real titles at the New York office. Included in the cast are George Overy, Lewis Fitzroy, Jefferson Osbourne, Goldie Colwell and Dolly Larkin.

The animal studio, or arena, of six parts is so nearly completed that it was possible for work to be commenced there this week when the second company was organized. This company will make animal comedies only. Last week, Director General Fahrney anticipated that it would be possible to start the three companies which will make two, three and five-reel features. It is the expectation that seven companies will be at work the latter part of July. Mr. Horsley expects to remain on the Coast for an exceedingly long period, having made plans to be here at least five weeks.

Work has been taken up at Universal City on the preparation of scenarios for the plays in which Nat Goodwin and other legitimate stage stars will appear. Mr. Goodwin will be the first legitimate stage star to arrive June 15 on the Coast, and will appear in "Business is Business," an adaptation from a French comedy by Octave Mirabeau, noted French playwright, which was translated by Robert Hiebens. The comedy was originally in three acts and will be filmed in five reels or more under the direction of the pioneer of the Universal lot, Otis Turner.

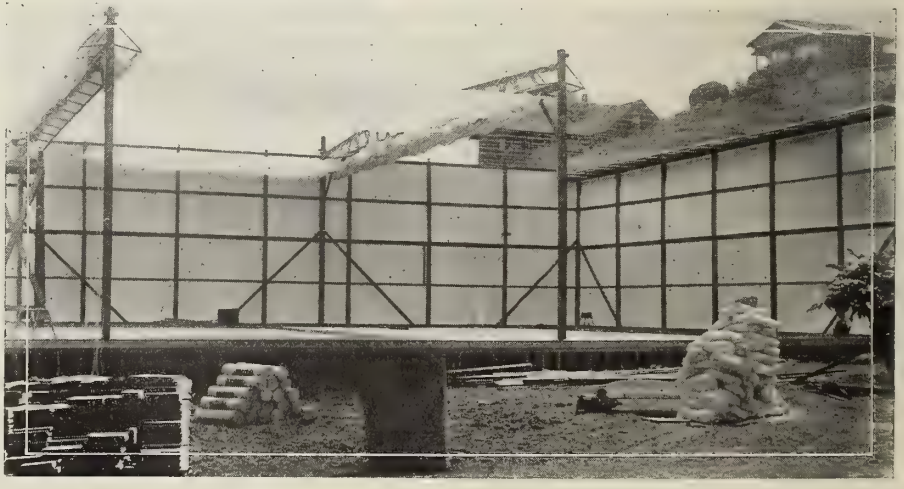
Julia Dean in "Primrose Path"

Julia Dean will come to the Coast at about the same time, and will be starred in "The Primrose Path," adapted for the screen from Bayard Veillers' four-act play. Both scenarios are being prepared from the plays by F. McGrew Willis.

Mr. Willis' latest subject prepared for the Burton King-Adele Lane company is the three-reel subejct "Out of the Flames." This is a story of a sacrificing woman who, when her father's fortune was swept away, went to work in a shirtwaist factory in order to secure funds to aid her husband to complete his college course.

This is a melodrama, and among the big scenes will be that of a fire in a shirtwaist factory. The set contains forty-odd scenes in a workroom, the top floor of an old building. The sacrificing wife aids all the women to escape and is carried out by firemen.

Her consistent friend who owns the factory meets his death in the elevator shaft when the frame pulls away and permits the cable tackle at the top to fall to the basement of the building. Included in the cast are Seymour Zeliff, Walter Belasco, Edward Sloman and Helen Aubrey, whose work has met with a favorable reception.



The Allen Curtis Jokerites are filming "A Real Motion Picture Marriage," in which the mother is ambitious for her daughter, who is attracted by the leading man of the motion picture company. The leading man invites the mother and daughter to the studio, where the girl takes part with him in a marriage scene supposed to be for the screen, but which later proves to be real.

The second Joker company under the direction of Bob Daley is making "A Pair of ?" This is a farce detective story wherein a wife employs a private man detective to watch husband, and hubby employs a woman detective to watch wifey. While in a Pullman car on the way to Reno the discoveries are made, and of course, all ends happily.

L. V. Jefferson, who until last week was with the scenario department of the Universal but has since associated himself with the Lasky company, has written "The Double Standard," which is being produced by William C. Dowlan, in two reels.

This deals with the question of whether it is proper for the husband to associate with other women when he feels the pangs of jealousy when he sees his wife with other men.

In the end the wife succeeds in proving to her life-mate that it is no worse for the wife than for the husband. Mr. Dowlan appears as the husband, Violet MacMillan as the wife, and others are Mildred Adams, Clarence Burton and Eugene Walsh.

THE NEW KEYSTONE STUDIO, LOS ANGELES, NOW NEARING COMPLETION

Hands Off, Warning to Parents

A character sketch photoplay of two reels entitled "Martin Lowe-Fixer" is being filmed by the Lloyd Laemmle brand company with Mr. Lowe featured in the name role. In this the aged man, Martin Lowe, induces his life-long friend to see the way of his folly when refusing to permit his daughter to wed the man of her choice.

The lovers are M. K. Wilson and Vera Sisson. "The Fixing" is accomplished by Lowe telling the father of the girl of numerous instances that have come to him which shows the folly of a parent attempting to name the life partner of his children. The idea is accomplished by a number of very pretty fade-in scenes.

MABEL NORMAND, RAYMOND HITCHCOCK AND MACK SENNETT AT THE KEYSTONE STUDIOS

The Gold Seal Brand company, under the direction of Charles Giblyn, is filming an Independence Day three-reel subject, "Jane's Declaration of Independence," by H. G. Stafford of the Universal staff. Jane is in love with a poor, but brave and worthy lieutenant of the U. S. Army, but he is unable to trace his ancestry back to the revolutionary days, as is possible for the family of the girl.

Furthermore, the young lieutenant has no standing in society other than that he has carved out for himself. The father refuses permission for the marriage, and the daughter, learning that her lover is to be transferred from his western fort to the Philippines, where he is to be advanced in rank, decides upon immediate action and declares her independence from the will of her father.

Many of the scenes will be made at the government presidio at San Francisco, and the company went there last week to film this part of the subject. This will be released about July 4. The cast includes Hobart Henley as the lieutenant, Agnes Vernon as Jane, Frank MacQuarrie as the father, and Gene Hathaway and Jordon Griffith as Jane's brother and sister.

"The Closing Chapter"

"The Closing Chapter" is the title of a heart interest story of three reels being filmed by the Murdock MacQuarrie company. The subject features Mr. MacQuarrie as an aged man of wealth who is carefully guarded by his maiden sister, who deceives him regarding his son, now dead, and his granddaughter and her mother, in her attempt to retain the fortune at his death.

A friend of the family, an attorney, learning of the perfidy of the sister and knowing of the sweet disposition of the granddaughter and her mother aids in bringing about a reconciliation which causes the aged man to revise his will on his death bed. Adele Farrington appears as the sister, Betty Nathan as the granddaughter, Cynthia Kellog as the mother, and Mark Robbins as the attorney.

The stock company of the Nestorites has been increased in number by Mr. Lyons' brother Walter, who hails from Beardstown, Ill., where the demand for Nestor comedies is far in excess of the possible productions.

The subject being produced by the William Worthington company originally titled "Homage" is to be released under the title of "Abedil O-Day." The name part, a character role, is taken by Mr. Worthington. The story is by Harvey Gates, and in this Herbert Rawlinson for the first time in his motion picture career appears in the part of the villain.

However, as in most subjects, this permits of the heavy being reformed. Mr.

MINNIE BROWNE, WINNER AT THE LOS ANGELES RODEO, AND DOT FARLEY IN "THE FIELD OF VICTORY" (United)

Rawlinson is appearing in this kind of a part in order that he may display his versatility. Other members of the company are Anna Little as the heavy's wife, Francis McDonald, late of the Santa Barbara company, as the crook, and Jack Dillon, until recently at the R-M studio, as a friend of the family.

"The Stranger" is the title given the story by C. Frank and being produced for the Big U Brand by Sidney Ayres, which affords Mr. Ayres in the name part, an opportunity of a gentlemanly crook characterization. In this photoplay the burglar is afforded an opportunity to bring about a reconciliation between a brutal husband and his wife when he breaks into their home to steal a valuable piece of jewelry given the wife on her wedding day.

"Just Jim" Filmed on Desert

The O. A. C. Lund special feature company has been at San Francisco and on the desert near Oxnard for the past week making exteriors for "Just Jim" the multiple reel subject from a story by Mr. Lund dealing with the temptations that befall a convict in his attempt to follow the straight and narrow path after his release from prison.

His path is set with pitfalls from the time he leaves the prison doors, and on all occasions he has the manhood to remain straight. Finally, because of his knowledge of Chinese smuggling conditions on the western coast, he is tested by the governor of the state. He makes good and becomes the most trusted employee of the secret service. The cast for this production has not been announced, but it is understood it will consist of four or five reels.

The Grace Cunard-Francis Ford "The Broken Coin" company are now engaged in making scenes for the next four two-reels, which can be made to advantage at one time.

Miss Cunard, who is writing the scenario for this serial, has completed twelve episodes, which have gone forward to Emerson Hough, who is preparing the serial story for the newspaper publications.

The Henry McRae 101 Bison company are home from spending a week at Santa Barbara, where they had the experience of being shipwrecked on a forty-foot launch on what is known on all sea charts as the graveyard of the Pacific, the channels near Santa Barbara.

The Universal company recently purchased the freighter "Aggie Norde," which was wrecked in a storm several weeks ago upon the rocks fifteen miles off Santa Cruz Island in the channel, and the company went north to make scenes about the wreck of this boat. After spending two days in and near the wreck the small launch used proved inadequate to battle the giant waves caused by the gale which was blowing and increased in speed from between forty and fifty miles per hour.

By this gale they were driven out fifteen miles from their course in attempting to return to Santa Barbara. They were driven onto the rocks where, after eight hours' work, they were successful in making fast by ropes and were able to get the life boats containing members of the party from one rock to another, and finally to reach the shore of a rock island.

The last boat to leave the rocks carried with it all the provisions on board and all articles that could be used to make the photoplayers comfortable. They were held prisoners on the island for two days and lived on the small quantity of provisions the boat contained, and on Friday, much the worse for their experience, were picked up by a tug boat from Santa Barbara. The last two days on the sea all members were strapped to the deck, and so rough was the water that it was impossible for them to make any pictures whatever.

Prisoners on Island for Two Days

The company succeeded in securing sufficient views that will assure an excellent three-reel subject to be released under the title of "The Toll of the Sea." In the party were Henry McRae, Wellington Plater, Sherman Bainbridge, Rex D. Roselli, Billie Reiter, Clarence Hodges, Marie Walcamp, Betty Shade and others.

The coming of Geraldine Farrar is to be made a notable occasion in Los Angeles. It is expected the operatic star will arrive here about the middle of June in a special car accompanied by Mrs. David Belasco, Morris Gest, Miss Farrar's personal manager, and Mrs. Gest, who was formerly Miss Belaso, Miss Farrar's parents, two maids, a hairdresser, French chef, chauffeur, man servant and secretary.

From the time Miss Farrar leaves New York she and her party will be guests of the Lasky company, and during her eight weeks' stay in Hollywood will live in a pretty bungalow. All will be paid by the Lasky company. The contract of Miss Farrar provides that she will work six hours each day, three in the morning, then two hours rest, and three in the afternoon.

The staging of the productions in which she will appear will be done behind screens so that the star will not be forced to bear under the inquisitive gaze of the public. A special dressing room has been completed in the Lasky studio, which affords her all the conveniences of the home there being a musical conservatory, dressing room and bath. During the eight weeks Director General Cecil B. de Mille expects to stage three productions, the first of which will be "Carmen."

Scenarios are now being prepared by William C. de Mille and Miss Margaret and Hector Turnball. Under the contract the Lasky company will insure Miss Farrar's voice against any injury, and she will not take part in any scenes in which she will be imperiled in any way. The cost of her services during the eight weeks of thirty-six hours each will be two dollars per minute.

The scenario department of the Lasky company has been moved to a new portion of the grounds, and is now located in the most secluded corner. The quiet location affords opportunity for much more satisfactory work on the part of the writers.

New Quarters for Lasky Directors

Technical Director Wilfred Buchlan and his assistant Richard Paul have been given new quarters in the Lasky studio on the top floor of a newly constructed building, which is fitted with skylights and windows on all sides. This advantageous location for Mr. Buchlan affords opportunity for him to watch the construction of all sets.

VICTOR MOORE, CAMILLE ASTOR, ANITA KING AND MRS. LEWIS McCORD IN "CHIMMIE FADDEN" (Lasky-Paramount)

Director General Cecil B. de Mille has taken up the production of "Kindling," an adaptation from the play and story of the slums by Edward Sheldon. Charlotte Walker is featured in this as Maggie Schultz and Tom Mergbin appears as her husband, Heinie Schultz. The young couple upon seeing the effect of the tenement district life upon children and the temptations toward criminal growth, prefer to live a childless life rather than bring children into such surroundings.

The wife, by the aid of a slum worker, is given employment where she may assist her husband in earning money that they may go West and take up a government claim. In her enthusiasm to secure the necessary funds, Maggie when tempted by a crook for a percentage of the spoils, aids him in robbing the house of her employer. She is suspected, but when she makes a clean confession for the reason of her actions she is exonerated and the money for her and her husband to come West is loaned her by the family.

The H. C. Mathews company, producing for the Universal, is filming "The Circus," in which Baby Earle is featured as the "Movie Queen," and the entrancing equestrian. In this all parts are taken by children and a circus is put on in child play.

Masterpiece Studio Leased

The producing staff of Quality Pictures is now complete in every way and the production work of the first subject, "The Second in Command," is going forward rapidly. The staff consists of Fred J. Balsoffer, general manager; Charles (Feature) Abrams, business manager; William Bowman, director; William Alder, in charge of photographing; and the stock company is composed of Francis X. Bushman as star; Margaret Snow, leading woman; William Clifford, characters; Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar, Paul Byron and Marcia Moore. The company has built a 40 foot by 60 foot stage on the Soldiers' Home grounds at Sawtelle, and a Boer village of thirty houses has been built for the battle scenes.

This the first release of the company will be made on the Metro program the latter part of June.

The Masterpiece studio has been leased by Ideal Features, Inc., and they will move there on June 10, and they expect to make that the permanent home of the company. The Masterpiece studio has been undergoing many changes and it has practically been rebuilt. When completed it will have three stages each 60 feet by 100 feet, one of which will be enclosed and fitted with all modern electrical appliances for night exposures.

This week Ideal Features, under the direction of Carl Levines, is filming "The Secret Agent," an adaptation from the recent story by Arthur Stringer in "The Saturday Evening Post." This is a story of an international crook, who is finally captured by the federal secret service after two years. Lindsay Hall and Henry Aldridge appear as the crooks. Norbart Wiles and Hal Wilson as the detectives and Edna Payne and Marcell Spencer appear in important parts.

Fannie Ward has arrived at the Lasky studio with fourteen trunks and excess baggage bills aggregating $270, and will be under the direction of George Melford in "The Marriage of Kitty." The supporting cast will consist of Jack Dean, Cleo Ridgley, Tom Fohrman, Mrs. Lewis McCord and Robert Morris.

Brings Out "Bad" Man's Good Points

Jack P. McGowan will become a new member of the Lasky directing staff on June 7. Mr. McGowan has been with the Kalem company at Glendale for the past several years, and is one of the pioneer producers of the West Coast. For the past six months he has been directing the productions of the railway series, "The Hazards of Helen," featuring Helen Holmes, and is still forced to wear plaster Paris casts and do the directing from his automobile as the result of a fall from a telephone pole early in November.

Mr. McGowan's first production will be "Blackbirds," a detective story in which Laura Hope Crews will be featured. The entire cast for the production has not been announced.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

REDISTRICTING OF WORLD FILM EXCHANGES

AT a recent meeting of the World Film division managers, territories were re-apportioned by Harry C. Drum, who has been assistant general manager of the World Film Corporation for the past four weeks. Mr. Drum has the general supervision of the World Film business activities and has entire charge of the branch offices.

The country is now divided into five sections, with division managers as follows:

HARRY C. DRUM

Eastern, George J. Schaefer, New York City; East Central, D. Palmer, formerly of Denver, Cleveland; West Central, W. R. Scates, an old General Film man, Chicago; Western, W. W. Drum, San Francisco, and Southern, E. Auger, New Orleans.

Mr. Drum left New York Tuesday, June 8, for Chicago. From there he will go to Cleveland and install Palmer officially in his new position.

Before leaving Mr. Drum outlined the World Film policies.

"There seems to have been an unfortunate suspicion on the part of the misinformed," he said, "to the effect that the World Film corporation was doing business on a theoretical basis. That is not so. The World Film corporation is today operating on better business policies than any other company in the business. We have installed business systems and business methods. For instance, here are letters which have been sent out to all the branch managers, covering every possible difficulty and outlining their policies."

Here Mr. Drum showed the letters. While he felt that their text concerned only the World Film corporation and its employees, it is only fair to say that the letters lived up to what he said about them.

"We have the exchanges very well systematized now," he went on, "and no one man has an impossible amount of work to do. The exchanges are grouped by fives. I only do business with the five division managers. Each division manager has supervision over five exchanges. So we can all keep a sharp eye over our prospects.

"We impress on our employees the chance for advancement. One of our exchange managers started last September as a shipping clerk. We never tell any employe to do anything without also telling him how to go about it. For instance we don't write an exchange manager and tell him to get more business; we tell him how to get more business."

ESLOW SIGNS BIG CONTRACT FOR U SERVICE

WHAT J. A. Eslow, New England manager, calls "the largest service contract ever signed in this country," was the plum the Universal pulled out of the situation regarding the new Strand theatre in Providence, R. I.

As told in a recent issue of the NEWS, all the big fellows were after the service at this theatre. The Strand opened June 12, with C. H. Williams as manager.

HATCH MANAGES V-L-S-E IN ST. LOUIS

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by The Big Four of the establishment of a St. Louis office in charge of S. W. Hatch, who is favorably known to most of the exhibitors in the Middle West.

The V-L-S-E St. Louis office is permanently located at 3630 Olive street, and exhibitors in St. Louis and its immediate territory will obtain all of their booking through that office.

PELSWEIG NOW WITH UNITED BOOKING

SIMON PELSWEIG, formerly with the Electric Theatre Supply Company, Philadelphia, is now representing the United Booking Offices, 227 North Thirteenth street, in their district of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New York, District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

THOMPSON ENTERTAINS VAN LOAN AND MRS. VAN LOAN

H. H. VAN LOAN and Mrs. Van Loan, a star with the Universal, passed through Cleveland last week en route from New York to Los Angeles.

While in Cleveland they were guests of C. G. Thompson, manager of the Victor Film service.

JULES BURNSTEIN OF PATHE WAS CIRCUS AND THEATRICAL MAN

JULES BURNSTEIN, manager of Pathé's New York booking office on Twenty-third street, is one of the best known exchange men in the business. He was born in New York in 1870 and practically his entire business life has been spent in the theatrical and motion picture lines.

Years ago he had charge of the advertising car of the Walter L. Main circus, whence he graduated to become a theatre owner in Jamestown, N. Y. Then he put out road shows of his own for several years, which was the cause of his breaking into the film business inasmuch as he exhibited films as "fillers in."

Then he became associated with Herbert Miles, of Miles Brothers, and later was the secretary of the old Electrograph company. These followed a connection with the Kessel and Baumann interests, which was the means of his eventually going with the Mutual.

He was with the World Film when Pathé secured him about two years ago. He has a large and fertile territory in the metropolitan district and its environs, and his exchange has consistently been a top-notch producer.

SCATES VISITS NEW YORK

W. R. SCATES, central division manager of the World Film corporation, is in New York from Chicago, where he makes his headquarters.

Mr. Scates reports that World Film features in his territory are enlisting increasing patronage at the hands of exhibitors and the public. He has a practical grip of the film business and knows its needs.

EXCHANGE NOTES FROM THE QUAKER CITY

THE meeting of exchange managers called by George Beihoff of The World Film corporation has crystallized into a small banquet which will take place next Thursday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford.

Over the "walnuts and wine" topics of general interest to the film industry will be touched upon and a permanent organization is expected to materialize.

J. E. Hennessy, general manager of the General Film company, is spending this week in a business trip through the state, going as far west as Pittsburgh.

J. F. Gill of the same company has just returned from a successful trip for the "General" through the South, while T. L. Vandyke has been in New York in the interest of the firm.

The Paramount Pictures corporation through H. Givens reports their largest booking at present are on "Hypocrites!" and "The Eternal City."

The Philadelphia office of the V-L-S-E, with J. S. Hebrew in charge, is so rushed it is almost impossible to keep up with orders.

"The Sporting Duchess," the Lubin Liberty Bell release for June 7, will have its premiere at the Arcadia, A. G. Boyd's new theatre at Sixteenth and Chestnut streets.

The Pathe Exchange is so rushed with orders that H. G. Atwood, the manager, doubled the working force in the accounting department.

BAMBERGER TAKES CHARGE OF WORLD FILM IN CAPITAL

LEON J. BAMBERGER has taken up the managerial reins of the Washington, D. C., office of the World Film corporation. He goes there direct from New York, where he was close to the official staff of the head offices and thus comes well equipped to make the World Film productions a power in his territory.

"Efficiency is the science of straight lines and short cuts," he commented, "or as Harrington Emerson says, 'Efficiency is the science of doing a thing the best possible way in the least possible time and at the lowest expense.' Moreover, it is not the following out of forms or systems. A better name for efficiency is common sense. It is this that brings the best results."

With his genial manner and excellent business qualifications, the new manager at the World Film offices promises to make himself felt in the Capital City.

FRESH CONTRACTS GAINED FOR "DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

J. G. CONNER, of the North American Film Corporation, with headquarters in the Indianapolis Mutual Film Company office, reports that he has closed contracts with twelve of the leading theatres in Indianapolis for "The Diamond from the Sky," and has good prospects to close contracts with twenty more theatres.

UNIVERSAL AND GENERAL EXCHANGES WILL HAVE OWN BUILDINGS IN BOSTON

PROOF of the fact that the motion picture business is growing as fast in New England as in any other section of the country is shown in the announcement of plans by two big exchanges for the construction in Boston, of two buildings to be devoted solely to their interests.

So large has the business of both the Universal and the General Film exchanges grown in that territory, that separate buildings for the work have become necessary.

The Universal's building is to be three stories in height, constructed of reinforced concrete and devoted on the first floor to general offices and exhibition room, on the second to advertising offices and on the third to films.

The exhibition room will seat one hundred and a feature of the film floor will be twenty vaults for the storage of films. The structure will cost $50,000 and will be located on Pleasant street, near Piedmont. It will be ready for use about September 1. J. A. Eslow, manager of the New England Universal Film Exchange, points out that floor space in the new building will about double that in the old quarters at 1100 Boylston street.

He also says that the need of a new building is imperative, as illustrated in the fact that the Universal has a lease of its present quarters with three years still to run. Albert S. Schaller is assistant manager.

The General's new home will be constructed at Ferdinand and Isabella streets, upon the site of an old Presbyterian church. The building will be two stories, with a basement. On the ground floor, where the offices will be located, there will be an exhibition room with a pitch floor and a seating capacity of two hundred. Occupancy is expected about the first of September.

These announcements also show a tendency of the film business in Boston to locate on or near Pleasant street. At present the Universal is far uptown in the Back Bay, and the General far downtown in the commercial district. Pleasant street already is the home of the United, the Famous Players and other services.

FRISCO EXCHANGE CIRCLES SHOW ACTIVITY; MUTUAL PLANS NEW BUILDING

THE Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy street, San Francisco, has just finished a complete remodeling of its entire quarters, and has one of the finest exchanges to be found there, both in regard to appearances and utility. Instead of having offices on either side of the big room, with a narrow aisle between, these have all been placed on one side, and a large balcony has been installed to make still further room.

New poster racks have been put in, the machine and accessory department moved to the rear, and the entire place redecorated. This concern recently installed a large fireproof vault and added a projection room in the basement, making it thoroughly up-to-date and much safer than the local ordinances require.

The Independent Film Exchange on Golden Gate avenue, George Chamberlain proprietor, has also been remodeled and many changes made in office arrangement to facilitate work. The recent automobile trip made by Mr. Chamberlain through the northern part of the state was a successful one, and he will leave shortly on a long trip through the south, visiting exhibitors.

The William Fox Film Corporation is still located in its old quarters at 107 Golden Gate avenue, but Manager William Citron expects to be able to occupy the place next door at an early date. Possession of the new quarters hinges upon the court settlement of the affairs of the California Kriterion Exchange, and the move will not be made until guarantees are made by the owner that there will be no trouble over the ownership of the fixtures.

The Mutual Film Corporation has made definite arrangements for the erection of an exchange building on Turk street, near the present quarters, to be occupied exclusively by this concern. Plans for this structure are now in course of preparation, and work on the building is to be commenced at an early date.

The building will be of fireproof construction throughout, and will be furnished with vaults for the storage of film and the very latest equipment for transacting a film rental business. Manager J. R. Crone advises that the Los Angeles branch will also occupy new quarters at an early date.

GREATER NEW YORK RENTAL OPENS IN NEW ORLEANS

THE Greater New York Film Rental Company has opened a New Orleans office with S. T. Stephens, manager of the Crescent City office of the Fox Film Corporation, in order to book Charlie Chaplin films. Mr. Stephens is maintaining joint headquarters at 200 Weis building, New Orleans.

In this connection, it may be noted that Charlie Chaplin is at the height of his popularity in the Crescent City. So popular is he with the fans that local exhibitors have had to accede to the popular clamor and give the public a Chaplin film every now and then. At this writing (May 25) Charlie Chaplin was on the bills at five theatres simultaneously.

CHAPLIN SUBJECTS INCREASE APEX BOOKINGS IN CLEVELAND

BURTON GARRETT, manager of the Apex Feature Film company in Cleveland, O., has moved his offices to 516 Columbia building. An increase in booking orders and an extension of business is responsible for the removal to larger quarters.

Charles Chaplin bookings have turned the Apex branch into a veritable whirlwind of business.

CANICK ENTERTAINS UNIVERSAL BEAUTY WINNERS

THE Interstate Film Company, the Philadelphia branch of the Universal, took much pride in the number and beauty of the girls who entered into the Universal beauty contest in that section.

There was keen rivalry at the several theatres and a hard decision for the judges to make. Mae Oliver, 3030 Wharten street, Philadelphia, was declared the winner, through the Star theatre. Lillian Baltz, of Reading, through the Gem theatre, was the other Eastern Pennsylvania lucky contestant. There were forty-two in Philadelphia. Eighty in the state entered in the competition.

The Overbrook theatre, of which Al E. Brown is manager, had offered a special prize if its contestant failed of the big trip. This prize, a two weeks' vacation at the seashore with all expenses paid, was won by Elizabeth Stewart, she being a close second for the big prize. The contest was run in Philadelphia through the "Evening Telegraph." On last Saturday all the contestants and judges were guests of the Universal manager, C. V. Canick. A motor car ride, a dinner, a box of Huyler's to each fair maiden were the pleasures provided when the decision of the judges was announced.

FOX GIVES BRANCH MANAGERS FREE REIN

WILLIAM FOX, head of the Fox Film corporation, is letting each manager run his branch the way he thinks it should be run. In other words, he is relying entirely upon the individual ability of each manager to handle the business of each office. Although each office receives the cooperation of the main office, there is no interference on the part of the latter as long as the managers keep up to standard.

The Fox Film corporation is enjoying a marvelous business in Michigan. Exhibitors say that the films are not only excellent, well produced and have good connected plots, but that the photography is of the best.

TRAGGARDH REPORTS DEMAND FOR JENNINGS' PICTURES

THE California rights for the film of the Adventures of Al. Jennings "Beating Back," adapted from the "Saturday Evening Post" stories, has been purchased by the Union Film and Supply company, with exchanges at San Francisco and Los Angeles, and O. V. Traggardh, president of the company, is making a trip over the state with the subject.

Mr. Traggardh is now in Los Angeles paying a bi-monthly visit to the local exchange. He reports booking for the Jennings' subject as being wonderful, with demands from all quarters.

GRAHAM SATISFIED WITH OHIO CONDITIONS

J. C. GRAHAM, president of the United Film service, who was in Cleveland recently, stated that he has received an excellent impression of business in Ohio, particularly in Cleveland.

W. C. BRANDON

Mr. Graham remarked that he was more than satisfied with the work being done by Walter W. Williams, manager of the Cleveland office, in the distribution of United films.

"The United is offering what we are pleased to call a short story program," Mr. Graham remarked, "and from the activity of our local offices it is evident that this sort of material exhibitors find worth while and their patrons find interesting."

MOVE GENERAL FILM OFFICES IN DETROIT TO LARGER QUARTERS

THE Detroit office of the General Film company has been moved from the Campau building, Griswold and Larned streets, to larger and more commodious quarters at 100 Griswold street, where it occupies 75 per cent. of the first floor space.

The new quarters are nearly 50 per cent. larger than the former ones, and are much better in many ways. All departments are now on one floor and are so laid out that they do not conflict, and yet are so arranged as to give the very best possible service.

All of the departments face the outside and thus have plenty of light. A. J. Gillingham feels very proud of the new quarters.

RAIN MAKES DELIVERIES UNCERTAIN IN NEBRASKA

RAINS that amounted to cloudbursts in Nebraska during the latter part of May, tied up railroad traffic in many instances and made shipments of films uncertain.

The troublesome conditions existed for about two weeks. Film men rested serene, however, as they knew the rains meant better crops, and better crops meant a better business throughout the year.

FRUMAN VISITS PATHÉ BRANCH IN PHILADELPHIA

R. F. FRUMAN, of New York, general manager of the Pathé interests, while on a business trip, spent some time in the Philadelphia offices last week.

WILL PLACE FOX FEATURES ON ALL TRAINS

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, special representative of the Fox Film corporation in Omaha, in a letter thanking the "World-Herald" for printing a story to the effect that all Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad trains of first importance will show motion pictures to their passengers on the dining cars adds the following about William Fox's intentions:

"It is William Fox's intention to arrange with all transcontinental trains out of Chicago to furnish a Fox feature service which will provide a star feature of five reels with a change daily.

"A feature used tonight, for instance, leaving Chicago, will be turned over here at Omaha to our representative who will deliver them another feature for their next night's run, same to be turned over at Denver, again at Salt Lake City and into the coast.

"If this proposition proves a success, Mr. Fox will arrange it on the lines running east of Chicago. We have under our management such well known stars as William Farnum, Nance O'Neil, Betty Nansen and Theda Bara."

PEEBLES OPENS PEERLESS IN DALLAS

THE Peerless Feature Film company, the twenty-third exchange in Dallas, has opened at 1919 Main street, with Harry T. Peebles, manager.

This new addition in the film ranks of Dallas will handle the output of the Gotham Film company of New York, and will secure about four big productions each month from the open market.

Mr. Peebles was recently manager of the Fox Film corporation office at Dallas, and some time ago, under the old arrangement, was manager of the United exchange office of the same city. He is an experienced film man, having received his training in the ranks from shipping clerk, road man and on up.

The Peerless will handle Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

NIELSON MOVES INTO LARGER OFFICES

F. D. NIELSEN, who is booking "The Spoilers" in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois (except Cook County) has moved into Suite 609, Schiller building.

This gives him larger office space to enable the handling of increased business.

GOFF IS IN CHARGE OF V-L-S-E IN CLEVELAND

A. W. GOFF, former manager of the General Film company, has taken charge of the Cleveland offices of the V-L-S-E. He utilizes the entire top floor of the Sincere building for offices.

TINKER JOINS PHOENIX FEATURES

CARL TINKER, formerly with Frank Vine when he was manager of the World exchange in Boston, has become connected with the Phoenix features.

Anna Pavlowa Finally Decides to Appear on Screen

Famous Russian Dancer Signs With Universal and Will Star in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," Auber's Grand Opera—Lois Weber Will Be Director

A NEW high water mark in the costliness of stars for motion pictures was reached last week when Anna Pavlowa, the classic dancer incomparable, came to terms with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, for appearance in a special eight reel photo-play. In this picture, Pavlowa's Ballet Russe will take part with her.

Despite the efforts of Carl Laemmle and George F. Kann to bring the dancer to sign on the dotted line, she was camera-shy, persistently refusing to enter picture work at any price. She did not believe that a picture could be produced in such fidelity to art as she knows art, as to give her pleasure in participation.

But she became convinced that the Universal would spare no money, no time, no brains to make a production meriting exhibition in the finest theatres in the country, with full orchestras, and other advantages. Then she told Max Rabinoff, her representative, to go ahead and sign the contract for her.

Carl Laemmle looked about for a director. "The Dumb Girl of Portici," Auber's grand opera, spectacular, full of action and affording much opportunity for Pavlowa and her matchless troupe, would need a director of supreme artistry. Lois Weber was selected. A woman would understand a woman. Lois Weber as writer of the scenario and director of the picture would please Pavlowa and in pleasing Pavlowa would please a world of eyes.

The interior scenes will be begun on July 3 in Chicago, during the engagement of Pavlowa in that city. A full company of forty-seven dancers will be used, in addition to many motion picture folk who will be added to the ensemble.

Following the taking of the Chicago scenes, a special train will take the troupe to Universal City, near Los Angeles, California. On this train will also be the large retinue of wig-makers, costumers, cobblers, and others who forever have to keep tinkering away at the outfit to keep it in proper exhibition condition.

On the trip Madame Pavlowa will have a special car for herself, her two maids and her secretary. At Universal City she will be provided with a bungalow with quarters for servants and automobiles.

Special outdoor sets elaborate to an extreme will be built at Universal City at an expenditure running into many thousands of dollars.

"CALLAHAN" IS A SELIG RELEASE

In the issue of June 5, on page 71, a review of "How Callahan Cleaned Up Little Hell" gave Essanay credit for the release. The line should have read: (Selig—Three Acts).

Prints May No Longer Be Sent East for Finishing—Large Laboratory Erected by the Company May Be Followed by Others—Building Nearing Completion

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, June 7.

PERHAPS one of the most important announcements of the week in film circles of Los Angeles, emanates from the Majestic-Reliance studios relative to the construction of a new laboratory with a capacity of 200,000 feet of positive prints per week.

The importance of this announcement is that it brings to this field a new feature of the motion picture industry, all companies having in the past had all prints made and finished in the laboratories in the east, which was partially due to the high express tariffs on film to the West Coast and later its return to the releasing centers in the East.

The laboratory will be located in a separate building now nearing completion. It will be one of the largest on the property of this film company, and give space for a printing room 26 x 70 feet, one of same size for developing, a washing room 25 x 60, drying room 26 x 70, and two cutting rooms each 40 x 60 feet.

The laboratory will be in charge of Joseph Aller, who has been with Director General D. W. Griffith for the past several years, being formerly with the Biograph company. William G. Bitzer, head cinematographer of the R-M studios in collaborating with Mr. Aller in making the new department one of completeness.

For the present it is announced that this laboratory will do all the developing of negative and one positive print of Majestic and Reliance one, two and three reel subjects, and make all prints for Reliance and Majestic Mutual Master Pictures and D. W. Griffith special features.

Lightning Zig Zags Realistically in a "Flying A"

Fourteen Attempts Were Necessary Before Camera Caught the Blue-Green Flash Simultaneously with Fall of a Stricken Man—Such Effects Seldom Obtainable

THE picture of a blue-green flash from the sky, apparently dealing death to a man in a terrific thunderstorm, was obtained by a "Flying A" camera man recently, as a part of the two reel subject, "Peggy, Lynn, Burglar," to be released soon by the American Film Manufacturing company.

Fourteen futile attempts were made to photograph the flash and the simultaneous fall of the man struck down. On the fifteenth effort, success crowned the photographer's perseverance and the picture of the flash now stands a monument to his ability.

The storm scene in the "Flying A" drama is considered by S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American, to be the most complete scene of its kind ever shown in pictures. A literal cloudburst, such as seldom is experienced in California, is shown in all its fury, raging and roaring mercilessly upon the heads of the film actors who were abroad in it.

The lightning effect is great. In addition to the realistic scenes above described, interior pictures are embodied in the film, showing a room lighted at spasmodic intervals by forked streaks of spit-fire from the clouds.

It has been years since such a storm descended on Santa Barbara, where the American studios are located, and the "Flying A" directors were quick to take advantage of it. Probably years will pass before such an opportunity again is presented anywhere under the right conditions for photographing.

ANITA STEWART, THE HEROINE OF VITAGRAPH'S "THE GODDESS," AS HERSELF AND AS CELESTIA, "THE GIRL WHO CAME FROM HEAVEN"

Offices of Selig Company in London Are Notable

The Furnishings Are Distinctive and the Equipment Makes the English Headquarters Models of Convenience and Efficiency

London, Eng., June 3.

A MEMORABLE day in the history of London's film area has been marked by the opening of the new offices of the Selig Polyscope company, at 93 Wardour street, a thoroughfare on which are located many of the leading film houses.

Although the offices have only recently been transferred from the old address in Gerrard street, everything is going as smoothly in the new quarters as if the entire staff had been there for months.

The new offices are outfitted in oak and a new feature is that a supply of fresh air is continually being pumped into each room. At the end of the general offices is the sanctum of Mr. Ingram, the general manager. From there, going along a tiled passage, one comes to the private showroom. This well-furnished and airy theatre is one of the best in the trade.

It is panelled in wainscot oak with a white frieze for relief. There is also a second private showroom for special views. Both are equipped with telephones; indeed telephones are scattered over every part of the house.

Two Simplex machines are installed in the projection room, the chief operator being Mr. Kempster, late of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., and formerly with the Kinemacolor Company. There are, in addition, large poster and publicity departments. The large film storage vaults, each will hold a million feet of film.

The private offices of E. H. Montagu are furnished in excellent taste, with photographs of Colonel W. N. Selig, Kathlyn Williams and various Selig players on the walls.

Some slight idea of the size of the premises will be gained from the following facts:

The depth of the building is 75 feet, with a frontage of 45 feet. The projection theatres are respectively 26 feet by 13 feet and 20 feet by 11 feet, the screen in the first named being a special metallized surface 9 feet in width. The larger showroom will be devoted to usual daily programs and the smaller to special viewing. The projection arrangements and installation have been carried out by Will Day and a Siemens motor generator (built at Stafford) of 4 horsepower, with an output of 75 amperes at 60 volts, will supply the arc lamps.

The Selig Polyscope Company and its European agent, E. H. Montagu, are certainly deserving of congratulations upon this latest addition to their organization, which now includes branches at Paris, Copenhagen, Moscow, Barcelona and Buenos Aires.

United Exercises Close Supervision of Its Films

A Committee of Five Passes Judgment on the Pictures Made by Its Companies—Each Studio Specializes in Subjects of Particular Length

WITH the advent of J. C. Graham as president and general manager of the United Film service a definite policy was immediately decided upon, and a system perfected to enable that policy to be carried out as rapidly and perfectly as possible.

The United producers were called upon to bend all of their energies toward the production of one and two reel photodramas without, however, allowing the length of the subjects to influence them in the strength of their stories or the elaborateness and careful staging of their productions.

After a careful study of the subject the United finds that it obtains the best results from its several producing companies by allowing them to specialize in the particular length picture which they supply to the program.

Some of the studios, notably the Starlight, produced by the Mittenthal Brothers; the Luna, produced by the Albuquerque Motion Picture Company, and the Superba, produced by the Crystal studios, stage only single reel subjects and use their full complement of directors and technical experts to make them as perfect as possible.

Likewise the other United brands such as Ideal, Empress, Premier, Lariat, Grandin, Pyramid and United specialize in two-reel pictures, making a determined effort to keep them in the feature class, as far as quality is concerned.

To further follow out its policy and assure the program of a constant improvement in the strength of its pictures the United Film service's main offices at 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, is made a clearing house and a court of last resort for every production completed by its studios.

A committee of five, consisting of experienced motion picture experts of recognized ability representing both the United studio group and the United distributing offices, sits for final judgment of the finished productions before they are viewed by the National Board of Censorship.

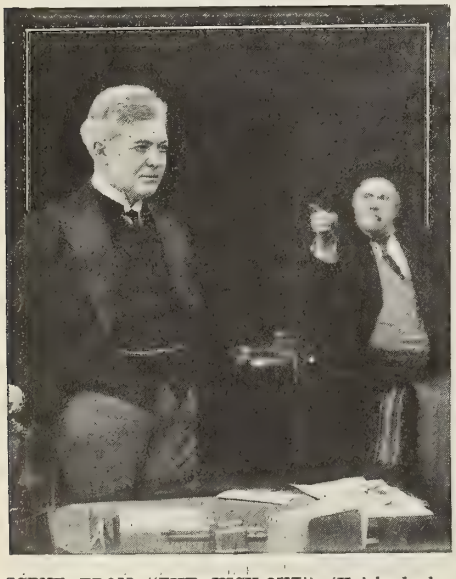
This committee of five makes a lengthy report upon every reel submitted for release on the regular United program. Its individual members confine their observations to the line of picture production in which they have had their schooling and a definite and valuable criticism of the picture covering everything from entertainment value, story, direction and cast to production and photographs is quickly and efficiently completed.

Copies of these criticisms are forwarded to every department of the companies interested, changes are made in the pictures were demanded and faults pointed out for avoidance in future productions.

GOTHAM ENGAGES CHAS. H. PRINCE "TRADE SECRET" IS SECOND RELEASE

Charles H. Prince, for a number of years with Cohan & Harris, Klaw & Erlanger and the Shuberts, who is now playing his third picture engagement with the B. A. Rolfe company, supporting William Faversham in "The Right of Way," has been engaged by The Gotham Film company for its next release.

The second release of The Gotham Film company, "A Trade Secret," dramatized from the story of the same name, by Alfred M. Pote, which appeared in the "All Story-Cavalier" magazine, will give the picture fan an opportunity to see for the first time one of Broadway's best known actors, Frederic de Belleville. Co-starring with him is Betty Marshall, the Gotham Fashion Plate, who is equally well known to Broadway theatre-goers through her many appearances in musical comedy.



In the story itself there is an automobile chase in which a brand new car is wrecked, a vivid motor boat scene in which the steering wheel is shot from the operator's hands, wrecking the boat. The climax comes when a houseboat is blown to atoms, endangering the lives not only of Mr. de Belleville and Miss Marshall, but also the supporting members of the cast.

PUBLICITY AND TRADE PAPER MEN DINE; RUBY PRESIDES

A little get-together dinner to the incoming staff at the New York office of the "Billboard," was held on Wednesday, June 2 at the Hotel Hermitage, New York City, engineered by Leon J. Rubinstein, the Thanhouser publicity and advertising manager.

When the demi-tasses came in, Messrs. Rubinstein, Page and Evans made short informal speeches.

It was planned to hold other similar dinners in the future with publicity and advertising men and trade paper representatives as the participants. Those at the dinner were: Leon J. Rubinstein, Mr. Page, Mr. Evans, Joe Brandt, William A. Johnston, E. Kendall Gillette, Arthur Leslie, William Leslie Barry, Mr. Cavanaugh, Nat Rothstein, Paul Gulick, George Henken, Tarleton Winchester, Peter Schmid, George D. Proctor, W. P. Milligan, M. E. Hoffman and J. Milligan.

SCENE FROM "THE KICK-OUT" (Knickerbocker Star Feature)

HOLDING IS NOW UNDER EXCLUSIVE CONTRACT WITH FAMOUS

Thomas Holding, whose portrayal of David Rossi, the lover of Donna Roma in "The Eternal City," singled him out for honors second only to those won by Pauline Frederick herself, has been placed under exclusive contract by the Famous Players Film company, in whose productions he will appear as masculine lead for an indefinite period.

Mr. Holding, although young in years, has had a distinguished career as an actor, and has won signal success both in England and the United States in a number of memorable roles. Among the prominent stars for whom at various times he has been the leading support, are Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, Sir Henry Beerbohm Tree, George Alexander and Edward Terry. For several seasons he appeared at the Duke of York's theatre, in London, under the management of Charles Frohman.

SELZNICK VISITS CLEVELAND

Louis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, has been visiting his old home in Cleveland, his mother living there. His visit combined business and pleasure.

Mr. Selznick took advantage of the occasion to arrange for the expansion of the World Film Corporation's Cleveland office, which is under the management of W. W. Kulp. The Cleveland office has done more than its share to make the World films popular.

"DR. RAMEAU" IS DIRECTED BY DAVIS FOR FOX

Will S. Davis, one of the latest recruits to the producing staff of the Fox Film corporation, is at work on the picturization of Ohnet's celebrated novel, "Dr. Rameau." The exceptionally strong company includes such well-known players as Stuart Holmes, Frederick Perry, known the country over as a brilliant dramatic artist, whose latest triumph is in "On Trial," and who makes his motion-picture debut in this picture; George Allison, an actor of finish and distinction; and Dorothy Bernard, who has already been seen in "Princess Romanoff," in support of Nance O'Neil.

FRED PERRY AND DOROTHY BERNARD IN "DR. RAMEAU" (Fox)

Mr. Davis, whose record as a producer is an enviable one, intends to put into the making of "Dr. Rameau" all his skill and knowledge, and promises that he will produce a picture which will be talked about.

V-L-S-E Grades Prices According to Quality

Class B Subjects, Consisting of Films Not Quite Up to the Highest Standard of the Company, Rent for Less in All Territory

WHEN the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay companies incorporated for the purpose of booking their big features direct, they expressed the intention of helping the exhibitor to a proper return on his feature exhibitions. They promised a new era in picture play showmanship and a policy of fair dealing.

One of the first steps, now that their organization is in good working order, is the announcement that, briefly, The Big Four are classifying their productions. They say, that while each feature on their program represents the utmost, allowed by the subject, in dramatic values, artistic photography and construction, some plays do not register, in their estimation, as high as others, and such subjects, while they must be plays of superior merit, to get a place on the V-L-S-E program, are rated as Class B.

Class B subjects will have a lower rental valuation. A maximum charge is placed upon them and no representative of the V-L-S-E will be permitted to accept a higher rental, no matter how strong the competition for service may be in his territory.

It means that exhibitors will have a standard by which to judge values and will be in position to purchase according to value and not by rule.

In further explanation of the stand the company is taking, Mr. Irwin states: "We want to make it clear that it is not a move in the direction of low prices for features.

"It is merely a question of putting proper valuation on film subjects. It must be remembered, that the four companies in the V-L-S-E are not compelled to find outlet for their productions on the feature program.

"If a production is not in every way worthy of a place in the V-L-S-E schedule, it is cut down and concentrated into a better small subject and put out as a general release."

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Molly Make-Believe" Will Star Marguerite Clark

The Famous Players Film company have secured the motion picture rights of "Molly Make-Believe," by Eleanor H. Abbott, for forthcoming production, in which Marguerite Clark will be presented in the titular role.

The play tells the unusual story of Carl Stanton, a young, well-to-do chap who is suddenly laid up with a painful case of rheumatism, while his fiancee, Cornelia, heartlessly goes South, handing him a circular of a "Serial Letter Co.," and advising him to take advantage of it, if he becomes too lonesome.

Stanton becomes interested in the circular, and decides to try the plan as a cure for his boredom. The Serial Letter Co. advertises that it will send real letters from make-believe people to invalids, shut-ins, travelers, and all lonely people. Stanton subscribes at once, requesting love letters.

In reply, he receives the most delicious missives, dainty presents, hot-water bottles, blanket robes, and even the loan of a fox-terrier, whose name, the mysterious writer tells him, is the same as her own last one. Stanton calls the dog all sorts of names, from the back of the dictionary, and it finally responds to the name of Meredith.

The unknown correspondent finally sends him a couple of pretty hats, asking him which she shall choose, and aiding his advice by informing him that she is little, and has red hair. Stanton, as he improves, grows fonder and fonder of the little unknown, whose fund of imagination, tenderness, delicacy and vividness of fancy appeal more and more to his nature, which now repels all thoughts of the cold Cornelia. One day the little author of the fascinating epistles calls, decked out in Oriental splendor and a black wig. She unveils, being much made up, and says she would like to beg off the last week, which he has already paid for, as she has a chance to go to her home in Vermont, and thought perhaps he would take a visit in person in lieu of the last week's letters. He is more charmed than ever, but frightens her with his ardor, and she runs off after pulling off her wig, and demonstrating a wealth of red hair. Stanton recovers, and goes to Cornelia, who gladly releases him. With the aid of a sharp detective, he shadows Molly to her Vermont home, surprises her there and at last finds happiness and the right girl in "Molly Make-Believe."

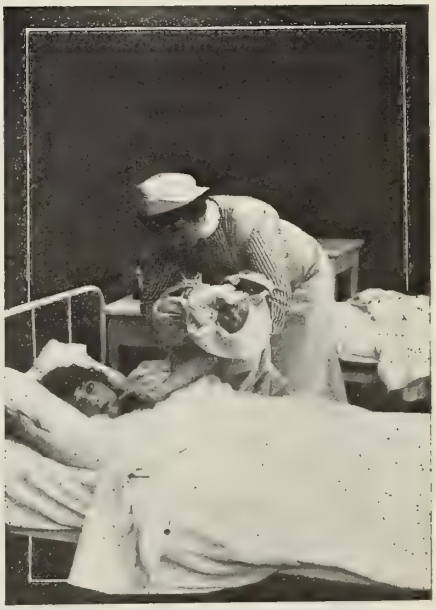
Basil King's "Wild Olive" Is Next Morosco Release

SCENE FROM "THE WILD OLIVE" (Bosworth-Morosco—Paramount Feature)

AS its next release, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces "The Wild Olive," a picturization of Basil King's novel, with Myrtle Stedman and Forrest Stanley in the leading characters, supported by an exceptional cast.

In presenting Myrtle Stedman and Forrest Stanley in the stellar roles of this release, the producers introduce a duo of noted screen and stage favorites whose splendid work together makes them an ideal team.

Miss Stedman is one of the most widely known motion picture stars in this country, and her popularity among the "fans" has been repeatedly indicated by contests held in various publications, in which she has come out the winner.



Only recently she received an unusual token of appreciation of her work from an admirer in New Zealand in the shape of a costly diamond ring of unique quality.

Forrest Stanley, whom Oliver Morosco loaned for the photoplay company's production, is the leading man at Mr. Morosco's famous Burbank theatre stock company in Los Angeles. Supporting the leads are such capable artists as Mary Ruby, Herbert Standing, Charles Marriot and Edmund Lowe, among others.

The release date of this production is June 24.

"HIS OBLIGATION" POINTS MORAL, SAYS MISS GREENWOOD

That pictures of the right kind point strong moral lessons is the belief of Winifred Greenwood, a film favorite appearing in the "Flying A" releases of the American Film Manufacturing Company.

WINIFRED GREENWOOD IN "HIS OBLIGATION" (American)

As an example of what she believes to be a picture of the right kind, Miss Greenwood designates "His Obligation," in which she herself is the star.

"His Obligation," released June 14, deals with the woes of a girl who, through absolute ignorance of the ways of the world, allowed herself to be made a plaything by a certain male social parasite.

BEAUTIFUL ADELE KLAER JOINS UNITED PROGRAM

Adele Klaer has joined the United program. For several seasons she played with Mansfield. She has played in stock for several years. She is also an artist.

Just to prove her versatility, Miss Klaer will appear in comedies, deviating for the first time from the purely dramatic.

Miss Klaer played with Mansfield in "Boucaire." Later she appeared in "The Sign of the Cross."

LENORE ULRICH TO APPEAR WITH CYRIL MAUDE

As the initial vehicle for the well known theatrical star, Cyril Maude, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company has selected "As the Years Go By," conceded to be the biggest production ever attempted at the Morosco-Bosworth studios.

The drama embraces the world wanderings of a poet-souled adventurer, and will accordingly present scenes typical of every clime and people. One of the innumerable details taxing the resource of the directors is the special train which will take a small army of principals and extras to the Imperial Valley, California, for the desert scenes alone.

To appear opposite Mr. Maude, the producers have selected Lenore Ulrich, the prominent star of "The Bird of Paradise," whose first motion picture subject "Kilmeny," produced by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company, will be released the latter part of July. Other prominent artists will be included in the exceptional cast for "As the Years Go By," among which is "Bill" Desmond, the popular matinee idol.

"HEARTS AND THE HIGHWAY" VISUALIZES ENGLISH HISTORY

The five-part Blue Ribbon feature, "Hearts and the Highway," added to the June releases of the V-L-S-E, is a picturization from the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's historical novel of the same name.

It was produced under the direction of Wilfred North, with an all-star cast that includes Lillian Walker, Darwin Karr, Donald Hall, L. Rogers Lytton, Charles Kent, Rose Tapley, Charles Eldridge, Ned Finley, Harry Northrup, Charles Wellesley, Anders Randolf and William Gilson.

LILLIAN WALKER AND DARWIN KARR IN "HEARTS AND THE HIGHWAY" (V-L-S-E)

The action takes place during the reign of King James II, and is a vivid presentation of the plots, counterplots and intrigues that marked that eventful period in the history of England.

During the run of this feature in the Vitagraph theatre in New York City, it attracted capacity audiences, and by virtue of its rapid action, sustained interest and the popular nature of the subject, it well merits a place among the V-L-S-E releases for this month.

Active Baron Insists Upon Appearing in Kalem Film

Nobleman, Kept From Fight Zone by Unfeeling Allies, Decides to Battle with New York Night Life in "Maxim's at Midnight."

A NOBLEMAN—a real sure-enough baron, whose family is related to Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria—took part in Kalem's four-act production "Maxim's at Midnight."

His name is Baron Hans von Ringhofer, and he hails from Bohemia, Austria. Lest the reader be tempted to venture an assertion that the baron would be spending his time to better advantage by fighting for his country, it might be stated that this is exacly what he thinks. But for the blockade maintained by an unfeeling group of allies, Baron Ringhofer would even now be in the trenches.

Prior to the war, the nobleman regularly received remittances from abroad, and was one of Maxim's best patrons. The present conflict having stopped his remittances, Baron Ringhofer proved that he was not averse to earning his own livelihood. As "Fritz Osborne," he has taken part in several Broadway productions.

Upon learning that Kalem proposed filming "Maxim's at Midnight," the baron insisted upon being engaged for the production. Unless he were shown in it, regular patrons of that famous restaurant would readily see that the feature was not imbued with real Maxim's atmosphere. Since it was Kalem's determination to make this four-act production correct in every detail, the baron was engaged.

In the accompanying illustration, Baron Ringhofer is the gentleman standing behind the girl on the extreme left.

THE REVELRY IN "MAXIM'S AT MIDNIGHT" (Kalem Feature)

Roskam Pleased with Outlook of Eclipse Company

Former President of Life Photo Is Identified with Concern Prepared to Handle Negative Developing and Positive Printing Orders with Despatch

EDWARD M. ROSKAM, president of the Commercial Motion Pictures Company since its inception three years ago, and president of the Life Photo Film Company since it started about a year and a half ago, has resigned his connection with the two companies.

Mr. Roskam is now general manager of and an officer in the Eclipse Film Laboratories, a new company which has leased the factory of the Commercial Motion Pictures Company at Grantwood, N. J., for six months. The company has offices in room 1,005 in the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

"We will do a commercial business in developing and printing," said Mr. Roskam. "Our motto will be quality first. I feel that my years of experience in the laboratory end of the business and my standing in the trade have justified me in this move. The factories have a capacity of 300,000 feet of film a week without any over-time work. By working over-time we can turn out 500,000 feet of film a week without trouble.

"So the Eclipse Film Laboratories are prepared to handle negative developing and positive printing orders with attention and despatch.

"Besides making extensive improvements essential to turning out perfect negatives and positive prints, we have had installed two fireproof film vaults capable of storing 80,000 feet of negatives and positives.

"The quality of our negative developing, positive printing and titles will be excelled by no manufacturer in the film industry, and our prices, which include toning and tinting compare favorably with their lowest estimates.

"The fact that such concerns as the World Films Corporation, B. A. Rolfe Pictures Company, Reliable Film Corporation, World's Comedy Stars, Metro Pictures Corporation, Life Photo Film Company and many others are now listed amongst our satisfied customers is the surest evidence of our position in the trade."

"Birth of Nation" Can Now Be Shown In Boston

AMONG the colored brethren in Boston joy reigneth not. Nor can they be blamed for sadness. For eight long weeks they fought tooth and nail against "The Birth of a Nation." Peaceable mass meetings were followed by protests to the mayor and governor; these by riots and arrests at the theatre; and the whole movement culminated in the passage of a law creating a censorship triumvirate, which the negroes felt certain would chase from the screen in Boston, at least, the film which has aroused their ire, and which has been banned from Chicago.

The censors have slipped a cog. The three members have announced that they will not ban the play from that city.

This torpedo from the clear blue channel was fired this week Wednesday, after a two-hours' conference in Mayor Curley's office. Representatives of each side were given an hour to present their arguments.

The negroes showed a protest signed by 6,000 names; the attorney for the theatre, John F. Custisk, said he had the support of 15,000 people who had seen the play. The mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court, who comprise the censor board, had all seen the show since their first meeting of the week before.

The conference was secret, and at its conclusion the hundreds of negroes and others in the mayor's outer office were crestfallen when they heard the unfavorable announcement read.

That night a mass meeting of the protestants was held. The negroes realized that the censors of their own making had failed them, but the speakers intimated that there would be some other course to follow. The opposition has been aroused to a keen pitch by the board's decision, but W. Munroe Trotter, their chief spokesman, warned them that, whatever they did, they should be "very, very careful."

It will be remembered that one of the last changes made in the censor bill was to allow a decision to be reached finally by a majority vote of the three members of the board. But since the meeting in the mayor's office was secret, it is not known how the different members voted upon the question.

Meanwhile, the manager of the Tremont has issued a statement declaring his pleasure at the verdict, and his belief in the justice of it, and the film continues to draw big houses.

Claiming that they were not allowed to be represented at the secret hearing, the Massachusetts branch of the National Independent Equal Rights League has filed a petition with the censors asking for a reopening of the question.

To discuss methods for combating what they believe is the harmful influence of the film the Boston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people will hold a conference next Tuesday night. J. Mott Hallowell, a leader in the opposition to the film, in an open letter has counselled the negroes to take their defeat quietly.

Two score special police were at the theatre the night after the decision. Negroes were picketed in procession outside the door. There were fiery speeches and mounted police dispersed the crowds, but no arrests were made.

8 Snug Censor Berths Ready for Willing Applicants

THERE is a lively scramble for the subordinate positions in the state board of motion picture censors that were created by the new censorship law passed by the legislature that adjourned last month, and in this connection it was just announced by J. Louis Breitinger, chief censor, that all the employees of the board, as it operated under the old law, will be retained. There are eight new places to be filled, however. He announced also that there will be no changes among the clerks and others appointed by the motion picture manufacturers who, apparently, will be required as heretofore to employ their own machine operators and others in connection with the work of displaying their films for acceptance or rejection by the censors.

With retention of all the old employees of the censors there yet remain to be filled eight new positions created by the new law, and for these jobs there are scores of applicants. These employees are to be appointed by the censors subject to the approval of Governor Brumbaugh. The selection of them—inspectors and clerks—will probably not be made until the governor passes on the general appropriation bill, which will likely be in the present week.

It has been found that the legislature appropriated for the general expenses of the state an amount considerably in excess of the estimated revenues from all sources in the next two years, or until the legislature meets again in regular session. The result is that the governor will have to wield the veto axe rather freely on appropriation measures. Therefore, until it is known whether the full amount necessary to pay the salaries of the new employees of the censorship board will be approved by the governor, the appointment of these subordinates will be delayed.

It already has been decided that hereafter there will be three offices maintained by the censors instead of two as under the old plan. In addition to the existing offices in this city and Philadelphia, respectively, one is to be opened in Pittsburgh. This additional office is to take care of the business in the western part of the state, that of eastern Pennsylvania having already been provided for in the Philadelphia office, and that of central Pennsylvania in the Harrisburg office.

These offices must not be confused with the projection rooms for the examination of films submitted for censorship. The board will examine films at any part of the state that it deems advisable, though the work thus far has been done chiefly in Philadelphia.

Mr. Breitinger, who is chairman of the board of three censors, has been in consultation during the last week with Attorney-General Francis Shunk Brown regarding operations under the new act, and it is understood that things will be ready for the installation of the new system in a short time.

Ellis P. Oberholtzer, of Philadelphia, the new member of the board of censors, who was personally selected by Governor Brumbaugh, has been a newspaper man, at one time connected with the Philadelphia "Public Ledger." His appointment is not considered a political one. He is regarded as a man of fine literary attainments, but of course he is an unknown quantity as regards the attitude he is likely to assume toward the motion picture interests, to which censorship, as provided under the old law, was far from satisfactory.

WOMEN'S CLUBS URGE CENSOR FOR MICHIGAN

A state-wide campaign to obtain a board of censorship for motion pictures in Michigan was launched at the annual meeting of the city Federation of Women's Clubs at Saginaw, on May 27.

Sole United States Representative of the Feaster Film Company, manufacturers of the "3-F" machine, absolutely eliminates rewinding 687 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass., May 19, 1915.

"Motion Picture News,"
220 West 42d Street, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Last month when the time came that our Feaster Film Feed Machine was ready for the market, we took up the selection of a proper medium to reach the exhibitors throughout the country; and after much deliberation, inserted our first advertising in "Motion Picture News."

It is less than four weeks since our first advertisement appeared, and we have received upwards of a thousand inquiries requesting further information.

In a single day we have had one or more inquiries from exhibitors and others, representing each and every State in the Union, showing conclusively the value of advertising and the wide spread circulation of a magazine of the calibre of the "Motion Picture News."

It so often happens that the prospective customer is hidden away in some small town or city, that it would be a matter of physical impossibility to locate him and show to him the merits of the article which you have to offer. It is only through the medium of the well circulated, regularly published magazine that one is put in touch with the far away prospective customer, and it is a pleasure to me in endorsing advertising in general as one of the assets of modern business, to at the same time endorse and recommend the "Motion Picture News" as a splendid advertising medium.

Very truly yours,
BRYON CHANDLER, President.

Gentlemen:

We thought you would be pleased to know that we have had a great many answers to our advertising. Many more from the "News" than from any other magazine and we wish to compliment you on the attention you have given our work. It stands out prominently against that which we have received from similar periodicals. The promptness and courtesy which you have shown our requests have been appreciated. Certainly, you are on the job every minute. Sorry we cannot say as much for some of the advertising managers of your competition.

Dear Mr. Gillett:

Your issue of the 14th just came to hand, and I must say that I am well pleased with our ad., also the position you have given us.

We are also in receipt of several inquiries this morning, all mentioning your paper, and I am all the more convinced that your Accessory News Department is a valuable advertising medium. MICHIGAN FIRE MARSHAL WARNS AGAINST AISLE CROWDING

In his report for May the state fire marshal of Michigan makes the following comment relative to motion picture theatres:

"This office has recently received numerous complaints from different sections of the state, calling attention to the fact that certain owners of motion picture theatres were violating the laws in that they were allowing aisles and passageways during the performances to be crowded with patrons.

"Several of these complaints have been investigated by inspectors from the department with the result that a number of arrests were made and the owners fined. Under the fire law every chief is a deputy state marshal and as such he is required to assist in the enforcement of the law.

"The practice of allowing patrons to stand in the aisles and passageways is not only a violation of the law but is in itself very dangerous, and there can be no possible excuse for such violation, as every theatre owner is well aware of all the provisions of the law.

CHADWICK RESIGNS AS CENSOR FOR ALBERTA

R. B. Chadwick has tendered his resignation to the attorney general of Alberta as the first film censor of the province. He was appointed in September, 1913.

Although Mr. Chadwick gives as his reason for resigning the fact that he finds his work as superintendent of the department of neglected children too arduous to continue censoring films, it is generally believed that the action of the attorney general and Lieut. Governor Bulyea in permitting the exhibition of the Welsh-Ritchie fight films about two months ago is the real reason for Mr. Chadwick abandoning his post as censor of films.

The attorney general issued an order allowing the exhibition of the films and the lieutenant governor signed an order in council approving fight films generally. Chadwick has persistently opposed fight films and refused to make an exception in the case of the Welsh-Ritchie pictures. His resignation is the ultimate result.

F. B. Cole, chief assistant censor of the province, will probably succeed Mr. Chadwick.

1,000 ACTORS APPEAR IN VITAGRAPH FIRE SCENE

Nearly one thousand actors were used in a fire scene in the seventh chapter of "The Goddess," the Vitagraph "serial beautiful," which is now being released each week.

Ralph W. Ince, who is producing the picture, used one of the largest factories in Brooklyn for the scene, and practically all of the employees took part in the scene, which showed them escaping from the burning building.

Anita Stewart, in her character of "The Goddesss," was swept from the building in the midst of the throng of men and women, but declared she enjoyed the experience.

Los Angeles Censors Are Given More Power

ADDITIONAL power is given the Los Angeles board of motion picture censors by an ordinance prepared by members of the board, approved by the public welfare committee of the council, and passed at the regular session of aldermen on Tuesday, May 25.

This ordinance provides police power for the suppression of pictures that are not approved by the board of censors, giving the board power to have the film confiscated by the police department, and turned over to them, in the event the film has not been submitted for inspection. The new ordinance provides that films shown within the city must first be submitted to the board, and if found suitable, permit will be issued for its showing. In case a film is confiscated, it may be held by the board until the owner gives bond for $1,000 to assure the board that all future subjects will be submitted.

Heretofore the board has been without power other than to pass or reject subjects. In case of the latter, the members could recommend prosecution to the district attorney of exhibitors showing the subject. The board could not compel owners of films to present their subjects for inspection, nor did they have the power to fix any punishment of exhibitors who showed rejected subjects.

The board is purely a "charitable" organization inasmuch as the members aside from the secretary do not receive compensation for their work. Hereafter it will be necessary for them to grant at least 750 permits each month, which will mean almost continuous viewing of subjects. Judge A. P. Tugwell, president of the Los Angeles Exhibitors League is also president of the Board of Censors.

When the new ordinance came up for hearing, neither exhibitors or exchange men appeared to make protest against it, and it is generally believed none knew the matter would come before the council at this time.

Chicago Court Says "Birth of a Nation" May Go On

PRODUCERS of "The Birth of a Nation" won their long fight on Saturday, June 5, for the right to have the picture exhibited in Chicago theatres when Judge Cooper issued an injunction enjoining the city from interfering with its production. The court order over-ruled the action of Mayor Thompson in refusing a permit.

Judge Cooper, in making his decision, gave praise to the negro race and went into a discussion of the objections brought forward by those who oppose the exhibition.

The battle over "The Birth of a Nation" began many weeks ago when the first intimation of the things it portrays reached Chicago from Los Angeles, where it was produced. The chief objection to it was based on the ground that it would stir racial hatred.

Leading Chicago negroes severely condemned not only the photoplay, but also Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," on which it is founded. The film seeks to justify the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, the "invisible empire" of the reconstruction period in the South.

The court found also that the moment a fee for a permit is accepted in good faith, a property right is vested in the applicant with which neither the Mayor nor chief of police or any other city official may interfere without good cause.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker appealed the decision for the city. The enjoining order is not interlocutory, and the production of the film is not to be stopped pending the decision of the higher court.

THE WEDDING CEREMONY IN "PEGGY LYNN, BURGLAR" (American)

"HYPOCRITES" BREAKS RECORDS IN ARIZONA

The "tempest in the tea pot" raised over the showing of "Hypocrites" for the "censor league" in Arizona subsided into a strong commendation from the pen of Maitland Davies, critic of the Phoenix, Ariz., "Daily Republican."

Mr. Davies, who is a brother of Acton Davies, for many years critic of the New York "Sun," praised the picture as a lesson. It set a new house record at the Paramount theatre in point of attendance.

READING CONVENTION IS HARMONY MEETING

Event Is Made Notable by Large Attendance and a Spirit of Unity in the Organization and Good Fellowship Displayed by Exhibitors, Exchangemen and Other Members of the Industry—Association Will Continue Strong Efforts Against Censorship

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Reading, Pa., June 9.

UNANIMOUSLY approving the work of the joint legislative committee of film men and members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania in obtaining from the past session of the legislature the important concessions in the censorship law and going on record as determined to continue the fight against legalized state censorship until it is wiped off the Pennsylvania statute books, the state league's convention, which opened here Monday and adjourned tonight (Wednesday), decided to enter with renewed vigor a campaign to fight for the rights of the motion picture interests.

It is proposed to adhere vigorously to the policy of educating the people of the state to an appreciation of the fact that the screen—uncensored—has the same right to live as an uncensored press, and it is believed that when the public is brought to a full appreciation of that fact it will be impossible for a censorship law to exist in this state.

In attendance at the convention was Jacob William Binder, of New York City, director of finance and publicity of the National Board of Censorship, and he told a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that the national board already has taken steps to co-operate with the Pennsylvania League in explaining to the people, through the medium of publicity, the injustice of legalized state censorship.

Binder Speaks on Censorship Question

The national board, said Mr. Binder, as the first step in this direction has arranged to have Miss Mary Gray Peck, of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, appear before the Pennsylvania branch of the Federation of Women's Clubs and explain the evils of legalized censorship. The women of the state branch, in a mild way, endorsed the Pennsylvania censorship law, but it is hoped through Miss Peck to convince the women of the state branch that state censorship is wrong.

The convention opened in Rajah Temple on Monday morning with an attendance of several hundred persons, including exhibitors, owners and proprietors of theatres, film corporation representatives, exchange men and others interested in the business. State President Ben H. Zerr, of Reading, who with Frank A. Gould, State Publicity Representative, also of Reading, has worked night and day for three months to insure the success of the convention, presided.

It was brought to light by the report of State Treasurer Charles Segall, of Philadelphia, that although in the January convention in Harrisburg it was decided to apply for a charter in the National League, this had not yet been done, due to delay of some of the locals in paying their initial assessments. The convention decided, however, to apply at once for a national charter, to become effective on July 1, in time to permit Pennsylvania to be represented in the national convention in San Francisco in the middle of July. The matter of selection of delegates was discussed, but had not been finally disposed of by Tuesday evening.

Other important business included a decision to make the initiation fee ten dollars for new locals joining the league. A state constitution was adopted conforming to the national constitution.

Affair Not Lacking in Entertainments

The progress the motion picture industry has made in recent months in this state and the partial victories the picture men gained in the legislature in the past winter put all those in attendance in just the humor for a good holiday time.

The morning of Tuesday was devoted to business, but at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the amusement feature held sway again in the form of an automobile parade of 75 cars.

The ball was held Tuesday night under the auspices of the Reading exhibitors and trophies were awarded.

The Wednesday morning business meeting was an open session for exhibitors, exchange men, dealers in motion picture accessories, manufacturers and all interested in the film industry. The Wednesday afternoon program included sight-seeing auto tours and the convention came to an end with a banquet in the Hotel Berkshire in the evening.

The important Monday business session was opened by President Zerr, who introduced Mayor Ira W. Stratton, of Reading, who made an address of welcome which was responded to appropriately by G. W. Sahner, of Pittsburgh, first vice-president of the State League. There were speeches by "Live-Wire" Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, national vice-president, and others, including practically all the state officers, who, in addition to those mentioned, are: Second vice-president, Gilbert C. Miller, Plymouth; secretary, James Delves, Pittsburgh; treasurer, Charles Segall, Philadelphia.

Mr. Sahner, as chairman of the legislative committee, told of its work in obtaining reduction of the fee for examining films by the censorship board from $2.50 to $1; of obtaining the right of appeal to the courts from the censors' rulings, and the other concessions gained for the motion picture interests through the passage of the new censorship law.

In the Tuesday business session high praise was given by President Zerr, Peter Magaro, of Harrisburg; Treasurer Segall and others to the trade papers for their unstinted aid in the Pennsylvania fight. Mr. Zerr referred specifically to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS in this connection.

Some of the most attractive booths in Rajah Temple were occupied by: The Universal company, Pathé company, William Fox interests, Calehuff Supply company, Williams, Brown & Earle company, Greater New York Film company, and the Department of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania.

One of the cleverest exhibits was that of "Junior Chaplin," a youth impersonating the famous movie comedian. He was brought here by Isaac and Jacob Silverman, of Altoona.

fornia Motion Picture company, is now a member of the Los Angeles colony of filmers, and will soon take up the production of "Peter Pan" for one of the local companies.

Director Francis A. Powers and a company of Reliance players composed of William Lowery, W. Freeman, Matt Deverick, Elmo Lincoln, George Walsh, Daisy Robinson and Violett Wilkey are spending this week at Victorville making scenes for a western melodrama "The Bad Man and Others."

In order to reach the location it was necessary for the photoplayers to cross two deserts in autos and on horses. The story deals with the kind offices of a bandit who risked his life when closely pursued, in order to aid a woman dying with Mexican fever.

New Reliance and Majestics

A one-reel Reliance subject of the week is that entitled "The Choir Boys," written and being produced by Frederick A. Kelsey. This tells the story of two brothers and their various adventures in life. One becomes a minister and the other follows the path of least resistance and becomes a tool of robbers who enter the home of his brother.

Learning of this he tries to effect an escape and attacks all the other members of the gang of crooks. In the fight he is mortally wounded and dies in the arms of his brother, the minister. The members of the cast are Bobby Feuhrer, Ben Lewis, Paul Willis and Howard Gaye.

A story of innocence abroad is revealed in the two-reel Majestic subject "Children of the Sea," being filmed by George Siegmann. The children are the daughter and granddaughter of an aged fisherman. The daughter is induced to go to the city, where she first becomes the model for an artist and later makes herself famous on the stage. Her only daughter is born prior to the time she gains fame and is left with the old fisherman.

Later, when the artist, who loses his model, returns to the island home of the fisherman in order to use the second member of the family as a model, he is given a very unkind reception. Later, upon the arrival of the mother he becomes the hero of the family, as well as the friend, by inducing the child to remain pure by retaining her home with her grandfather. The cast for this subject includes Francelia Billington, Wilbur Higby, H. Moody and Joseph Henaberry. Miss Billington appears in the roles of mother and daughter.

How Money Sometimes Travels

"The Show Down" is the story of a youth who serves a term in a reform school and ever afterwards is tortured by his conscience when he breaks the promise he gave the chaplain upon his departure. Unable to obtain work he takes money from a shop girl who accepts funds from a drummer, who desires to get her in his power.

Later, the lad, unable to lead a happy life, returns the money, when he is successful in securing employment, and thus prevents the shop girl from becoming the victim of the bird of prey.

The children of the Majestic juvenile company are appearing in "Little Dick's First Adventure," being a detective story featuring George Stone as a user of the Sherlock Holmes methods in rescuing his sweetheart, my lady the stenographer who has been kidnapped and is hidden by those holding her for ransom in an ash barrel in the alley.

The ash man puts in an appearance at the inopportune time and loads the barrel on the wagon, human contents and all. The disappearance of this cause the members of the band of child criminals to run down the ashman, and they overtake him just after he has cast the barrel into the sea.

But the girl has made her escape and when the band see her in the flesh they come to the conclusion she is a ghost. Besides little George Stone the members of this cast are Carmen De Rue, Violette Radcliffe, Harry Essman, L. Perl, Jack Hull and Betty Marsh. C. M. and S. A. Franklin are in active charge of the production.

Crooks stealing the invention of a small town bank cashier that adapts electricity in the destruction of steel, make possible their successful destruction of the safe in the bank where the young inventor is employed. This casts suspicion on him when his apparatus is found in the rear of the bank the following morning. This is a one-reel Reliance melodrama, "The Silent Witness," being filmed by Sheriff Arthur Mackley.

The daughter of the president of the bank and sweetheart of the cashier, left her kodak at the bank the preceding day, and the shutter of this is accidentally opened by one of the robbers just as the building is illuminated as bright as day by the use of the steel destroying electrical apparatus.

When the film is developed by the bank president's daughter she easily proves the innocence of her sweetheart and fixes the guilt on the crooks. In the cast are Arthur Mackley, George Pierce, as the bank president, and Vester Perry, as the inventor, Claire Anderson as the banker's daughter and Mrs. Arthur Mackley as the banker's wife. Mr. Mackley appears again in the role of the sheriff, the two hundred and fourteenth time.

Mae Marsh, the D. W. Griffith Majestic star, has made her first stage appearance, she having been recognized in a San Francisco theatre, while in the exposition city last week with her mother. She was so generously applauded when seen in the Majestic subject "The Victim," that she was literally forced to make a short speech from the stage. Later the management presented her with a very pretty selection of orchids which she later distributed among her numerous friends at the R-M studio.

Fichtenberg and Oldknow Shine as "Supes"

Christie Entices Southern Film Men Into a Trunk Carrying Stunt Without Explaining That the Innocent Looking Object, Filled with Sand, Weighed 500 Pounds

New Orleans, June 7.

ONLY half the story of the adventure of Herman Fichtenberg and William Oldknow, screen magnates, has been told regarding their star "suping" parts at Universal City recently. The full story became known on Mr. Fichtenberg's return to New Orleans this week, and film men when they heard it all agreed that it was a joke that will go down in history as the greatest and funniest ever.

Herman Fichtenberg and William Oldknow, the latter manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply company at Atlanta, Ga., were innocently traversing the well oiled streets of Universal City when they were hailed by Al. Christie, director of Nestor comedies. Each was "ordered" to don laborers' clothes; given a truck to trundle and were instructed to deliver a trunk back of the stage.

Herman with his funny cap, and Oldknow looking like a guy, did very well in "A Day at Universal City," and after three or four rehearsals they were complimented by Director Christie.

All well and good. Now came the moment for real action, and Christie gave the order, "Ready!" (Business of Fichtenberg and Oldknow carrying the trunk.) It was a small trunk. A full-sized child might have carried the thing through successfully, but not so the two new and green supes.

Herman tugged; Oldknow tugged. Both put all their strength into the scene. The trunk didn't budge an inch; Christie cussed a blue streak. Five hundred persons, amongst them many exhibitors and exchange men, friends of the two, laughed anl laughed, until suspender buttons broke under the strain.

It is a well known fact that an object weighing in the neighborhood of five hundred pounds is rather a hard proposition for two men to tackle. When applied in copious quantities, sand makes a very good ballast.

After the laughs subdued, Christie explained the joke and proceeded with the regular order of things. Mr. Fichtenberg and Mr. Oldknow both got a dollar for their services.

Outside of this incident Mr. Fichtenberg enjoyed himself gloriously during his several weeks' stay away from New Orleans. He left New Orleans June 2 as a special escort to Mabel Jackson, the young lady who captured the Universal-New Orleans "Item" popularity contest, and has announced that he hopes Al. Christie doesn't read this issue of the News, for he has something up his sleeve for that practical joking gentleman.

LUBIN CARTOON IS MIRTHMAKER

A cartoon comedy, drawn by Carl Francis Lederer, of a somewhat different sort, and introducing a droll addition to the pen and ink creations of the screen, wil be released by the Lubin company on July 6.

The comedy is called "Ping Pong Woo." Ping is a Chinese urchin whose grimaces and gyrations are extraordinary examples of the camera's power to make a line of ink seemingly take on life.

Valeska Suratt Makes Aerial Flight for Fox Film

Actress in Aeroplane Drops Red Roses and Engraved Announcement Cards on the Astonished Boardwalk Crowds at Atlantic City

WILLIAM FOX has been keeping something under cover. Two weeks ago, Valeska Suratt made her motion picture debut under his management in a new, brilliant and sensational picture written by Herbert Brenon, which bears the speed-limit title of "The Soul of Broadway."

Miss Suratt has entered into her moving picture work with vim and vigor. She declares that she is "perfectly crazy" about posing for the camera. Just by way of giving her a good start, Mr. Fox, who is paying this spritely star a salary so large that it takes your breath away even to mention it, sent her up in an aeroplane on Memorial Day at Atlantic City.

From an altitude of three thousand feet Miss Suratt showered the boardwalk paraders and other celebrants of the holiday with two thousand large, red roses. To each rose was attached an engraved card, bearing the inscription: "From Valeska Suratt, 'The Soul of Broadway' to Atlantic City, with the compliments of William Fox."

E. K. Jaquith, the tallest aviator in the world, was the pilot under whose tutelage Miss Suratt took her first voyage into the upper air, has especially designed an aviation costume for Miss Suratt, in which the fifteen thousand spectators who lined the boardwalk and gave the Atlantic City police force all they could do to handle them, voted that she looked "simply stunning."

The hang of the story upon which the flight of the valiant Valeska was based, deals with the adventures of a chic woman of society whose enamorata she suspects is enjoying himself in Atlantic City with somebody other than the party of the first part. So what does the dashing heroine do but engage the lanky Mr. Jaquith and go soaring over the boardwalk armed with a pair of field glasses and discovers the perfidious person in question just coming out of the Alamac Hotel with somebody she hates to see him with.

Herbert Brenon, the director of the picture, has been acting kind of mysteriously all along about his sojourn in Atlantic City with the company engaged to support Miss Suratt, which numbers, among other well-known people, Sheridan Block, the aforesaid William E. Shay, Gertrude Berkley and other equally well-known players.

It was announced at first that Mr. Brenon had visited the resort for the sake of his health, as the Fox Film Corporation did not wish to announce just at that time the engagement of one of the most sensational stars who has ever appeared upon the screen.

As a matter of fact, the engagement of Miss Suratt to appear in motion pictures was only engineered after most complicated proceedings. It was, therefore, deemed advisable to keep dark the fact that this celebrated actress had consented to make her motion picture debut under the William Fox management.

"The Soul of Broadway" will be completed shortly, and is destined to make a new mark in the history of pictures.

In "The Soul of Broadway" Miss Suratt, so it has been figured out, wears a different gown for every forty feet of film. As the picture is a six-reeler, and will run approximately six thousand feet, Miss Suratt will have to wear at least one hundred and fifty gowns, each of which must be the last word in fashionable women's tailoring.

With each gown, Miss Suratt wears an especially designed hat, boots, stockings and parasol, and women's walking sticks. Ten automobiles, each designed especially to suit the exigencies of the scenes in which they are utilized, have been bought.

BRULATOUR WINS COMET SUIT

After a three days' trial before Judge Ransom, the jury brought in a verdict for Jules E. Brulatour and against the Comet Film company on June 1, 1915.

The dispute grew out of the affairs of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales company in 1912. Brulatour sued the Comet company for a balance due on raw stock sold, and the Comet company interposed a counterclaim alleging that Brulatour had made an agreement with it to pay it one-tenth of the net profits of the "Animated Weekly," which was put out by the sales company in 1912 in competition with the Pathe Weekly.

William B. Gray was the witness for defendant in support of the counterclaim. The plaintiff produced a number of witness, including Ingvald C. Oes, Herbert Miles and Edwin Thanhouser.

PIERCE BANQUET WAS A SURPRISE

On Friday evening, June 4, several intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Pierce tendered them a pleasant surprise on their fifteenth wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierce were lured to Reisenweber's, New York City, where a party of friends greeted them with congratulations. After dinner a speech by Julian M. Solomon, Jr., disclosed another surprise in the presentation of a pair of handsome silver candlesticks.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lakin, Jeanette Ehrenberg, Julian M. Solomon, Jr., Leah Beluck, George K. Henken, Margaret Ganss and Pete J. Schmid.

BERNHARDT'S LEADING MAN SIGNS WITH LASKY

Lou Tellegen, who made his first American appearance as leading man for Madame Sarah Bernhardt during her last tour, has entered into an exclusive screen contract with the Lasky Feature Play company, by the terms of which he binds himself to appear in a series of photodramatic offerings to be produced by this concern.

Mr. Tellegen's legitimate engagements are not to be interfered with unduly by the time devoted to photodramatic posing.

Mr. Tellegen will make his first appearance before the Lasky camera in Hollywood, California, this summer, and will devote a protracted period to this work.

Lou Tellegen was born in Amsterdam, Holland, the son of a Greek general and a Dutch dancer. He first went on the stage in his native country at the age of eighteen, appearing as Romeo and in Ibsen's "Ghosts." From Amsterdam, Mr. Tellegen finally removed to Paris, and there the young artist studied under Paul Pouret for a couple of years, after which he made his debut at the Odeon.

After a few days of this, however, he received a letter from Sarah Bernhardt's manager offering him a contract to appear with Madame Bernhardt for a short season in London and for the American tour.

Lou Tellegen became Bernhardt's leading man and remained with her until he produced "Dorian Gray" in London.

ASSOCIATED SERVICE WILL ADD CARTOONS AND EDUCATIONALS

CENTAUR ASSETS DOUBLE IN 12 MONTHS

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Centaur Film Company, of Bayonne, N. J., held recently in the company's offices, the following officers were elected: David Horsley, president; James Horsley, vice-president; Chester Beecroft, secretary; J. T. R. Proctor, treasurer; George J. Lounsberry, assistant treasurer.

The semi-annual report showed a remarkable advance in business transacted over the previous report. Three new inventions of David Horsley's, the double exposure camera, the Hosley step printer and the full reel duplex printer, with automatic light shift, were reported completed.

This double exposure camera has already demonstrated its capabilities and, commencing with the June 25 release, will be used in the production of MinA films. The Horsley single printer has been in successful operation in the Centaur factory for three months, and the duplex automatic printer will be ready for use at the Centaur in two weeks.

The new Horsley studios at Horsley Park, adjoining the Bostock Arena in the heart of Los Angeles, are now completed, and two companies, under the direction of Milton H. Fahrney, have commenced production. In one of these releases, the famous Bostock trained wild animals, now owned by David Horsley, will be used.

The financial report showed that the assets of the Centaur Film Company had more than doubled within the year.

Chester Beecroft was re-appointed general manager.

HINKLE MADE ASSISTANT TO MAGIE

Los Angeles, June 7.

Under the management of H. P. Caulfield, who succeeded George Magie at Universal City, additional innovations are being introduced that tend to improve the production possibilities of the mammoth plant. C. V. Hinkle, who has been here since the opening of Universal City serving in capacity of business manager of four of the companies, has been made assistant to Mr. Caulfield.

Mr. Hinkle is a pioneer of the film industry, and several years ago startled the members by making a multiple reel feature. He has been manager of several studios, head of several companies, and has served in every capacity in the making of pictures. He is particularly well qualified for the position he has now been given, as he has a very thorough and systematic manner of conducting a motion picture plant.

TWO WELL-KNOWN AUTHORS COLLABORATE ON A BALBOA

William Elliot and Ruth Roland are to play in a five-reel masterpiece called "Comrade John," which is to be produced at the Balboa Pacific coast studios for the Pathé exchanges. Two well-known authors, Samuel Merwin and Henry Kitchell Webster, collaborated on the scenario.

Both writers are the authors of numerous successful novels.

Los Angeles and San Bernardino, Susceptible to the Influence of Feminine Charm, Will Open Gates to Carload of Fascinators from East

Los Angeles, June 7.

ALL plans for the entertainment of the chaperones and young women from the eastern States who make up the party of the Universal Beauty Special have been completed by Moe Jonas and Buck Masse of the publicity department of Universal City. The plans are very elaborate. The party will be met at San Bernardino by a reception committee from Universal City and Los Angeles, and accompanied to this city, arriving at the Santa Fe at three o'clock.

Accompanying the Beauty Special will be Carl Laemmle, Joe Brandt and H. H. Van Loan, in charge of publicity of the special. The reception delegation from Los Angeles will consist of a Glee Club, Floral Boys, and officers of the Universal company, attended by the mayor and members of the chamber of commerce of San Bernardino.

Arriving in Los Angeles the visitors will be greeted by Mayor Rose and a committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, and immediately taken to the Clark Hotel, which will be their headquarters while in the city. Friday evening there will be a theatre party at the Orpheum, and Saturday morning a reception will be tendered the visitors by General Manager Caulfield of Universal City.

In the afternoon a supplementary set of unusual richness will occupy the main stage, and there a number of local notables will act as judges, selecting the most beautiful girl, who will become a star for Universal company. In this the local committee will be aided by Mrs. Champ Clark and other members of the party chaperoning the special train.

On Saturday evening a ball will be given in honor of the beauties by the 1915 Committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce at the Shrine auditorium. On Sunday there will be automobile rides to various places of interest about Los Angeles, with an elaborate dinner in the evening at the Nat Goodwin cafe at Santa Monica.

Monday has been set aside as Universal Day at the San Diego Exposition, and members of the party and Universal friends and officers will go to the California Panama Exposition on Sunday evening, remaining until Tuesday morning, returning to Los Angeles by Tuesday evening.

The guests of the Universal will be entertained with a theatre party at the Burbank Tuesday evening. Wednesday morning the party will depart for San Francisco, where three days will be spent at the Exposition, following which the special will leave for the East.

Dr. Dorsey Visits White Elephant Collector

Head of United Photo Plays Expedition in Trip to Domains of East Indian Potentate Sees Animals Valued at $50,000

THE second six-reel series of the Dorsey expedition pictures began its engagement at the Studebaker theatre, June 5. After Japan, China was the next stop of Dr. Dorsey and his party. The pictures taken in China make up the second set.

The United Photo-Plays Company, which is financing this expedition, received a shipment of films from India where Dr. Dorsey is now sojourning. India is the subject of the third series. What Mr. Dorsey did there is told rather interestingly in a letter which came with the film to Wilbur Bryant, president of the company.

"I had the honor of being the guest of His Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad, on a cheetah hunt planned in honor of His Highness the Aga Khan," reads Dr. Dorsey's letter, in part. "Hyderabad is the largest native state in India. The cheetah is a cross between a wild dog and a mountain lion. You can by this description imagine what sort of a thrilling picture we could obtain under the circumstances, with this royal dignitary as a host.

"His Highness was also kind enough to let us photograph his menagerie. This is his hobby—the collecting of strange animals and birds. He has a number of white elephants, which, I think, in our country would be valued at about $50,000. When I was looking over this collection I could not help but think of our friend, Cy de Vry, and what joy it would be to him if the Nizam would but donate the Lincoln Park Zoo a few animals.

"I expect to finish with India in about forty days more. While here we will join in a tiger hunt and an elephant hunt. In fact, this will take place next week."

This shipment and letter started for Chicago the latter part of March.

HADDOCK MAKING "TRADE SECRET" FOR GOTHAM

William F. Haddock began work May 20 upon a melodramatic and sensational five-reel photoplay which will be entitled "The Trade Secret." The scenario is adapted from a short story of the same name which appeared in the "All-Story Magazine." The adaptation was made by John B. Clymer in collaboration with Mr. Haddock.

Two well-known thespians are to be featured in this production. Betty Marshall will be the leading woman and the leading male part will be played by Frederick de Belleville, who is now appearing at the Empire theatre, New York, in Charles Frohman's revival of "A Celebrated Case."

There are many possibilities in the story for a photodrama of the most sensational character. The story lends itself unusually well to photoplay production and the scenario contains a number of climaxes. Mr. Haddock is putting on his production for the Gotham Film Company.

SEELYE INSPECTS PENNSYLVANIA TERRITORY

C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager of the V.-L.-S.-E., after attending the Pennsylvania exhibitors' convention at Reading, left on an extended trip through the Pennsylvania territory, and took the opportunity of visiting the Pittsburgh and Philadelphia offices of The Big Four.

Before leaving Mr. Seelye stated that while the volume of business done by these two offices was more than satisfactory, he expected that when they were in perfect running order, the business would double.

Universal Completes Foundation of Post Office

When the Structure Is Finished It Will Be Presented to the Federal Authorities—Postmaster Expects to Handle 10,000 Pieces of Mail a Day

THE Universal has completed the foundations of a splendid stone post office at Universal City, Cal., which will be turned over to Uncle Sam upon its completion. Postmaster Frederick Donaghy, who was appointed by the federal authorities recently to handle the great volume of business at the only moving picture municipality in the world, is now formally installed in his temporary post office.

Mr. Donaghy is also keeping an eye on the construction of the new post office. Mr. Donaghy now handles, on an average, five thousand pieces of mail a day. Mr. Donaghy is assisted by C. D. Low, post office inspector for the Los Angeles district.

The post office being erected at Universal City will be presented to the federal post office authorities around Christmas time when the volume of mail arriving in Universal City will undoubtedly reach the huge total of 10,000 separate pieces a day.

The present office is overcrowded, and is now being given a thorough overhauling in order to provide adequate accommodations for the expeditious handling of the mail.

Mr. Donaghy complains to his old Los Angeles friends that he is as busy as the proverbial paper hanger who lost an arm in the war, and subsequently was troubled while working with the itch. Mr. Donaghy says, however, that he has much to be thankful for in that the Universal cannot send its reels by parcels post.

Since the Universal made its announcement that famous Broadway stars would be featured on the regular Universal program, Mr. Donaghy complains that the volume of his mail has reached unprecedented proportions. He threatens to establish a separate post office for the mail of the big Broadway stars who will make their homes and headquarters in Universal City.

Mr. Donaghy is assisted in delivering his mail by two Universal City postmen. These carriers make their rounds in a little runabout three times a day. Nevertheless, there is scarcely a minute of the day that some actor, actress or other employee of the big movie town is not at the little post office window inquiring for mail.

Recently, as a joke, the zoo men plastered Jumbo, the first-born elephant in Universal City, with cancelled postage stamps and requested Mr. Donaghy to send the elephant by postals post to Joe Brandt, in New York. Donaghy, who formerly was deputy sheriff in Los Angeles, looked the baby elephant over and threatened arrests for a violation of the federal postal laws.

Casino Furnishes "Atmosphere" for Edison Subject

Theatrical Landmark of New York Will Appear in "Through Turbulent Waters," Whose Big Scene Is a Play Within a Play

THE patience and disregard of expense now being exemplified in feature reels on the regular programs of companies was again evidenced Sunday when the Edison company and an army of assistants and extras swarmed into the Casino theatre, New York, in order to get atmosphere for the forthcoming feature "Through Turbulent Waters," which will be released Friday, June 25.

The play is largely built around theatrical life, and the big scene occurs on the stage. There is a play within a play. The entire lower floor and balcony were filled with players as the audience. From early morning until 3 o'clock the next morning the army labored under the direction of Duncan McRae, newly appointed director, whose first play it is for Edison, though a veteran producer of well-known successes. In all, forty scenes were taken in the theatre.

As the company could have it only for Sunday, the weekdays being taken by the stage play, "The Modern Eve," haste was necessary. All of the regular force of the theatre was requisitioned, besides a large number of portable kleigs and arc lights and electricians.

Gertrude McCoy, who has written a number of Edison successful features, has written this play and also takes the leading role. Frank Farrington, who has figured in a number of feature films, has been especially engaged for the lead. Duncan McRae also plays in it, with Edward Earle and Robert Brower. The main theme is that of an avenging father and a girl whose strange career is shaped by the sinister influence of a magnetic but unprincipled actor.

The play provides one of the most difficult roles that Miss McCoy has ever essayed, but it is ideally suited to her intense emotionalism and she is most hopeful and enthusiastic that her former successes, both as player and playwright, will be repeated.

LOBBY DISPLAY FOR SELIG RED SEALS PLEASE

The lobby displays and other aids to exhibitors put forth by the Selig Polyscope company in connection with the Selig Red Seal play, "The Millionaire Baby," are receiving many deserved compliments. "Lobby displays on 'Millionaire Baby' received and are great" is the tenor of letters received from managers of branch V-L-S-E exchanges.

The lobby display comes enclosed in a compact case of leather easily shipped and easily opened. There are striking cut-outs in colors; pennants, large photographs of scenes in the play, beautiful banners and novelties. Other than these the Selig company is issuing special stories in plate and mat forms which are sent free to newspapers and which prove great aids to the exhibitors showing the Red Seal plays.

Beautiful slides in colors have also been prepared. A beautiful booklet on "The Millionaire Baby" printed in colors has also been issued and copies will be found at the V-L-S-E exchanges. The Selig company is sparing no time nor expense to give exhibitors showing Selig Red Seal plays every assistance possible.

"LADY MACKENZIE'S BIG GAME PICTURES"

(Lady Mackenzie—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

LADY GRACE MACKENZIE surely is Diana Anno Domini 1915. This big game picture, taken on her two recent expeditions into British East Africa, is doubly interesting because of the presence of Lady Mackenzie, who faces a charging lion, two of them in fact, and, later, a charging rhinoceros, bringing down the quarry every time.

These charging scenes are the cream of the picture for excitement, but for interest it is hard to pick out any particular scenes. Among the most interesting are the intimate scenes of native rites and the scenes at the water hole.

THE HUNTRESS TRIUMPHANT

Lady Mackenzie must have taken many more thousand feet of film than are shown on the screen, for the picture, as presented, shows careful editing. At no time does the screen show a bare patch of land; there is action every minute.

The action starts with departure of the safari, or caravan, for the interior over the Uganda railroad. Then there are shown many camp scenes and extremely interesting views of native life. Then come herds of wild animals, buffalo, zebra, hartebeeste, giraffes, rhinoceros, and so on, most of them shown at close range.

The rhinoceros hunt and the lion hunt and their concluding charges are shown in considerable detail, an attention they well deserve. The water hole scenes show many kinds of wild life, including elephant, rhino, hyena, baboon, wild pig, oryx, antelope, guinea fowl and zebra.

It is interesting to see the animals stand guard over each other and fight for the water hole.

Lady Mackenzie appears in person in most of the scenes. They are now being shown at the Lyceum theatre, New York City.

"UNDER THE CRESCENT"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Fourth Narrative)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS narrative, entitled "For the Honor of a Woman," well maintains the pleasing standard set by the three which went before. The acting has been and still is of a nature that corresponds well with this special class of photoplay. Edward Sloman, who gained much notoriety through his impressive characterization of Seneca Trine in "The Trey o' Hearts," capably brings out the melodramatic villainy of the Turkish prince.

Princess Hassan is thoroughly at home in the part of the same name, being well equipped from actual experience to interpret the role. Edna Maison makes an appealing figure of the wronged dancer, while William Dowlan, completing the cast of principals, is well fitted to appear as the American hero.

Of chief notice in these two reels is the remarkable realism of the atmosphere. Most of the scenes are laid on a desert and a very desolate place it looks. The execution of the sand storm is most realistically performed. Trees are torn up by the roots, drifts piled against all objects, and human beings are half buried when at last the air is clear.

This very sand storm paves the way for the prince, who has regained power over the three fugitives, to rid himself of Zohra's baby. He places it in a small cavity in the ground where later it is found by a Bedouin chief, Zohra's father.

By a jewel hung round the neck of the child, the old man identifies its mother. He swears to kill her. Meanwhile the forsaken mother has gone insane from the loss of her child.

"THE SPENDTHRIFT"

(George Kleine—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HERE is the first drama George Kleine has made in this country; his other American-made pictures being comedies. "The Spendthrift," a six-part adaptation of Porter Emerson Browne's play of the same name, with Irene Fenwick starred, is a production conspicuous for its splendid dramatic values, which have been well realized.

Frances Ward, played by Irene Fenwick, is a spendthrift young wife, whose extravagances eventually ruin her husband, Richard, played by Cyril Keightley. Frances, with innocent enough intentions, borrows $20,000 from Phil Cartwright, played by John Nicholson, who covets the girl. Then Frances tells her husband she borrowed the money from her aunt.

The inevitable expose comes and Richard makes Frances call Cartwright up on the telephone and have him come to her boudoir. Then Richard returns the money, which came too late to save the business, and lets Cartwright go with the contemptuous remark that he "isn't worth shooting."

Then comes the second honeymoon, thanks to Auntie, who makes a substantial loan. Through the story runs a counter love plot, that of Clarice, played by Viola Savoy, and Monty Ward, played by Malcolm Duncan, and Monty's change from an idler to an earnest man.

All of the players mentioned did well, and a good part was contributed by Matty Ferguson as the aunt. The dramatic values are never lost. Walter Edwin directed.

"FOR THE COMMONWEALTH"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FOR the ninth of the "Who Pays?" series certain phases of politics are presented. The way in which a young man with ideals is crowded out of the political field is plausibly presented, and it is an unfortunate fact that the story is a page from real life.

"If you do not know how to lie, cheat and steal, turn your attention to politics and learn," is the quotation from H. S. Shaw printed on the herald of this picture, which shows some of the politician's nefarious methods.

An assistant in the office of a district attorney is left in charge for a day while his superior is away making plans about the next election. The young man raids a gambling house which he has not been able to get the district attorney to touch.

As a result the young man was nominated for the district attorneyship by a club of reformers, but it took only two weeks to ruin him. The gambling house was owned by a hypocritical pillar of society who with the district attorney went out "to get" the young upstart who dared to stand for decency.

His downfall was accomplished by what is known as the "Badger game," a disreputable girl framing up a charge of assault. As a result of the publicity the lawyer's worthless sweetheart, spurred on by her mother, threw him over, and his chances in politics were forever ruined. The girl who had ruined him repented, but was kept quiet by her confederates on a threat of imprisonment for perjury.

Ruth Roland does excellent work in the part of the girl from the underworld, while Henry King is the defeated young attorney.

HIPPODROME ABANDONS MOTION PICTURES

MOTION pictures at the Hippodrome, New York City, have proved a failure. That the policy of showing the multi-reel thrillers at the big theatre has been unsuccessful and will therefore be discontinued at the end of the week, and that a return will be made in the fall to the old-fashioned Hippodrome stage productions, with circus, acts, diving mermaids and a huge ballet and chorus, have been announced in the statements issued by two separate theatrical producers.

SOME OF THE SCENES THAT MAKE THE UNIVERSAL FEATURE, "SCANDAL," A DISTINCTIVE PRODUCTION

"SCANDAL"

(Universal Special—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFORD H. PANGBURN

IN "Scandal" the Smalleys have scored again with a screen portrayal, excellent in construction and faithful in realism, of one of the broad, unlying weaknesses of every day life and carrying a moral lesson that will get smash-bang into the center of many homes.

There can be no doubt of the broad appeal of this picture for the simple reason that all of us are scandal-mongers in some degree. Nor is there any doubt but that the lesson of the picture will have a decided effect upon everyone who sees it—and everyone should see it—and stir up a lively discussion within the family circle.

"Scandal" should and will have a good deal of word of mouth advertising.

Centuries ago when Vergil wrote his famous description of the evil done by rumor the effects of idle and vicious gossip were just as obvious as they are today. Yet indulging in the spread of scandal seems to have always been one of the easiest sins, although one of the most cowardly.

This picture is a dramatic portrayal of the ease with which the whole course of a life, or of several lives, may be altered by the work of scandal-mongers. Three happily married couples and several of their relatives find their hopes and plans absolutely wrecked by a series of unfortunate incidents all of which are the direct result of gossip, which is entirely without foundation.

Lois Weber, who plays the leading part in an effective manner, is also the author of the story. She deserves much credit for the originality with which she has treated a world old subject, and for the excellent construction of the story.

Phillips Smalley appears as the business man whose life is ruined by the tongues of gossips. Rupert Julian is seen as the husband of Daisy, the stenographer, while Adele Farrington takes the role of his gossiping sister. Abe Mundon plays Austin, Daisy's former sweetheart.

A banker's stenographer hurts her ankle just at a time when he is in great need of an absolutely reliable secretary. On the day that she is hurt her employer takes her home in his machine and later takes her to and from the office in the same way for several days in order to have her services in his important work.

The motor rides lead to the most absurd and vicious gossip on the part of Daisy's neighbors and her employer's acquaintances. First her sweetheart breaks their engagement in a jealous fury, and then the banker's wife brings suit for divorce, naming Daisy as co-respondent.

Almost at one blow gossip thus blights four lives. Later Daisy marries, and on the wedding day receives a note from her former sweetheart telling her that he has never ceased to love her. She finds happiness with her husband, however, and forgets the other man until chance brings him to her town while her husband is away.

Austin, the former lover, is happily married and his attentions to the young wife he had known in earlier days are of the most innocent sort. The wife's sister-in-law, who is staying at the house is a woman who seeks out scandal, and she imagines outrageous things about the innocent girl. Telegrams to her brother result in his speedy return in a half-crazed state of mind. His wife has been out for a motor ride with her former lover, and his wife and other friends.

An accident delays them until daylight, when the husband sees his wife arrive alone in the car, which has dropped the others at their home. After denouncing his wife the maddened man goes out and kills the innocent friend. For this he goes to the chair. His wife finds refuge with her employer, whose misfortune had come at the same time as her first one. Thus Scandal has devastated the lives of all whom it has touched.

The use of an allegorical figure of Scandal is well handled and effective.

Lois Weber excels in subjects of a symbolic nature. They are modern miracle plays cleverly adapted to the screen.

"THE CANNON BALL"

(Keystone-Mutual—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FOR successfully presenting a burlesque of a melodramatic villain, Chester Conklin, of the Keystone forces, has no equals. In "The Cannon Ball" such a role has been allotted this comedian, offering him a wide field over which to exercise his abilities in this particular line.

It is safe to say that without Mr. Conklin the comedy value of the two reels here presented would greatly deteriorate. But let not this statement be taken as to mean the picture itself is poor. It is far from that, being one of the most inventive and original that Mack Sennett has produced.

There is a wealth of trick photography and camera work of a most startling nature. Cannon balls are seen chasing men, another is exhibited floating serenely over the city with an amazed policeman trailing behind, and on the other hand the missiles sometimes have a most disastrous effect. Bridges are blown up and a whole powder mill destroyed.

The plot is a most laughable burlesque on a melodramatic theme which has long since seen its days. Conklin appears as an Inspector of High Explosives. He visits a factory and meets the owner and his daughter. Then the trouble begins. He covets the daughter and her lover resists when he takes action. But the hero triumphs finally and the villainous inspector bothers them no more.

The most laughable scenes arrive when Conklin inspects the factory, throwing cigarettes and matches about the place with such nonchalance that the employees are frozen with terror. Let it be said to dispel any doubts that an exhibitor may entertain, that absolutely nothing of a questionable or vulgar nature puts in an appearance.

"THE DAWN OF A TOMORROW"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Dawn of a Tomorrow," which was one of the most successful and far-reaching plays that ever saw the legitimate stage, is another decided triumph for the Famous Players. It is a surprising triumph, too, because one would think that without the attractive cockney language of the spoken play, its dramatic force would be lowered. But the producing company exhibited great wisdom in selecting Mary Pickford to interpret the principal role of Glad, the child of the London slums.

The low English dialect is gone, to be sure, but in place of that we are given the inimitable expressions which Mary Pickford and only Mary Pickford can affect. In interpreting the various human emotions, joy, sorrow, wonder, trust and indignation, that alternately possess little Glad, Miss Pickford seemingly outdoes all past performances of recent date.

Credit for giving the star and her supports so many opportunities should naturally be allotted the author of the play, Frances Hodgson Burnett. In "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" this talented author unconsciously constructed an ideal screen story.

Glad, the little girl of the London slums, is the idol of all who come in contact with her. She is loved by a crook, a man whom she finally pursuades to quit his bad habits and lead a straight life. And then there is the wealthy financier, who, despaired of by the physicians, seeks oblivion in the slums. He is saved by Glad, and learns a new attitude of life.

Dandy, the reformed crook, is accused by his old pals of theft and murder. The nephew of the rich man is the only one who can clear Dandy's name, having met him on the street at the time of the murder. Glad goes to him to plead. He attempts to take liberties with her, but is prevented by the arrival of Dandy, himself. At last Glad so shames the reprobate nephew before his uncle that he realizes his wrong and exonerates Dandy.

The situations of the story alternate throughout the production between the pathetic and the happy. Touches of real comedy crop out here and there, and touches that bring tears to the eyes. The simple faith that Glad holds in God, her belief in prayer and her unconscious discrimination of what is right and what is wrong, all these things and many more unite to make the picture an almost unequaled attraction.

James Kirkwood directed, and as usual has made an even and pleasing production. The street setting of the London alley, the interior of Glad's hovel, and all the rest of the settings are ingeniously realistic. It need hardly be mentioned that the photography is excellent.

The supporting cast cannot be forgotten. David Powell, as Dandy, is a good type and a good actor, while Forrest Robinson makes a most human figure of the despairing financier. Robert Cain does little but good work as the nephew. "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" made the Strand audience smile and cry, and the picture will beyond a doubt have the same effect before any audience. Exhibitors booking it will not regret running the picture at their houses.

"THE WORKING OF A MIRACLE"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

MANY stories have been written dealing with the sudden cure by some great crisis of a person supposedly incurably ill. Of necessity such stories must be much alike. It is merely a case of working up to a climax sufficiently strong to justify the results. In this drama the emotion which effects the cure is one of the strongest possible. The hero sees the woman he loves in danger of a horrible death which he alone can avert.

"The Working of a Miracle" is a story of a small town, and the atmosphere essential to such surroundings has been successfully obtained. Mary Murdock is a school teacher, and the ward of a middle-aged recluse of peculiar habits.

Because of her humble position the mother of a young man of wealth who lives in the show place of the village frowns on her son's interest in the girl. Of course this makes no difference, except that the two upon becoming engaged keep the affair a secret.

Mary's guardian is a fanatic, and is also infatuated with her. He discovers the attachment of the young people, and in a fit of jealous anger pushes the young man from a low precipice. This results in paralysis of his legs. Mary's reputation is ruined by her guardian who says he attacked the young man to save the girl's soul. Gossip spreads the tale with gloating satisfaction and Mary has to give up her school. Her guardian asks her to marry him, but she refuses in horror. Her injured lover frees her because of his condition.

THE HYPOCRITES SURROUND THE YOUNG TEACHER

While sitting in his wheel chair the paralyzed youth sees with his field glasses his sweetheart attacked by her crazy guardian and left lying in a swoon on the railroad tracks. A train is coming, and the shock is so great that the lover recovers the use of his legs and hurrying to the girl, saves her. The timely death of the guardian is all that is needed to complete the young couple's happiness.

Gladys Hulette does excellent work as Mary, and the same may be said of Carlton King, as the fanatic.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Chapter Seven)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN commenting further on the merits of "The Diamond from the Sky" it is only fair to mention that all the numbers to date have given the impression that they were directed with great care.

A number of the scenes embraced in this chapter are laid on a farm. The correct atmosphere has been faultlessly attained, even down to such a detail as the farmer's wife blowing a horn to collect the laborers for dinner. Seldom has a motion picture portrayal of rural life been so realistic. The lack of attention to such seemingly minor things as this often mars an otherwise good picture, and it is truly pleasing to note that detail has not been disregarded in this meritorious production.

Besides, in "Shadows and Sunshine," the separate title of this chapter, there is much interesting action and plot development. Some of the events are of a variety that really excites. The horse race, followed by Arthur's escape riding his steed through the grandstand, constitute a series of scenes that make one sit up and take notice. But for that matter so does the rest of the story given in this number.

The diamond leads a most adventurous course. The organ grinder's monkey procures the gem and climbing a tree deposits it in an owl's nest, where for the time being it remains guarding the feathered creature against harm.

In the meantime Esther and Hagar have moved into Stanley Hall, Arthur's old home. Arthur has taken refuge on a farm. At length he learns that in his home town an old-fashioned tournament has been arranged. All the contestants are to be masked. He enters the affair and winning the deciding event, crowns Esther the queen of beauty. Mutual recognition occurs between Arthur and Blair and the former is forced to flee for his life.

"HIS FATHER'S RIFLE"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

BANDS of natives, wild animals and appropriate South African settings, such as have made the Jungle Zoo one-reel pictures so realistic and popular, are here used in producing a three-reel Diamond Special which will be released on June 17.

The Selig Jungle Zoo is ideally fitted to lend atmosphere and local color to a story of this kind, whose settings are laid entirely in the wilds and habitations of southern Africa.

James Birch, an English hunter, at the opening of the story, is accidentally shot by the servant of Kirke Warren, a wild animal painter who is camping in the jungle. The terrified servant leaves the rifle, which is marked with his master's initials, beside the body of the man.

Later Warren meets Mrs. Birch, the widow of the unfortunate hunter, and is invited to a house party given by her. Here he finds the rifle, which she has kept in hopes of some time discovering the identity of her husband's supposed murderer.

THE ATTACK ON THE ZULUS

Thinking that Warren is the man, she plans vengeance by sending him hunting with the rifle equipped with cartridges a size too large. As a result of these cartridges jamming when Warren is attacked by a lion, he is nearly killed by this ferocious beast.

In the meantime, however, Mrs. Birch, becoming conscience stricken, sets out to find the hunting party in order to prevent the catastrophe which she had planned. After losing her way and falling in with a band of hostile Zulus, she is rescued through the efforts of Warren, who, though wounded, leads the searching part.

While Warren is being nursed back to life, the servant confesses the truth about the shooting. Mr. Warren and Mrs. Birch discover that she and Warren have grown to love one another. The cast, headed by Guy Oliver and Stella Razeto, is a good one and they are ably directed by Edward J. Le Saint.

"FINE FEATHERS"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EUGENE WALTER'S play, "Fine Feathers," which enjoyed a successful run in New York some time ago, is the basis of this picture. To say the least, the story embraces the elementary characteristics of a success. The element of suspense is large; there is little comedy, but a good thriller is brought in toward the close.

In the manner of direction and acting the picture is good. Janet Beecher appears in the featured part of Jane Reynolds, and gives an expressive performance in all of her many scenes. As her husband, David Powell acquits himself of a difficult role in a creditable style. Then Lyster Chambers, as John Brand, the heavy of the play, renders good support to the main principals. Henry Gesell, as Dick Meade, the reporter, and Alberta Gallatin and Geraldine McCann complete the given cast.

Although running along lines more or less familiar to screen productions, the story contains a certain appeal which is practically sure of reaching the audience, whatever may be the nature of the individual spectator. Jane, the wife of a fairly well-to-do cement tester, tires of her humdrum existence, and finally succeeds in persuading her husband to allow a certain inferior grade of cement to pass examination in return for a large sum of money from the head of the concern.

A PAINFUL MOMENT

Consequently Jane revels in all the fine feathers that she previously longed for. Her husband, however, is drawn into the market and swindled of all his ill gotten gains by the same disreputable man from which he first received the money. The dam made of the inferior cement bursts and inundates the valley below with the loss of many lives. But, and here comes the only point in the production that is not made clear, the couple manage to clear their debts, evade the law and start all over again.

The scenes showing the flooded valley are strikingly realistic, and well they ought to be, as from the appearance of the photography it is conclusively apparent that they are true pictures of some old flood. But they are introduced into the picture in a smooth style. It is to be regretted that the settings are the only properties of the offering that do not measure up to the good points in the picture already mentioned.

"LIFE'S MYSTERIES"

(MinA—One Reel)

THERE is an amusing situation which is well handled in this comedy, the climax being particularly effective. There is a considerable amount of slapstick work, which is done in a satisfactory way, and gets plenty of laughter from the audience.

The timeliness of the film is another advantage. Flossie having read much of the enormous strength of Jess Willard decides that the man she marries must be a regular "husk." She promptly sends her previously successful but small--sized suitor, on his way. At the same time she falls strongly for Count Padinsky, an alleged titled gentleman of enormous physique.

A reception is given by Flossie for the Count, and her rejected suitor is not allowed to attend. He sneaks in by a window, however, and in avoiding detection hides in the count's room. There he makes the discovery that the count's remarkable structure is almost entirely artificial, and is the result of a clever arrangement of padding.

Revenge, which is sweet, follows. Decoying the count to the woods, the small man, with the aid of three bandits, puts the unhappy man into a ballet costume and takes him back to the reception. It is the count's finish, and Flossie decides that Billy is the man for her after all.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode Twenty-four)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

AFFAIRS reach a decided climax in this instalment of Elaine's experiences. The many dangers which have threatened her life and happiness seem to be at an end when Wu Fang comes to a well-deserved death at the hands of Kennedy. But with this good news Elaine suffers a terrible blow due to the entire disappearance of her sweetheart. At first it seems certain that he must have met his death, but later there appears to be a slim chance that he is alive. Only the next episode will tell.

WU FANG NEARS THE END OF HIS CAREER

Kennedy has received word that his new torpedo will be adopted by the United States Government, and that secrecy must be maintained in every way about its structure. At the same time Wu Fang makes arrangements to steal one of the two existing models for a foreign government. Meantime Kennedy has discovered Wu Fang's headquarters and succeeds in capturing him. The Chinaman is taken to a hospital, because he is wounded, but succeeds in escaping by substituting one of his gang.

One of the great criminal's men succeeds in stealing the torpedo model from Washington, and turns it over to his master. Another crook starts to make off with the other model, which Kennedy is demonstrating to Elaine in a fountain at her home. He is seen, but manages to secrete the model in a flower pot after which he is mortally wounded by his pursuers. Kennedy finds Wu Fang as he is waiting to turn the torpedo model over to his customers, and a hand to hand fight in the water follows. The Chinaman is killed, and Kennedy strangely disappears. A note which he has left warns Elaine to trust him, as he may have to stay out of sight for a time. This encourages the girl in the belief that her sweetheart is still alive. The instalment is one of the best in a serial of remarkable excellence.

"BETTY IN SEARCH OF A THRILL"

(Bosworth-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

AT last—a good clean comedy drama with two principals in the title roles, who are alive to their respective parts, good photography to enhance the above-the-average plot, and strict attention to the smallest detail in the settings.

Such is "Betty in Search of a Thrill," with Elsie Janis playing Betty, and Owen Moore impersonating her lover, Jim. The producers and director cannot be given too much credit, and their work, coupled with the acting of the principals, makes this release a sure-fire hit. The action is swift and there is not a trace of that almost-always-present padding. There are laughs galore and good heart-gripping, tense situations throughout the five reels.

Just out of a convent, Betty is consumed with an overwhelming desire to go out into the "Great Big Beautiful World," but her experiences among department store girls, the stage and cabarets soon cure her. Falling innocently into the web of a murder mystery, she is rescued by Jim, and is more than glad to call off her search for thrills.

Elsie Janis has ample chance in this production to display her remarkable dancing and mimicries which made her so popular in England and America. This is a dance worth witnessing.

The combination of Elsie Janis and Owen Moore is certainly a good one.

"Betty in Search of a Thrill" is bound to please, and the Paramount program is keeping up its good work.

"THE GODDESS"

(Vitagraph—Fifth Chapter)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE three millionaires who reared Celestia in a small wilderness taught her to believe that she was born to reform the world. In this chapter she takes the first step on this mission, although not exactly in the manner which the financiers had planned for her.

The amazing scenes which marked the last two episodes continue in this. They are doubly entertaining because of their absolute originality. We refer to those scenes taken in the actual streets of New York City, in which Celestia, clothed in the same garments which she wore in the mountains, walks calmly through the crowded thoroughfares of the metropolis as if it was the most natural thing in the world.

At the outset of the episode in hand Tommy attempts to leave Celestia in a hotel, but the great disturbance that she creates in the lobbies causes the managers to refuse Tommy's request. At length Tommy gets into an argument with one of the matrons, and Celestia goes out in the cab to wait. Here she creates a disturbance and the chauffeur is told to drive her around the corner.

Instead he goes further and then demands his fare. Celestia is at a loss as to what to do, when a woman comes up and offers assistance. She takes Celestia to a disorderly house and there keeps her prisoner. But the next morning Celestia imparts to her her mission in the world. The woman is seized with a sudden realization of all her sins. She gives Celestia money and tells her to depart. The Goddess wanders to the East Side, through streets crowded with Italians, at last coming to a dispossessed family. With part of the money she pays their long overdue rent, and then the chapter closes.

"THE LITTLE DECEIVER"

(Essanay—Three Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"THE Little Deceiver," by H. S. Sheldon, will be released on June 15 in conjunction with a short story to appear in the July "Ladies' World." All audiences will find it interesting, and, in addition, it is filled with quiet, clean humor that will be heartily appreciated by the better class of theatre patrons.

Edna Mayo is most charmingly cast as Frances Bisbee, a girl, who, when left an orphan, is obliged to disguise herself as a boy in order to be received in the house of her crusty but rich uncle.

At first her uncle treats his supposed nephew with contempt because of "his" girlish ways, but gradually "he" wins a place in the old gentleman's heart, and by the time the deception is discovered as a result of Frances' fainting after capturing a burglar, the uncle is entirely won over and is transformed into a kindly old man.

Taking Frances into his confidence he tells her how his brother deceitfully won her mother, the girl they both loved, a fact that soured him with life and was the cause of his remaining unmarried.

Richard C. Travers is excellent as Dick Truesdale, Frances' friend and later her lover. Bryant Washburn does very well in the role of the crabbed old uncle, though this is a hard part for one of Mr. Washburn's years to carry out convincingly.

The rest of the cast, including Thomas Commerford, Royal Douglas and Sydney Ainsworth, render able support.

"HIS OBLIGATION"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE betrayal of an innocent country girl again supplies the plot for a story that is filmed interestingly and uniquely with the aid of excellent production, technique and photography.

The two main characters independent of each other are brought in at the start of the picture, one a wealthy society man engaged to a girl of his walk of life, the other a poor country girl driven from her home in disgrace and unsuccessfully seeking employment in the city with her baby in her arms.

One evening these two people are brought together in a deserted house to which the girl has gone for shelter and to which the man is attracted by a light as he is returning home from a dance intoxicated.

In the glow of the fire they recognize each other. The story is told of their meeting and of the innocent girl's betrayal by the city man who has accepted her father's hospitality when he is stranded on an automobile trip. The man's better nature conquers and he asks the girl to marry him.

"JIM THE PENMAN"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A STORY of great dramatic strength is presented in "Jim the Penman." strong because of its substantial plot and strong because of its powerful characterization rendered by John Mason in the name part.

The picture is adapted from the drama of the same name by Sir Charles L. Young. It is conceived totally in a serious vein and posses enough strong and tense moments to sustain the spectator's interest over the whole length of the picture.

John Mason, the latest star to be added to the Famous Players' long list of noted performers, does most remarkable work throughout the offering. His heaviest and consequently the most gripping scenes commence almost immediately after he has been introduced as James Ralston, the bank cashier.

Ralston, although a rival in love with his younger assistant, Louis Percival, is very much his friend. Percival wins out in the love affair and shortly afterwards inheriting a fortune, he departs for Chicago. Ralston receives a letter from him, telling him how happy he is over his coming marriage and the enormity of his fortune.

The cashier, despairing of his lot, forges Percival's name on a letter to his fiance, telling her the engagement is broken. Afterwards he marries her. They live in London, where Ralston continues to ply his dishonest trade.

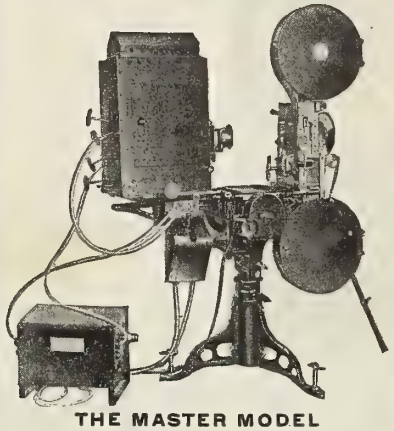
Accumulating a large fortune, he desires to quit the game, but his partner will not let him until they have made one more haul. They rob Lord Drelincourt of a valuable necklace and later Ralston learns that this man is engaged to his daughter.

RALSTON'S TRADE DISCOVERED

The climax comes when Percival, together with a detective, discovers Ralston's trade. His wife also discovers the truth, but on the evening of his daughter's wedding day, after having a heated quarrel with his partner, Ralston, alias "Jim the Penman," dies of heart failure.

The last scenes are the most dramatic of the entire subject. In these Mr. Mason is given quality support by the other players. Harold Lockwood appears as Percival, Russell Bassett as Hartfeld, the other criminal, Frederick Perry as the detective, William Roselle as Drelincourt, and Marguerite Leslie as Mrs. Ralston.

LUBIN WILL TAKE SOCIETY AND NAVAL PICTURES



A COMPANY of Lubin players will leave for Newport, R. I., shortly to begin the filming of a number of special society and naval pictures. Last summer a Lubin company spent several weeks at the fashionable resort and secured some unusually interesting dramas in which the United States Navy played a very important part.

The company will be headed by George W. Terwilliger, the writer and director, and will include Ormi Hawley, Hazel Hubbard, Earl Metcalfe, Herbert Fortier, William H. Turner, Arthur Matthews, Eleanor Barry, Mae DeMetz, Edward Luck, P. T. Volkman, William Cooper and others.

What one of the Biggest Exchanges says about the STANDARD

THE MASTER MODEL

The Greater New York Film Rental Co. of New York City, headed by Mr. William Fox, needs no introduction to the exhibitor. Read the following letter dated June 4th, 1915, from the hand of their Mr. Louis Rosenbluh, Vice-President and General Manager:

"We take great pleasure in informing you that we are still using the STANDARD machine which we originally purchased in 1909, and we can truthfully state that this machine is giving us as good service today as it did when it was originally installed seven years ago.

"We would not care to be without this machine for the reason that this machine will carry through film of any standard size, no matter what its condition. Particularly is it good for first run film as the emulsion does not stick to the springs.

"The cost of maintenance is so small, in fact it is rarely out of order. If we can use any more of these machines will be glad to let you know."

Do justice to good films and get the most out of poor films by installing the American Standard MASTER MODEL, the best projector made. Full particulars will be mailed to you upon request.

PATHE SHOWS OFFICIAL FRENCH WAR PICTURES

Pathé is showing the first official war pictures to reach this country from France, and judging from those already exhibited, they form a series of extraordinary interest. The pictures have been approved and censored by the French military authorities and edited by the French Cinematograph Chamber of Commerce, with a view to their being as widely shown throughout the world as possible. The first pictures received showed Lord Kitchener, General Joffre, President Poincare, Field Marshal French and Minister of War Millerand in conference—the first time that such a number of celebrities have been shown together in a war film.

Others picture the French army in their new "invisible" gray uniforms which are taking the place of the well known red trousers and blue coats. In fact, each of the pictures has possessed a marked human and historical interest. It is promised that they will get better and better.

Pathé reports great interest among the exhibitors over these "war specials," which are being shown in conjunction with the Pathé News.

HUMPHREY PRODUCING "TO CHERISH AND PROTECT"

William H. Humphrey, of the Vitagraph directing staff, is at work on a three-part Broadway Star feature entitled, "To Cherish and Protect," by William Vaughn Pettit, that enlists the services of an all-star cast, including Harry Morey, Harry Northrup, L. Rogers Lytton, Gladden James and Estelle Mardo. The New York Stock Exchange is vividly pictured during the excitement of a busy day in which stocks soar, and the frenzied efforts of the bears to cover their losses is in direct antithesis to a scene in which leading characters draw lots to determine which member is to carry out a suicide pact, the details of which had previously been decided upon.

The foregoing are but two of the big scenes, while innumerable dramatic episodes and incidents add strength and power to a story that is one of suspense throughout.

NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS SWAMP "GODDESS" STAR

ONE of the most peculiar effects of the great popularity of "The Goddess," the Vitagraph "serial beautiful," can be found in a request received by Anita Stewart, who plays the title role, from the Brooklyn Post Office Department asking that the Vitagraph star kindly discontinue her clipping service until an appropriation for additional carriers has been passed by the Post Master General.

Miss Stewart has a contract with a clipping bureau that sends her all of the clippings containing her name. When "The Goddess" was released a flood of clippings from the many hundreds of newspapers that are publishing the story began to pour into the Vitagraph studio.

"SINS OF THE MOTHERS" IS LATEST V-L-S-E DRAMA

THE next release of the V-L-S-E combination is the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Sins of the Mothers," featuring Earle Williams and Anita Stewart. It is a drama of great power portraying the manner in which a daughter inherited her mother's passion for gambling, and how she finally brought on her own death because of her deceit to her husband. The picture had a successful run at the Vitagraph theatre some time ago.

Henry Otto, "The Artistic Producer"

It has become a habit to write of Henry Otto as "The artistic producer" and the title is well earned, for Otto is an artist to his finger tips and his work with the American company at Santa Barbara is marked by careful direction.

Otto's experience was of the varied kind, for he appeared with some of the biggest artists in the country.

He early entered the pictures, acting with the original Nestor Company, and later joining the Selig concern with whom he took leads and firsts and acted in the capacity of director. After further experience as a producer with the Balboa company, Otto joined the American, where he is regarded as a valuable asset.

Marie Newton, Biograph Ingenue, Scores Success

To enter the ranks as an untutored and inexperienced girl just from training school, and to have her talents recognized almost instantaneously, causing numerous promotions resulting in a permanent and enviable position with the Biograph producing companies is the remarkable record of the career of Marie Newton, now one of the most sought for Ingenues of the big stock company at the studios in Los Angeles.

Miss Newton is now but 16 years of age, and like many others in the theatrical profession made her first public appearance as a reader. Following the completion of a course in a private school in Chicago she appeared in child parts in studios, and later when her parents moved to New York City, she applied to D. W. Griffith, then Director General of the Biograph Company, and was given a trial. Mr. Griffith recognized her ability and she was given good parts in the "Ruling Passion" and later in "The Woman in Black," a K & E production, and one of her most recent successes was "The Ring and the Book," while her favorite portrayal is in "The Bridge Across."

Clawson Works Out New Photographical Effects

WITH the release of the Weber-Smalley Universal Subject, "Scandal," the trade will have an opportunity to view some new photographical effects worked out by Dal Clawson, in charge of the camera work for this producing company.

These new effects Mr. Clawson believes are more attractive than those he made in the filming of a previous subject for these directors titled "Hypocrites," released as a Bosworth. In many instances it required a number of exposures on the films. For several scenes the celluloid strip with a frame ¾ x 1 inch was run through the camera as many as fourteen times.

The career of Mr. Clawson as a camera man has been spectacular to say the least. He did his first work in laboratories at Salt Lake City for a traveling organization a number of years ago. At that time he was conducting a photographic studio, and the small amount of developing he did for the visitors caused him to see the many possibilities for a photographer in the motion picture field. Since that time he has kept abreast of the times, and many innovations in film making are the results of his study.

And that a photographer who pays close attention to details and the study of the work is appreciated by managers, is shown by the career of Mr. Clawson. He is now in the employ of the Universal Company for the third time. Each time he has returned there with material increase in his salary. He is perhaps one of the most sought out photographers of the West Coast colony, for all managers have come to know the value of his services. He has been camera man for the Smalley's for the past three years, going with them from one organization to another. When these directors united with the Bosworth producing staff in 1914, Mr. Frank Garbutt, president of the company, wired Mr. Clawson, then in Paris with Fred Mace in the making of the Evelyn Nesbit Thaw subject, and offered him such a good proposition that he was induced to return to Los Angeles. His first work after returning was in the making of "Hypocrites."

"A Romance of Old California." (Biograph. Mon., June 14.)—As the title indicates, this is a story of "the days before the gringo came." The blind son of a wealthy don loves a peon's daughter. The boy's sight is restored and the plan to marry him off to another girl frustrated.

He finally finds his own sweetheart who nearly killed herself through fear that she would not be beautiful enough in his eyes. Victor Rottman is the boy and Mary Maletesta his sweetheart. Ivan Christy is the surgeon. Wray Physioc directed with his usual skill.

He tries to make her steal the jewels, but she refuses and buys a revolver to protect herself. Davison attacks the girl when she has the jewels in her hands. She fights. In the struggle her revolver goes off and kills Mrs. Van Alden, who had just entered. Marian is tried for murder. On the stand she tells her life story. Davison is arrested after a hot fight. Before dying he substantiates Marian's story and she is set free. Louise Vale plays Marian, Franklin Ritchie is Davison and Jack Drumier is John Van Alden. Travers Vale directed.

"His Ward's Scheme." (Biograph. Thurs., June 17.)—Mr. Wise wants to marry his young ward. She is being courted by a young man, about her own age. To get rid of him she tells him of her expensive tastes. But he doesn't seem scared. "The Way Out." (Biograph. Sat., June 19.)—A school teacher is courted by the father of one of her pupils. The teacher sees on the hand of her suitor's little daughter a ring which she recognizes as her own. Then it comes out that the suitor is an ex-bandit who had resolved to go straight for the school teacher's sake.

But when the teacher finds out that her suitor had killed her father she refuses him. The suitor kills himself and the teacher adopts the little girl Claire McDowell is the teacher, Harry Carey the bandit, and Lewis Wells the father.

"Cartoons in the Parlor." (Edison. Wed., June 16.)—Another selection of Raoul Barre's excellent animated cartoons. Some comedy figures dancing, the adventure of a henpecked husband who takes a strength builder, and the chaperone as seen by her victims, are the pictures. The last views win over the chaperone, who is presiding over the young couple, who seek to divert her attention with their pictures. A highly entertaining picture.

"The Corporal's Daughter." (Edison. Sat., June 19.)—This is a typical film of the old school of fast action and little plot. It deals with the old days of Indian fighting at the U. S. Army posts in the far West.

A scout who marries a girl at the post thinks that she cares for a former lover, and exposes himself to useless danger during an Indian attack in order that he may be shot, and leave her to do as she wishes. When he finds that she stays at his side he discovers his mistake, and all ends happily with the arrival of the relief force.

Gladys Hulette and Arthur Housman do excellent work as the principals. Yale Benner is seen as the rejected suitor. The battle scenes are well done.

"Whose Was the Shame." (Essanay. Mon., June 14.)—A young artist falls in love with the girl whose portrait he has painted. Although he is ashamed of his father, a poor farmer, who has slaved for his success, out of justice to the girl he invites her to visit the farm.

The girl is much taken with the kindly old man and the artist's fears are dispelled. Beverly Bayne and Jack Meredith appear in the leading roles.

"The Little Deceiver." (Essanay. Three acts. Tues., June 15.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"Dreamy Dud in the Swim." (Essanay. Wed., June 16.)—This series of living cartoons by Wallace A. Carlson shows the horrible things that happen to young boys who steal jam. Dud and Wag, his dog, first swell up to enormous size and then shrink so small that they can go swimming in a tea cup.

Mr. Cat comes along to play with the diminutive Dud and Wag. He drinks the milk out of the cup and is about to swallow the terrified Dud when the latter wakes up to find all is a nightmare.

"The Broken Pledge." (Essanay. Thurs., June 17.)—Three young girls pledged to spinsterhood and contempt for mankind, go camping. Likewise do three boys, pledged to nothing save fun and the joy of living. Their camps are adjoining, and when the boys succeed in thawing out the icy barrier, all pledges are forgotten. Wallace Beery, Harry Dunkinson, Gloria Mae and Virginia Bowker are in the cast.

"Vain Justice." (Essanay. Two acts. Sat., June 19.)—A logical Civil War drama produced in the South with beautiful scenery and proper settings. Love for a Union officer finally conquers a Southern girl's hatred for his cause. Very well acted by a cast led by Richard C. Travers and Lillian Drew.

"Raskey's Road Show." (Kalem. Tues., June 15.)—This is a very funny Ham and Bud comedy. The two comedians are attached to a traveling show. They spoil the trapeze act and the lady performer falls on them from the bar. They otherwise upset the show and end by fighting with each other when, dressed as a lion and a tiger, they are taking the places of the animals in the animal act.

"The Vanishing Vases." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., June 16.)—Another of the girl detective series with Marin Sais in the lead. A business man hires a crook to steal a rare pair of vases from a museum. When the business man gets the vases he refuses to pay for them, feeling that the crook cannot squeal. The girl detective lands them both. The two reels are full of action.

"Rival Waiters." (Kalem. Fri., June 18.)—A farce comedy featuring George Hoffman and Frank Meeker as the rival waiters. Both are jealous of each other, and the funny part of it each is afraid of the other. The result is that any movement on the part of one of them is taken by the other as an act of hostility. A few good laughs are in the picture, and the result is a pretty fair comedy release.

"Near Eternity." (Kalem. Sat., June 19.)—This latest of the "Hazards of Helen" keeps up the good work. As a series these railroad stories are certainly full of thrills and tense situations, and "Near Eternity" is no exception in this respect. To further enhance the recommendation of this episode of the "Hazards of Helen" there is a good plot entailing the rejected lover seeking revenge on his successful rival, by blowing him up by dynamite attached to a mail bag. The plan is frustrated by Helen, who in the nick of time grabs the dynamite and throws it into the marsh just as the train rushes by. The rejected lover happens to be crossing the marsh at this time, and is literally "hoist by his own petard."

"A Safe Investment." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., June 19.)—Billy Reeves does not have as good a medium in this picture as in some others. A dominant wife, a henpecked husband who yet flirts with every female he sees, the wife's expedient of bringing her husband home with a chain around his neck form the plot. Mae Hotley as the wife, aids and abets Billy Reeves in his antics.

"The Bridge of Sighs." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., June 18.)—A young contractor is forced to give graft to get the job, and then with ruin staring him in the face, and the loss of his sweetheart threatened, yields to strong temptation and puts inferior materials in the supports, in order to come out with a profit.

On his way to be married, he hears of the collapse of the bridge, the killing of many people and his own impending arrest. In despair he shoots himself. Interestingly played by Velma Whitman, Raymond Gallagher, Charles French, Henry Stanley.

"Caught with the Goods." (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., June 15.)—An impossible situation, showing how a wife's endeavors to cure her husband of a love for poker brought herself into the trap. When the police are called in, she is found with the cards and chips in her own pockets, and is therefore given thirty days in jail by her own husband, a justice of the peace. This seems too absurd even for such a comedy, but 'twill please some people. George Welch and Mabel Paige are the warring couple.

"Capturing Bad Bill." (Lubin. Split reel. Wed., June 16.)—With "Caught with the Goods." This tells how Bad Bill, the pest of the village, worried a restaurant keeper until the latter had to put dope in his coffee. This made Bill so gentle that he allowed himself to be captured, tied up in a clothes line, and delivered to the proper authorities. Written by Epes W. Sargent and produced by Will Louis. It is acted by Ben Walker, Mabel Paige, Ray McKee.

"The Insurrection." (Lubin. 3 reels. Drama.)—Reviewed in another part of this issue.

"Letters Entangled." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., June 14.)—A drama well acted by Henry King and Dorothy Davenport, showing how the non-delivery of a letter leads a girl to believe that her lover has deserted her just before the birth of their child. In future years they meet, but because the child, now a young woman, believes her father dead, they decide to part forever.

"The Heart of the Sheriff." (Selig. Tues., June 15.)—A Tom Mix western drama with the usual display of break-neck horsemanship and realistic fighting. The sheriff unselfishly consents to the marriage of his adopted daughter whom he has grown to love dearly.

Before the ceremony her suitor is shot in the act of robbing a stage coach and the girl realizes she will be happiest always to remain with the sheriff.

"A Tragedy in Panama." (Selig. Wed., June 16.)—For this picture the jungles and towns of Panama have supplied unusual and interesting settings, which are produced with clear photography. The acting is excellent but the plot is a trifle vague unless the picture is followed closely. It shows the punishment administered to an unfaithful wife and the man for whom she deserted her husband.

"His Father's Rifle." (Selig. Three reels. Thurs., June 17.)—A Diamond Special reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Angel of Spring." (Selig. Sat., June 19.)—Guy Oliver has cleverly produced a picture which shows how a young wife's horror of becoming a mother is removed when during the Twilight Sleep the "Angel of Spring" takes her spirit on a journey to see the jungle mothers tenderly nursing their young. A pretty picture with the visions well worked out.

"Mr. Jarr and the Ladies' Cup." (Vitagraph, Mon., June 14.)—The amusing exploits of the Jarrs continue in this comedy, the eleventh of the series. After the Jarrs have left the Cheese Hill Inn dancing contest because of trouble with another party which is taking place there, they invite their friends to the flat for the rest of the evening.

There they discover that the children have nearly wrecked the place and that the maid has gone out. The only consolation comes next morning in the discovery that the maid has been to the dance and won the ladies' cup, thus maintaining indirectly the prestige of the Jarr family.

"The Little Doll's Dressmaker." (Vitagraph, Tues., June 15.)—June, a girl of a poor region in a city, is falsely accused by her sister of a theft from a boarder and sent to a reform school. She has always been noted for her sunny disposition in spite of the fact that she is crippled, and in the school she acts as a strong influence for improvement.

June attracts the attention of the surgeon at the school who cures her, and later her love for a young author comes to a happy conclusion. A deathbed confession by the sister is the only weak point in an otherwise excellent plot. The story is one of much appeal and is crowded with real human interest. Lillian Walker is seen as June.

"Philanthropic Tommy." (Vitagraph, Wed., June 16.)—"Tommy," as a little girl is called, is left alone on her birthday because her father and mother have engagements which they consider more important than staying with her. It happens that this leads to a series of strange adventures in which Tommy is instrumental in saving her sister from a rascal and her father from another, as well as warding off the raid of a burglar. Lucille Hammill is seen as the small girl and Naomi Childers as her older sister.

"To the Death." (Vitagraph. Thurs., June 17.)—A dramatic but impossible story of the last feud between two mountain families. After all but one man of each house has been killed off, the two remaining members meet on a Western ranch. An old miner tries to end their hate for each other by a strange test, but it ends fatally for one of the men. The two feudists are played by Alfred Vosburgh and Jack Mower.

"A Mistake in Typesetting." (Vitagraph. Fri., June 8.)—A mistake in setting the addresses in two advertisements results in reuniting lovers who had quarreled years before and separated. It also leads to a good home for a little girl. A good comedy drama featuring Flora Finch and Jay Dwiggins.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Mabel Lost and Won." (Keystone. Thurs., June 3.)—A light comedy offering containing little of the usual Keystone slapstick work. Mabel Normand and Owen Moore lead the cast. A happy engagement is for a time broken off by an adventuress, but all ends well. The humorous situations in this are many and well brought out. A very funny man appears in a number of scenes, dressed in evening clothes.

"The Celestial Code." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., June 5.)—Irene Hunt, as Adele Block, a reporter, is featured in this detective story. George Walsh is seen as the detective Glen Morton.

The plot is intensely melodramatic. After discovering by clever work that certain papers concerning plans for a revolution in Salvador have been stolen by a Japanese cook in the home of the leader of the Junta, Adele makes a bold attempt to recover them. She succeeds after a most exciting chase, which includes a leap from the deck of a steamer and a fight in the water. She is saved by the arrival of Glen Morton. A well done picture of the thriller sort.

"The Living Death" (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., June 6.)—A drama of great strength, well acted and staged, and consequently most effective. F. A. Turner is seen as a widower who is so much centered in his daughter that he refuses to allow her to marry.

A leper colony is located on an island off the coast, and the widower, who is a doctor, diagnoses a slight rash on the arm of his would-be son-in-law as leprosy. This is a desperate act to get rid of the young man. Half-crazed the lover leaves for the leper colony, but his sweetheart overtakes him and leaping into the boat says she will share his exile.

The father discovers this and instantly repents his vicious act. He succeeds in stopping the couple in time to save them. Billie West makes a charming heroine.

"Brave and Bold." (Komic. Sun., June 6.)—A would-be-hero tells what he would do to a burglar. Two friends pretend to be crooks and give him a bad five minutes, but when a real thief arrives the man has more courage, and the jokers are robbed. A fairly good slapstick type of comedy.

"A Mother's Justice." (Reliance. Mon., June 7.)—A girl marries against her mother's wishes. The objection to the man is intuitive, but proves to be well founded as it turns out that he is already married. The mother then takes justice into her own hands and goes to see the husband, the visit resulting in the death of the man during a struggle in which he draws a revolver.

The mother refuses to make any statement in order to protect her daughter's name, but she is saved by an anti-mortem statement which clears her of all blame. A weak story but well acted.

"Dirty Face Dan." (Majestic. Tues., June 8.)—Another of the excellent child comedies made at the Majestic studios. A little girl plants a coin in order to have a money tree. Her older sister's sweetheart fixes the tree, but it and the original coin are stolen.

The girl calls in the aid of Dick, the daring detective, and the culprit is soon caught. He is tried in a court presided over by the detective as judge. On the testimony of the watch dog Dirty Face Dan is found guilty and sentenced to be washed until clean. The work of the child actors, particularly George Stone and Betty Marsh, is remarkably good.

"Payment in Full." (Reliance. Wed., June 9.)—A simple drama centering around a wronged man who returned good for evil. An engaging number produced by Joseph Belmont, with a capable cast. Good photography and plenty of action.

"His Guardian Auto." (Falstaff. Fri., June 11.)—A very fast young man owns a very little auto, which finally decides to reform its master, by refusing to go and then taking the man where it will. A fanciful comedy featuring Jim Cruze and Marguerite Snow. The picture is novel and contains many good comedy moments.

"Through Edith's Looking Glass." (Thanhouser. Sun., June 13.)—A vain and extravagant girl sees herself as others see her and henceforth resolves on better conduct. A nice picture with a good moral, produced fairly well. Lorraine Huling is the girl. Bringing the reel to a close is a short subject featuring Helen Badgley, in a very delightful comedy-drama.

"His Obligation." (American. Two reels. Mon., June 14.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Mollycoddle." (Beauty. Tues., June 15.)—Jimmy is promised his sweetheart's hand if he can live thirty days in the woods attired in a bathing suit. He does this much to the disgruntlement of a wealthy pork packer, a rival favored by the girl's father. Webster Campbell and Neva Gerber appear in the cast.

"Her Musical Cook." (American. Wed., June 16.)—The incessant singing emenating from the apartment across the way drives Walace to a summer resort after he has written a sarcastic note to his unknown neighbor. At the resort he meets and falls in love with this neighbor, her identity being unknown, but the note found upon her return is about to break off the romance when it is discovered that the harshly criticised singing came from the cook. Nan Christy, Wallace McDonald and Lucille Ward appear in the cast.

"The Superficial Wife." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., June 16.)—The extravagant wife experiences a nightmare, and afterwards bothers her husband no more with her wild wishes, for in the horrible dream she brings ruin on herself and her hard working husband.

This makes a fair release, which relies more on the strong characterizations rendered by Walter Edwards and Leonna Hutton, who appear in the leading parts to sustain the interest, than in any fast or thrilling action.

The picture is not lifeless by any manner of means, for its holds the spectator every bit of the time, but the story carries itself without any assistance in the shape of sensational events.

"The Soul of Phyra." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., June 17.)—An absorbing drama based on Brahmin mysticism. The story is unconventional, and for this reason is considerably more entertaining than the average two reel subject. Phyra, a maiden of India, is to be sacrificed to the gods.

An English soldier, Brenner, persuades her to escape with him. He marries her and they are living very happily in England when the high priest summons her soul. She intuitively hears the call, returns home and is sacrificed. Later, according to the mystic idea, Brenner hears her soul calling him and he dies. Enid Markey and Hershal Mayall are featured.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Heart That Knew." (Pathé. Three reels.) One of the French Pathé studios produced this strong melodrama. A rich man at his death makes his niece sole heiress of his fortune, and cuts off two fast living nephews. The girl is engaged and makes a will leaving the entire estate to her sweetheart. Knowing this, one of her cousins arranges a plan which he supposes will result in her death by a fall from a weakened bridge over a gorge in the mountains. The girl falls and is supposed to be dead, whereupon the criminal accuses her lover of killing her for her fortune. The innocent man is convicted and sent to prison while the conspirators get the fortune. The girl has not been killed, but has temporarily lost her mind. Some mountaineers care for her and on recovery she confronts the criminal. He confesses and her lover is released. There are many beautiful scenes, but there is a tendency to overact on the part of the principals.

"Woman and War." (Pathé. Three reels.)—This strong drama deals with the problem of a woman who marries a foreigner whose country later goes to war with her own. She is thus torn between love for her husband and patriotism. In the end all turns out happily. Many beautiful and realistic military scenes add to the effect. The picture is an excellent one in every way, and presents a situation which is common in Europe just now.

"Whiffles' Busted Alibi." (Pathé. Three-quarter reel.)—Whiffles pretends to be a hairdresser, and has some pleasant experiences arranging the locks of an attractive woman. Unfortunately for him his wife discovers that her hair brushes and similar fixings are missing, and this leads to a poor time for Whiffles. An amusing comedy well acted. On the same reel is "Intimate Studies of Birds."

"Intimate Studies of Birds." (Pathé. Quarter reel.)—The nesting habits of several common European birds are pictured with unusual excellence.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 170." (Wed., June 9.)—The dedication of the mast and fighting top of the battleship "Maine" at the National Cemetery, Arlington, Va., is a stirring feature of this number. Others of interest are the destruction of a mock dreadnaught in the bay of San Francisco; the departure of the eastern aggregation of Universal beauties for Universal City, Cal.; and the usual quota of war news.

"The Oyster Dredger." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., June 14.)—A rich girl taking a fancy to a lone oysterman, deeds all her property to him and takes his place just to see the effect his change in station will create. The man soon becomes accustomed to his surroundings in which he delights. Then the girl's lawyer, realizing that he could leave her penniless if he chose attempts to force his attentions upon her, but the oysterman realizes all in the nick of time, puts the villain to rout and all ends happily.

Rather impossible, yet the presence of Jack Kerrigan and Vera Sisson in the principal roles serves to lift it from the ordinary. There are many bits of comedy throughout the two reels which make the film doubly enjoyable. The scenes and photography are good. Lon Chaney directed.

"The Riddle of the Silk Stockings." (Imp. Mon., June 14.)—A traveling salesman stops at a country hotel and innocently stands a number of false legs on which are new designs in silk stockings in the window.

The townsfolk collect, the old maids are aghast while the old men are greatly pleased, but the sheriff investigates and discovers the truth. This is very funny but slightly risque. Ned Reardon is the salesman. King Baggot and Jane Gail are also in the cast.

"A Duke for a Day." (Joker. Mon., June 14.)—Two suitors are displaced in the hearts of their ladies by a duke and his butler, but finally they successfully impersonate these two and fool the women.

This is very funny, and although old in plot, contains many situations which are always good for laughs. Bob Vernon reappears in the Joker company as one of the suitors, while Max Asher is the other. William Franey is the butler, while Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock complete the cast.

"Under the Crescent." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Third Narrative. Tues., June 15.)—Reviewed at length in June 12 issue of Motion Picture News.

"The Last Act." (Rex. Tues., June 15.)—Here we have a rough melodrama of the old school, featuring Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Joseph Girard. The actor alienates the affections of a playwright's wife, so in revenge, the author appears in a minor part of his play the first night it is produced and poisons the actor and himself.

"On His Wedding Day." (Nestor. Tues., June 15.)—The automobile salesman is arrested for speeding on his wedding day. His friend, the best man, manages to fool the cops and arrange his escape, so that he arrives at his fiancee's house one minute before the fatal hour. A good comedy release in which a large gathering of burlesque police appear. Billie Rhodes, Neal Burns and Harry Lyons are the principals.

"The Snow Girl." (Laemmle. Three reels. Wed., June 16.)—This is old style melodrama again turned out by one of the eastern Universal companies. Two landgrabbers scheme to kill an old man and abduct his daughter. The hero offers interference, is shot and left for dead, but at the psychological moment returns and saves the day.

This was produced in midwinter up at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and contains many very pretty snow scenes, the Saranac Ice Carnival also receives a portion of the film, in which a number of interesting sports are shown. The cast includes Mildred Manning as the heroine, Glen White as the hero and Brinsley Shaw as the heavy.

Written and produced by Frank S. Beresford, technical director at the Coytesville studios.

"Into the Light." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., June 17.)—A familiar story, but produced in an impressionistic style lending it attractiveness. The players interpret the action almost totally by bodily actions, seldom moving their lips or changing the expressions of their faces. The moral of the production is decidedly worthy, it being to remain true to religion no matter what occurs. A girl reforms a second-story man. Later she meets him in a western village where he is the parson. In time he proves his worth and is rewarded by the love of the girl.

"The Second Beginning." (Big U. Thurs., June 17.)—A gambling debt contracted by the wife, almost ruins the happiness of the married couple, but when explanations are given all ends well. This is conventional but fairly interesting, as it is constructed well. The scenes and photography are most pleasing. Adele Lane is the wife.

"The Panzer Troupe." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., June 17.)—This half reel features a German acrobatic troupe, the members of which perform several clever and entertaining stunts at first. The boxing bout between the two midgets is not funny, being too long and introducing nothing original.

"The Wizard of the Animals." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., June 17.)—This half reel, which follows "The Panzer Troupe," shows many interesting pictures of sundry habitats of the zoo. Raymond Ditmars also appears in a few scenes.

"The White Terror." (Imp. Four reels. Fri., June 18.)—Reviewed at length in May 22 issue Motion Picture News, under title of "Everytown."

"The Downfall of Potts." (Nestor. Fri., June 18.)—Lee Moran again dons his detective star and attempts to find the police chief's daughter, who has been kidnapped by a rival in love and business. He is unsuccessful of course, and besides, he is accused of the kidnapping. Ed Lyons and Victoria Forde are also in the cast of this laughmaker.

THE THEATRE SCENE IN THE EDISON FEATURE, "THROUGH TURBULENT WATERS"

"One Man's Evil." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., June 19.)—A sister possesses such a great love for her vagrant brother that she deceives her lover, the sheriff, despite the fact that the brother had committed a crime. This is not a very good offering, although in some of its scenes it is interesting. The story is not always clear and the termination leaves too much to the imagination. In the cast are Edna Maison, Ray Gallagher, William Clifford and Arthur Shirley.

"Her Mysterious Escort." (Powers. Sat., June 19.)—A few more titles here and there would make this film, which shows the manner in which a cabaret performer united an estranged husband and wife, a most exceptional heart-interest offering. As it stands at present, it is not understandable. William Dowlan produced the picture, playing the lead, supported by Violet McMillan, Jane Novak and Alan Forest.

"At the Bingle Barbecue." (Joker. Sat., June 19.)—Max Asher and William Franey appear here as cooks at a barbecue at which nothing in particular happens. Aside from the absence of plot the reel contains little humor of any account and much that is dirty in a literal sense.

"Her Own Blood." (Big U. Sun., June 20.)—A drama of the Northwest Mounted Police, with Adele Lane, Harry Linkey and Edward Sloman leading the cast. The girl is loved by a gambler and murderer. Her brother is called upon to arrest this man. At first his sister interposes, but at length realizing the truth she herself kills her former lover.

"Blue Blood and Yellow Backs."—(L-Ko. Sun., June 20.)—The bogus baron and Reggie are rivals in love. A wild mixup ends the love affair from which Reggie emerges triumphant. A fairly good low comedy release, with Harry Gribbon, Reggie Morris and Gertrude Selby appearing in the principal parts.

"June" Contest to Decide Type of American Beauty

The Palpitating Question, "Is the Ideal of Feminine Loveliness in America Blond or Brunette?" Will Cease to Agitate the Country After Decision

THE "Runaway June" contest, which is being carried in many theatres throughout the United States, recently developed the fact that of all the candidates, twenty-five per cent. were married.

Prizes in each state for the woman elected by the photoplay "fans" of that state are provided in this contest. Votings are to be at showings of the serial "Runaway June." Since each woman must appeal to large bodies of men and women in order to obtain the majority vote, she will thus be the ideal of the photoplay "fans," and hence typical.

The contest does not end until next September, so no final choice of those who are to go free to the California expositions has been made.

The fact that the married woman holds a quarter interest in the contest will be particularly gratifying to men and women of family. It is a decided surprise, too, for the average man would assume, observers declare, that the popular women in the United States were unmarried.

The contest recently was put on a broader plane. At first it was intended to limit it to the United States, but the women in Canada became interested in it, and through their theatre managers asked to be allowed to take part. Consequently steps were taken this week which permit the election of seven Canadian women—one from each of the provinces. These will join the American winners aboard the "Runaway June" special train of Pullmans.

The extension of the contest to Canada means that the contest will determine not only the typical women of the United States, but the typical woman of the North American continent as well, excluding Mexico, which has no time for motion pictures.

A composite photograph of the seven Canadian women and the forty-eight American winners would give a fair idea to most minds of the appearance of the typical feminine North American.

Who is she? What is she? Is she blonde or brunette? What is the color of her eyes? All these will be determined by the "Runaway June" contest.

Exhibitors Praise Pathé-Balboa "Who Pays?" Series

Bookings Are Heavier Than At Any Other Time and the Management Received in One Week Over a Hundred Unsolicited Testimonials

THE Pathé-Balboa "Who Pays" series has been winning its way on its merits to such an extent that today the bookings are heavier than at any time since its start. Exhibitors who at first were lukewarm are now among the most ardent boosters of the series. Last week over a hundred unsolicited letters of praise were sent to the Pathé offices by prominent exhibitors in every part of the country. The following are characteristic:

"Accept my heartiest congratulations on your 'Who Pays' series, which is in its fourth week in our theatre. It is the best thing in the picture line I have seen in a long time. It has transformed our Monday evenings from a quiet night to one of our biggest. Even with the circus in town last Monday our theatre was filled at an early hour. It can be said in every sense that they are pictures with a punch. I trust you will have something as good to take the place of 'Who Pays' when they run the twelve numbers."

This letter was from Edward J. O'Keefe, manager of the City Square theatre in Atlantic City.

Another letter, from C. S. Buss, of the Third street theatre company, of Bethlehem and Easton, Pa., reads as follows:

"It no doubt would please you to know that your 'Who Pays' series of dramas is one of the best things we have ever offered at our theatre. Our patrons are highly pleased with each story. This is verified by our box office receipts. We have one thousand seats on the floor, and we need every one and more when we offer 'Who Pays'. It does more business than so-called 'Big Features,' and as for quality, the others should take lessons from it. Let us have more like 'Who Pays.'"

BOOK NOW

The Universal's latest and greatest serial—a story of Adventure, Romance and Love—gripping, fascinating, thrilling, absorbing—the type of serial the public is clamoring for. Written by Emerson Hough, author of "The Mississippi Bubble." "54-40 or Fight," and other world famous stories. Featuring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard—with 15 weeks and 30 reels of alluring episodes.

THE BROKEN COIN

EVERY succeeding Universal Serial has outclassed the one before and THE BROKEN COIN will do likewise. "Lucille Love," "The Trey O' Hearts," "The Master Key," "The Black Box," have given to Exhibitors the mighty weapon with which to get the big money. The public does want serials—the right kind of serials—the kind and character that inspire, fascinate, grip, and that tell a real story in a real way, with punches in every episode, with heart throbs, serials that entertain week after week, that hold undivided attention from the very start to the finish.

THAT'S the kind of a serial THE BROKEN COIN is. It will throw its mystic spell around your audience—it will delight—absorb attention and highest interest. It will enthuse your audiences from the very first few feet of film in the first episode. It has cost the Universal untold sums to film this magnificent production, but every dollar spent will bring back to Exhibitors immense returns. You who failed to profit by the past Universal's Serials have the big opportunity before you NOW. Don't let the other Exhibitor up the street grab this serial away from you.

WHILE arranging for booking, write or wire your Exchange for a copy of the greatest advertising campaign book ever produced for a serial in the history of the film business. The Broken Coin advertising campaign book tells you everything. Gives you plans complete. Shows you the posters, tells the story, shows the complete advertising campaign for the newspapers—tells you how you can get the ad campaign cuts FREE—tells you EVERYTHING you want to know. SEND for a copy of this book. IT'S FREE for the asking.

"A Trade Secret"

By ALFRED M. POATE.
From Munsey's All-Story Magazine.
In Five Massive Parts.

A masterful production in five parts depicting the story of the secret process of manufacturing synthetic quinine and the many attempts made to rob the inventor of his wonderful and world stirring find, and through it all runs a pretty story of heart interest.

See the thrilling hand to hand fights, the automobile duels, the motor boat race and destruction of one of the boats, the actual blowing up and sinking of a mammoth house boat, all of which is full of punch and a new departure in motion pictures.

This production is full of wholesome situations and sentiment and is free from sickening cheapness.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

Co-operation With Operator and Exhibitor

EVERY branch of business requires for the highest efficiency a thorough understanding in all departments of manufacture.

The salesmen and the purchasers should understand each other and above all the operator in charge of the apparatus must have a thorough knowledge of the best way in which to utilize the machine put in his charge.

THE motion picture industry has advanced with such rapidity that it has been difficult for even the best informed operators and managers to keep posted on the most efficient and latest developments.

The exhibitor who provides modern equipment and employs expert operators which necessarily means a fair expenditure for value received, can today secure results on the screen which make almost a life-like reproduction of the actors.

IN order to secure this high state of perfection, however, it is necessary that every detail in the arrangement of the equipment as well as the adjustment of each part of the machine must be in absolute harmony.

I HAVE seen beautiful theatres in the most advantageous locations make a failure of the picture business, principally because of poor projection.

Managers and owners often pay hundreds of dollars per week for film service and make a financial failure of their business because of the employment of operators not up to the minute and antiquated machines.

The sooner the manager discovers that the machine equipment and the operator are the first consideration in making a financial success of his business the better for him and you, Mr. Operator.

THERE is perhaps no one man who has mastered the entire field in detail, but there are some who have devoted a great deal of time to the question of theatre equipment and projecting apparatus and who have had exceptional opportunity to observe the development and operation of such equipment.

I have been in constant touch with the latest developments during the past eight years and I have had the good fortune to have the valuable co-operation of operators in all parts of the world.

Through this contact with the men who are in actual charge of motion picture machinery, I have naturally found out the troubles which occur and the remedies therefor.

THE owners of Motion Picture News appreciating this fact, have engaged my services to write a series of articles with questions and answers to appear weekly on this first page of the Accessory News Section.

In my first articles, simple questions will come up which are intended for the man who has limited experience and for those who desire to become familiar with the elementary requirements of an operator of motion picture machines.

Later on questions of interest to all concerned will be brought up and discussed in a simple and instructive way.

These questions will be prepared and answers given every week, and I shall make them as interesting and clear as possible.

THE department of projection on one of the pages following will be the forum or meeting place where, you, Mr. Operator, will meet your brother-worker and I hope that I will do justice in being the medium of conveying your ideas to the others and to answer such questions as you may wish to put to that department of the Motion Picture News.

I WISH to impress on every operator that I am looking for co-operation.

No matter how simple a question you may ask it will be considered and answered. The more questions you ask the better, I will like it. If you wish to know where you can purchase certain goods or parts for machines, in fact anything which you require and you do not know who sells it, write to me in care of the Motion Picture News, 220 West 42nd street, New York City, and I will see that you get the information you are looking for.

IF you subscribe to more than one motion picture publication and you have asked in the past a question which has not been answered to your satisfaction or so that you could understand it clearly, don't hesitate to write to me and ask the same question; maybe I will give you an answer that is different and coincides with your experience.

THERE is nothing like competition in all kinds of business, and the man who is the best informed and knows how to produce results both scientifically and practically, is the man who will win in the long-run.

I want you operators who read this to become better informed, to give better results on the screen and attract larger audiences which will make your employer more prosperous and consequently your services more valuable.

If you have suggestions or new inventions which are for the betterment of the business, send the information right away.

IF you have photographs of your theatre and operating room with a short snappy description of the more important details and if you have photographs of yourself, Mr. Operator, and your assistant, give the names clearly and maybe I will find space and opportunity to make use of such information in these columns.

THE Motion Picture News has started the ball rolling. It is up to you to push it along.

WIDE ACTIVITY MARKS THEATRE BUILDING

A Large Number of Motion Picture Houses Are in Course of Construction Throughout the Country, in Response to the Public Demand for a Satisfactory Substitute for High Priced Speaking Drama, Now No Longer a Formidable Competitor of Photo Plays

THE motion picture theatre at the corner of Seventh and MacClellan streets, Philadelphia, the Empress, has been sold by Mark Haller to Arthur S. Berlin. This stands on a lot 50 x 100 feet and is assessed at $30,000. A first mortgage for $14,000 and a second for $6,000 were taken by the seller. A Levy is the new manager of the Luzerne theatre at 4008 York road.

Sauer and Hahn, Philadelphia, are the architects for a new picture theatre to be erected at the corner of Thirty-first and Wilt streets. This is to be a one story brick concrete and terra cotta building on a lot 44 x 124 feet which will be ready for bids in a week. The owner is the Northwest Realty company.

The Hoffman company, of Philadelphia, is the architects for a theatre to be built on Washington street, Boston, Mass., at a cost of $50,000 for the Orpheum Theatre company. It is to be of concrete, steel, brick and terra cotta 120 x 160 feet and will comprise basement orchestra and balcony.

The Hoffman company also has the erection of a three story fireproof theatre building in Pottsville, Pa., for Philip Brenermann. This is to be ready for bids in a week. It is on a lot 30 x 230 feet.

The Melrose theatre, at Melrose avenue and Heliotrope drive, Hollywood, Cal., has just been opened and the managers, Manker & Lane, report very good business. The projecting equipment consists of a Powers 6-A with motor, a late model stereopticon, and current saving device. The projecting outfit was furnished by Pacific Amusement Supply Company, of Los Angeles.

Trenton Theatre Closes for the Fifth Time

The Broadway Amusement Company, San Diego, Cal., is thoroughly renovating one of its houses, the Superba, and repainting the exterior. A handsome new sign will be one of the improvements.

For the fifth time in two years the Grand theatre, South Broad and Livingston streets, Trenton, N. J., has closed. This theatre was formerly known as the Broad Street. The fourth attempt as motion pictures and vaudeville proved to be another failure. Max Speigel, the manager, spent much time and money trying to build up a profitable business at this house, but he found Trenton to be overcrowded with screen houses.

As a last resort the town was flooded with 20,000 passes, it is said, but even this unusual offering failed to attract the public.

The house is still under the lease of the New York promoter and it is rumored he will not renew his lease after August 1.

The Cozy-Tracy theater, Boise, Idaho, operated for the past year by Fred N. Tracy, was taken over May 1 by the Isis Theatre Company, composed of Dave Farquhar and Ted Johnson. The theatre is now known as The Comic, and is showing only comedy pictures.

W. V. Silvers has purchased the Spectrum theatre at Ottumwa, Ia., and has re-named it the Strand.

R. E. Carson, of the Central Theatre Company of Iowa, has bought the house in Mount Pleasant, Ia., and has put Carl Stich in charge as manager. Carson heads a syndicate of business men who have planned to buy a string of motion picture houses throughout Iowa.

Competition Keen In Council Bluffs, Iowa

Motion picture exhibitors of Council Bluffs, Ia., heretofore united in everything and, forming one of the best examples of co-operative success in the Central West, have entered upon a siege of competition during the last few weeks that is playing havoc among the thousands of staid theatre-goers of Council Bluffs. The competitive scrap has consisted of advertising in every known manner and some manners not known heretofore. Wildly painted chariots, flaming with red-fire and advertising a certain theatre, are nightly sights on the streets, while flaring posters and signs are everywhere, including the pages of the newspapers. One big result has been the outpouring of many hundreds more of motion picture fans. The exhibitors bravely declare there will be no price slashing, that one dime for admission is low enough.

M. Haisfield heads a corporation formed at Rome, Ga., for the purpose of operating a motion picture show. The principal stockholders are merchants of the city. It is planned to open the new theatre early in June.

Carl Wright and Roy Hughes, well-known business men of Rome, have announced plans to open a new motion picture theatre at an early date.

E. L. Campbell and H. G. Campbell, proprietors of the Savoy theatre, Eugene, Ore., have sold it to a local man. H. G. Campbell has assumed the assistant managership of the new Eugene theatre, just opened for business by H. F. Hollenbeck. The Eugene theatre is located on Willamette street between Sixth and Seventh avenues, formerly serving as Opera House and playing the road shows. Mr. Hollenbeck thoroughly remodeled and increased seating capacity of the Eugene, making it into an up-to-date moving picture theatre. The Eugene will run a mixed program, of one good drama, together with a scenic and comedy.

Among Exhibitors In the Northwest

E. R. Lawrence, for some time proprietor of the Bijou theatre, Grant's Pass, Ore., has sold it to A. A. Miller. Mr. Lawrence has taken over the Star theatre, Ashland, Ore., thoroughly remodeled and added to its seating capacity, and is now operating under the name of the Lyric theatre. Mr. Lawrence now has one of the prettiest theatres in southern Oregon.

Joe Bradt, former owner of the Echo theatre, Portland, Ore., who for some months managed the Alaska theatre, Seattle, Wash., has returned to Portland and again secured the Echo, which is situated in the heart of the residence district of Sunnyside. Mr. Bradt reports normal business.

O. C. Smith, of Dallas, Ore., has leased the corner 100 x 100 feet on one of the main streets of the city and where the Grand theatre, now operated by Mr. Ayers, is located. The Grand, however, only covers a space of about 25 feet by 60 inches, with a seating capacity of around 200, and their lease expires the first of November.

In the meantime Mr. Smith has proceeded to build around the Grand theatre, and will conduct his theatre with the space he has, announcing that he will be able to open his new house early in June. When the Grand theatre lease expires, he will then add this space to his theatre.

He expects, when the entire theatre is completed around the first of the year, to be able to handle at least 500 people, and will without question have the central location of Dallas, which has a population of about three thousand people.

The Smith stage is to be 24 feet by 30 feet, as Mr. Smith intends to play all the road shows which come to Dallas, as well as running motion pictures.

Notes of Ohio Exhibitors and Theatres

J. R. Bennett, of Milton, Ia., has purchased the Gem motion picture theatre at Macomb, Ill. He contemplates making a number of improvements.

Grant Smith is constructing a motion picture theatre at Mt. Vernon, O., which will have a seating capacity of 600. It will be located on West Vine street, between Main and Mulberry streets. Excavation work has been started and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible, as Mr. Smith hopes to open the house before the summer is over. This is the first playhouse erected in Mt. Vernon for film plays.

The management of the Lyric Theatre, Lancaster, O., announces that no babies will be admitted to night performances. Two mats are run daily.

Harry and Clyde Keitner are planning to build a new picture playhouse at Fostoria, O., as the old opera house has been condemned by State authorities and will be remodelled into an office building.

The Hippodrome Theatre, Zanesville, O., is under new management, which has this slogan: "We invite your patronage upon the broad basis of quality. Quality is a reality and not a promise."

George and Charles McDermond will open the Orpheum Theatre at Attic, Ind., in the near future with a Mutual program.

THE THEORY AND NATURE OF LIGHT—IV

IN the preceding articles attention has been given to that portion of a beam of light which rebounds from the reflecting surface. But, in general, a portion of the beam also enters the reflecting substance, being rapidly quenched when the substance is opaque, and freely transmitted when the substance is transparent. Screens of all kinds are concerned in this part of light.

Thus, in the case of water, mentioned in a previous article, when the incidence is perpendicular all rays are transmitted, save the eighteen referred to as being reflected. That is to say, 982 out of every 1,000 rays enter the water and pass through it.

So likewise in the case of mercury, 334 out of every 1,000 rays falling on the mercury at a perpendicular incidence, enter the metal and are quenched at a minute depth beneath its surface.

Refraction of Light

We now come to the phenomenon of light termed refraction. This deals with the light from the arc lamp until the light leaves the objective lens. When a ray of light passes out of one medium into another of a different density, its rectilinear progress is disturbed, and it bends into a new path. This phenomenon is designated the refraction of light.

The refraction of light obeys a perfectly rigid law which must be clearly understood. A diagram, Figure 1, may make this law plain to the operator without going too deeply into any mathematical demonstrations.

Let the shaded portion of the diagram represent an edge view of a thick piece of plate glass. The line B C, a ray of light striking the surface of the glass at an incidence of say 45 degrees. This ray now passes into a medium of a greater density than the air and its course is changed from a straight line. The course it will follow in passing through the glass, is the line C E. If the light was not refracted, its course would be a straight line, as C K.

The amount of refraction for the same medium varies with the angle at which the ray strikes the surface. If the ray was perpendicular, or the line M C, the ray passes without change of direction, and, in other positions, the refraction increases with the angle at which the ray strikes the surface.

With the point C as a center, draw a circle as shown by the letters N M O G. Now, draw a line at a right angle to the perpendicular line M C to the point A on the circumference and mark this line A D. In a like manner, draw another line from the course of the refracted ray at its intersection with the circle, and mark this line H R. It will always be found that the distance A D divided by the distance H R is a constant quantity, no matter what may be the angle at which the ray enters the glass.

The angle formed by the lines M C, C B above the surface of the glass is called the angle of incidence. The angle formed by G C E, below the surface, is called the angle of refraction. However these angles may vary in size this bond of relationship is never severed. If one of them be lessened or augmented, the other must diminisl. or increase so as to obey this law.

This constant quantity here referred to is called the index of refraction.

Different bodies possess different refractive power, and, as a rule, the densest substances refract most. The method adopted for describing the comparative refractive power of different bodies is to state this ratio of the distances represented by the lines A D and H R (these lines are termed the sines of the included angles) and called the index of refraction of the body.

For ice it is 1.30; for water 1.336; for crown glass 1.534; flint glass 1.575; and diamond 2.974.

Determining Relative Power of Liquids

For the operator that likes to experiment and find out the proof of such things, the refractive power of water can be demonstrated in a very simple device. Procure a glass tank near the shape shown in diagram, Figure 2, and cover one end, such as that lettered M L, with a piece of cardboard. Place a candle at any convenient distance, as at A. The rays from this candle will cast a shadow on the bottom of the glass tank in a straight line, as at E. Leaving the candle at this same position, fill the tank with water. The shadow of the end of the tank on the bottom will now only cover the area from H to L. The rays will have been refracted in passing into the water and change its course from a straight line to the line marked M H.

By filling the tank with other liquids, their relative refractive power can be determined. If vinegar be employed the ratio would be 1.334; with brandy 1.360; with olive oil 1.470; with turpentine 1.602; and with phosphorus 2.240.

These numbers express the indices of refraction of the various substances mentioned. All of them refract the light more powerfully than water, and it is worthy of remark that all of them, except vinegar, are combustible substances. It will be noticed that inflammable bodies are commonly more powerful than incombustible ones, and that those that are dense are more energetic than those that are rare.

In every case, when a ray falls on the surface of any medium whatever, it is only a portion which is transmitted, a portion being always reflected. If, in a dark room, a ray of light is received on the surface of some water, this division into the reflected and a refracted ray is very evident.

If a ray of light pass through a refractive plate with parallel surfaces, or through any number of plates with parallel surfaces, on regaining the medium from which it started, its original direction is restored.

Refraction Causes Water to Appear Shallow

Refraction always causes water to appear shallower, or a transparent plate of any kind thinner, than it really is. The lifting up of the lower surface of a glass cube, through this cause, is very remarkable. A straight stick thrust partially into the water is bent at the surface, the tip of the stick and all that is under water seems to be raised. With the same glass tank, used to show the refractive power of water, may also be used to show this effect of the bending of a straight stick when thrust partially into water.

Place a coin on the bottom so that it cannot be seen by the eye in the location of the candle. In other words, place the coin on the bottom of the tank in any position from H to E. When water has been put into this tank the coin will then be clearly seen. The effect is as if the bottom has been raised and produces this apparent shallowness to the water when looking down through the surface at any object below.

The rays of light are straight in air and straight in water, provided the density is uniform. This is not the case if from any cause the density is not uniform. The quivering of objects, when seen over heated coke or on a hot day, is due to unequal refraction, the density of the air being constantly changed from the radiating heat.

When a ray of light passes from one medium into another that is less refracting, as from water into air, it is then bent from the perpendicular. Hence, it follows that at a certain angle, called the critical angle, the light ray leaves the water parallel to the surface of the water. For water this critical angle is 48½°. When the angle of incidence is greater than this, there is reflection only at the surface of the water and the ray will not leave the water, but will be totally reflected at the surface. If you raise a glass of water above your head you can easily find a position in which the rays from the eye to every part of the under surface make a greater angle than 48½° with the normal. A brilliant mirror, due to the total reflection of light, will be observed.

Hallberg Equips New Parthenon Theatre in Nashville, Tenn.

C. IRA LAMB, proprietor and manager of the new Parthenon theatre, Nashville, Tenn., came to New York a few weeks ago and interviewed J. H. Hallberg concerning the equipment of his new Parthenon theatre. As a result of this interview the order for equipment was placed with Mr. Hallberg, and the order included, among other things, two of the latest type motor-driven Power's 6-A projectors, together with a 12 x 16 Day and Night screen.

The Parthenon theatre is one of the finest in that section of the country, being constructed along the design of the Parthenon with several columns, as in the original Greek structure at Athens.

The equipment is of the latest type and includes a device for changing alternating into direct current. Mr. Lamb has spared no expense in securing the very best results on the screen.

The "News" extends its best wishes for the success of Mr. Lamb in this new enterprise of his.

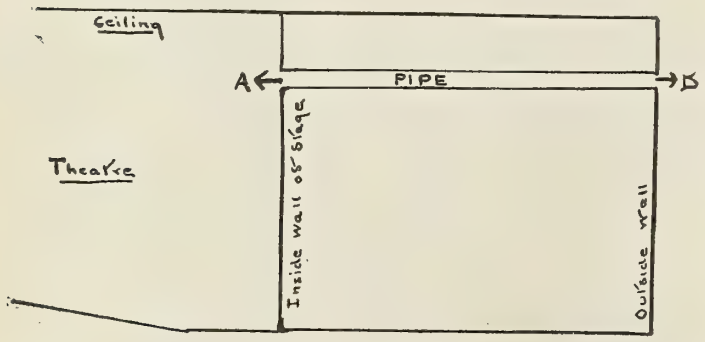
Questions Answered

Repairing Equipment



"Hallberg Helps" has taken the place of the Projection Department. Here will be found the answers to any questions which you may send into us. No matter how trivial or simple or how complex or difficult they may be they will be answered by an authority who knows and can give you actual help in your work.

Ventilating Problem Simplified

J. F. B., Neillsville, Wis.—Please explain to me at what point is the proper place to install an exhaust fan; will the best results be secured by placing the exhaust fan at point A or at point B? State your reason.

ANSWER: From the viewpoint of quantity of air moved per second it makes practically no difference. It is preferable to set the fan at point B because the noise will be less in the auditorium. Take care to make the pipe between points A and B considerably larger in diameter than the fan, so as to reduce the air-friction.

Personally, I would rather see the fan installed near the ceiling in either the left or the right hand side-wall, if there are no buildings or other obstructions in the way.

The only openings should be at the end of the auditorium opposite to the end where the fan is located.

Separate the Cores and Try Results

J. A. W., Ebensburg, Pa.—I have A. C., which gives unsteady light. I think the current is not strong enough; after the stores all close and there is not so much drain on the power plant, the picture is good. I have a Power's 6A machine and Sterling economizer.

ANSWER: You are right in assuming that your trouble is due to the heavy load on the electric company's system during a part of the evening. In many places the difference in voltage between the hours of 6 and 8:30 as compared with the voltage after 8:30 in the evening is as much as 10 to 15 volts.

This great difference interferes seriously with your arc and consequently the projection is poor when the voltage is low.

Your Sterling economizer is a large choke-coil which is provided with an adjustment allowing you to increase or decrease the air gap between the iron cores.

Separate the cores from ¼ to ½ inch more and try the results. If your arc is too powerful after 8 or 9 P. M., when the voltage comes up, you can put the core together again.

Your Sterling economizer may be adjusted for 60 cycles; my record shows you have 66 cycle current supply, which means that you should, in order to get the proper amount of current at the arc, separate the cores at least ¼ to ½ inch any way at all times, and maybe a little more than that during the early part of the evening when your voltage is very low.

Camera for Lantern Slides

F. de B., Los Angeles, Calif.—I wish to have your advice concerning the purchase of a camera and lens best suited to make lantern slides in an amateur way. Is an anastigmat lens a necessity? Is a Kodak or a camera of that style with short or single extension for the bellow sufficient to take all kinds of pictures at different distances?

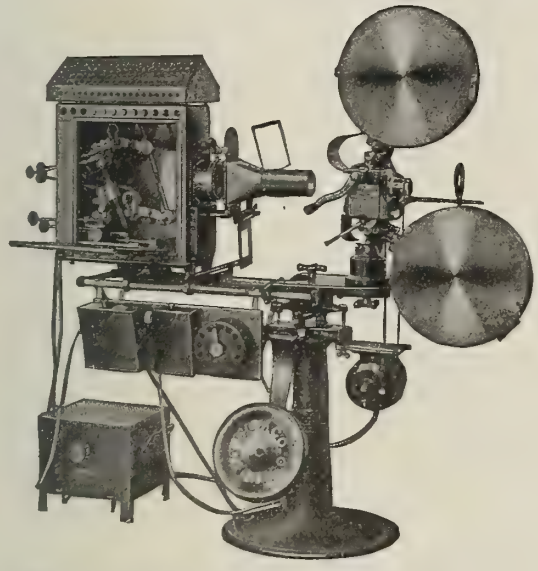
ANSWER: An anastigmat lens is not a necessity with any camera. The better cameras and Kodaks on the market are furnished with very good lenses for amateur purposes, but where you are looking for good results, especially when you consider that your small slide has to be magnified maybe a thousand times, then you will appreciate the value of the best lens which you can afford to buy.

A Kodak or camera of the ordinary style has sufficient bellow extension to allow perfect focusing under all normal conditions. If you have a high class anastigmat lens one section may be taken off, practically doubling the foci of your lens system, which will require longer bellows in order to secure proper focus.

The more modern cameras are provided with adjustable bellows. The advantage to you of a lens and bellows which may be extended for high focus is that you may photograph a distant scene on a larger scale by merely increasing the time exposure after you have removed one half of your lens combination and extended the bellows.

You may use any size camera as long as you have a plate holder for 3¼ x 4 inch plate, which is the standard size for lantern slides.



Condensing Lenses of Proper Foci Will Overcome the Difficulty

F. C., Winfield, Kans.—I have been reading your projection items in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and that is why I am writing you. Does it make any difference in your light or the size of condensers the distance the lamp is from the aperture plate? You know on a Power's 6A you can vary the distance.

ANSWER: The distance between the condensing lens and the aperture plate varies for several reasons. The simplest rule I know of is to use condensing lenses of such foci that you can move the lamp house as close to the aperture plate and the arc as close to the condensing lenses as possible and still secure a flat field of light on your screen.

This is a broad way in which to answer your question, but it solves the problem where you have a given condition with the machine installed, and a few different size condensing lenses to experiment with. If you will give the exact distance from your aperture plate to the screen, the size of your picture, the foci of your M. P. lens, the foci of each condensing lens you are using now and if the two lenses are of different foci state which one is next to the arc, and specify also the kind of current you are now using at the arc, then I will give you specific information through these columns.

We have used the Motiograph for some time and the machine is as good as new, we have spent a mere trifle for parts, compared to other makes we have had—it can't wear out. We would not be without the Motiograph for twice the price.

Recent Changes Made in National Electrical Code

THE National Fire Protection Association at its bi-ennial meeting in New York City, this spring, made new rules to cover gas-filled lamps and affecting theatre electrical equipment as follows:

A new rule, to be known as No. 35, covering gas-filled lamps permits units rated at 1,320 watts (or thirty-two sockets or receptacles) to depend on the same cut-out for protection, if wire equal in size to No. 14 B & S gage is carried directly into keyless sockets or receptacles.

Where a single socket, or receptacle, is connected to a circuit, the cut-out must limit the power delivered through the circuit to the rating of the socket or receptacle.

Gas-filled incandescent lamps are not allowed to be used in show windows or other locations where they are liable to come in contact with inflammable material. They may be used in such places, however, when supported in approved fixtures, no exposed part of which attains a temperature exceeding 200° Farenheit.

Gas-filled lamps rated above 100 watts and equipped with shades, or other inclosures above the sockets, must not be used with fibre-lined brass-shell sockets of either the medium base or mogal base types; units rated above 200 watts must not be used in medium base sockets, and those rated above 1,500 watts must not be used in the mogal base sockets.

Within buildings, or where the temperature to which lamp fitting may be subjected to exceed 120° Farenheit, the fixtures must be wired with conductors having approved slow-burning insulation or asbestos covering.

Among the changes and additions affecting theatre electrical equipment were the following: Lamp dimmers must be de-energized when the switch controlling the circuit is open. Not more than thirty-two receptacles can be dependent on one cut-out. Dressing-room lamp-guards must be sealed or locked into place.

Motion picture booths must be ventilated by a fan exhaust capable of exhausting 50 cubic feet of air per minute, the motor being so connected that it will not be in the path of the heated gases. Motion picture equipments for home, lecture halls and other places must not require more than 660 watts.

An investigating committee has recommended the advisability of brush standardization, from the facts brought out that there is upwards of 5,000 different types and sizes of carbon and copper brushes now necessary to supply the trade.

Masterlite Screen Put in Many Detroit Houses

THE Masterlite Screen company of Detroit has moved its offices from 97 Woodward avenue to more spacious quarters at 265 East Jefferson avenue. The company is about to start an extensive campaign to introduce its gold woven screens among exhibitors throughout the country.

The company has already installed these screens in over forty of Detroit's best motion picture theatres, including the Majestic, the Boulevard, the Victoria, the Grand Circus, the Addison, the Monroe, the Norwood and the Virginia Park.

Under all the various conditions of projection in these theatres the screens are showing remarkably clear pictures.

"Los Angeles Weekly News Film" Launched

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, June 7.

"LOS ANGELES WEEKLY NEWS FILM," to consist of from five hundred to one thousand feet, is a new project launched by Jim Ashton, formerly camera man for Pathé and Gaumont Weeklies. The first subject shows Memorial Day exercises at the Sawtelle Soldiers' Home, playground pageant and submarine practice with genuine torpedoes.

The latter scenes were taken just out of the Los Angeles Harbor. This week Mr. Ashton secured the picture of the breaking forth of an oil gusher in the Montebello fields, near Fillmore.

Embee Will Make Lantern Slide Compound

THE Embee Manufacturing Company is the name given a company composed of R. C. Marley, an operator of twelve years' experience, who was formerly connected with the local General Film exchange for several years, and his brother, Charles Marley, manager of the Los Angeles Film Exchangemen's Board of Trade, and who prior to the acceptance of this position was in the employ of Los Angeles exchanges for several years past.

This company will place on the market a compound for the making of lantern slides which will be known as the Perfection Lantern Slide Compound. It is inexpensive, permanent, can be removed from glass by the use of water, and by tests in numerous local theatres has been found to give perfect satisfaction.

Texas Exhibitors Appeal For Relief From "Fly-By-Night" Shows

MOVING picture exhibitors, amongst others, recently were up in arms at Hillsboro, Texas, over attempts by outsiders to establish itinerant "rag top" shows. They showed that they resided in Hillsboro permanently, paid taxes in that city, and they didn't intend that their legitimate business should revert to the fly-by-night exhibitor. It is said the ordinance to prevent the fly-by-night exhibitor will receive favorable consideration at the hands of the City Council.

Building Official Praises Keystone Exhibitors

Harrisburg, Pa., June 9.

JOHN PRICE JACKSON, Commissioner of Labor and Industry of the State of Pennsylvania, in the monthly departmental bulletin just issued, publishes a review of the work of his in "safety first" inspectors who visited all the motion picture theatres of the state in 1914, in which the commissioner speaks in terms of high praise of the theatre owners for their willingness and, in most cases, eagerness to carry out the department's suggestions in making alterations to insure greater safety for their patrons.

This statement by Commissioner Jackson is considered as particularly significant when it is recalled that, in a speech to the men who attended the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania in this city last January, he made the promise that if the theatre owners showed a disposition to act in conformity with the Labor Department's suggestions, in the matter of building new theatres or altering existing theatres he would take no steps to have the Legislature enact a compulsory building code, but would be content to let the present building rules and regulations, which he frankly said are mere recommendations and not mandatory, cover the situation in the motion picture field.

Believe Commissioner Is Satisfied with Exhibitors

In this connection it is interesting to note that the commissioner made no effort to have a mandatory building code enacted in the session of the Legislature which adjourned last month, and there will be no further regular session of the Legislature until 1917. This is taken to indicate that Mr. Jackson is entirely satisfied with the attitude of the theatre owners in this matter, and as a consequence there is a decidedly better understanding between the commissioner and the picture theatre men of the state. Commissioner Jackson in his bulletin says:

"It is estimated that fully three-fourths of a million men, women and children gather nightly in amusement places of the commonwealth. The necessity of seeing that the lives of this vast proportion of the citizens of our state are safeguarded is, therefore, apparent to every fair-minded person.

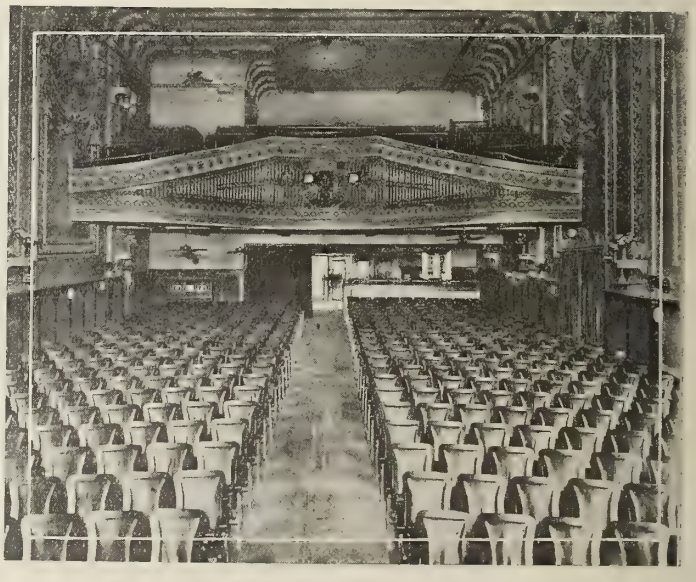
"This should be especially apparent when it is realized that possibly half of this large number of persons is composed of women and children, and also that a large percentage of these persons are strangers in the building. These large groups of people are either ignorant or indifferent as to the means of egress, except for the door through which they entered.

"Every audience has only a superficial knowledge of the houses they enter, and the means by which they could escape from the building in case of a fire or panic. They have a feeling of security that all exits are open and that there would be nothing to impede their escape from the building in case of fire or accident. The department, accordingly, is doing all in its power to see that conditions in these places of amusement are such as to warrant this feeling of security.

All Such Theatres Thoroughly Inspected

"During the past year, approximately all of these places were thoroughly inspected. In any one of them, where conditions were found which would tend to make it unsafe, instructions were given to the management to make immediate corrections of these defects. In practically all of these cases, the proprietors or owners of the buildings were desirous of having their places in the best possible conditions for the safety and comfort of their patrons. With scarcely an exception, they gave the inspectors of the Department of Labor and Industry their fullest co-operation, whenever improvements were suggested. The proprietors, on account of their own intimate knowledge of their buildings, were apt to depreciate the possibility of danger to patrons who had not the same knowledge until the inspectors called it to their attention.

"The department wishes at this time to emphasize its appreciation of the willingness shown by the proprietors and owners of places of amusement to carry out suggested improvements.



"The number of this class of establishments is increasing in the state at approximately a rate of one a day. As plans for new buildings are submitted to the department for approval, they are carefully examined. Proper seating arrangement, adequate exit facilities, proper width of aisles and passageways, standard installation of motion picture machine booths for adequate fire protection—all these conditions are carefully looked into. Instances occur in which some of these points have not been given sufficient consideration by the architect. In these cases, the attention of the interested persons is called to the matters in question and suggestions are made by the department experts, the endeavor being to suggest changes that shall make conditions conform to legal requirements."

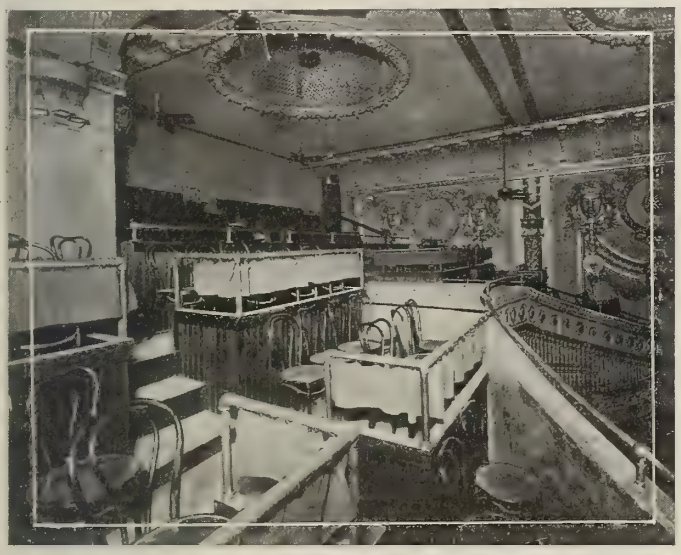
Install Smoking Boxes in Fichtenberg Theatre

ACCEDING to a popular demand, the Isis theatre, one of the Fichtenberg string in Houston, Texas, has installed smoking boxes for the benefit of its men patrons.

Unlike the smoking boxes in other theatres, those of the Isis have no low ceiling over them. The smoke has a full chance to ascend to the top of the building, where it is swept out by exhaust fans, leaving the air in the theatre cool and sweet at all times.



ORCHESTRA FLOOR, ISIS THEATRE, HOUSTON, TEXAS

The Houstonian public has officially "caught on" to the new boxes, according to the report that Manager Harry Van Demark enthusiastically sends. The boxes are operated at ten cents, the same admission as downstairs, except when big features like the Williamson submarine pictures are shown, when fifteen cents is charged as compared with twenty cents downstairs.

The Isis covers a space of ground fifty feet by 125, and has a lower floor with boxes in the rear; mezzanine smoking floor, balcony, pipe organ and piano music alternately. It uses Metro and Universal features liberally, besides the regular Universal service. It has an ice-cooling system, fine ventilation, a mirror screen, and a house staff of twelve people.

Like all his Southern houses, Herman Fichtenberg has made a "go" of the Isis. He is a pioneer in all things, and open-all-night policy and the rest.

More Airdomes Are Open for the Summer In Various States

RECENTLY Finley & Van Stembergh threw open a new airdrome in Kingston, N. Y., on Broadway, known as the Rondout Airdrome. Mr. Finley for years was proprietor of the Rondout Opera House, now the Orpheum, and Lyric theatre, Kingston, N. Y.; also the Violet theatre, at Rhinebeck, N. Y., which was closed to open the Airdome.

The Columbia theatre, Sixth and St. Charles streets, St. Louis, has closed its regular vaudeville program for the season, opening as a motion picture feature house with "The Nigger." The Columbia is the leading vaudeville house in the city, and during the closed season for that program will run motion picture features, changing only once a week.

The Fair theatre, Grand and Cass avenues, St. Louis, has been altered so as to enlarge the lobby and entrance in order to accommodate the crowd and make the theatre easier of access. The Fair is to be replaced early in the fall by a handsome new theatre with all the modern improvements. George Colovos, the manager of the Fair, hopes to move into the new house as soon as the airdome season is over.

The Yale Poster Mounting Company has just been incorporated for $5,000. J. D. Bone, the manager of the company, reports that the firm is doing much out-of-town work, as well as contract work for nearly every exchange in St. Louis. The headquarters of the company is at 3931-33 Olive street, St. Louis.

W. J. West is to reopen the Majestic theatre at Kewanee, Ill., and is installing a pipe organ as one of the improvements. He expects to show Broadway features along with his regular program.

The new Lyric theatre to be opened at Morrison, Ill., by Manager Yeager, is rapidly nearing completion and will be one of the prettiest small theatres in central Illinois. It is to be finished in old Moorish design, the lobby in old gold and the interior in ivory. A ventilator system will be installed and the heating will be by pipes enclosed in the ceiling. A twenty-foot stage is included to provide vaudeville should the management at any time decide to add this feature. The house will have a seating capacity of 400 persons.

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

The Kriterion is a new name for the airdome at 5814 Easton avenue, St. Louis, which has just been purchased by William Forman and F. Linberg. The place has been remodeled and decorated and will use the Kriterion service.

Woodland Airdome, on Morganford and Gravois avenue, St. Louis., opened on May 6 with motion pictures and dramatic stock. The Woodland is in a fast growing neighborhood, and has practically no competition, and always plays to crowded houses.

Manager Emory C. Downs, of the Knickerbocker, Cleveland, recently flashed this announcement on the screen: "Obituary notice: Maurice Spitalny passed his single life June 1, 1915. He will return in a married state in about a week." Spitalny is leader of the Knickerbocker orchestra and he flashed the notice to answer inquiries of patrons as to why Spitalny was not in the pit. The bride was Dorothy Kahn.

Athens has a new picture theatre, the Majestic, which had its formal opening on Thursday, June 3. The management made this announcement: "We have booked the highest class pictures obtainable and assure the public that each program will always be a top-notcher. We are offering Famous Players programs, featuring Mary Pickford." M. J. Gross, manager of the house, announces that three matinees will be given each week, with the possibility of daily matinees. Mushroom heaters will be used in winter, while in the summer cool air will be distributed through them. Air will be changed in the theatre six times an hour. One distinctive feature of the seating arrangement is a wide center aisle.

The Grand theatre, Lancaster, is showing motion pictures made in that city. Local events, such as parades, baseball games, taking in the crowds in the stands, and other Lancaster events, are pictured on the screen.

The Lyric theatre, Lancaster, has adopted the idea of publishing a review of the films shown at that house. The reviews are printed as advertisements in the Lancaster papers, the management paying the expense. Lancaster picture fans have given the idea their approval.

OKLAHOMA

The San Souci Dome, McAlester—J. A. Steinson, proprietor; Veno Pistocco, manager—has opened for business, Universal film pictures and repertoire stock playing the boards.

The Dome has a seating capacity of 400 and, by dropping the sides, can be converted from a theatre to an airdome.

Myers and Hammond have given up their lease on the Krebs Opera House, located at Krebs, Okla., and have closed the theatre as a moving picture house. The house will remain dark until the fall theatrical season sets in.

PENNSYLVANIA

The awarding of the "Hypocrites" prizes brought the biggest crowd of the season to the Globe theatre and the S. R. O. sign was put out early.

Abe L. Einstein, of the Stanley publicity bureau, read the letter of the judges announcing the prize winners and the honor essays. The four winners were then called to the stage and the prizes awarded to them amid the applause of the audience.

The Alhambra, a large theatre at Twelfth and Morris streets, South Philadelphia, has just installed a $10,000 Kimball organ. The Alhambra is owned by the Stanley company; the manager is W. M. Matthews.

The Palace theatre, controlled by the Stanley company, will in future be under the personal direction of Stanley V. Mastbaum. In addition to the vaudeville program, Paramount pictures, comedy features and travel scenes will constitute the daily attractions.

Day and Night Screen Installed in Alhambra

THE Stanley Theatre Company, of Philadelphia, has installed a large Day and Night screen in its Alhambra theatre. Considering that this theatre is 85 feet deep and 115 feet wide at the rear, it is surprising how wonderfully clear the pictures are from all parts of the house.

The Greenfield theatre in Greenfield avenue, Pittsburgh, has been completed and its doors thrown open to the public. It is a Feitler and Wahl house, and is said to be one of the prettiest in that section of the country.

The building is 45 by 150 feet with a ten-foot lobby and seating capacity of three hundred. The equipment of the theatre is of the best and the management has left no stone unturned to make this theatre the most popular in that section of the city.

It is said that ever since it opened standing room has been at a premium and that the grade of pictures used in the house are of the best possible to secure in the film market in that territory.

Announcement was made this week by the George Brothers, who are successfully conducting the Victoria theatre, Market street, near Third, Harrisburg, Pa., that they also have acquired control of the William Penn theatre, Thirteenth street and Thompson avenue, the same city. The William Penn is a practically new theatre, having been opened for the first time last September, since which time it is understood it had been meeting with moderate success. It is a most modernly constructed picture house, seating 800 or 900.

RHODE ISLAND

Excavations for the cellar of the East Side Toy theatre in Providence, R. I., were begun this week at the corner of Thayer and Meeting streets. The Toy theatre company expects to complete construction by September 1.

Fronting on Thayer street, standing 96 feet wide and 98 feet long, the theatre will be an attractive structure of brick, steel and concrete and fireproof throughout. The entrance will be on one corner at the front, with four stores on the ground floor. The foyer entrance will be 32 by 20 feet.

The auditorium will seat six hundred, with twenty boxes at the rear. The second floor, over the lobby, is to provide retiring rooms, picture booth, observation balcony and the manager's office. The stage is to be arranged so that it may be used either for pictures or concerts and lectures.

The main foyer will be divided into pilasters. Over these will be a stucco cornice upon which the barrel-vaulted roof is to rest. The interior will be ornamented with stucco and stencil coloring. The exterior will be of light buff brick, with darker brick and tile ornaments.

The trimmings will be limestone and granite, metal cornices and brackets.

The heating for the stores and theatre will be indirect, under one system. Ventilation will be forced draft and indirect lighting will be installed.

C. C. Darling is president and general manager of the company.

Manager Laurie of the Beacon theatre, Tremont street, Boston, Mass., will take over the management of a new theatre in Haverhill in September. The theatre will cost about $200,000, seat 2,000 and be the largest in that city. It will be located on the main street between the Colonial and Academy theatres. An Estey organ will be installed.

The Electric theatre on Church street, San Francisco, for several years conducted by Davis Brothers, who now have a poster exchange on Eddy street, has changed hands several times of late and is now being conducted by Bruner and Jacobi.

The New Verdi theatre, as the splendid new house of Ben Michaels on Broadway, San Francisco, is now known, is to be given over on the night of June 23 to the celebration of the fourth anniversary of the North Beach Promotion Association, of which Mr. Michaels is a member.

The name of the Garrick theatre at Stockton has been changed to that of the Strand, and this house is now under the management of D. Solari, who operates five theatres in this territory.

William Anderson, who for the past seven months has been conducting the Modesto theatre at Modesto, has been compelled through a court decision to return the house to A. A. Richards, the former owner. In the sale of the property to Anderson, Richards represented that the house was making a profit of over $1,000 a month.

GEORGIA

Under the management of Charles M. Slager, an experienced film man, the Grand theatre, Albany, Ga., opened on May 17, with a General program. The Grand has been redecorated, cleaned and made into a very attractive theatre. A new screen and projecting machines have been installed.

Mr. Slager, who is a manager with New York experience, has associated with him Lawrence H. Smith, well known in the South for his connection with the film industry. The policy of the house will be five reels daily for five and ten cents.

ILLINOIS

Manager Sauvage has opened his airdome at Alton, Ill., for its eighth annual season. Extensive improvements have been made. A color scheme of green and white is carried out, the fence being painted white and the chairs green and lattice work about the interior also is painted green. Among the pictures with which Manager Sauvage is attracting crowds is "The Diamond from the Sky" serial.

The Star theatre, owned by Harry Metcalf, located on South Adams street, in Peoria, Ill., was destroyed by fire. Metcalf's loss is estimated at about $1,000 on furnishings, films and motion picture machine. The fire is believed to have been caused by defective electric wires. It occurred early in the morning when no one was in the theatre.

INDIANA

Airdomes in Indianapolis and Indiana which have been forced to delay their opening for several weeks on account of the weather are opening up and hope to be able to remain open for the season now, although there are several which have opened twice and then were forced to close temporarily. Among those which have opened in Indianapolis are:

Jefferson, East Tenth street, of which John Truelock is the owner, opened June 4, running the United program.

The Princess, South Meridan street, of which W. C. Halstead is owner, opened last week, with the United program.

J. Kelley opened a new airdome at 819 Indiana avenue last week, using the United program.

The Veribest at Roosevelt avenue and Sixteenth street, owned by George Barrows, opened last week with a United program.

The Triway in West New York street opened last week.

Ike Beitman has bought the Savoy theatre in West Indianapolis.

The Airdome at Arlington, Ind., has opened for the fourth time this season, being forced to close three times on account of the weather conditions.

The Gem theatre, of North Manchester, Ind., is being overhauled. Two additional exits are being added and the stage is being moved back to make room for several more rows of seats.

An airdome has been opened at Corydon by J. W. Davis.

A 1915 model Ford car, a sixty-five-dollar diamond ring and twenty-five dollars in gold to those receiving the first, second and third largest number of votes in a contest is being conducted by the Orpheum theatre of Lafayette. The contest will close June 30. The votes are given with admission tickets.

The Lyric airdome, at Muncie, Ind., opened recently with "The Goddess." A ten-cent admission is being charged.

The Improved Order of Red Men of Fowler, Ind., has opened a moving picture theatre.

The Blinn theatre at Frankfort, Ind., opened recently with three reels of pictures and two acts of vaudeville. The program is being changed three times a week.

The Ideal theatre at Kokomo, Ind., which was damaged by fire recently, has been overhauled, redecorated and presents a much more attractive appearance since the re-opening.

Airdoms in Indianapolis and Indiana that planned to open about May 15 have been forced to indefinitely postpone opening dates on account of the inclement weather. Several theatres that did open have been forced to close, and it will probably be June 15 before the airdomes are able to open for the season.

Earl Moore, the new manager of the Indiana Union Show, of Bloomington, is planning to make a number of improvements at the theatre, after having devoted the earnings to charity for several weeks.

The Union airdome at Richmond, Ind., has postponed its opening for the third time this season.

The lease and equipment of the Irwin theatre, Goshen, have been bought by William E. Burridge from Peter and James Polezoes for $1,450. John W. Burridge, son of the purchaser, will be in charge of the theatre. Mr. Burridge will make a number of improvements and run a Mutual program.

C. L. Siddios, of West Lebanon, has bought from George W. Sink, a moving picture theatre at Veedersburg.

Arthur Robinson will run pictures in a tent at Milford, Ind., during the summer conths.

The Colonial theatre, of Indianapolis, which has been running pictures and vaudeville this spring, opened Sunday, May 29, as a picture theatre for the summer months, running photoplays exclusively. This is the largest theatre in Indianapolis now devoted exclusively to motion pictures.

IOWA

W. E. Bock has sold the Frank theatre of Council Bluffs, Ia. The theatre is now open every night instead of four nights a week as formerly.

The Grand theatre at Sioux City, Ia., heretofore one of the principal "legitimate" houses of the city, will be remodeled and will show motion pictures exclusively.

A recent fire at Van Wert, Ia., destroyed the two motion picture theatres there. The Smith theatre will be rebuilt immediately, although its proprietor, whose insurance expired the day of the fire, lost $1,200.

The Strand theatre, of Ottumwa, Ia., formerly the Spectrum theatre, has been remodeled, renamed, repainted and improved. It is now showing the all-feature program of the World Film.

William Hamsky, proprietor of the Crystal theatre at Cedar Rapids, Ia., has taken up an all-feature program with success.

LOUISIANA

Guy P. Stubbs, of Monroe, La., has applied to the City Council of that city for permission to erect a fireproof airdome at DeSiard and Jackson streets.

MICHIGAN

Charles Bailey, of Sturgis, Mich., has bought the Lincoln theatre at Valparaiso from Tom Polk. Mr. Bailey has been in the moving picture business in Michigan for the last ten years.

Airdome Park at Greensburg was opened May 29 by James Alcorn.

The Washington Park theatre at Michigan City, of which Hubert N. Phillips is the owner, is being remodeled at a cost of about $1,000.

J. N. Ledbetter has sold the Lyric theatre at Michigan City to C. A. Baldwin and F. Stock, of Benton Harbor. The new management will have an orchestra to furnish music, and the admission will be five cents, except Saturday and Sunday, when the admission will be ten cents.

MISSOURI

The new Mutascope theatre, built by Pohlmann and Zimmermann, on Olive street, St. Louis, opened last week to the public with an excellent all picture program. The new house is just a little east of the old Mutascope location, one of the oldest theatres devoted to pictures in the city, which was torn down to make room for a large office building.

The new theatre is in a thickly settled neighborhood, is modern and equipped with all the latest improvements, seats six hundred patrons, and is under the capable management of experienced exhibitors. Pohlmann and Zimmermann are the proprietors of the Comet theatre, at Twenty-first and Market streets.

D. T. Williams and his wife, who have just opened their new theatre, the Ashland, at 3520 North Newstead avenue, St. Louis, are shining examples of wide awake, progressive exhibitors. When Mr. and Mrs. Williams started in to show motion pictures, they had a little room at Thirteenth and Chambers streets with a seating capacity of only 170.

The possibilities of the business soon became apparent to them, and in seeking a location with more accommodation they settled on a lot on Ashland avenue where they erected a tent, used for exhibition purposes until a short time ago, when they built a handsome new theatre at a cost of sixteen thousand dollars, all earned during the last six years.

The Williams have always made it a point to give their patrons the best program to be had in proportion to the money invested and the price of admission, which was five cents. The new Ashland continues on the same plan as was maintained in the tent. The new house seats 1,000 persons, and is the only large theatre in St. Louis that does not contain a stage, as only motion pictures will be shown.

The Mozart airdome at 329 North Euclid avenue, St. Louis, has undergone very extensive alterations and improvements this spring which adds much to the attractiveness and comfort of the place. A new entrance has been built in the form of a triangle composed of three massive pillars, each topped with a large ornamental light.

In a conspicuous spot is placed a large Roman urn filled with flowers in bloom and other growing plants, trailing vines decorate the arch formed by the cross pieces connecting the triangle. A small landscape garden has been laid out at the sides of the airdome and in the space at the rear, and more than a hundred and fifty

Alfred G. Robyn Engaged As Rialto Theatre Organist

S. L. ROTHAPFEL, managing director of the new Rialto theatre at Forty-second street and Broadway, New York City, announced this week that he had placed under contract as organist for the new theatre Alfred G. Robyn, the well-known composer and director.

Through his musical compositions and his direction of many symphony societies, Mr. Robyn is probably one of the best known organists in America. For many years he was director of the Apollo Club, Amphion Club and the Symphony Orchestra in St. Louis. He came East definitely five years ago to succeed Clarence Eddy as organist of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church in Brooklyn. This post he held for two years and is at present organist of St. Andrews Episcopal Church in this city. During the ten years of his directorship of the Apollo Club and the Amphion Male Chorus Mr. Robyn composed as well for Henry W. Savage the comic operas, "The Yankee Consul," "Yankee Tourist," "Princess Beggar," and "Jacinta."

For Sam Bernard "All for the Ladies," and for Kitty Gordon and Oliver Morosco "Pretty Mrs. Smith." He also wrote the interpolated numbers for the comic opera, "Baron Trenk," for F. C. Whitney. His songs have had world-wide fame, principally "Answer" and "You," while his pianaforte compositions comprise the world-famous "Manzanilla," "Concerto in C Minor," "Quintette in G Minor," " Four Impromptus—op. 38," "Menuetto," "Chansonette" and many others. His "Storm at Sea," composed for grand organ, is probably one of the best-known characteristic pieces in this country.

Lately Mr. Robyn composed the music for the Lambs' Gambol at the Century Opera House, and he is a prominent member of the Lambs' Club. He is at present also a director of his own school of music at 23 West Forty-second street.

trees have been planted in the enclosure. E. Pasmezoglu is the manager of the airdome, which is owned by the Mozart Amusement company.

After four years of playing together in the archestra of the McKinley theatre, at 2218 South Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, Lois Coughlin and Frank Panus were married recently. The young couple will continue to furnish the music for the McKinley, where they have become experts in selecting suitable music for any film projected, as well as playing the music in a very skillful and artistic manner.

The Hippodrome, Sixth and Walnut streets, St. Louis, has closed for the summer, after five weeks of Metro features, which succeeded the regular vaudeville season. Alf. V. Oldham, manager of the Hippodrome, returned to Louisville, Ky., his home, where he will give his attention to the various outdoor amusement enterprises with which he is connected in that city, until he returns to St. Louis in the fall when the regular theatrical season opens.

NEBRASKA

An airdome being completed at the Carter Lake Club in Omaha, Neb., will show World pictures throughout the season.

H. E. Hartwig, propretor of the Bijou theatre at Seward, Neb., has bought the Lyric and closed it up. By owning both houses, he has control of the motion picture business in Seward and can concentrate it all to his principal theatre.

J. Longworth, of Schuyler, Neb., a prominent state exhibitor, called at the World Film corporation's branch office in Omaha the other day and concluded arrangements for a feature program. Mr. Longworth says business throughout the Middle West never was better than now.

The minute Omaha, Neb., "legitimate" theatres closed their season contracts they plunged into the motion picture business. There is much comment that motion pictures will exclude every other kind of entertainment in Omaha next season, as only a few of the larger play houses made a success of it this year.

The Empress, Omaha, Neb., has added a singer, Paul Glousse, to its program and finds the music feature is a big drawing card. He sings popular music which is advertised as being on sale at any of the city's music stores.

E. W. Sass has sold the Ideal theatre at West Point, Neb.

The Majestic, Magazine and Seventh streets, New Orleans, La., opened on May 22 under the management of Segrave and Hall.

NEW JERSEY

Ground was broken yesterday at Chambers and Hudson streets, Phillipsburg, for the erection of a moving picture theatre. The building will be 40 x 90 feet and will have a seating capacity of 600. It will be operated by the Phillipsburg Amusement Company, with Joseph Tirrell as manager. It is expected to be ready for occupancy by September 1.

Work has been started on the remodeling of the moving picture theatre at 527 South Orange avenue, Newark, which is owned by C. J. Horle. The work, as designed by Walter J. Aschenbach, will involve an expenditure of about $8,000. It will include additions to the side and rear and the raising of the roof of the present structure. The building when completed will measure 50 x 100 feet and will provide a seating capacity of about 1,000.

The U. S. Temple theatre, Bergenline avenue and Second street, Union Hill, under the management of Frank G. Hall, president of the United States Theatres Company, has been converted into a picture palace second to none in North Hudson. The theatre has been completely renovated and the formal opening under U. S. management took place May 24.

The Regent theatre, Burlington, on Saturday, May 15, opened to a capacity audience. It is located on the east side of High street, near Broad, and was erected at a cost of approximately $50.000.

NEW YORK

The Rex theatre, a new photoplay house, will be opened in New York today. The new theatre is appropriately located and well appointed, and it is expected that the patronage will be large at all times. Particular attention will be paid to giving the patrons of the theatre the best possible entertainment for the minimum price.

The Utica Hippodrome Amusement Company has purchased of Michael Buckley the Buckley theatre, located at the corner of Lansing and Nichols streets, Utica, and will completely remodel the place. It will have a seating capacity of 800 persons, the building being extended about 25 feet on the rear. A new lobby will be placed across the Nichols street side of the building and the outside of the structure will be of stucco work.

Plans have been filed for a two-story moving picture theatre on the west side of Eighth avenue, 28.1 feet south of Forty-fourth street, New York, for the Forty-fourth Street Amusement Company, as lessee of the property, which is owned by the estate of Solomon Rich.

OHIO

The Wonderland theatre, West Twenty-fifth street and Clark avenue, Cleveland, has been sold by C. J. Goeppinger and William King to Walter Bulow and D. K. Gresham. The now owners are arranging a series of feature bookings in addition to their regular program.

H. Well has sold the Enjoy-U theatre, 7700 Lake avenue, Cleveland, to K. R. Carson, who will continue the policy of showing feature pictures in addition to the regular program.

James D. Mooney has been appointed assistant manager and press representative of the Standard theatre, East Eighth street and Prospect avenue, Cleveland. He succeeds Thomas Colby, who resigned recently to distribute war films in Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The Alhambra theatre, Euclid avenue at 105th street, Cleveland, offered its patrons on Sunday, May 30, a personal view of James Cruze and Sidney Bracey. These players were in "The Million Dollar Mystery," shown recently at that playhouse. The house was packed all afternoon and evening by patrons who desired to meet the film stars.

Toledo parties are believed to be interested in a deal for the Ivanhoe theatre. Charles L. Blatz, owner, admits that a deal is pending and may be closed at any time, but refuses to say who the probable purchasers are. The Ivanhoe was completed last February at a cost of $60,000.

Charlie Chaplin has won a warm spot in the hearts of Cleveland motion picture theatre fans. The interest in this comedian is so great that the management of Luna Park on June 5 offered a prize of ten dollars to the man, woman or child who appeared at the amusement place with the best imitation of Charlie. A mob of contestants appeared.

The Standard theatre, Cleveland, appears resplendent in its new interior decorations. Big feature film productions have crowded the house to capacity, and Manager Grossman says that the theatre will be kept up to date at all times.

O. L. Taylor, proprietor of the Majestic theatre, Lancaster, has just had improvements installed in that picture playhouse, including a steel ceiling, new wall decorations and electric lighting system.

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

Send today for FREE Literature giving full details of the BIGGEST Proposition ever heard of in the history of MOVIES.

The Greatest Help Ever

Offered to Exhibitors

Here's the plan in a nutshell. First let us tell you that there is nothing for you to buy. We have nothing to sell you. The crowds that this remarkable plan will draw into your theatre will come without the spending of one single, solitary penny on your part Robyn-Kander Movie Tickets will be packed in the packages of the world's greatest manufacturers. When a man or a woman in your town buys a package of crackers, or of oatmeal, or soup, or starch, or bluing, or coffee, or tea, or sugar; when he or she buys any food product in package form; or any drug, or other necessity, there will be packed in that package a portion of an admission ticket (usually one-twentieth of a five-cent admission), and when the buyer has saved enough to make up the price of an admission to your theatre, that is 20 for a five-cent admission, or 40 for a ten-cent admission, you are to accept these tickets the same as a cash admission, and the UNIVERSAL WILL REDEEM THEM FOR THEIR FULL FACE VALUE IN SPOT CASH—or accept them in payment for film service, or anything else.

R-K MOVIE TICKET CORPORATION

That is all there is to the plan that needs to be explained—but the benefits and the way this wonderful scheme works out would fill a book.

READ ON. We want you to know the purpose of this advertisement, which is NOT TO INDUCE YOU TO BUY SOMETHING BUT TO GIVE YOU THE POSITIVE ASSURANCE OF PACKED HOUSES AT EVERY PERFORMANCE by accepting Robyn-Kander Movie Tickets for admissions to your theatre.

These tickets will be good for admission to any theatre in the United States or Canada, regardless of what film service they are using. These tickets will be redeemed at their full cash value by any Universal Exchange or by the Home Office of the Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1600 Broadway, New York. You have your choice of credit with the Exchange for goods or supplies or for Film Service, if you are a Universal Exhibitor; OR YOU CAN HAVE THE AMOUNT IN CASH.

Think of it! People will pack your house day after day, and night after night, because it costs them nothing to see your show, still you are paid cash for every admission.

Naturally you will welcome them. The more the merrier. BECAUSE you are going to collect full admission in CASH for every ticket turned in at your door, AND THE WHOLE TRANSACTION WILL NOT COST YOU ONE RED CENT. Not even if you never sold a ticket at your box-office would you stand to lose anything. Your Universal Movie Tickets are as good as cash. C-A-S-H—NO discount. Full face value at no expense to you.

Now do you begin to grasp the wonderful power of this remarkable plan to pack your house at every performance?

Can you imagine anybody throwing away, or neglecting to save any portion of a FREE admission ticket good in any Movie Theatre in the United States or Canada.

Everybody in the amusement business knows that people would rather have a free theatre ticket than the same amount in cash. It is that spirit that is going to pack your house—and more than that—it is actually giving your patrons "something for nothing."

Don't fail to write immediately for full particulars of this grand plan that will pack your house without one penny of expense for you.

it is not a serial—

THE GODDESS is not a serial—it is not a conglomeration of stunts thrown together without rhyme or reason. It is a continued photoplay in chapters.

THE GODDESS is an idyllic rhapsody by one of the foremost authors and continued story writers in America—Gouverneur Morris

THE GODDESS is in answer to public demand-for a continued photoplay in chapters different than a serial-for something new. You can supply this demand by communicating immediately with any office of the General Film Company or address below.

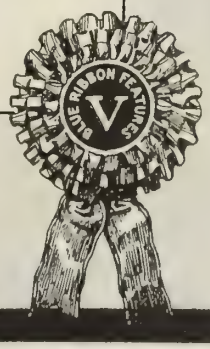
To the Exhibitors of the United States.

The Vitagraph Company has recently released through the V.L.S.E., "Hearts and the Highway"

This picture is a good five reel feature, but in justice, must be placed in class "B" as compared with "The Juggernaut" and "The Island of Regeneration"



Accordingly, the V.L.S.E.Inc., at the request of the Vitagraph Company, has instructed its sales force not to charge any exhibitor in the United States more than $50.00 per day for "Hearts and the Highway"

This ruling is made, because it is feared, that without it, exhibitors, by reason of their success with the other two features, would readily agree to pay an equal price, believing that "Hearts and the Highway" possessed the same degree of merit as the other two.

In other words, the Vitagraph Company does not desire to perpetrate any imposition upon the exhibitor by allowing them to believe that it is equal in merit to "The Juggernaut " and "The Island of Regeneration"

This action must not be taken to mean that "Hearts and the Highway" is not a good feature, for it is; or that the Vitagraph is lowering its prices; for such is not the case; but merely that both the Vitagraph and the V.L.S.E.. by comparison, have placed this picture in class "B", and want the exhibitor to know the facts, and to realize that he is being asked to pay only according to the merit of the product.

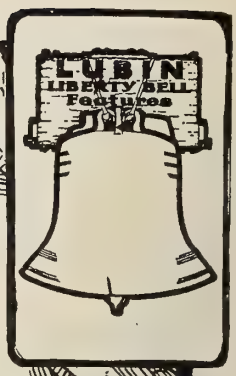
Viola Allen Immortalizes "The White Sister" in Film

The enchantment of sunny Italy cast its mystic spell over F. Marion Crawford and held him in its thrall. He spent years in this land of sunshine, of gorgeously painted seas and skies, dreaming of love romances that blossomed in ancient castles, of sorrows and tragedies buried within convent walls.

A wonderful inspiration came to him. He conceived a story of a great love, of a heart rending separation, and his soul poured forth all its depths of feeling, all its wealth of imagery in "The White Sister." Then was born the greatest work of his master mind.



Viola Allen was captivated by the great dramatic possibilities of this romance. She felt the soul stirring tragedy of the white sister with all her intense nature, and she put her entire heart into the interpretation of the part. How well she succeeded in bringing out all the great human qualities of the play is attested by its wonderful reception on the speaking stage.

Essanay was quick to see and grasp the exceptional opportunity to reproduce this great work of fiction through the medium of one of the greatest actresses. It used all its artistic and technical mastery of production to immortalize the inspiration of F. Marion Crawford through Viola Allen's genius of interpretation. And it has given to the world the greatest and most stupendous photoplay ever produced.

This six act masterpiece now is being booked through all the V. L. S. E. Inc. branch offices.

SMASHED!

EVERY conception of the term FEATURE has been revolutionized Thanhouserward. Powerful quality in one and two reelers forced a new shuffle of the cards—broke the spell of "forced length." I guess you know how exhibitors are jacking up their fronts with my regular releases! Why, they issue special hand-bills and heralds on them! It's because Thanhouser on a program makes it make good every time! They believe in me! They trust me! And there isn't a thing on earth that can make me forget that for a second!

"FEATURE" measures in quality, not footage! I have nailed that fact to the mast, and you can tag your future on to it! I could not to save my soul give you a more magnificent example to prove it than a picture entitled

"Which Shall It Be?"

Just read these lines:

"..... I will give
A house and land where you shall live,
If, in return, from out your seven,
One child to me for aye is given."

You remember that grand old home-circle poem! A poor family, seven children, with a cripple and a very bad boy among them, but bless those little kiddies, a mother's heart loves them all!

"Which shall it be? Which shall it be?
I looked at John—John looked at me!"

There's theme! There's pathos! You'll feature it and run it over and over.

Mr. William Fox,

Dear Sir:-

It gives me great pleasure, after viewing your production of "The Plunderer" to congratulate you on your un-tiring efforts and the lavish expendature of money which can be readily seen in your productions.

I am thoroughly convinced, if you continue to produce the same kind of features in the future, as you have in the past, that the public in general will be endebted to you for features of such superior Directing - Story - Photography- Settings- Stars and in fact everything that goes to make a finished masterpiece.

I think it is due you to know how the exhibitor and the general public appreciates the efforts you have made to lift the Motion Picture industry to a higher plain.

Personally, I am representing Mr. S. Z Poli, one of the largest Theatrical owners in the world, and can speak intelligently as to what we have observed in regard to your features.

Knowing it is only human nature for anybody to want to know when they have "Made Good" - I take this means of thanking you.

Sincerely yours,

"Graustark" and "Slim Princess" Will Bring You the Greatest Return for Your Outlay

Every exhibitor wants to get the greatest return possible for his outlay. The way to do this is to give your spectators only the best plays, plays that have proved to be unqualified successes.

The public is an absolute judge of what it wants. It is quick to detect the difference between a poor play and one that has quality, that human interest element that interests and holds them. You cannot afford to show any photoplay that the public will not accept.

The only photoplay that pays is the play of quality, the one that pleases the public. That kind of a play will throng your theatre and bring results in box office receipts. It also will bring the spectators back again, assured that they will find a good play.

Essanay's six act feature, "Graustark," written by George Barr McCutcheon, is such a play.

Essanay's four act feature, "The Slim Princess," written by George Ade, is such a play.

These two plays have been tried by the jury of the great American public and they have withstood the test. They have rung true. Their tremendous success is known in every city. The exhibitors showing them have been filling their theatres to overflowing.

Book these plays through any of the branch offices of the V. L. S. E. Inc. and you will have no trouble in bringing out the crowds and getting the best return for your outlay.

Helping the Exhibitor Help the Manufacturer

I HAVE just received from a prominent exhibitor a surprising letter.

To many it may seem impossible that such flagrant faults can exist in this business and upon such a scale.

But they do.

THIS particular letter is specific and straight from the shoulder. It is not an idle kick. It tells something.

The exhibitor booked a standard feature at a stiff price. He believed, as does every progressive exhibitor, that he could surely draw the people with such a picture, provided he was able to let them know he had it and to impress them fully with its quality.

SO, naturally, in booking the feature, he also expected to book, and laid great stress upon, advertising material. But he got nothing with the picture.

So he appealed to the exchange; and in reply he receives an elaborate letter explaining that no paper is available; no slides are on hand; no lobby display at all can be furnished.

HE submits the indisputable facts in the case and the following sober letter:

"The exhibitor far from the source of supply must give unusual publicity to big features. Selections are governed sometimes by the size and quantity of paper obtainable.

"A large selection is offered, but too often the exhibitor is informed at the last moment that 'the supply is exhausted.'

"I WANT to say that it happens three times out of four. There is no excuse for this when the feature is not thirty days old in the territory. Features that rent from $45 to $100 per day entitle the exhibitor to all the publicity that he should desire.

* * *

"THE trouble is not confined to any one concern. They all do it. They let you order material that, they know, they are out of.

"Complaints get nothing; interest ceases with booking.

"The above applies to standard features—not to wild cats."

CERTAINLY this is a deplorable situation; and assuredly it calls for prompt action upon the part of every manufacturer and distributor of big features who is guilty of such lack of co-operation with the exhibitor.

We are, all of us, pretty well agreed that proper advertising is the very basis of the exhibitors' success; and we all realize that the exhibitors' success means the success of the entire industry.

WE know this, but are we merely talking about it in a large, platitudinous way; or are we actually putting this very important policy into all its lines of practical operation? The exhibitor knows the necessity of advertising his pictures, in particular his big, expensive ones.

He is spending a lot of money today in newspaper space. The total amount in the newspapers of the county would probably open our eyes were it known.

BUT what is the manufacturer doing to help,—along this line of mutual profit?

And do the manufacturer and exchange realize the tremendous importance of reselling their products through the exhibitor?

TO get right down to brass tacks, the situation is simply this:

The average exhibitor everywhere simply cannot afford to book a high-priced feature unless he can advertise it in an unusual way.

He must appeal to people who don't go regularly to motion pictures. He must appeal to everybody so forcefully so that he can raise his prices. In other words he must have big feature service with big features.

IT is idle to sell him only a big feature. He must be equipped to resell this to the public for the manufacturer's sake as well as his own. Selling a feature without service is as futile as selling an automobile without service.

SOME manufacturers wonder why the exhibitor places so much stress upon paper.

Here's the reason: When an exhibitor contemplates the purchase of a high-priced feature, he assumes it is a high-grade picture.

He is not worrying about that so much as he worries over the ability to increase his attendance so as to pay for it. The paper, the lobby display, all the advertising helps are the highly important factors which enable him to get his money back.

HE needs unusual advertising. Therefore he wants unusual paper, something so striking as to catch the eye of every one, in particular those who don't look at posters simply because they know with half an eye that they are motion picture posters.

He needs unusual lobby display. He ought to use unusual newspaper display.

Helping the Exhibitor Help the Producer

HE not only needs and deserves this help, this service; he absolutely has got to have it.

And he must have it on time. He is up against the policy—fundamentally wrong—of a single day's show, so he must advertise smash-bang and completely.

HE ought to be just as sure of getting this advertising service as of getting the picture. He ought to get both at, at least, the same time. This is helping the exhibitor to help the manufacturer.—WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

Justice and the Advocates of Censorship

THE double victory for the motion picture industry, represented by the permission to continue granted "The Birth of a Nation" by Judge Fenimore Cooper, of Chicago, and the Boston Board of Censors, is a matter for universal congratulation.

It means something more than the defeat of the censorship agitators' efforts to mutilate a particular film. It signifies, unless we are very greatly mistaken, the beginning of a saner, calmer, fairer attitude toward motion pictures in general.

THE denouement in Boston, so far as the censor party is concerned, verges upon the ridiculous.

For weeks the friends of "the colored brother" toiled and labored for the passage of a law by the legislature that would give them the power to prohibit "The Birth of a Nation" from coming before the people.

They won. The law was passed. The officials they believed were with them were invested with authority to do precisely what the censor party wanted done.

AND then—

After due deliberation, after witnessing the drama in private and studying and analyzing its meaning and influence, reel by reel, the reformers' own censors endorse the picture, and announce that they will permit it to go on!

IN Chicago the situation was somewhat different.

But there, we have been treated to the refreshing spectacle of a judge, sitting far above the dust and smoke of prejudice, prudery and bigotry, seeing the truth as it is, and brushing aside fanaticism and hysteria to pronounce a calm and uncompromising verdict.

THERE are passages in the decision of Judge Cooper that deserve repetition—not because they are remarkable for their acuteness, but because they are a sharp reminder that he is one of the first men, on or off the bench, to apply common sense and unbiased intelligence to a discussion of a motion picture.

One of the three charges brought by the Corporation Counsel of Chicago against the picture was that "the photoplay if presented will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community."

THE judge's rejoinder is an incisive one.

"This last ground is based purely upon assumption," he observes. "To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction" (against the Mayor's refusal to issue a permit) "this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last century.

"The court cannot assume this will be so, when we know that there is universal recognition of the fact that no race has shown such great general advancement in from two to three generations as the negro race has done."

"EVERY night in every theatre there is produced the debased type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred of their race, and all the plays in which a villain played were stopped on that account, the theatre, as educator and entertainer of the people, would become a memory of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of the people.

"IF white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man whose acting would bring race hatred against that nation which his stage character had assumed, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law should be and is the same for both black and white."

WHILE there are indications that there will be an appeal to a higher court, it is difficult to see upon what ground any superior tribunal will take exception to Judge Cooper's decision.

Incidentally, it may be recalled that a number of influential club women succeeded in bull-dozing Major Funkhouser, Chicago's erstwhite censor-czar, into believing that the Irish or Hebrew comedy which has entertained millions from coast to coast on the two-a-day stage, was a wanton insult to both the races in question, would engender race hatred, and that the police should, and had the power to prevent their exhibition.

THIS is as good a time as any for the much-censored manufacturers of comedies to make a test case of one of these examples of police tyranny, and give the Mayor and police department of Chicago another taste of "Cooper justice."

GRAND BALL CROWNS READING CONVENTION

Three Thousand Watch and Dance at Fete in the Big Auditorium—Viola Dana Carries Off Trophy—Philadelphia Chosen as Next Convention City—Pennsylvania League Gets National Charter—Herrington Will Represent Keystone State at San Francisco Next Month—Zerr Presented with Loving Cup at Closing Banquet

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Reading, Pa., June 16.

SOME of the most important work of the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, which closed here with the banquet in the Berkshire Hotel last Wednesday night, was accomplished in the final hours of the big gathering. Indeed, it might be said that the convention did not get into full swing until Tuesday night, the close of the second day of the three-day assemblage of exhibitors, exchange men, actors and actresses, supply men and representatives of every line of activity associated with the motion picture industry.

It was on Tuesday night that the ball was held in the huge dance hall of the Auditorium, and it was generally remarked that it was not until then that the visitors "loosened up" to the fullest degree and made the event, from the viewpoint of sociability, by far the most important in the annals of the motion picture industry in Pennsylvania.

Crowning Event of Convention

The ball was the crowning event of the convention and it is no exaggeration to say that fully 3,000 persons were present to participate in the dancing or to see the score of prominent players in the motion picture field participate in the grand march and afterwards mingle and get acquainted with the other branch of the industry—those who market and display the film plays.

Nothing, perhaps, has ever occurred in this state which tended more to produce a more friendly feeling or to foster a more harmonious relationship between those who represent the various branches of the business than the ball of Tuesday night. First of all, it served to stimulate the harmonious spirit that has characterized the proceedings of the State League ever since reorganization in the Harrisburg convention last January. It is to this harmonious spirit alone that can be attributed the success of the work of the League's legislative committee that obtained from the Legislature the important concessions to the film men in the matter of modifying the state censorship law. The other concrete results of the convention may be summarized as follows:

Philadelphia was selected as the place for holding the next annual convention, in June, 1916.

Herrington Will Go to Frisco

The League decided to send Fred. J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania's national vice-president, as a delegate to the national convention to be held in San Francisco next month. Peter Magaro, of Harrisburg, was chosen as alternate to go, in case Mr. Herrington finds he will be unable to make the trip.

The League obtained its charter from the National League, handing over the check for the initiation fee to National President Marion S. Pearce, of Baltimore, who was present in person.

It was determined to continue the fight against legalized state censorship in Pennsylvania until the Pennsylvania censorship law is repealed, and to arouse public sentiment in favor of repeal through a campaign of publicity.

The initiation fee for new locals joining the State League was fixed at $10.

A constitution and by-laws conforming to those of the National League were adopted.

The old officers of the State League, elected in the Harrisburg convention, were re-elected to serve until the 1916 convention, as follow: Ben H. Zerr, of Reading, president; James Delves, of Pittsburg, secretary; Charles Segall, of Philadelphia, treasurer; G. W. Sahner, of Pittsburg, first vice-president; G. C. Miller, of Plymouth, second vice-president; Frank A Gould, of Reading, publicity agent, and Fred. J. Herrington, of Pittsburg, national vice-president.

Vote of Thanks to the "News"

The League tendered a unanimous vote of thanks to MOTION PICTURE NEWS for its support of the organization's efforts to improve conditions of the business in Pennsylvania and recommended that the delegates urge members of their locals at home to subscribe for the NEWS and other trade papers that have assisted in the work.

In the closing business session on Wednesday resolutions were adopted decrying state and municipal censorship and favoring placing the work under exclusive control of the National Board of Censors. G. W. Sahner, state vice-president of Pittsburg, presented a supplemental report in behalf of the legislative committee, in which he said the campaign to amend the state censorship law was directed, not at individual members of the board of censors, but at the system. He reported a balance of funds in the hands of the legislative committee, which will be used in prolonging the fight on state censorship.

National President Pearce praised the Pennsylvania League highly for the energetic way it is lining up the exhibitors for self-defense. He predicted that the national convention in San Francisco next month will be the greatest in the history of the industry and urged Pennsylvania to send a delegate, saying the national organization will help to defray the expenses of the delegate's trip if it has funds enough available for that purpose at the time.

Many Players Attend Ball

The feature of the ball on Tuesday night was the presence of the following motion picture actors and actresses, each of whom was introduced by Edward J. Morris, president of the Reading Chamber of Commerce, to the great crowd of dancers on the big stage at one end of the hall: Clara Kimball Young, World Film company; Pauline Frederick, Paramount; Crane Wilbur, Lubin company; Jessie and Joan Crane, Metro Pictures corporation; Viola Dana, of the Edison Players; Ormi Hawley, Lubin; Mabel Trunnelle, Edison; Royal Metcalf; Rosetta Brice, Lubin; Edward Earle, Edison; Mary Charleson, Lubin; Vivian Davis, Metro; Advin Green, Lubin; Robert

A GROUP OF PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS AND THEIR FRIENDS IN FRONT OF RAJAH TEMPLE, READING, PA., JUST BEFORE THE CONVENTION

Conness, Edison; Evelyn Brown, Ayeanddea company; Alvina Goodrich, Ayeanddea, and William McAteer, fourteen years old, who gave a clever impersonation as "Charles Chaplin, Jr.," having been trained for the part by the Silverman Brothers, exhibitors, of Altoona.

Following the introductions, in which each star made a brief speech, the actors and actresses led the grand march. The procession through the hall was led by Siegmund Lubin, head of the Lubin company, and who was introduced as "the pioneer of the motion picture business," with his great grandson, Master Jamsen. Mr. Lubin was a leading figure of the ball and made new friends by the score because of the spirit with which he entered into the festivities.

Miss Viola Dana, of the Edison company, won the big silver cup offered by the Reading "Eagle" to the most graceful dancer among the visiting players. Her dancing partner was Kempton Greene. The News-Times cup for the best local dancer was awarded to Miss Dorothy Hipple, of Reading, whose partner was Harold Gibney. The Metro cup for exhibitors was captured by W. T. Heenan, of Philadelphia, whose partner was Miss Vivian Davis, of the Metro players.

Loving Cup Presented to Zerr

The Reading exhibitors who had charge of the arrangements for this most successful ball were: Frank Hill, Julius G. Hansen, Cornelius G. Keeney, Ben H. Zerr, president of the State League; Frank A. Gould, State League publicity manager; Harry J. Schad, Henry Johnston, C. L. Carr and Paul E. Glase. The Rinngold Band and Ibach's Banjo Orchestra, both of Reading, provided the dance music.

The reception and dance in the Berkshire Hotel, Wednesday night, the closing event of the convention, was attended by more than 100 persons, chiefly exhibitors.

A silver cup was presented to President Zerr, who was voted the most popular exhibitor present, and there were several vaudeville acts by artists appearing in the Reading theatres.

Mr. Zerr, as toastmaster, introduced Mayor Stratton, who told the "movie" men they have great power in their possession which can be used for uplift work.

Short speeches were made by National President Pierce; Fred. J. Herrington, of Pittsburg, national vice-president from Pennsylvania; J. W. Binder, of New York, member of the National Board of Censorship, who outlined the National Board's publicity plan to be used in this state in the campaign to eliminate legalized state censorship absolutely; and W. Stephen Bush, of New York.

Michigan League Wants Membership Bars Let Down

Will Instruct Delegates to the National Convention to Vote for the Admission of Theatre Owners Who Are Interested in Other Ventures Connected with the Industry

Special to Motion Picture News

Lansing, Mich., June 16.

THE Michigan State Branch, No. 4, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, convened here Tuesday, June 8, for its annual meeting. Nothing of an important nature was acted upon or discussed aside from the election of officers and the selection of next year's meeting place.

The officers elected were: President, B. L. Converse, Owosso; first vice-president, August Kleist, Pontiac; second vice-president, C. C. Newman, Charlotte; third vice-president, Joseph M. Neal, of Lansing; secretary, A. J. Moeller, of Howell; treasurer, George Thatcher, Bay City; national vice-president, L. R. Simpson, Bay City.

Bay City was successful in landing the 1916 convention.

No delegates were elected to the San Francisco convention. These will be appointed shortly by the president. The legislature having convened several weeks ago there was nothing to take up in a legislative way, although the legislative committee reported that nothing of a detrimental nature was passed at the 1915 session.

This committee, however, did say that at the next session efforts would be made to have some changes made in the fire law so that it would not be as stringent, and yet would be so constructed as to give the full measure of protection as under the present law.

In other words, while the league is heartily in favor of doing all in its power to make moving picture theatres safe from fire it does not want to be held down too strictly when conditions do not justify.

The league has been making every effort to eliminate indecent and unworthy films from the state, and during the past year has been able to prevent the showing of more than one such film. Even better results are expected during the year to come.

No single exhibitor in Michigan has been more faithful and more devoted to the league than Peter J. Jeup, of Detroit. He has worked untiringly for the good of the league and the industry. When a motion was made that Mr. Jeup be tendered a life membership in the league it was accepted by a unanimous vote. In fact the motion was the cause of much cheering for Mr. Jeup.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the legislative committee for its fine work in keeping thoroughly in touch with legislative matters. J. M. Neal, of the Theatorium theatre, Lansing, is chairman of this committee.

Delegates appointed to the national convention at San Francisco, July 13-16, will be instructed by the Michigan league to vote for an amendment to the national constitution making eligible to membership any person interested in moving picture theatres, no matter if he should be interested or at the head of a film exchange, or even if he be a manufacturer. As long as he is an exhibitor he should have membership rights.

Michigan contends that what a man's other business may be does not enter into his eligibility as a member of the national association if the man is interested in a moving picture theatre. Heretofore and at present such a man would be prohibited from joining the national association.

The fact cannot be denied that the present ruling is a very strict one and keeps out many big exhibitors. Take, as an example, the city of Detroit; there is John H. Kunsky, who operates eight of the leading theatres, but who is also at the head of the Casino Feature Film Company. He is barred from membership.

So is A. J. Gillingham, owner of the Empire theatre and other moving picture enterprises in Grand Rapids, because he is the manager of the Detroit branch of the General Film Company. Michigan wants all exhibitors put on the same basis. If he should be interested also in some other branch of the moving picture industry, what has that to do with the M. P. E. L. of A., says Michigan State Branch, No. 4.

Lubin's New Plant in Philadelphia Will Soon Be Open

The Addition Will Be Known as Studio No. 3—New Building is Three Hundred Feet Long and 75 Feet Wide

IN order to broaden the scope of its work and carry out the big producing plans ahead, the Lubin company will open another big studio plant in Philadelphia within the next few weeks, to be known as Lubin Plant No. 3. The new studio is situated at Seventeenth street and Glenwood avenue, a short distance from the Lubin main headquarters at Twentieth street and Indiana avenue.

The new building is 75 feet wide, three hundred feet long, and has four floors. It was formerly a factory and the Lubin company is remodeling it from top to bottom. The roof has been removed and a huge glass top, with the necessary sides, has been substituted.

The top floor, which measures 75 by three hundred feet, will be used as a daylight studio. On the third floor there will be three artificial light studios, while the first and second floors will be utilized for dressing rooms, carpenter shops and scenery rooms.

When completed, the new plant will be one of the best equipped studio buildings in the country. All the very latest mechanical effects are being installed, and the lighting equipment will not only be the last word along these lines, but will include a number of new devices.

The present Lubin producing equipment now consists of two large plants in Philadelphia, another one at Betzwood, Pa., and additional studios at Los Angeles, Cal., Phoenix, Arizona, Jacksonville, Fla., Brooklyn, N. Y., Atlantic City, N. J., and Newport, R. I.

CANADA PUTS DAMPER ON FILM INDUSTRY

A General Tax of Exorbitant Proportions Is First Levied on Pictures of American Manufacture—Then Follows a Separate Fee for Each Showing in Any Part of the Dominion—Companies Are Often Compelled to Maintain Projection Rooms at Own Expense

CANADA is becoming the dismal swamp of the motion picture map. In the quicksands of ruthless censorship, the bogs of petty official bigotry and the quagmires of oppressive duties and taxation, the film business is sinking over its head.

Several of the more responsible American film selling concerns have weighed Canada in the balance, and found that it is not worth while to attempt to do business under present conditions.

To begin with, Canada appraises all film crossing its borders at $80 per reel of 1,000 feet regardless of the age, quality or subject matter. Figuring from this basis it imposes a tax of twenty-five per cent. per 1,000 feet, and more recently has added an ad valorem duty of seven and one-half per cent. on top of this. Following the ad valorem the next step is an ad infinitum duty, which is early Latin for a continuous performance.

Once the film duties are paid the censorship begins. They are censored in every province in the Dominion at a separate and distinct fee for each look that the local official heckers take. The price varies according to the province and conditions.

In Montreal it costs two dollars to have a reel turned down, in Toronto it costs one dollar and a half and in Winnipeg one dollar. In Saskatchewan, where art is judged in an atelier maintained at the expense of each film company, it costs one dollar and a half per reel, and from three hundred dollars to four hundred dollars a year extra tax for the privilege of breathing the nice pure air in that vast expanse. This latter is called a provisional tax.

In one province a film will pass if the scene where the dog bites the child is eliminated. In the next province the part where the plot reaches a climax may prove too exciting, and the whole picture is condemned. There is one great and supreme reason for condemning a picture in Canada. This should go in a border for framing, thus

BECAUSE THE CENSOR FEELS LIKE IT.

A personal opinion predicated on a Canadian official's intelligence would not be regarded as weighty in other lands, but Canada is Canada. The censors there are not selected from among philanthropic bodies, or from social welfare groups, or from the educated and informed classes as they are in the United States. They are chosen for personal reasons, and the results furnish ample proof of it.

In British Columbia each film company is required to maintain a local office whether it needs it or not.

In Halifax a new law has been proposed with this naive announcement:

"It's purpose is to get additional revenue for the province, and we know of no better place to get it than from the motion picture interests." The worthy premier caused it to be known that as "he wished to impose no hardships, the tax shall be as light as possible. All we want is the money."

Then there's the war tax, the tax of one cent on each patron of the motion picture theatre.

Exchanges are required to equip a room, install projection machines and pay the operators who run the film in addition to paying the censorship fees on each reel. In Montreal the censorship fees have been doubled, and one dollar additional is charged if the picture is re-considered.

As more than fifty per cent. of the pictures are condemned a reconsideration is necessary, and the total cost per reel is now three dollars instead of one dollar, as formerly. Nova Scotia there is also a two hundred and fifty dollar license levy to figure on each year, and in Quebec they also censor the posters.

Films are rejected without the courtesy of a reason or an explanation to the men who have invested their money and spent their time in submitting the reels for inspection. On the rare occasions when reason for rejections leak out they prove wonderful and bizarre. One comedy was turned down because there were "too many American flags displayed in it."

One educational subject depicting the growing of bananas was rejected as "suggestive." The serial pictures have been especially maltreated in some provinces. It is now impossible to have chapters of serial pictures passed unless all the reels are shown in advance, or the completed scenario submitted for inspection. Then at their leisure the censors proceed with their deadly pastime.

The censor stations in at least one province are located in out of the way places, working additional annoyances and hardships. In a recent shipment of films to Canada sixteen out of twenty-two reels were rejected, and not one of these had been found objectionable by either the American National Board of Censorship or any of the local censors in any state of the United States.

Lasky Plans New and Larger Studio at Hollywood

Structure Will Be of Concrete—Laboratory Will Be of Sufficient Size to Finish Positive Prints—Enclosed Stages Will Accommodate Twice as Many Companies as Old One

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

ANNOUNCEMENT is soon to be made by the Jesse L. Lasky company of its intention of erecting a new and larger studio at Hollywood, and while the estimated cost cannot be given at this time, as the plans are just now being perfected, it is stated on authority that the new plant will be of concrete construction and modern in every respect.

This week negotiations are being conducted for a suitable location for this new plant, which will mean the abandonment of the present large studio at Vine and Selma streets, Hollywood, which has served the company since the organization early in 1914 only when enlarged several times.

The company has now outgrown this plant, and as it is impossible to make additional enlargements from want of ground, the officers, Messrs. Goldfish and Lasky, have determined to move to another location.

The plans now being perfected, under the supervision of Messrs. Goldfish, Lasky and Cecil B. and William de Mille, by the technical director Wilfred Buckland, specify all concrete construction for buildings, dressing-rooms, shops, wardrobes and laboratories. The latter will be of sufficient size to enable the company to finish all its positive prints here, thus insuring the producers, who may inspect every foot of film before it is sent to the exchanges.

The exterior stages will be much larger than the ones at the present plant, and it is stated the enclosed studio will accommodate twice as many companies as can work on the ones now in use.

For some time it has been known the company was bothered for want of space, and it required but a few days for President Goldfish and Mr. Lasky to see the urgent need of additional producing room. The company now has five producing organizations at work continuously, and the stock company is the largest of any exclusive feature producing organization on the West coast.

Within the next few weeks it is stated on authority the producing company will again be enlarged. The old plant will be retained in its present state so that the companies can continue with producing without any delay while the new plant is being constructed.

MINA PRODUCERS PLAN FOREIGN OFFICES

The producers of MinA films have plans under way for the establishment of offices in England, South America and Cuba.

Following repeated requests for the MinA output, the producers made an investigation of conditions to ascertain the advisability of opening foreign offices, with the result that they expect to have new foreign quarters ready for business within the course of six weeks or two months.

The names of a number of film men, each well known in his respective territory, but which it is premature to mention, are under consideration for the management of these offices.

GEORGE KLEINE'S CANDLER THEATRE EXHIBITIONS PROVE POPULAR

George Kleine's custom of giving his productions their premier exhibitions at the Candler theatre, New York City, is proving a popular innovation with eastern exhibitors. His latest six part film adaptation of Porter Emerson Browne's "The Spendthrift," which was presented at the Candler theatre, Monday, June 7, brought many exhibitors in from neighboring states, and resulted in many bookings.

"It is an ideal way to view a picture," remarked a Hartford, Conn., exhibitor who had come in to attend the Candler showing. "A bright, clean, beautiful theatre, music and perfect projection teaches us what we can do with the right sort of feature in our own theatres."

RAFFERTY COMEDIES DRAW BIG HOUSES

With the Orchestra Hall, in Chicago, playing the Rafferty comedies to a packed house and the Claremont theatre, at Broadway and 135th street, New York, to standing room only, it is very easy to predict a prosperous future for the Rafferty series of one and two-part Irish comedy pictures that are now being produced by the All Celtic Films, Inc., and released through the exchanges of the World Film corporation.

Hundreds of booking from all over the country are daily pouring into the World Film exchanges, for exhibitors are always on the alert for something new in comedies, and Charles C. O'Hara's pet creation Rafferty has filled a long felt want in this line.

GARBUT AND EYTON NEARING PACIFIC COAST

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

General Manager Frank Garbut, of the Bosworth company, and General Manager Charley Eyton, of the Morosco company, will arrive home the latter part of this week, from a business trip to New York City, the purpose of which was to secure legitimate stage stars for Morosco-Bosworth productions.

It is very probable a successor for Director General Apfel will be announced upon their return.

James Durkin Joins Famous Producing Staff

His First Production for the Company Will Be a Combination of Drama, Comedy and Spectacle in "The Incorrigible Dukane," Starring John Barrymore

ANOTHER important acquisition to the producing staff has just been effected by the Famous Players Film company in adding to its standing staff of directors James Durkin, one of the most renowned feature directors in the world.

Mr. Durkin represents the younger and more aggressive type of motion picture director, yet his past activities have been sufficiently varied and cover a period long enough to place him in the very van of successful motion picture producers.

Mr. Durkin was for two years chief director of the Thanhouser company, and during the greater part of which period he produced the Maude Fealy features. Among his more notable screen creations, however, can be recorded "Dope," one of the first six-reel features ever produced.

More recently, Mr. Durkin has come into prominence through his direction of Betty Nansen in "The Celebrated Scandal," and "Anna Karenina." His latest subject, "The Running Fight," which was produced for the Paramount Pictures corporation, created a veritable sensation, at its initial presentation. Mr. Durkin's first production for the Famous Players Film company will be an elaborate feature film production of "The Incorrigible Dukane," by George C. Shedd, a unique combination of drama comedy and spectacle, in which John Barrymore will star.

The comedy of the subject is derived from a series of ludicrous misfortunes of which John Barrymore, as the young and incorrigible Dukane, is the constant victor; the drama from the thrilling manner in which the ne'er-do-well redeems himself, and saves the fortune and honor of his father, and the spectacular effects are accomplished by the explosion of a huge dam in the course of construction by the senior Dukane, which is saved from total destruction only by the quick-wittedness and resourcefulness of Dukane Junior.

These varying elements of photoplay composition should effectively prove the versatility of both John Barrymore and the director.

A. E. Smith's Letter to Irwin Defines V-L-S-E Policy

Calls Attention to a Maximum Price of Fifty Dollars a Day for "Hearts and the Highway," Released as a Class B Subject

A FURTHER insight of the Big Four policy of grading its subjects is obtained through a letter from A. E. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company, to Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E.

Mr. Smith's letter makes clear the point that the V-L-S-E is not going in for price reduction, but is determined to give exhibitors full value in exchange for the money it receives.

"Hearts and the Highway," the first V-L-S-E feature to be released as a Class B subject, is, according to Mr. Smith's letter (backed up by the critics), a good five-reel feature, and the only reason it is placed in Class B and a maximum price of fifty dollars put on it, is because of the exceptional quality of the Vitagraph Company's "The Juggernaut," and "The Island of Regeneration," that preceded it on the program.

Mr. Smith's letter in full is as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Irwin:

"We are putting out an extra feature in the V-L-S-E service, 'Hearts and the Highway.'

"We are afraid that because of the success of "The Juggernaut" and "The Island of Regeneration," you will be tempted to ask high prices for this extra feature, and because of the succees the exhibitor has had with the two previously named he will agree to paying a price equal to the first features issued.

"We, therefore, desire to impress upon you that, while we consider 'Hearts and the Highway' a good five-reel feature, it is not in the class of 'The Juggernaut' or 'The Island of Regeneration,' and we, therefore, wish to put a maximum figure of fifty dollars per day on this subject.

MANUFACTURERS MEET TO CHECK CENSORSHIP

Producing Companies Send Representatives to Session Held on June 14 in New York City—Plan to Take Vigorous Measures Against Inimical and Unfair Legislation—Committee Appointed to Advocate in Albany Constitutional Amendment Guaranteeing Film Drama Same Rights as the Press

AT a meeting of motion picture manufacturers held on Monday, June 14, at 1600 Broadway, New York City, at the call of J. W. Binder, of the National Board of Censorship, definite action was taken on the censor situations in Ohio and New York state and on perfecting an active organization of the manufacturers to oppose inimical legislation.

Mr. Binder's report on the censorship situation, showing that eleven out of thirteen bills introduced at the last session of the state legislatures have been killed, was heard.

Mr. Binder, J. Stuart Blackton, W. W. Irwin, Winfield Sheehan, W. Stephen Bush and William A. Johnston were named as a committee to go to Albany on Wednesday, June 16, to urge the passage of a constitutional amendment guaranteeing to the motion picture the same freedom as that accorded the press.

Winfield Sheehan, Frank Bannon, Arthur James, Walter W. Irwin, Ferdinand Singhi, J. W. Binder and Paul Gulick volunteered to serve as a committee to try to form an active manufacturers' association to fight hostile legislation.

Mr. James reminded those present that the National Motion Picture Board of Trade, an incorporation, is still in existence although inactive. It is possible that this organization may be resuscitated. Mr. Binder will consider the matter and then call a meeting of the others at which he will present tentative plans for getting the organization under way.

W. W. Irwin, J. W. Binder and Paul Gulick were appointed a committee to consider the next step in the Ohio censor fight. All present pledged the financial support of their companies for the fight in Ohio.

Binder Opens Meeting

The meeting opened with Mr. Binder's report on the censorship situation. The eleven states in which adverse legislation was killed during the legislative session of 1914-1915 are. New York, Missouri, Tennessee, Delaware, Michigan, Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Nebraska.

A law providing for the censorship of such pictures as are complained of in writing by fifteen citizens was passed in Massachusetts, applying to the city of Boston only, and the Illinois bill is still pending in the legislature.

Those present at the meeting and the companies they represented were: P. A. Parsons, Pathé; Frank Bannon, Edison; Winfield Sheehan, Fox; W. W. Irwin and Charles Giegerich, V-L-S-E; J. W. Binder, National Board of Censors; Harry C. Drum, World Film; Spaulding, Paramount; Paul Gulick, Universal; Arthur James, Mutual; Paul Cromelin, Cosmofotofilm; Ferdinand Singhi, Lubin, and representatives of the Motion Picture News and "Moving Picture World." J. Stuart Blackton, of Vitagraph, presided.

Walter W. Irwin, general manager, of the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Essanay, Inc., said in part:

"It has seemed to me that we, engaged in this industry, have been so engrossed and occupied that we have permitted ourselves to sit quietly by and allow prejudice, malice, ignorance or jealousy of success of one or a few individuals—not to regulate, for proper regulation we have voluntarily submitted to—but in part to destroy our business without so much as even a feeble protest.

Only Industry Walked Over

"I don't know of another large industry to so conduct itself in this respect. Each of them employs a strong, acting, energetic lobby. This is legitimate and proper unless made otherwise, but more to the point, each of them employs a publicity agent in every large center of population, in order that the public may be acquainted with their side of the case, and by virtue of the weight of public opinion, see that justice is done them.

"Beyond the shadow of a doubt this public feeling had its influence upon the courts.

"Never in the history of business has there been any industry, save this, which has voluntarily sought regulation, and which itself has recognized that its interests and the interests of the public are one and the same, and which has consistently kept in mind the morals of the public and its duty to the public.

"But now it is being condemned in certain localities simply because of its size and success, and we are being subjected to intolerance and injustice. Pictures put out by the people in this industry are so vastly superior in morals to the musical comedies, dramatics, operas or literature, that there is no comparison. And they should be superior, because they go to all classes of people, but we have recognized that and conducted ourselves accordingly.

"But now we have arrived at the place where thousands of dollars are destroyed by the stroke of a knife wielded by one, or possibly two or three, ignorant, prejudiced, narrow-minded, intolerant or jealous people.

"Now, we are in a particularly strong position to stop this business. It is much easier to stop it or check it than it is to eradicate it after it has gone to a certain degree.

Censorship Strikes at Liberty

"It is much easier to prevent legislation than to repeal it, and we are in a strong position to accomplish our end, first, because we submited voluntarily in 1909 to self-regulation; second, because with the exception of possibly 2½ per cent. of the pictures produced, we have lived up to that self-imposed regulation; third, because our pictures are of a high degree of morality; and fourth, and strongest of all, is the fact that the newspapers see the handwriting on the wall, which is, that it is just one step further toward usurping the liberty of the press. Therefore, any campaign we undertake, they will be heart and soul with us.

"Gentlemen, we owe a duty not only to ourselves, but to the public. This goes to the very fundamentals of liberty, of freedom. My suggestion of the way to handle this is to employ publicity agents in all of the large centers of population who will scrupulously watch the knife of the censors, and when it is improperly wielded, as it must be in most cases where pictures have been passed by the national board, to take up the fight in the press.

"Once a censor has been criticised properly and soundly he or she will be much more careful in his or her method of carving thereafter, and once we have the public with us, adverse bills will be impossible, for no legislator dares advocate improper legislation except where his constituents are asleep.

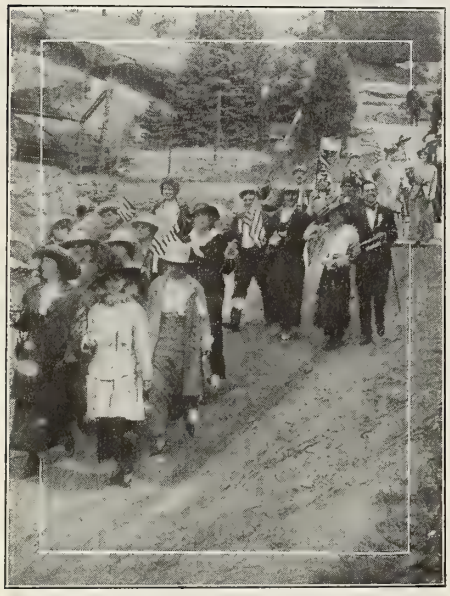
"Too Big a Job for One Man"

"We have been depending upon the personality and efforts of one man, Mr. Binder. Capable as he is, excellent as his work has been, it is too big a job for any one man. He is a good general, but as yet he has no army.

"What we ought to do is to begin our campaign in every large center of civilization and fight for our rights, not for more than our rights, but to see to it that our rights and our liberty, our freedom, are not trampled upon, and that our money is not taken from our pockets without justice, in other words, without due process of law."

SMALLEYS GO TO CHICAGO FOR PAVLOWA FILM

Phillips Smalley, Universal director working in collaboration with Mrs. Smalley (Lois Weber), has departed from Los Angeles for Chicago, where he will supervise the construction of a temporary studio to be used in the making of about half of an eight reel subject featuring Madam Pavlowa, during the time the noted dancer fills an engagement in that city. At the end of four weeks the company will return to Universal City, accompanied by the star, where the remainder of the subject will be filmed.



Mrs. Smalley is now engaged in preparing the scenario, which will be an adaptation from the opera by Auber, "The Dumb Girl of Portici," produced in New York City a few years ago, and in which Madam Pavlowa will be starred during the coming season. Mrs. Smalley and members of the producing company will leave Los Angeles the latter part of June for Chicago.

The cast selected include Douglas Gerard and Rupert Julian, who will play the principal parts, and a supporting company, including Edna Maison, Betty Schade, William Walbert, Wadsworth Harris and others.

Universal Crowns Queen of Beauty at Western City

Ruth M. Purcell, Winner of Contest in Washington, D. C., Is Declared the Most Beautiful of All Sixty Girls Representing Forty-eight States

A NEW Queen of Beauty has been crowned in Universal City. At a late hour last Saturday night in the newest city of the new world Ruth M. Purcell, winner of the Washington, D. C., "Times"-Universal beauty contest, was declared to be the most beautiful of all the sixty girls who represented the forty-eight states of the Union in the most interesting and successful beauty contest ever held.

Fully twenty thousand people were assembled to watch the selection of the Queen of Beauty, the most beautiful girl in the United States—as many as could get in front of the stage. The judges sat on a raised dias and the sixty girls passed in single file before them.

It was a sort of survival of the most beautiful. First each girl was introduced Diego, chairman; Max Wierozeck, A. S. Kestllyi, Mrs. Antonia Melville and Mrs. Maud Davis Baker, all well known artists of Los Angeles.

The decision of the judges was as follows: The winner, Queen of Beauty, to whom the great loving cup is to be given, Miss Ruth M. Purcell, of Washington, D. C., winner of the contest conducted by the "Times" in that city; second, Miss Clara M. McAbee, of Frederick, Md., winner of the Baltimore "News" contest; third, Miss Agnes Cheney, of Concord, N. H., winner of the prizes in the "Boston Herald" and Traveler contest; fourth, Peggy Dolan, of she made her bow to the judges, who were as follows: H. O. Davis, director general of the Panama California Exposition at San personally to the assembled audience then Newark, N. J., winner of one of the prizes in the Greater New York "Evening World" contest; fifth, Jean MacNicol, winner of the Minneapolis "News" contest, and sixth, Opal Crumbliss, winner of the Omaha "Daily News" contest. All of these received very honorable mention, and the first two will be offered moving picture contracts, and so will the other four in all probability.

Twenty thousand persons were gathered at the railroad station at Los Angeles when the Universal beauty train pulled into the station. A deputation of the Universal City officials was on hand to receive them, including Happy P. Caulfield, general manager of the Pacific coast studios, and Patrick A. Powers, treasurer of the Universal, who has been at the coast for a few weeks. On the train were President Carl Laemmle, Joe Brandt and Nat Rothstein.

At the city hall, Frederick Griffin, president of the Los Angeles City Council, acting for Mayor Rose, welcomed the beauty party and in a felicitous speech, assuring the girls that it pleased him to present them with the keys to Los Angeles. Then followed a parade through the streets to the Clarke Hotel, led by the cow boys and cow girls of the Universal ranch.

In the evening the girls attended a big party at the Orpheum theatre and then journeyed to enjoy a midnight supper at Levy's cafe.

UNIVERSAL BEAUTY BREAKFAST, HOTEL BALTIMORE, KANSAS CITY

Al Christie used them with his Nestor comedians and gave them something to laugh about. The girls then had an opportunity to act with J. Warren Kerrigan in a picture directed by Mr. Jaccard. Then Henry McRae, director of the Bison company, needed them in a special production.

Miss Purcell was employed as a typist at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor, in Washington, D. C. The lucky girl will be offered a position as actress with the Universal Film company, and her name will be heralded to the four corners of the earth in the event of her acceptance.

CHINA, DORSEY PICTURE, IS IN SECOND RUN

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, June 6.

China, the subject of the second series of the Dorsey expedition pictures, began the second and last week of its engagement at the Studebaker theatre, June 12. The six-reel travelogue has attracted equally as much attention and praise as did the Japanese series.

These pictures were taken under the supervision of President Yuan She Kai's officials. Dr. Dorsey has obtained some motion pictures which never before have been shown on the screen.

The third series is India. This picture is alive with many exciting wild animal hunts.

10,000 PEOPLE SEE "DIAMOND" IN TWO DAYS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, June 14.

When the first episode of "The Diamond from the Sky" was shown at the Palace theatre, owned and managed by Capt. M. McQuire at Santa Barbara, the home of the American Film Manufacturing company, where the serial was made, the attendance at the theatre in the two days was more than 10,000 people. The population of Santa Barbara is approximately 13,000. The chief of police and four assistants were needed at the theatre each evening to prevent traffic being blocked.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. HOW TRAVEL PICTURES CAN BE HANDLED

PROCTOR'S Fifth Avenue theatre, one of the oldest vaudeville houses now standing in New York, is presenting the Paramount Travel Series in a most novel and attractive way.

Charles Murray, an able lecturer, who has had some experience with Burton Holmes, is lecturing on the Paramount Travel Pictures and succeeds in making them additionally attractive. He presents considerable information which it is otherwise impossible to give, even by means of well-written sub-titles. Little personal experiences and anecdotes make the pictures especially entertaining.

Mr. Murray's act, which runs about fifteen minutes, is being unusually well received at the Fifth Avenue. Contrary to the usual weekly change, it has been held over for six weeks and has proven quite as successful at the Harlem Opera House, Keith's Greenpoint theatre and the Royal theatre. This shows that the public is not only interested in, but wants, instructive, even educational, subjects. The farsightedness which led the Paramount company to realize this fact has enabled exhibitors everywhere to give the people, at popular prices, what formerly only those willing to pay from 50 cents to $2 could see in the Travelogues of Elmendorf, Burton Holmes, Lyman Howe and others.

Mr. Murray's talks on the introductory releases preceding those photographed in South America, have been very interesting. Owing to the fact that Mr. Murray has lived for some time in various parts of our sister continent, he is able to speak with particular authenticity on those scenes filmed in South America.

RED FOOTLIGHTS FLASH NAME OF PRINCIPAL

HIGHER prices, better pictures, more co-operation between the theatre and its public—all the things which make for more stable conditions in the motion picture business—have received a big boost in Boston. "Boz" has come to town.

W. Fred Bossner is the rest of it, but the handle of the back of it is sufficient to the trade. Out of the West he has come to manage the Park theatre in Boston as a representative of Paramount. Already he has raised the evening floor price from a quarter to thirty-five cents.

He is laying wide plans for winning public confidence and has gone even to the length of assuring his ushers that they have a real interest in the house, and that their co-operation is necessary in making the public feel at home.

Boz is a strong believer in light theatres. Lighting effects, he feels, are most important. Also, he is working side by side with his musical director, Charles Frank, to give the best of appropriate music with the films. Mr. Frank plans a special program for each film, and refuses to play popular stuff.

The new manager's first bid for public co-operation will be the presentation to ladies once a week of large photographs of Paramount stars. He also plans to invite criticisms from his patrons. The exhibitor who seeks live wire stuff should keep his eye on Boz.

Mr. Bossner will use red footlights next week when the name character is flashed on the screen in "The Arab." The footlights will also be employed in the desert scene. Such innovations, he believes, add 50 per cent. to the holding power of a theatre.

"COLONIAL TIME"

A CLOCK on the front wall of the Photoplay theatre is universally used by practically all Wisconsin exhibitors. It remained for the manager of the Colonial theatre at Greenbay, Wisconsin, however, to hit upon a scheme to get himself some advertising out of the timepiece as well as give his patrons the correct time. In place of having the usual numerals painted on the face of the clock he had the words "Colonial Time" painted and the result is that every one is reminded of the theatre whenever he looks at the clock.

A TREMENDOUS HIT IN NEW ORLEANS

(Special to Motion Picture News)
New Orleans, May 31, 1915.

The "News" has made a tremendous hit locally. Herman Fichtenberg, peer of exhibitors, swears by it. All the other exhibitors and exchange men look to the "News" for the news in the motion picture game. They regard it as the business man does his morning paper. More and more is it becoming the standard trade paper.

"Thank Goodness!" the exhibitors say, "we've got a paper that keeps away from the dry stuff."

A. JULES BENEDIC.

COPY DEPARTMENT STORE BARGAIN METHODS

EXHIBITORS of the central west are adopting the methods of department stores to get before the public with bargains occasionally, and they are finding it boosts business to a great extent during the warm weather.

At the regular prices, it is advertised, the theatre will put on a program of the very best pictures that can be secured. The exhibitor makes a special effort to choose films of the highest class, even at a figure much in advance of what he has been paying, and then advertises them much the same as a department store advertises special sales.

People get so that they watch for the special bargain weeks, to be sure, but they also get into the habit of going to the motion picture theatre. They find how cool and agreeable it is, and what excellent entertainment the theatre affords. This is a new idea in the Middle West that is making a special hit with exhibitors.

NEWSPAPER CARTOONS BASIS FOR LOCAL SCENARIO

A NOVEL stunt that kept the Strand theatre in Milwaukee packed for a number of days was the so-called "Journal Movies." These pictures, which were made under the auspices of the Milwaukee "Journal," were based upon a scenario written by a local woman and selected from some thousands that were sent to the "Journal" by local would-be scenario writers.

Local amateurs were cast in the parts and the whole thing produced in that city. The paper of course gave it pages of publicity, and while it was rather difficult to tell what the photoplay was all about when the finished production was thrown upon the screen, nevertheless it satisfied all who saw it.

MAKES HOUSE-TO-HOUSE VISITS WITH PROGRAMS

BERNARD ANTONY, a live exhibitor in the little Louisiana city of Ponchatula, is a believer in personal calls on prospective patrons. And on his visits he takes with him handbills announcing that day's and the next day's program.

Not only that, but he has a diagram showing the location of seats and exits in his theatre. In a big town the plan probably wouldn't be practical, but Ponchatula only claims 2,000 souls.

MAGNETIC POWER OF A BRASS BAND

A. W. WALTON, manager of the Grand theatre at Perry, Ia., has an effective way of advertising coming productions. He gets big 24-sheet posters, puts one on each side of a wagon and parades behind a band. It is a loud, brass band, just the kind for such a parade, and Walton says as many as 1,000 have gathered about the wagon at one time as it paraded about the park and the main streets of Perry.

The Grand theatre orchestra plays in the public park during the supper hour and then parades to the theatre with the crowd following.

Manager Walton says this plan makes it possible to get the public into the theatre earlier in the evening and also fills his house with the best kind of customers. He charges one admission, fifteen cents.

A RING TAGGED THROUGH THE MAIL

SWAN & SWARTZ, managers of the Empress, Kearney, Neb., are among the live wires of Nebraska who are constantly before the public with business-getting ideas. One late one was a tag, with a finger ring wired to it, which was sent through the mails for one cent apiece. "The Wishing Ring" was the picture advertised, and the ring did it to perfection.

CUT DUES OF FRISCO SCREEN CLUB

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, June 14.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Screen Club of San Francisco, the monthly dues of that organization were cut in half and the initiation fee was waived for a brief period.

This organization has grown rapidly ever since the move was made to permanent quarters at 68 Eddy street, but it is desired to have a still larger membership and to be able to make a strong showing when the national convention of exhibitors is held here in July.

Robert Quive, manager of the San Francisco branch of V-L-S-E, is now a director of the organization, filling the position recently made vacant by Tom North, who is now located at Seattle.

GRIFFITH WILL NOT LEAVE MUTUAL

Rumors have been current in times past that David W. Griffith, the master director of the Mutual companies, was to leave that organization to enter the field as an independent factor.

The same story has been gossiped in film circles for the last fortnight. During the present week in Chicago, Mr. Griffith was asked point-blank by a newspaper reporter if he contemplated leaving the Mutual.

"I shall never leave the Mutual," replied Mr. Griffith, "so long as Harry E. Aitken is connected with it, and you can quote me to that effect."

RUTH STONEHOUSE BACK IN CHICAGO

Ruth Stonehouse has returned to Chicago from Chattanooga, Tenn., where she joined the Essanay southern company to take the lead in "The Dignified Family," a three act photoplay.

She has again resumed her work in lead parts at the Chicago studios.

FEATHERS TO TICKLE PATRON'S RISIBILITIES

W. A. MIDDLETON, manager of the Rex Theatre, Iowa City, Ia., recently employed a unique device to attract patrons. He sent out cards, in one corner of which was pasted a common chicken feather.

"If this tickles you, so will 'Tillie's Punctured Romance' at the Rex Theatre," the card read, and went on to explain when the show would be put on, at what price, and so forth. Manager Middleton tries to have a new stunt every week and manages to keep business thriving throughout the year.

LOCAL FILM ON ORDER OF "MUTUAL GIRL"

IN a contest conducted at a picture theatre at Columbus, Ind., to see who would be "Miss Columbus," Miss Espey Clutch, of Columbus, has been announced as the winner. A special local film will be made, something on the order of the "Mutual Girl" series, in which Miss Clutch will visit points of interest and leading business houses in Columbus.

The scenes will form the background while she will be the center of interest. The manager of the theatre has promised that the story of which Miss Clutch is to be the heroine, has a plot, but nobody is holding that against him.

Five Year Contract Stimulates Balboa Activity

Force of Men Making Improvements at Long Beach Studio Doubled on Receipt of Telegraphic Advice from Horkheimer in Connection with Pathe Deal

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

UPON receipt of telegraphic advice from H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa company, with regard to a five year contract with the Pathé company for all the productions of the Balboa company, the Long Beach studio took on additional activity, and the force of men employed in making improvements to the studio was this week doubled.

Early this year the Balboa company purchased a quarter of a square directly across the street from its studio and offices. Last week the only property in the quarter of a square in which the present studio is located was purchased, and now the two buildings—attractive light room California bungalows—are being moved across the street to the Balboa property, and the stage is being enlarged to take up the entire quarter of a square.

By this addition approximately ten thousand cubic feet will be added to the stage capacity, and, with the exception of the space occupied by the property rooms, carpenter and paint shops. The entire quarter of a square will be occupied by stages giving approximately forty thousand square feet.

Adjoining the new stage will be a double deck row of modern dressing rooms fitted to give actors and actresses every comfort and convenience. Each will be provided with heat, hot and cold water, and afford other pleasing facilities.

The offices of the company will remain in the attractive California bungalow, which is being removed to the quarter of a square acquired the early part of this year. The second bungalow will be occupied by the scenario department. Alongside of these a large garage with a capacity for twelve cars and sufficient space for complete workshop is being erected.

The Balboa company now owns three-quarter squares in as many blocks, all merging on one corner. The third quarter is occupied by the laboratory and projection rooms of the company. When all improvements have been completed the plant will have a capacity of thirty thousand feet of negative per week, and will employ seven companies constantly, each headed by one or two well known stage or screen stars.

The Balboa company started less than a year ago in a plant abandoned by the Western Edison Company with little or no equipment, and with very little money and no experience to speak of.

This company has produced and released more than one million dollars' worth of negative a year. The stages have been enlarged every few months during the career of this company.

The unprecedented success of the company is due to the untiring efforts of H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer, and of late to the very able assistance rendered them by Charles Mortimer Peck, formerly head of the sales and advertising department of the Box Office Attractions, who is vice-president and assistant general manager.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

FILM LAW COMPELS MUTUAL REMOVAL IN LOS ANGELES

THE first of the coming week the Los Angeles Mutual Film corporation exchange will move from its present location, 38 South Olive street, to larger quarters on the ground floor at 825-827 South Olive street. The moving was made necessary by the enforcement of recently-adopted fire legislations by the Los Angeles City Council, which prescribe that all films shall be kept in a fireproof vault, and inspection of the films shall be performed in film quarters separate from other parts of the exchange by fireproof partitions.

The new quarters will occupy a room 60 feet by 175 feet. The front section, 50 feet by 60 feet, will be utilized for the offices of Manager Johns, of the exchange. Just the rear on one side will be the fireproof vault and inspection room. These together over a space of 20 feet by 30 feet, half of is being taken up by the inspection room. To the rear of this are two vaults, each 750 cubic feet capacity and having rough shelf room to accommodate 3,000 reels each. Additional shelving can be placed in the center, adding to the capacity approximately 2,000 reels. Both the inspection room and vaults are ventilated by system of suction fans. Opposite the inspection department will be the poster and advertising section.

This will extend almost the full length of the building and permit of very efficient indexing of the posters, banners, slides and cuts. In the extreme rear of the building, extending the full width, will be a preview theatres, inside dimensions of which are 12 feet by 60 feet. The operating booth, fireproof in every particular, is being built, and a motor-driven motiograph will be installed.

The seating capacity will be seventy-five or more, and every effort will be made to make this a very comfortable place for the exhibitors to see coming releases. All in all, the exchange will be very complete in every detail, and afford the Mutual company very excellent quarters.

KLEINE OFFICES SHOW RECORD WEEK

DESPITE reports of over-production and sluggish markets, the various George Kleine offices rolled up a larger volume of business for the week ending June 12 than ever before in their history.

Figures from middle west offices were exceptionally good and indicative of a general tendency toward better programs on the part of corn belt exhibitors. All offices are registering heavy advance bookings for "The Spendthrift," George Kleine's latest feature scheduled for release June 21.

LEADING PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGE MEN ORGANIZE

AT the banquet held by the leading exchangmen on June 10, at the Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia, a permanent organization of exchangemen was decided upon.

This will take the form of a club to be known as The Film Exchange Club of Philadelphia.

George Beihoff, of the World Film, who conceived the idea, and sent out the original letter asking the exchangemen to meet for organization, was made temporary chairman.

The club will be social in its character, but at the same time questions relating to the betterment of exchange conditions in eastern Pennsylvania are expected to be discussed at every meeting. These meetings will take the form for the present of weekly dinners.

Around the festive board all questions relating to the exchange end of the film business will be threshed out, and it is hoped much good will result.

George Beihoff and C. V. Carrick were appointed a committee to arrange for the second dinner, which will be held at Hotel Vendig next Thursday evening. Permanent quarters will be obtained on the completion of the new building of the Universal company.

Charter members of the club are: George Beihoff, World Film corporation; C. V. Carrick and Joseph Sachsemaier, of the local branch of the Universal Film company; J. M. Butner, Mutual Film corporation; Jack Levy, Fox Film corporation; H. S. Hebrew, V-L-S-E; George W. Bennethum, Fairmount Film company; Harry Schwalbe, Electric Theatre Supply company; H. G. Atwood, Pathé Exchange; John Clark, Metro Film corporation; and H. Givens, of the Paramount pictures corporation.

LOS ANGELES BOARD OF TRADE ADOPTS C. O. D. LIST

THE Los Angeles Film Men's Board of Trade have adopted a new feature—that of having a permanent C. O. D. list. Exhibitors who have recently caused exchanges annoyance with their accounts and C. O. D. shipments by making claims for shortage of paper and slides broken, will be placed on this list, and all films will go forward to them C. O. D., with instructions to the express company that payment must be made before the films are delivered to the exhibitor.

This policy was adopted by the board following a very careful consideration of conditions with regard to a number of exhibitors, and the statement is made by members that they will adhere strictly to this policy.

The action of the board is being carefully followed by exchangemen in all parts of this country and Canada, as is shown by the numerous inquiries received weekly by Manager C. J. Harly, of the local exchange. The recent trade council organized by the New Orleans exchange men secured copies of the by-laws, which serve for both the Los Angeles exchange and also that of the similar organization of San Francisco exchange men, and adopted at verbatim.

A letter from a Boston exchange man commended the work of the Los Angeles men in working for the upbuilding of the exchange system, and giving a very interesting account of how the Boston exchange men by a series of weekly luncheons covering a period of the past year have been able to reduce the loss of account to approximately one per cent. Prior to these meetings the losses amounted to several hundreds of dollars monthly in almost every one of the Boston exchanges.

CLEGG LEAVES UNIVERSAL FOR UNITED FILM SERVICE

THE United Film service announces that Chester A. Clegg, former general manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for western Canada, has become manager of exchanges for the United to cover the United States and Canada. Mr. Clegg has left Calgary, the headquarters of his former office, and will be located at Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Clegg was born at Frankfort, Ky., on July 20, 1883. At one time he was with the Washington Trust Company at Seattle, leaving it for the American Savings Bank and Trust Company. He remained there for four years, during which time he was given supervision of the big building erected by the company. At the close of this time Mr. Clegg went to Calgary, where he entered the real estate field, and also became interested in the cafeteria business. Later he sold out his restaurant interests and signed a contract with the General Film company to serve in the capacity of film exchange manager.

This position he held for over a year, when he was appointed by George A. Magie, general manager of western Canada for the Universal Film Company as manager of all the territory from Winnipeg to Victoria for that company.

Mr. Clegg can be reached at 17 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.

LESSER SHOWS FILMS TO PRISONERS IN SAN QUENTIN

SOL LESSER, president of the Golden Gate Film exchange, learning that no moneys were set aside for expenses of entertaining prisoners at the California State prisons, has taken it upon himself to furnish motion pictures for use at the prisons gratis.

The first entertainment was given at San Quentin early this week when Mr. Lesser and a party of friends went to that institution, taking with them the George Kleine subject, "The Last Days of Pompeii," and a one-reel film of the San Francisco World's Fair showing day and night scenes, and the night flights of Art Smith, the aviator. Mr. Smith accompanied Mr. Lesser and gave the inmates a very interesting talk regarding his experiences in the air.

The entertainments, films for which will be furnished by Mr. Lesser, are to be given weekly at each of the prisons. A day or two following the first entertainment letters began pouring in to Mr. Lesser from the prisoners, and from the tone of these, he is lead to believe this is one of the greatest acts of kindness he has had the opportunity to perform.

The Golden Gate Film exchanges in both San Francisco and Los Angeles through Sol Lesser and E. H. Emmick, respectively, have requested the NEWS to extend an invitation to all visitors in San Francisco, before, during and after the convention to make their exchanges headquarters. The Golden Gate exchange at San Francisco is located at 234 Eddy street, and in Los Angeles, 514 W. Eighth.

WASHINGTON-METRO EXCHANGE IS INCORPORATED

WITH Oliver J. Allenbaugh as president, J. Frank Brown as vice-president, and Lawrence M. Day as secretary, the Metro Film Service company, with headquarters at Ninth and D streets, Northwest, Washington, D. C., was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000, divided into shares of a par value of fifty dollars each, under the laws of the State of Delaware.

The corporation's charter grants them the right to produce and film plays, buy, sell or rent films, deal in real estate, operate theatres and parks and do all things possible connected with the motion picture business.

As its name suggests, it will handle the weekly releases of the Metro Pictures corporation, and will include in its territory the States of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, as well as the District of Columbia. Mr. Allenbaugh has also stated to the NEWS correspondent that the corporation would probably from time to time secure the States right of pictures, the handling of which might appear advantageous to the interests of the corporation.

MOONEY TO ATTEND MEETING OF FOX MANAGERS

PAUL C. MOONEY, manager of the Cleveland offices of the Fox Film corporation, will attend a convention of Fox branch managers in Chicago on July 1. The business of the organization will be reviewed at that meeting. President and General Manager William Fox will address his field representatives.

Mr. Mooney has just been advised that the Fox Film corporation has made an arrangement with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad company whereby films will be shown in dining cars on that road.

The picture show will be a part of the dinners and the patrons will be entertained as they enjoy their meals. The St. Paul is the first railroad that has made such provisions for its dining car patrons.

PUBLIC WANTS MORE COMEDIES, SAYS LUST

SYDNEY B. Lust, manager of the United program, in Washington, D. C., is in the southern end of his territory booking features and arranging summer programs. Leo Garner is at the helm of affairs in Washington and made the following comments: "About equal to the demand for our big features comes the call for comedies.

"In fact, we have not sufficient comedies to supply the demand. Since we have been established in our new building, business has increased and exhibitors are more satisfied because we are better situated to serve them. That in itself is an asset to business."

ALLEN AGAIN WITH UNITED IN FRISCO

J. W. ALLEN, formerly San Francisco manager of the United exchange, who until recently was manager of the Los Angeles Universal exchange, has again accepted the management of the San Francisco United exchange. Mr. Allen left Los Angeles with the intention of going to take charge of the Seattle exchange of the company, but when he reached San Francisco he received a telegram advising him of the resignation of the former manager, G. J. Ekre, of the exchange there, and was advised to take up the work at that point.

MUTUAL MASTER-PICTURES ARE IN BIG DEMAND ON COAST

THE Mutual Master-Pictures are having very successful bookings in the Los Angeles district and the demands are all that can be taken care of by a single print of each subject. First runs of the pictures are at the Woodley theatre, which is given two weeks' protection, during which time the films play at San Diego and other out of town houses.

At the expiration of the two weeks they return to Los Angeles and play two consecutive weeks at the Comedy theatre and the Optic. The former has the best location in Los Angeles, has less than three hundred seating capacity and the price is ten cents.

WEBSTER MAKES V-L-S-E BOOKING RECORD

ACCORDING to all available information, a world's record in booking features was established last Tuesday, June 8, by A. M. Webster, booker for the New York branch of the V-L-S-E.

Mr. Webster on that date closed bookings for V-L-S-E features, aggregating $3,870, and practically all of the orders were for immediate showing; none of them for exhibition later than July 5.

Previous to his present connection with the Big Four, Mr. Webster represented the General Film company on the road, and more recently, handled the booking of features in Syracuse, N. Y.

MURPHY ADDS TO NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS

UNDER the managership of Fred B. Murphy the United Film service is continually adding to its business in New England through its Boston office. Mr. Murphy has just added a Boston theatre, the Unique on Washington street, to his list. Alden Washburn is manager.

The United exchange on Pleasant street is soon to be improved by the addition of an exhibition balcony with a pitch floor, seating one hundred. The contract has been let to Simon Gerroir.

THOMPSON MAKES FAVORABLE REPORTS

DAILY reports of L. W. Thompson, of the Los Angeles Progressive Paramount exchange, who is touring Arizona and New Mexico with the Bosworth subject, "Hypocrites," bring news of excellent business at all points, and no censorship troubles in any of the towns or cities.

SIEGEL WORKS OUT PROFIT SHARING PLAN

ABE SIEGEL, manager of the Detroit branch of the Fox Film Corporation, Peter Smith building, Detroit, will marry a New York girl some time in June. He will make his future home in Detroit.

He has been studying out a plan whereby he could increase the earnings of his employees as the earnings of the branch increased, and finally decided upon a method of sharing the profits. Every time the Detroit branch gains five hundred dollars in actual business transacted, based on the amount of money taken in, the employees will have their salaries increased ten per cent.

For instance, an employee drawing $20 would get $22, and so on down the line, even to the parcel boy. Mr. Siegel says that he expects to be able to increase the salaries of his employees at least two or three times during the year. The branch now employs, besides Mr. Siegel, three girls, one rewinder, one shipping clerk, one booking manager and two city salesmen.

BAY STATE RULES BLOCK FILM BUILDING PLAN

FIRE prevention regulations of Massachusetts have called a halt on plans projected by New York interest for a big central motion picture exchange building in Boston. Managers of the exchanges were strongly in favor of the scheme, since the exhibitor now has to travel from one section of the city to others in order to make out his programs.

But the fire prevention commissioner declares that such an eight-story building as the promoters contemplate, even though it were constructed entirely of steel, could not be used for film exchanges. The regulations confine each exchange to a single two-story building, with the films stored on the top floor.

A representative of the promoters interviewed some of the exchange managers later, but the fire prevention commissioner denied that any application for a building permit had been made, and insisted that such an application could not be granted under the present rules.

HOLMES TAKES CHARGE OF MASTER-PICTURES BOOKINGS

EDWARD S. HOLMES, who has been connected with the Los Angeles Mutual Film exchange for some time is in charge of the booking of the Mutual Master-Pictures, and has made bookings that will keep the films on the move for a number of weeks following their release date.

ALBERTA FILM MEN GIVE BANQUET TO RETIRING CENSOR

THE managers of the various film exchanges and motion picture theatres of Calgary, Alberta, gave a banquet June 5 at the Palliser hotel, Calgary, to R. B. Chadwick, retiring chief censor for the province of Alberta.

Mr. Chadwick has served in this capacity about two years, and has been exceedingly popular both with government officials and exhibitors, owing to his untiring efforts in dealing with the motion picture questions.

He has been persuaded to act as "appeal censor" in all cases of dispute as to the propriety of films, and will devote his time more exclusively to his work in connection with delinquent and destitute children.

He was presented by the Calgary exhibitors and exchange men with a handsome traveling bag, and in response expressed his greatest appreciation of the hearty cooperation of the Calgary film men.

Those present were: R. B. Chadwick, B. R. Crouk, J. J. Allen, Harry Allen, J. E. Williams, W. R. Marshall, D. E. Gurney, R. B. Wheeler, B. T. Phelps, D. G. Wakeley, J. E. Schaiffer and Alf. Bloom.

HARDEN INCREASES BUSINESS FOR FOX

CHARLES W. HARDEN, nearly twenty years in the amusement field, circus, carnival, dramatic, burlesque and musical shows, who also managed a number of theatres in the Middle West, including several large picture theatres, who took charge of the Fox offices at Kansas City and Omaha in the spring, has increased the business of his office to a gratifying extent.

CHARLES W. HARDEN

Mr. Harden was for some time the representative of Thanhouser in Kansas City.

COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD IN NEW ENGLAND

BOARDS OF TRADE are unnecessary in New England so far as payment for service goes. Some time ago the exchange men got together in Boston and, after four informal meetings, reached an agreement to demand prepayment from service users.

Since then there has been no trouble in this regard. The undesirable exhibitor has been kept out of the way and the managers of exchanges call conditions in respect to collections for service better in New England than anywhere else in the country.

BALSDON V-L-S-E GENERAL MANAGER IN NEW ENGLAND

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the V-L-S-E of a change in the management of their Boston branch.

George Balsdon, who will be remembered through his association with the General Film Company, the Poster Department of which he organized, has been appointed general manager for the New England territory, and will take up his new duties at once.

Before assuming charge of the Boston branch, Mr. Balsdon opened up the Pittsburgh office of the V-L-S-E and remained in temporary charge until the appointment of E. O. Child as permanent manager of that branch.

Through his long association with the General Film Company in many different departments, Mr. Balsdon hasc made the acquaintance of practically all of the prominent exhibitors throughout the United States, and through the fact that he has himself been an exhibitor, is particularly well qualified to carry forward the policy of the Big Four, which is to help exhibitors to bigger returns on their feature film exhibitions.

A. F. BECK TO JOIN NEW YORK OFFICE OF UNITED

A. F. BECK, formerly manager of the St. Louis and Kansas City exchanges of the Universal, and well known as a motion picture expert of exceptional ability, has left St. Louis to take up the duties of Orrin S. Goan in the central offices of the United Film service, New York City.

Mr. Beck is a practical motion picture man, having had valuable experience in all departments of the business. He is one of the pioneer film men of the country, and his wide acquaintance with exchange and theatre conditions throughout the world is a valuable asset to the United Film service.

The management of the Buffalo office of the United has been placed in the capable hands of G. H. Christoffers, formerly with the Hite enterprises in Buffalo, and more recently a field worker for the World Film Corporation. Mr. Christoffers is a film man of long standing in his territory, where he is widely known to theatre managers and brings to the United Film service a store of business ability which promises well for the Buffalo office of that company.

LOS ANGELES' BIG DEMAND FOR "DIAMOND"

THE demand of suburban and out-of-town theatres near Los Angeles for "The Diamond from the Sky" serial has become so great that Manager Charles Cushard, of this department of the Mutual Film exchanges, has found it necessary to secure additional prints to take care of this business.

FOX CLAIMS BOSTON RECORD

THE Fox people claim a film record for Boston in the runs given to "A Fool There Was." This feature has already been run seventy-seven times in Boston and is booked for eight more showings. A third print of this film was necessary.

HOLDERMAN MAKES CHANGE IN UNITED POLICY

THE New York exchange of the United Film service, at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, reports an increase in business during the last few weeks. The old method of booking up the program pictures separately was maintained by Fred Holderman, manager of the exchange, until recently, when he changed the procedure.

The growing demand for the regular program in the theatres throughout the state is the cause of the change, according to Mr. Holderman. The New York manager says that the demand will make it necessary for the United to increase its number of releases in the near future.

Mr. Holderman and Warren Roosevelt, both of the United exchange, will leave next week for a trip through the southern part of the state to investigate motion picture conditions.

FAMOUS PLAYERS OPENS BRANCH IN NEW HAVEN

PRESSURE of business has made it compulsory on the part of the Famous Players Film company of New England to branch out from Boston and open an exchange for Connecticut in New Haven.

The company has engaged a suite of offices in the Congress Square building, 19 Congress avenue, and placed Henry T. Scully, one of the most prominent film men in southern New England in charge.

The local exchange will handle all Paramount releases for the entire state, exclusively. With so many theatres using the service, it is easily to be seen that Mr. Scully and his assistants will be kept busy.

With the advent of the Famous Players, New Haven now has three exchanges, all located within a few feet of each other. The Universal and General Film companies have been represented there for some time, and now well-defined rumors have it that the United Photo-Plays company, the American Feature company and the V-L-S-E are to open booking offices in that city.

MAKES NEW DIVISION OF TERRITORY

FOR the better control of its business the World Film corporation has now definitely arranged its territory into five divisions, the eastern, the east central, the west central, the western and the southern.

The eastern division, of which George J. Schaefer is manager, includes the offices at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and Buffalo.

Denham Palmer, the east central division manager, was a salesman only a year ago. He now has charge of the offices at Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Pittsburgh.

W. R. Scates, west central division manager, is in control of the offices at Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Minneapolis.

The western division manager, W. W. Drum, has charge of the offices at San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake City.

E. Auger, southern division manager, has charge of the offices at New Orleans, Atlanta, Dallas, Memphis and Oklahoma.

Vitagraph Strikes New Lead in Film Novelties

Blackton Plans a Series of "Visualized Music," Consisting of the Presentation on the Screen of the Works of the Great Masters

THE most radical departure in motion pictures yet attempted has been announced by the Vitagraph Company of America through the engagement of David Bispham, the noted opera, concert singer, and composer, to appear in pictures. The engagement of Mr. Bispham, whose first appearance on the screen will be as Beethoven, in the opera "Adelaide," is intended to be the first of a series of a similar nature.

J. Stuart Blackton plans to present a series of "visualized music," presenting the works of the master musicians on the screen.

The theme of the music of the great compositions will be used in the screen versions.

"In presenting this series," said Mr. Blackton, "we are not going to use songs, but we will simply use the things that are suggested by the various movements. We shall call upon all of the composers for their best works and these will be portrayed on the screen. In this manner we will work out an evening of music on the screen.

"I believe the time is ripe now for this step, which, while radical, I believe will attract to the moving pictures music lovers, who I hope will be given a clearer understanding of what Wagner, Beethoven, Schubert, Rubenstein, Mozart, Liszt and Greig wanted to convey to the world."

"For the Honor of the Crew," a four reel comedy drama of college life which the Vitagraph company is producing, will serve to bring before the public William P. S. Earle, of the Vitagraph forces, as a director and also as an author. Work has been started on this feature with Antonio Moreno and James Morrison in the leading roles, supported by Muriel Ostriche.

There are many features regarding the production that stamp it as out of the ordinary. In the first place it will be presented entirely by college men, Earle being a graduate of Columbia University, Morrison of the University of Chicago, and Moreno of the Vermont State University.

"For the Honor of the Crew," as can be gathered from its title, tells a story of the annual regatta in Poughkeepsie and of the training period preceding that college event each year. It also tells of the temptations that a young man meets with in that connection. The story works out satisfactorily at the conclusion with a thrilling boat race.

Affection of Employees Almost Overcomes Col. Selig

At Housewarming Planned by the Faithful He Is Unable for Several Minutes to Utter a Word in Response to Presentation Speech

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, June 14.

ONE of the happiest moments in the busy life of Col. William H. Selig, of the Selig Polyscope Company, was afforded him recently when members of the various producing companies of the west coast studios expressed their appreciation of his hundreds of favors to them in presenting Mr. Selig with two very handsome gifts.

One, given by members of the Edendale and western studios, was a solid silver loving cup, standing eighteen inches in height. The other was a very handsome bronze elephant, standing three feet in height and being attacked on each side by rampant lions. Both gifts were appropriately inscribed.

The presentation was made at a house warming dance at the mammoth pavilion at the Selig jungle zoo, attended by all members of the producing companies, who were guests of Mr. Selig. The presentation speech was made by F. S. Stobbs, attorney for the Selig Polyscope Company, and was very fitting for the occasion. Mr. Selig attempted to respond, but was speechless.

For several moments he attempted to tell his players, directors, writers and others of the pleasure of the surprise to him, but he found it impossible to utter a word, and sought a quiet part of the large hall where he remained for fully ten minutes alone, before he could regain his composure.

The ball or dance was of an informal nature, attended only Selig people. A large orchestra furnished music for the event, and many delightful and unique features were introduced, all of which were personally arranged for and superintended by Mr. Selig.

Advertising Matter for "Broken Coin" Is Unusual

Universal Issues 22-Page Booklet Full of Practical Suggestions and Replicas of Publicity Material Ready for Exhibitors' Use in Business Getting Campaign

SUCH success created the Universal advertising pamphlets issued with such pictures as "The Black Box," "The Master Key," "The Trey o'Hearts," "Lucille Love" and many special features, that the company has prepared another folder containing a large amount of press matter for the new serial "The Broken Coin."

It is a twenty-two page book containing proofs of cuts and advertising copy, publicity schemes, throw-aways, as well as the many varieties of posters which are to be issued with the pictures.

A feature of the sheet is the double page spread in the center containing miniature color reproductions of the posters issued by the Morgan Lithograph Company.

The book also embraces an exhaustive supply of press matter, including cuts and copy for inaugurating and carrying on teaser campaigns in the newspapers.

Reproductions of post cards showing Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, pennants, souvenir mirrors and buttons, as well as many other novelties, are printed in the pamphlet, which any exhibitor booking the serial should possess. It is altogether an extremely valuable booklet.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 13.

IF all the rumors to be heard in Los Angeles this week were true, it would mean that the greatest film producing colony in the world has been given a complete shaking up, and out of the chaos had come a wonderful change. The names of three of the greatest producers of films would be linked with a new organization, the production staffs of practically all of the larger studios would have been decreased fully 50 per cent., and a hundred other changes made.

But there is little or no truth in the stories, and the facts as verified by the writer, in conversations with the managers of the studios, do not warrant more than a passing notice, regardless of the fact that the stories are the talk of hundreds who believe them to be true.

TEDDY SAMPSON IN "THE FOX WOMAN"

At several of the studios it has been found that the present weather conditions make it possible for more production than in previous months, and hence fewer people are needed. At other studios, contemplated changes in the policies of the companies cause reduction, while in others over production makes it necessary to decrease the number on the payrolls. Recent methods adopted at other plants make it possible to dispense with the service of a number.

While there is a tendency on the part of some companies to reduce the number of professional players, as well as technical men, at others additional companies are being added, and in a number of instances legitimate stage stars are taking the places of photoplayers.

All in all, the conditions are most satisfactory to the manufacturing companies, and all managers express themselves as decidedly optimistic regarding the future of the business, not only in words but in preparation for more and more elaborate pictures for the future.

Rights to a Parker Novel

From the Griffith R-M studios last week emanates the announcement that rights have been secured from Sir Gilbert Parker, the Canadian novelist, for the filming of his romantic tale of adventure, recently syndicated in serial form, "Jordan is a Hard Road." From a literary standpoint this is considered one of the author's best works, and it has been found to be admirably well written from the standpoint of adaptation for the screen. It is the story of the reformation of a notorious train robber of the early day, Bill Minden, and the many sacrifices made by the man to remain straight and to protect his daughter, who did not know he was her father.

It is essentially a man's story. The scenario for this is now being prepared by Mary H. O'Connor, and it will be made in a four-reel master picture. Announcement of the producing staff and cast will be made within a few days.

A newspaper-detective story filled with thrills and thrills and thrills, is being completed by the Fred A. Kelsey R-M company this week. The title of this is "The Motor Boat Bandits," and in this as in a number of previous newspaper subjects made by this company, Irene Hunt will be featured as the newspaper reporter, who, while on a vacation being spent at the beach resort, learns of the existance of the bandits.

Fights and races, hair-breadth escapes and melodramatic situations form the plot. Felix Modjeska, Ben Lewis and Catherine Henry support Miss Hunt.

New Complications

The Mutual Komic company is just putting the finishing touches to "Mr. Wallack's Wallet," which serves as the vehicle for the introduction of Fay Tincher as a woman hobo, she being the first woman of films to appear in such a character part. Chester Whitney is accountable for this scenario, and Director Eddie Dillon is wearing the chief-of-police uniform and doing the directing. Elmer Booth is the other hobo.

"Beppo, the Barber," also a one-reel Komic, in which a barber learning that a supposed English Duke—who in reality is a native crook in disguise—is leaving for Europe, decided to pose as the supposed royalty and try and win the hand of Miss Lotta Kale, occupying room six.

But the figure on room nine had come loose, and he attempts to pay his attentions to the manicurist, who, knowing the detectives are searching for the supposed Duke, causes his arrest. The producer makes the claim that a new complication arises with every other turn of the camera crank.

R-M Director Lloyd Ingraham has just completed filming the Mutual Master Picture, "The Fox Woman," from the novel by John Luther Long, featuring Teddy Sampson and Elmer Clifton, and is now engaged in making a one-reel subject, "The Hired Girl," with the same players, to fill in while a scenario of a more elaborate production is being prepared for this company.

This gives Miss Sampson a juvenile role of a poor village girl who becomes the housemaid at the home of a widow by the same name, Mrs. Smith. The widow has a daughter of the same age as the maid, and both admire a certain boy, but the maid cannot attend a party where he is to be present, because he does not have suitable dress.

A delivery boy brings to the back door of the Smith home a package containing a dress, addressed to Miss Smith. The maid, thinking some one has made her a present, dons the garment and goes to the party.

LOOKING INTO THE INTERIOR OF THE BIG GLASS STUDIO AT THE SELIG PLANT, EDENDALE, NEAR LOS ANGELES

Mother and daughter, learning of this, attempt to have her arrested, but the storekeeper takes the part of the poor girl, and inasmuch as the garment is not paid for, prevents the officer from performing as the mother desires. And the maid wins the boy.

A large portion of the R-M studio has the appearance of the early mission days, a very large street scene, included in which is a replica of the historical Alamo of San Antonio, Texas, around which one of the principal battles of the Mexican war of 1848 was fought. This setting is being used for battle scenes in the four-reel Majestic Mutual Master Picture being produced by William Christy Cabanne, "Martyrs of the Alamo." The cast for this includes Sam de Grasse, A. D. Sears, Alfred Paget, Fred Burns and Miss Juanita Hanson.

Return from Mojave Desert

Director Alphabet (O. A. C.) Lund and company, composed of Harvey Carey, William Crinley, Mr. Edmundson, Duke Worne, Jean Taylor and Olive Golden, returned the first of this week from a three-weeks' auto tour to locations on the Mojave desert, at San Francisco, and in the Yosemite National Park, where exteriors for the four-reel subject, "Just Jim," depicting the reformation of a convict, were completed. Interiors for this subject will require two weeks or ten days at least at the studio.

It was with a great number of sighs of relief that members of the Morosco-Bosworth producing company engaged in filming "Kilmeny," featuring Lenora Ulrich, finished this subject. In many of the scenes small animals and fowls of all kinds were used, and scores of times the patience of every member of the company was strained to the mad-house point.

Much of the caretaking of the "pets" fell upon Charlie Whitaker, assistant to Director Oscar Apfel, and on one particular day it was necessary for him to procure forty various kinds of birds and animals, from a pair of canaries to a wolf cub, and among the players it is the general belief that he is the author of the following note found on the bulletin board of the studio the other morning:

"Good-bye; I am going away to my friends the birds, wolves, rabbits, snakes, cows, monkeys, calves, pigs, sheep, horses, fish, etc., etc. KILMENY."

Frank Cooley, who for the past year has been directing American Beauty brand subjects, has left the Santa Barbara studio and is now on a three-months' vacation. He has made no plans for the future.

The Albuquerque Farce Comedy company is this week producing "Crazy with the Heat," a rural subject, with Raymond Zell and Beebe Daniels playing the principal parts. The direction is in charge of Nick Cogley. The subject deals with the adventures of a decidedly romantic girl who has a number of suitors who are all willing to do or die to win her heart.

Selig Company in San Diego

Pete Poivier, who for the past year has been assistant director for G. P. Hamilton, of the Albuquerque company, has been appointed cameraman for the Cogley company.

Director Colin Campbell and principal members of the company that went to Panama during the winter, including Kathlyn Williams, Wheeler Oakman, Harry Lonsdale, Syd Smith and Al Green, are spending this week at San Francisco, making scenes for several of the one and two-reel subjects which were begun while in the tropical zone.

Another Selig company, that under the direction of E. J. Le Saint, and including Stella Rosetta and Joe King as leading players, are at San Diego this week, where they will make both interiors and exteriors for an artist story, "The Unfinished Portrait," which will consist of two reels.

Production work by the companies of the Features Ideal, Inc., has been delayed until the organization moves to the Masterpiece studio, which was recently leased. All effects are being taken to this studio this week, and it is believed that it will be possible for production work to be commenced the first of the week. The producing staff, recently reduced to one company, will be increased to two, and later three. Carl Le Vines will remain as director for Company No. 1.

The H. C. Matthews Universal Juvenile company, featuring Baby Early, is completing the two-reel fairy story, "In the Heart of a Shell." Exterior scenes were made several months ago. This portrays the dream of a child who learns just before going to bed that her mother will become blind unless she undergoes a very expensive operation by a specialist.

The child had previously been told of a bride losing a valuable ring while bathing at the beach, and during the dream hears a fairy inside a mammoth shell calling to her and advising that she has the ring. Suddenly awakening, the child insists that the clams he gathered at the beach that day be opened, and inside one of them is found the ring.

National Completes Three Reeler

William Parsons, secretary; George Zimmer, attorney; Bruce Mitchell, director-general; and A. W. Caldewey, scenario editor of the National Film corporation, which recently began producing in Los Angeles and has completed two subjects, left for New York City to purchase rights on plays and books of a comedy nature, and engage legitimate stage stars to appear in their future subjects. Arrangements now partially made for releases of the National Comedy will be completed while these men are in New York.

Fred Hornby, director of the second company of the National Film corporation, has just completed a three-reel subject, "The Lost Heir," featuring Russ Powell, former star of "The Chocolate Soldier," and Constance Johnson. The leading characters in this are a pair of "high class crooks" who learn that a missing heir to a large estate has not filed claims, and the final day for settlement for the estate has arrived.

The man attempts to induce the woman to impersonate the missing female heir, but no amount of coaxing will persuade her. As a last resort, the man, one of three hundred pounds avoirdupois, decides to be the impostor himself. In the garb of a woman he goes to the court, tells his life story in so convincing a manner as to assure the officers that he is the missing heir. Then the judge remembers that the heir had a certain scar on her arm, and demands that this proof be shown.

The crook, never having heard of this feature of the case, does not know what to do, but his accomplice attempts to make a scar at the moment by the aid of a hatpin. This proves disastrous, for the pain causes the impostor to knock his blond wig out of place. There is a lively chase and the crooks land in jail.

A press department is being added at the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play studio which will be in charge of Kenneth McGaffey, and will work in connection with H. Whitman Bennett, in charge of the Eastern publicity office of this company. Mr. McGaffey has been advertising manager and press agent for a number of famous stars and road attractions, and in addition has written a number of published magazine articles.

Marion Fairfax, author of "The Builder" and "The Talkers" and also of a number of magazine articles, has been added to the scenario department of the Jesse L. Lasky company, and arrived Sunday to take up her work.

L. V. Jefferson, late of the Universal staff, is also a new member of the Lasky scenario department.

Blackwell in a Warner Role

J. P. McGowan, the most recent addition to the Lasky producing staff, took up his work there Monday in the making of "Blackbirds," featuring Laura Hope Crews and Carlyle Blackwell. Mr. Blackwell appears in the part originated for the legitimate stage by H. B. Warner.

Fannie Ward has begun her first work in pictures at the Lasky Studio here under the direction of George Melford. She is appearing in "The Marriage of Kitty," supported by Jack Dean, Theodore Roberts, James Neil and others.

A FINE GROUP AT THE ENTRANCE TO THE NEWLY OPENED SELIG ZOO

J. Warren Kerrigan, who has been absent from his work at the Universal studio for the past five weeks owing to illness which necessitated operation at a local hospital, was able to resume work at the first of last week. When taken ill Mr. Kerrigan was appearing in "Service of the Sword," from the story of the same title by George Bronson Howard, and for the present the company will be engaged in completing this.

When this is completed the company will go to La Jolla and later to Hume, California, where they will spend six weeks in filming exteriors for beach and lumber country stories, thus affording Mr. Kerrigan outdoor life that will greatly aid him in regaining his health.

The Henry McRae 101 Bison company went to San Diego the latter part of this week where they will make two two reel subjects, using settings and the Hopi Indian village at the San Diego Exposition, and to be at the exposition during the visit of the Beauty special, Monday, June 14, which has been designated by the officers as Universal Day. The titles of the Indian subjects are "The Heart of Watseka," and "The Hand of Ti-ra-wah."

General Manager Caulfield of Universal City, is arranging for several changes to become effective at once. Don Meaney, who has been serving as one of the business managers, has been placed in charge of all producing companies working on the large back stage at Universal City, and hereafter will be known as stage manager. Marshall Stedman will supervise the company's work on the mammoth front stage.

Beverly Griffith, another former business manager, has been given the position of location manager, succeeding Lewis Scheerer, who has held this place for the past year and a half, and is now connected with the Reliance-Majestic companies in this capacity. C. V. Hinckel, another business manager, who last week was made assistant to General Manager Caulfield, has now been assigned to the post of Auditor and has taken up this work.

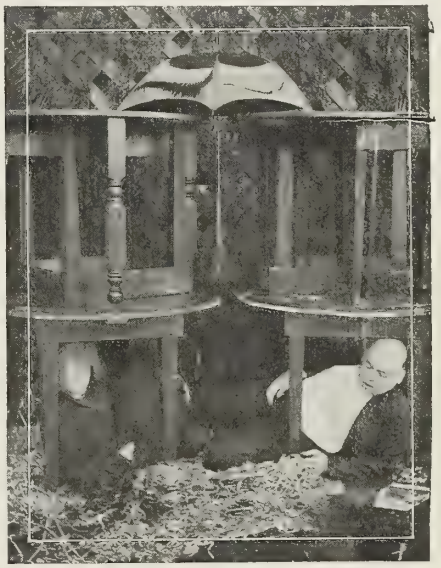
Joker Company Completes Two Subjects

The Al. Curtis Joker company last week completed two subjects. The first of these was "Freaks," in which the members appeared as attractions for a sideshow, portraying the life and a romance of a traveling aggregation. The second is "The Duel at Dawn," in which an invalid not securing the desired results from a tonic—Kentucky Rye—given him by his physician, when it is taken in small quantities, increases the dose, with the result that he perks up wonderfully, flirts with the wives of a French and a Russian ambassador, and is asked to meet them on the field of honor.

Finally he is helped out of the predicament by the physician, who prepares an electrical device which makes it possible for his invalid to put his opponents to flight. Both stories are by Clarence Badger, and the usual company composed of Max Asher, William Franey, Milburn Moranty, Gail Henry and Lillian Peacock.

"The Honor of Kenneth McGrath" is a one reel drama being produced by Sydney Ayres' Big U brand company, composed of Doris Pawn, Vale Paul and Clarence Burton. The scenario is by Calder Johnstone and Dr. H. G. Stafford.

The story of the family life of a military officer, and the prevention by his orderly of the ruination of his home by a former lover of his wife, forms the plot for the one reel subject "For His Superior's Honor," for Laemmle brand, written and produced by Frank Lloyd. M. K. Wilson, Mark Robbins, Gretchen Leader and Erma Sorter appear in the cast.



"The Gang" Rusticates

The exterior scenes taken on the sea by the 101 Bison company at the scene of the wreck of the Aggie Norde, have been woven into a two reel subject, "The Toll of the Sea," in which Marie Walcamp, as the daughter of the owner of a ship company is kidnapped by the captain of one of the boats.

His crew, learning of this, mutinies and in a fight that follows, explosives in the cargo of the ship are fired, with the result that the ship is wholly destroyed by explosion and fire. The girl is rescued by a secret service officer, her lover.

The Number One Nestorite gang are rusticating this week in the making of "Her Rustic Hero," in which a city maiden of wealth as well as an artist of note, comes to the country to secure a study. At the time there is a city lad spending a vacation at a mountain stream, and what follows may properly be termed a comedy romance. In this, Al. Christie is using the megaphone from the rear of the camera.

Pauline Bush is being featured in "Steady Company," a character story of a girl of the tenement house district adapted from a short story by Julian Furthman. In this the girl refrains from entertaining her lover because her father is a drunkard. The couple find the aged man in an intoxicated condition in a park and take him home. Explanations are necessary, with the result that the youth is able to assist the girl in bringing happiness to her home.

CAUGHT IN THE RAIN ("Tale of the Night Before"—National)

A peculiar romance is that in the two reel Universal subject, "Dear Little Old-Time Girl," being produced by William C. Dowlan. The story is by Lenora Ainsworth and scenario by Calder Johnstone. It portrays the longing of a young man of the city, who has gained wealth and position, for a woman of the type of his mother. He finds such a type in the person of a niece of his sweetheart's mother.

When the niece, wishing to attend a ball at the aunt's house, dresses in her best frock and goes as far as the outer door. There she sees her "gown" is not to be compared with those of the other guests and she refrains from entering, but the youth sees her and recognizes her as his ideal. Violet McMillan appears in the name part.

The Ford-Cunard company are now filming scenes for the sixth, seventh and eighth episodes of "The Broken Coin" series.

Cleo Madison, who has been ill for several weeks, is now able to resume her work at the Universal studio, and the company is completing "The Flight of a Night-Bird," a two reel Gold Seal brand subject, which was in the process of making when Miss Madison was taken ill.

The Burton King company is making a one reel subject, "Where Happiness Dwells," featuring Adele Lane from scenario by Ben Cohn.

Dr. H. G. Stafford, of the Universal scenario staff, has completed a scenario of an adaptation of the opera "Tam O'Shanter." The story of this is well known, and the subject will be filmed under the direction of Murdock MacQuarrie.

Film Chicago Editor's Story

The Bosworth-Turner company have talken up the filming of the story by Medill Patterson, editor of the Chicago "Tribune," "The Little Brother of the Rich." This adaptation will consist of four reels and the scenario for it was prepared by Bosworth and Turner.

Tom Meighen, late of the Lasky stock company, has been added to this company, and will appear in the part of the Little Brother, who when he goes to college proves such a good mixer and all around fine fellow, that he is aided by the idle sons of the rich.

Later his little sweetheart from his Indiana home is neglected when he is advanced to what he believes the higher circles, becomes a successful actress and is aided in her climb up the ladder to fame by an elderly actor played by Hobart Bosworth.

Ultimately learning of his sweetheart's advancement, and believing that she has made this by following the easy road, makes advances that she deems decidedly improper, with the result that she later becomes the wife of the old actor who has greatly aided her.

The Universal zoo has been increased by the addition of two Sumatra tigers recently arrived from New York. These are now in charge of trainer Jerry Barnes, who will soon have them ready for their first appearance in pictures.

Song Writers At U City

Two Universal stars have recently devoted their spare time to the preparation of songs, and in both cases the compositions have been accepted by publishers with the result that the two selections will soon be placed on the market. One is by Grace Cunard, and this is entitled "Kitty Grey," the name being the same as the part played by Miss Cunard in the coming Universal serial, "The Broken Coin." Eddie Lyons, of the Al. Christie Nestor company, is the other actor to break forth in music. His song is entitled "A Jealous Moon."

Marshall Hageman, of the Universal stock company, is being congratulated for the appointment of ensign of the seventh division of the California Naval Militia. This gives him the same rank as a graduate from the Annapolis academy.

Lynn Reynolds, who during the production of "Under the Crescent" series served as assistant to Director Burton King, has been given a company, and will begin producing the coming week.

Vera Sisson, who for the past two years has been appearing as leading woman for the Victor brand dramas, featuring J. Warren Kerrigan, has left the Universal and become a member of the Biograph stock.

The subject, entitled "Jane's Declaration of Independence," exteriors for which were made at Prisidio Alcatraz near San Francisco, has been completed, and the first positive sent to the Secretary of War at Washington, that it may be censored. All scenes which would enable an outsider to recognize any part of the interior of the government military headquarters will have to be eliminated, and the government officials will look over the films and make a report to the Universal company before the subject is cut or any further prints made.

Robert Daly, who has been producing Joker comedies for the Universal, featuring Fritzi Brunnette, has been assigned to the making of two and three reel dramas and will take up this work at an early date.

Moffet, Coast Theatre Manager, to Become Producer

The Studio Will Be Located on a 101-Acre Tract in Laurel Canyon and the Company Plans the Filming of Features.

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

J. F. SKERRETT, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, of New York, spent the greater portion of the past week in Los Angeles, visiting local dealers, film exchanges, exhibitors and many of the local studios.

Mr. Skerrett stopped here on his way to the East after spending several weeks at San Francisco, where he viewed with much satisfaction the very generous use to which the Power machines are being put to use in the demonstration features of many exhibits. Here he found the business of the company very satisfactorily taken care of by the local dealers.

G. A. Faris, who has for the past several months been connected with the local General Film company exchange in the capacity of salesman, has been transferred to San Francisco, where he will assume charge of the feature department of the General Film company exchange.

The success of the Vitagraph serial, "The Goddess," in Los Angeles, has caused much comment among local exchangemen and exhibitors. For the first time in the history of serials, five prints are being used weekly by downtown houses here, the list including the Comedy, the Woodley, Alhambra, Millers', Photoplay Theatre No. 1 in Los Angeles, and the Cabello, San Diego. All houses are using the subject first run with week engagements. This very successful booking has caused much speculation among men of the trade.

W. H. Clune, one of the members of the D. W. Griffith Film corporation, owners of the "Birth of a Nation," is spending a week in Chicago, aiding Mr. Griffith in the opening engagement of this master subject in the Windy City.

Several important changes were made in the local theatres last week. The Woodley, which has been in charge of the Los Angeles Investment company for the past six months, has been sold to the Woodley theatre company, composed of Mack Sennett and W. R. Woodley.

Mr. Woodley was former manager of the theatre as well as owner, and will now assume his former work. He is a pioneer exhibitor of the coast and will make a success of the theatre as he did other local houses under his management.

Seth D. Perkins, who has been manager, now takes charge of the Garrick, under the control of the Investment company. Mr. Perkins has been very successful with the houses he has managed, having built up good patronage by a strict attention to details.

The Majestic theatre, which became a film house several months ago when it was leased to a party of local capitalists, has passed into the hands of the Major Film company, which has leased the entire building for a long term. The company, under the personal management of D. F. Moffet, has already introduced a number of new features, including special stage settings for each production, a ladies' symphony orchestra, and a $5,000 Wurlitzer pipe organ for the foyer. This is in charge of Prof. Carl E. Augeloty, a graduate of music from Budapest, Hungary. Every seat in the house is reserved, the prices being twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five cents. Two performances are given daily.

The Major company is a local organization formed by Mr. Moffett, who makes the statement that production work will soon be commenced by the company in a new studio to be constructed in Laurel Canyon, on a 101-acre tract owned by the company. The intention is to make features with legitimate stage stars, biblical and educational subjects.

The new four hundred-seat theatre, at Culver City, half way between Los Angeles and Santa Monica, was opened last week. This house is the property of Mrs. Fannie A. Henderson, of Ocean Park, and will be under the management of Charles Cronkhite. The equipment consists of new Power 6-A projection machines, and a regular program with feature subjects two days each week will be used. J. C. Jessen.

Two Sunday Opening Bills Killed in Connecticut

BY large majorities, resolutions favoring an open Sunday for motion picture theatres were killed in the Connecticut legislature, during the past two weeks. Only two out of a number of bills proposed for consideration were acted upon, one passing the senate to be hopelessly defeated in the house of representatives, and the other going only to the first house, where it was speedily despatched.

The other measures before the legislature when it assembled early in the year, provided in one instance, that the chief officials of each city, town or borough might authorize motion picture exhibitions within the bounds of their jurisdiction, on Sundays between the hours of 1 p. m. and 11 p. m.; in another, between the hours of 7 p. m. and 10:30 p. m.; in another, that cities or towns of over ten thousand population might issue permits at their discretion for Sunday motion picture exhibitions.

Only this last bill and the one providing for no charge for pictures were reported favorably by the judiciary committee, to which they were turned over for consideration before being presented to the assembly at large. The bill considered by followers of the industry as most liberal, met with instant disfavor at the hands of the judiciary committee.

It was from this bill that a new one providing that towns of over 10,000 population might at their discretion permit picture exhibitions was drafted. Yet the measure was defeated in the senate, largely through the efforts of representatives of various churches, and members from the rural districts.

The "free exhibition" bill, which though defeated, found more favor in both houses than did any other, follows:

Section 1. Any person who shall perform or require an employe to perform any secular labor, or engage or require an employe to engage in any business, except works of necessity or mercy, or keep open any store, shop, warehouse, or manufacturing or mechanical establishment, except for the sale of merchandise required by necessity or mercy; or sell or expose for sale any property except such as is required by necessity or mercy; OR CONDUCT OR ENGAGE IN ANY THEATRICAL PLAY, PICTURE SHOW, CONCERT, EXHIBITION, BALL GAME, OR ENTERTAINMENT FOR WHICH A PRICE IS OFFERED, OR ADMISSION FEE OR OTHER FEE IS CHARGED, OR DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY REQUIRED OR EXACTED, between twelve o'clock Saturday night and twelve o'clock Sunday night, shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than thirty days or both.

Section 2. The provisions of section one shall not be construed to prohibit any amateur game, picture exhibition, concert or other amateur recreation on Sunday, provided such game shall not disturb public worship, or the public peace, and provided no fee for attendance is charged or received directly or indirectly.

This new measure aimed to do away with Sections one, two and three of chapter 119 of the public acts of 1913, which hold substantially as Section one of the foregoing, but are slightly more liberal so far as other industries are concerned.

Connecticut is none to willing to accept an open Sunday, though there is every reason to believe that the people are prepared for it, and even desire it—especially in the larger cities and towns.

Men who know conditions in this State say that if exhibitors had joined at the opening of the general assembly in preparing a fight for the bill, they would undoubtedly have won out. Exchangemen and representatives of trade publications in New Haven and elsewhere sought to unite the exhibitors at that time, but absolutely without success.

Sunday Closing Looms Up In Council Bluffs

SUNDAY closing in Council Bluffs, Ia., one of the best motion picture towns in Iowa, threatens to be the subject of a serious fight in the near future. At a convention of delegates from the city's Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor a special committee was appointed to draw up a proposed ordinance for Sunday closing.

The societies have just completed a successful fight against dance halls, getting the city council to pass stringent regulations that have put a majority of the public dancing places out of business. Flushed with this success, they have attacked the Sunday opening of motion picture theatres.

Only a few scattering shows of vaudeville throughout the entire season was left last winter of what used to be a fine theatre center in Council Bluffs. The motion picture theatres, co-operating in everything, had put up such strong competition that "legitimate" houses were forced to close. Since that time the popularity of the motion picture houses has been on the increase, the downtown houses especially being crowded every night.

The attack, as was discussed at the meeting of delegates, will be directed against motion picture theatres in particular, and will be based on the following reasons:

Sunday closing would lead to better church attendance.

It would lead to better order on the streets on Sunday.

It would not damage the business of the theatres, as they would get the patronage sooner or later, anyway.

Prohibition goes into effect January 1, and its effectiveness would be greater with stringent Sunday closing laws in effect. Sunday, if any time, would be the favorite time for bootleggers, it is argued, and if everything was closed on Sunday, their business would be more difficult.

The barber shops and drug stores should also be closed, as would the cigar stores, and this would be easier with the motion picture theatres closed. It would help in a general movement to observe the Sabbath more.

A big reason against the Sunday closing, and one that is expected to carry weight should the matter come to a vote, is that people would pay the carfare and go across the river to Omaha, thereby losing Council Bluffs the money. The exhibitors will probably make this their big point, besides insisting Sunday shows do no harm, as they have been conducted in Council Bluffs—in full co-operation with all the reform and Christian organizations of the city.

HORSLEY FAVORS ANTI-VIVISECTION BILL

David Horsley contributed an interesting interview published in the Los Angeles "Examiner" of Sunday, May 30, in which he emphatically favors the adoption of the anti-vivisection bill now awaiting the signature of Governor Johnson of California. The bill, if signed, will put a stop to slaying animals for the benefit of so-called science.

In connection with his arguments in favor of the bill, Mr. Horsley made a strong appeal to put an end to the brutal mishandling of animals of all kinds. In part he said:

"If civilized men treated wild animals with half the kindness they do the untamed human inhabitants of the same regions where our wild beasts come from, I am sure they would find the animal far more tractable and easily handled than the treacherous savages on whom millions have been spent in a vain effort to tame them."

INCREASED EXPRESS RATE ON FILMS IN SIGHT

The representatives of the four major express companies appeared before the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission last week to outline their needs for increased revenue, presenting facts to show that under the existing rates it will be practically impossible for them to continue in business.

The desired increase will be comparatively small on the individual shipments for a forty-pound film case would be subjected to but an additional charge of three cents, while a sixty-pound case would take two cents more. Under the proposed readjustment a one-pound package will cost five cents more than at present, but this additional charge will decrease at the rate of one-twentieth cent per pound until it reaches one hundred pounds, when the extra charge will disappear.

The shipping interests of the country, although represented at the hearing, entered no protest, having full faith in the fact that the commission will not grant any increase until fully satisfied as to its necessity. It is their belief that it is far better to grant the additional revenue, if required, rather than have the companies go out of business, leaving no mode of transportation other than parcel post or freight, neither of which would be satisfactory to the film interests. The commission has since taken this matter under consideration and an early decision may be expected in view of the urgency of the case.

OAKLAND WORKS TO REDUCE LICENSE FEE

Moving picture exhibitors of Oakland have been working quietly for several weeks through their local organization to bring about a reduction in the license fee, which is now much larger than that demanded in any other California city.

A new ordinance covering the fees charged has been drawn up, and this was introduced into the City Council last week by Mayor Mott.

City officials who have looked into the matter agree that the present tax is entirely too high, and it is believed that but little difficulty will be experienced in securing the reduction on the showing that will be made by the local league.

At the present time houses with a seating capacity of one thousand or more pay a yearly license fee of three hundred dollars, and it is proposed to reduce this to one hundred dollars. As many theatres pay their fee in July it is hoped that the measure can be put through the council in time to save them considerable money on this payment.

TIGHTEN BUILDING LAW IN KEYSTONE STATE

Governor Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania, has vetoed the five bills introduced by Senator Snyder and passed by the legislature this winter, under the terms of which it was proposed to make owners of old or converted motion picture theatres immune to the building regulations recommended by the department of labor and industry to govern the construction of theatres to be built in the future. The object of the bills was simply to prevent the building regulations becoming retroactive with regard to existing houses in the matter of installing provisions for safety and better ventilation.

The governor in the veto message points out that the purpose of the bills is to exempt theatres built before May 20, 1913, from supervision by the department of labor and industry, and declares that the measures "remove the safeguards of life and health," adding that there can be no sound reason for such exemption. "Let the fullest protection of life and health be given the public when they seek recreation and entertainment," says the governor in withholding his approval of the measures.

So far as can be learned there was no organized body of theatre owners interested in the passage of the bills. Practically all of the theatre owners of the state have shown a disposition to comply with the recommendations of the department of labor and industry in the matter of making their houses safe from fire and panic, and in the matter of maintaining good, sanitary conditions.

SMALL DETROIT THEATRES RELIEVED OF FOX

Secretary C. M. Orth, of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, under date of June 10, sent the following notice to all members of the league:

"You are hereby notified that the suit brought by the Fire Marshal against Peter J. Jeup, of the Luna theatre, for not having a fire alarm box in his theatre, was decided in favor of Peter J. Jeup.

"Judge Connolly decided that the ordinance pertaining to minor theatres does not make it necessary for such theatres to have a fire alarm box system, so it will be unnecessary for you to pay twenty-five dollars per year for said fire alarm box in the future, and as soon as your payment runs out tell the Auxiliary Fire Alarm box men to take their box out."

The Detroit city ordinance requires regular theatres to instal fire alarm boxes, but Mr. Jeup has contended for six years that this did not apply to minor theatres. The fire marshal's office has been compelling minor theatres to install such boxes each year, but this year Mr. Jeup absolutely refused to comply with his demand, and the matter was taken to court for a test.

Mr. Jeup's victory means a victory for the Detroit motion picture exhibitors, whose houses seat under four hundred, and hence come under the "minor" classification.

RAN A "MOTION PICTURE SCHOOL," NOW WILL RUN A ROCK PILE

James Reed and John C. Burns (alias J. F. Grant) have been convicted by a federal grand jury at Cleveland for using the mails to defraud. These men, styling themselves the "Eclair Film company," advertised that they would place pupils with motion picture producers.

Mae Moyer, Drumright, Okla., paid them one dollar for a course of lessons. She failed to achieve her ambition as a motion picture actress and had them arrested. Her testimony convicted them.

All mail addressed to the "Eclair" school has been stopped. It is claimed that they caught a number of victims, but Miss Moyer was the only one who complained about their fraudulent claims. The two men were remanded to jail to await sentence.

"NATION" PLAYS TO $99,000 IN BOSTON

The censor triumvirate which the Boston negroes had the legistlature organize in an attempt to drive "The Birth of a Nation" out of the city has failed, and one of their leaders has exhorted them to take their "temporary" defeat calmly, but eight opponents of the film managed to get themselves arrested this week.

If a stranger didn't know the Griffith film was in town he could spot it by the negroes patrolling in front of the door. The eight arrests were all made on one evening. There was no riot.

This film has been shown 108 times at the Tremont. More than 115,000 admissions have been sold, at a total of more than $99,000. A significant point in connection with the situation as regards the negroes is that A. L. Gray, manager for Mr. Griffith in Boston, is a Southerner.

The film is also being shown at Klune's Auditorium in Los Angeles, the Illinois in Chicago, the Liberty in New York and the Alcazar in San Francisco.

BILL TO DISCRIMINATE AGAINST ST. LOUIS TENT SHOWS

A bill prohibiting motion pictures or theatrical performances of any kind other than circuses and menageries being held in tents was presented to the board of aldermen by Otto Hampe, of the Tenth ward.

The bill, if established as a law, is so worded that it will not interfere with tent shows now in operation, but will not allow any new tents to be erected for motion picture or theatrical performances.

The bill was presented at the request of F. Wehrenberg, chairman of the legislation committee of the Theatre Managers and Motion Picture Exihibtors' Protective association of St. Louis.

SUNDAY OPENING PERMITTED WITHOUT MUSIC

Sunday shows are permitted at Erie, Pa., but no music is allowed. This is a ruling of the city officials, and it has created no end of comment for the men who made the ruling.

The exhibitors seem perfectly satisfied to keep open, and have not fought the matter out with the city officials, but all agree that it is a queer order, one that will take a lot of explaining.

"WHICH SHALL IT BE?" IS A THANHOUSER RELEASE

That world-famous old poem "Which Shall It Be?" is now a reality, for June 22 will see it released by Thanhouser in two reels.

The simple story is of the rich man who offered the poor couple great riches if from among their seven children they would give him one.

Universal Studio in East Vies with City in West

A Complete Plant, Designed by Ernest Flagg, the Well Known Architect, Costing $500,000, Is Under Construction in the Leonia Heights Section of Fort Lee, N. J.—Grounds Include Two Italian Gardens—Administration Building, Irregular in Shape, Is About 130 by 160 Feet in Size

TWO VIEWS OF THE NEW HALF-MILLION DOLLAR UNIVERSAL STUDIO NOW IN COURSE OF CONSTRUCTION—CENTRE, PRESIDENT LAEMMLE AND P. A. POWERS BREAKING GROUND FOR THE EDIFICE.

OVER in the Leonia Heights section of Fort Lee, N. J., the Universal Film Manufacturing Company is building a big new Eastern plant, administration building, studio and laboratory, an undertaking costing around $500,000.

The three buildings, which will be ready for occupancy some time in September, are surrounded by about four acres of ground which are laid out, as the buildings are constructed, with a view to being used in motion pictures, thus combining utility and beauty.

Many Offices in Main Building

The grounds include two Italian gardens, two lakes and a fountain. The lakes have a surface area of 5,000 square feet, an average depth of eight feet and a capacity of 300,000 gallons of water. One lake is higher than the other, but the lower lake can be raised. So they may either be connected by a waterfall or a narrow stream spanned by a bridge. The water in the lakes also serves as a reserve reservoir for the sprinkler system installed in the three buildings.

The first building one sees on entering the grounds is the administration building. This is irregular in shape, about 130 by 160 feet in size. It has a gable at each end and a flat roof between, thus giving three types of architecture for motion picture purposes.

All three buildings are built on steel girders and framework. The studio is finished in glass, laid with an inch overlap, and the other buildings are finished in twelve-inch hollow terra cotta tile blocks. These blocks, in turn, are variously finished to make the buildings suitable for different kinds of exterior scenes in taking pictures.

The administration building contains many offices. Going through the entrance hall one steps into the outer office of Julius Stern, the studio manager. There are nine directors' offices for the producers making pictures at the studio, conference rooms, the "Animated Weekly" rooms, two projection rooms, a vault for camera equipment, testing and loading rooms for camera men, a kitchen, a restaurant seating one hundred persons at a time, the "still" picture department, and the boiler room, which supplies power and light for the entire plant.

All these offices and rooms are on what is properly the second floor of the administration building which leads directly onto the working floor of the studio. The lower floor of the administration building connects with the lower floor of the studio building.

On this level are the dressing rooms, wardrobe department and actors' lounging room. There are twenty-four separate dressing rooms for male stars, members of the stock company and specially engaged artists, and twenty-four separate dressing rooms for the leading women, members of the stock company and special artistes. In addition there are four large dressing rooms for "extra people."

The administration building leads into the studio, the floor of which is 80 by 151 feet. Twelve producing companies can work comfortably inside at the same time, it is estimated, or a total of twenty companies can work at the plant by arranging for some to work outside and utilizing all the floor space.

In addition to the floor space there is the scene dock, carpenter shop, freight elevator big enough to carry a large touring car, and property room.

Laboratory with Large Capacity

In the rear of the studio is the laboratory, 156 by 104 feet in size, with a comfortable capacity of 300,000 feet of film a day and able to do 500,000 feet of film a day, a total of 3,500,000 feet a week. The laboratory contains the printing room, perforating room, developing room, wash room, drying room and air conditioning room.

In this last mentioned room is the apparatus which conditions the air in the drying room. The air is kept at 70 degrees Fahrenheit and 45 degrees of humidity so that the film will dry quickly and yet not so quickly as to make it brittle. Film can be dried in from twenty to forty minutes with the air conditioning equipment at the option of the laboratory manager. In addition the laboratory contains a title room and girls' lounging room.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, and R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, are the men responsible for the new plant. It is a child of the brains responsible for Universal City on the Pacific coast. Ernest Flagg, the architect, drew the plans. In carrying out the work, the detail has fallen under the supervision of William Sistrom, the Universal's purchasing agent. Mr. Sistrom let out all the contracts, did all the purchasing of supplies and has been the man in active charge of the work.

John M. Nicolaus, at present in charge of the Universal's factory in Bayonne, N. J., gave his knowledge and advice in the planning of the new laboratory, of which he will be manager. Julius Stern, who has been studio manager at the Imp studios for many years, will be the studio manager.

BEGINS FIRST EPISODE OF "NEAL OF THE NAVY"

The first of this week's production of the fifteen episode serial "Neal of the Navy," from a story and scenario by William Hamilton Osborne, with Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, Jr., in the leading parts, will be taken up at the Balboa studio under the direction of Harry Harvey, producer of the "Who Pays?" series.

This serial will be released through the Pathé Exchange, Inc. The principals for this selection have arrived at Long Beach and an all-star cast of Balboa players has been selected to support them.

MINDIL LEAVES LADY MACKENZIE

Philip Mindil, who conducted the widespread publicity and advertising campaign for Lady Mackenzie prior to the opening of her big game pictures at the Lyceum theatre, New York, and under whose management that entertainment was presented, has severed his connection with the company.

PATHE ACTOR BECAME DIRECTOR BY CHANCE

Donald Mackenzie stopped work the other day on the big new feature he is making for Pathé, Richard Harding Davis' "The Galloper," long enough to tell how he became a director, and then in due course of events, a producer for Pathé.

"It was some three years ago," he said. "I was playing the lead in a Pathé picture when the director fell sick. Chief Director, now General Manager, Louis Gasnier sent for me and asked me if I could direct a picture as well as act it.

"I failed to see my chance and didn't want to take the job, but Mr. Gasnier insisted that he had had his eye on me and knew I could do it. You see, the smell of the grease paint had become a habit, and I didn't want to give it up to become the man behind the screen instead of before it.

"Well, I yielded, finished the picture, and was given another. Ever since I have never regretted the step."

TAYLOR DEVISING CLEVER STUNTS FOR "DIAMOND"

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

William H. Taylor, who recently became a fixture of the American company studios at Santa Barbara, has been assigned to the direction of the serial picture, "The Diamond from the Sky," and is now busy devising ways and means of photographing the precious stone when it is in the clutches of an octupus.

He has been successful in securing the sea terror, but has not announced the plan that will be used to secure the other effects.

CHARLOTTE IVES RE-ENGAGED BY FAMOUS TO SUPPORT BARRYMORE

Charlotte Ives, a popular ingenue, who will be remembered by exhibitors and the photoplay public through her impersonation of the featured role in "Clothes," one of the early productions of the Famous Players Film company, has been re-engaged by that company and will appear in the support of John Barrymore in "The Dictator," the Paramount release of June 21.

Miss Ives portrays the role of the young American girl who goes to South America as a missionary and who instead reforms Brooke Travers, the wild and impetuous adventurer, impersonated by John Barrymore. The romance that develops between the two eventually becomes the dominant part of the story, and even overshadows the thrilling situations that occur constantly throughout the production.

GALBRAITH HAS STRENUOUS PART IN "FLYING A" PLAY

You'd hardly recognize Joe Galbraith if you'd meet him face to face today. Great patches of court-plaster practically obliterate his features. Joe suffered a bit of tough luck during the filming of "The Right to Happiness," a two part "Flying A" drama produced recently at the American's Santa Barbara studios.

Gailbraith, in the role of miner-husband, was pulled from a dangerous position by means of a strong rope fastened about him by Vivian Rich, who plays the part of the miner's wife.

When the sturdy hands above heaved to, the dangling Joe received a scraping and a scratching along the face of the cliff up which he was being pulled. The unfortunate actor was rendered hors de combat, and for three days or more he hobbled about, disgusted with himself, the world and all moving picture directors.

NAT GOODWIN TO APPEAR IN PLAY FOR WORLD FILM

Nat Goodwin about five years ago was a picturized Fagin in "Oliver Twist." Since then he has added to his fame by writing a book about his five wives. Some of us think that a man who has had five wives, and lives to write a book about them, deserves a monument.

"The Master Hand," by Carroll Fleming, is the title of the vehicle in which Mr. Goodwin is to be filmed. The picture will probably be released through World Film. His support will include Lillian Lawson, Theodore Babcock, Alex Calvert, R. Vivian and Basil Lynn.

REEL FELLOWS MEET AND DINE

The regular meeting and dinner of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago was held at the Hotel Sherman on Wednesday evening, June 16, at 6:30 P. M.

At the last regular meeting of the club it was decided to make this a "Ladies' Night."

That meant a nice congenial gathering of Reel Fellows, their wives or sweethearts, a good dinner, some entertainment and a little informal dance to follow. The result was a rousing attendance.

INA HAMMER PLAYS OPPOSITE FLORENCE LA BADIE

Ina Hammer, well known in stock, was specially engaged to play the heavy role opposite Florence La Badie in "Crossed Wires," a drama in two reels to be released June 29. She played a villainous old landlady, and Florence brings about her downfall through some clever sleuthing situations. The scenario is by Phil Lonergan.

ALICE BRADY, BROADWAY FAVORITE, JOINS KNICKERBOCKER

Alice Brady, the popular and charming young Broadway star, is the next recruit from the field of legitimate players to join the ranks of Knickerbocker Star Features. Miss Brady is just closing a successful season in "Sinners" and is engaged next week with De Wolf Hopper in a revival of Gilbert and Sullivan operas at the Forty-eighth street theatre in New York City, taking up her work the following Monday in a three-reel drama of Knickerbocker Star Features especially written for her and adapted to her charming mannerisms.

ALICE BRADY

Alice Brady is well known to legitimate theatre-goers, scoring her first success some five or six years ago in the "Balkan Princess." Later she supported De Wolf Hopper in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas and surprised her host of friends by demonstrating that she was an excellent singer as well as a successful actress.

Her next several seasons were spent in the plays "Things Which Count," "Sylvia Ran Away," and "What Is Love," in which she starred. As to her screen work she has been featured with Holbrook Blinn in "The Boss," and much is expected of her in Knickerbocker Star Features. She will appear in an early release of that brand.

EXCHANGES COMPETE FOR PLACE IN ASSOCIATED LIST

Arthur Bard, the general manager of the new Associated Service, which is shortly to release a complete program of twenty-one reels a week, is highly gratified at the rapidity with which territory is being disposed of.

At the present time, however, it is impossible to give the names of the subscribers, owing to the fact that there exists in some sections a lively competition for the franchise, while those exchangemen who have signed up, for various reasons for the present wish to have their names withheld from publication.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By George D. Proctor

IN response to the cries for speech—

Taking one's typewriter (machine) on one's lap again and running the periscope over the ever-changing kaleidoscope of the film game-industry-art, it's all in the point of view, is rather pleasant. But brevity is the soul of wit for everybody except the so-much-a-word boys.

Phil Klein and Joe Farnham, well remembered and even better loved from the days of All Star and before, are back in town, bronzed and healthy, after spending several months dodging projectiles in the European battle line. The few hours they have been off the boat have not been sufficient to settle their plans for the future but it's a safe bet that they brought back a lot of good war film.

SCANDAL NOTE: Hugh Antoine D'Arcy and Arthur Leslie were seen, arm in arm, staggering out of a Broadway Huyler's store.

One recent event was the little dinner at the Hermitage to Milords Page and Evans. This may foreshadow a coming series of noontime gatherings with the advertising and publicity men and the trade paper representatives herding together like the lion and the lamb. You can cast this little picture to suit yourself.

On Wednesday the annual meeting of the board of directors and election of officers of the Mutual Film corporation was held at Richmond, Va., as the Mutual is a Virginia corporation legally.

Dame Rumor has been busy for some time pointing out the possibility of John R. Freuler being the next president and H. E. Aitken, the present head, allying himself with Kessel and Bauman, of the New York Motion Picture corporation, taking D. W. Griffith along.

Anyway, Tuesday afternoon saw H. E. Aitken, Ad. Kessel, Jr. Co. O. Bauman and Charles Kessel chatting over the coffee cups at the Knickerbocker.

But G. B. Shaw said something when he remarked that "you never can tell."

Walter Stull and Fred Burns are now making comedies on their own hook for the World Film Corporation. Stull, Burns and George Reehm were once an inseparable trio when they were making Lubin comedies. Then they made Royal comedies for the Mutual. Reehm is now making Biographs on the Coast, but his two old pards are doing nicely, thank you, as the Wizard Films company. Their first two releases, "Two for a Quarter" and "Pokes and Jabs," were enthusiastically received at the Hippodrome. Winick and Brock are handling the European rights.

The offices of the Cosmofotofilm company, Paul H. Cromelin, minus his long mustache in the swivel chair, has removed from the fifth floor to room 604 in the World Tower Buildin, 110 West Fortieth street. W. Arthur Northam, of the London Film company, the parent corporation, is in town.

Harold Parker, who runs a lot of theatres out in Centralia, Mo.—one theatre, anyway, after thinking how big Centralia must be—has compiled ten commandments for exhibitors. Here they are:

1. Thou shalt not imitate Charlie Chaplin.
2. Always have clean posters.
3. Do not have un-pretty ticket sellers.
4. Shun the dirty screen as the pestilence.
5. Ban the "pouting" heroes.
6. No more unsteady projection.
7. Have uniformed ushers.
8. Run new pictures.
9. Make more motion picture "fans."
10. This, above all—subscribe to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Thanks for the last one, Harold. It's last but not least.

Dr. E. J. Boeseke, president of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture company and also Associated Manufacturers, Inc., Los Angeles, who are putting the Associated program on the market, is in New York for the purpose of making contracts with two or more producing companies who wish to become affiliated with this new program.

Dr. Boeseke will remain for several weeks and co-operate with General Manager Arthur Bard, who has been in the East for some time and has been very successful in completing arrangements for the new program.

His headquarters will be on the tenth floor of the Candler building, 220 West Forty-second street.

Echoes coming in from the Pennsylvania State convention at Reading say that Siegmund "Pop" Lubin was the most popular man there. "Pop" brought along his little great grandson, Master Jamsen. He entertained all the Lubinites at a midnight supper.

William McAteer, age 14, did a Charlie Chaplin impersonation. Pauline Frederick and her cousin, Blanche Fisher, were also in the crowd.

Chester Beecroft, one of the reliable press agents who may be numbered on the fingers of the right hand, says that the new MinA pictures which have started coming in from David Horsleys California studios are about the finest yet. Chester saw the first three before he spoke. Further, he says, the quality of the MinA films is such that the sales are steadily increasing and soon the brand will lead all other comedies, except the Chaplin pictures.

Anthony Paul Kelly, one of the busiest and ablest scenario writers, is recovering smoothly after being mutilated for appendicitis.

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players, must be near Los Angeles by this time. While there he has a lot of business to transact, including the acquisition of land for three new studios.

The E. K. Lincoln Players are building a big new studio over in Jersey. Meanwhile John H. Pratt, director, formerly of All Star, who has just made three pictures for Ed. Lincoln, might listen to reason.

All the beauties in America, and no one cares if it is only skin deep, left on the Universal contest trip. Joe Brandt is the person with the megaphone.

Harry C. Drum, the new World Film assistant general manager, is a busy and businesslike person. His success on the Pacific Coast brought him his present position where he threatens severely to make good with a bang. Drum is a practical film man and is whipping things into shape on a very practical basis. "Trilby" ought to be due soon. All reports say it's a wonderful picture; Wilton Lackaye and Clara Kimball Young.

The Biograph bunch will be back from the Pacific Coast along toward the last of the month.

Must go up and see Clarence J. Shottenfels at the Gotham offices. Clarence has had enough experience to know the business. The Gotham Program has been mentioned in the new incorporations column and that must mean something.

Bert Ennis, brown as a berry, drives his car around town these days. But you can't keep a squirrel on the ground and he'll be back press-agenting ere long.

Bill Raynor of the Kleine forces can give Bert a race any day. Bill bought a six cylinder car a few days ago and has yet to decapitate his first telephone pole.

If a man says serials are dead tell him to look at "The Goddess," "Elaine," "Broken Coin," or "The Diamond from the Sky." Remember serials have considerable longevity. "Pauline" is doing its biggest business right now.

Miller of the Kleine forces has returned to Chicago.

Sam Adler, of the Adler Feature Film company, of Omaha, is at the Flanders, buying features.

Herbert Hoagland was a recent visitor, as Neil Caward would say.

Irene Fenwick Will Give Summer to Kleine Features

Star of the "Legitimate" Success, "Song of Songs," Also Well Known for Her Work in the Photodrama, "Commuters," Closes New York Engagement

IRENE FENWICK, star of this season's greatest Broadway success, "The Song of Songs," and featured in the George Kleine film productions of "The Commuters" and "The Spendthrift," last week finished her long engagement at the Eltinge theatre, New York, and for the rest of the summer will devote her talents entirely to the forthcoming Kleine features.

"I am looking forward to the summer's work with a great deal of pleasure," says Miss Fenwick, "especially as several of the parts I am to play will allow me to prove my abilities as a swimmer and a horsewoman. Because of my diminutive size I suppose many of my friends refuse to believe that I am really quite athletic."

Several of the roles which Miss Fenwick will play in Kleine features this season will offer her opportunities to display her athletic powers, and theatregoers who have never seen her in any but the drawing-room parts she does so beautifully on the speaking stage, will see an entirely new Irene Fenwick in some of her forthcoming appearances on the screen.

George Kleine's Film version of Porter Emerson Browne's "The Spendthrift," scheduled for release through the Kleine offices June 21, contains a series of scenes that will no doubt make their own subtle appeal to the feminine contingent in every audience.

These are the scenes laid in the New York establishment of Lucile, Ltd. (Lady Duff-Gordon), the internationally known modiste. They were made with the direct co-operation of Lady Duff-Gordon, and the models who appear clad in several of Lucile's most bewitching creations were selected from the bevy of statuesque beauties permanently employed at the West Fifty-seventh street establishment.

Hebe White appears in an unusually fetching white lace and bonnet costume; Yaha Grey in blue taffeta; Miss Phyllis in a blue brocade evening creation, and Miss Dolores in a dainty evening robe of coral chiffon.

Some of the most beautiful dresses shown in the picture are worn by Irene Fenwick, who plays the lead of Frances Ward, the extravagant wife of Richard Ward, whose craze for style leads to mischief. "The Spendthrift" is in six parts.

Pathé Scenario Writer Is Author of 400 Short Stories

William Hamilton Osborne Is Also One of the Few Successful Creators of Fiction Who Practices Law at the Same Time

WILLIAM HAMILTON OSBORNE, author of the new Pathé serial, "Neal of the Navy," is one of the latest of the popular authors of the day to break into the moving picture field. "Neal of the Navy" will begin to run both on the screen and in newspaper columns about July 31.

Mr. Osborne is a native of Newark, N. J., and resides there; he is a lawyer by profession, and while it is true that there are a number of fiction writers and dramatists who have had a legal training, yet it is quite probable that he is one of the few lawyer-authors who keeps up the active practice of the law.

He maintains an office in Newark and another one in New York, being admitted to practice in both States. Fiction writing with him was an accident. Up to 1902 he had done nothing in that line. Obeying a sudden impulse he wrote a short story in that year, sent it to a magazine, and it was accepted.

Since then he has had nearly four hundred and fifty short stories published by magazines, and has written four successful novels, "The Red Mouse," "The Running Fight," "The Catspaw" and "The Blue Buckle."

The last mentioned story is the subject of a contract with David Belasco who intends to stage it in the near future, and "The Running Fight" has been dramatized for the screen.

"Neal of the Navy" is a story of adventure pure and simple, built upon novel lines, and with the United States navy as a background. The hero is a lad who enlists as an apprentice seaman, who works his way up through thrilling acts of heroism to a commission; and the heroine, a girl whose life has been fraught with terror and persecution, falls naturally under his protection and that of the government he represents.

The story will be filmed for Pathé by Balboa and presented by a most excellent cast, headed by Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, Jr. Arrangements have been made for the publishing of the story in many newspapers covering every section of the country, not only in the big cities, but the smaller ones as well.

It is confidently expected that the splendid records made by the "Perils of Pauline," "The Exploits of Elaine," and "Who Pays?" all of them most notable successes, will be equalled and even exceeded by this latest Pathé serial.

"FOR THE COMMONWEALTH" EIGHTH "WHO PAYS?"

"For the Commonwealth," the eighth of the big "Who Pays?" series, by Will M. Ritchey, scenario editor of the Balboa company, deals with corruption in politics, and the efforts made by those in power to "get" a good man.

The recent case of Chief of Police Sebastian, candidate for mayor of Los Angeles, who was indicted, tried and acquitted on a charge of misleading a young girl, and some similar cases in the East, suggested the story to Mr. Ritchey. It was evident that the "Who Pays?" series would not be complete without touching on politics, and this was the phase selected.

Wynant Organized the Company Handling the Dorsey Expedition Pictures With the Intention of Giving Control to the Small Stockholder

WILBUR WYNANT, president of the United Photo-Plays company, organized the concern about a year ago, and has been actively engaged in financing the company. It was not the desire of Mr. Wynant to place the control in the hands of any particular individuals.

The stockholders in the United Photo-Plays company number several hundred, and they consist almost fully of business men and individuals who had small sums of money to invest.

WILBUR WYNANT

The experience of Mr. Wynant in the motion picture field has been limited, but he has studied the conditions carefully and spent a number of hours each day in going into the subject thoroughly, acting as a workman in various departments and acquainting himself with the various duties in connection with the making and marketing of motion pictures.

Previous to the organizing of the United Photo-Plays company, Mr. Wynant successfully conducted the financial operations in connection with two important insurance companies.

Franc R. E. Woodward, who was identified for some time with the Selig Polyscope company as director of publicity and sales promotion, and who has been identified with many of the big Selig successes, left the Selig concern to join the force of the United Photo-Plays company as assistant to the president. While with the Selig company, Mr. Woodward originated the Selig monthly release herald, also the Selig weekly press news together with introducing into the motion picture world the facilities for supplying smaller newspapers with plate matter exploiting the various releases of the Selig company. Mr. Woodward also introduced the plan of furnishing to the newspapers the novelette each week, beginning with the Kathlyn Williams novelette series.

As the principal executive of the United Photo-Plays company, Mr. Woodward has personally conducted the assembling of the Dorsey expedition motion pictures which have been showing at the Studebaker theatre for the past several weeks, selecting from the shipments sent by Dr. Dorsey from Japan, China, India, etc.

Mr. Woodward has outlined ten sets of six reels each, 60,000 feet of film, all of which will make the Dorsey expedition series remarkable sets of travel pictures.

Hunter Bennett, formerly assistant general manager for the World film corporation and later with the Fox Film corporation, has been selected by Mr. Woodward to act as supervisor of exchanges.

The executive offices of the United Photo-Plays company are located at 29 South La Salle street, Chicago.

BESS MEREDITH IS AGAIN WITH UNIVERSAL

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

Bess Meredith, former comedienne for the Universal and scenario writer, author of the "Trey o' Hearts" and numerous two and three reel subjects, has returned to the West Coast, and is again with the Universal, where she will for the present write only, as the result of a recent illness which necessitated an operation for appendicitis. Julius G. Firthman is also a new member of the Universal scenario staff.

POHLMAN SUCCEEDS GENTNER AS PRESIDENT IN ST. LOUIS

Edward Pohlman has succeeded John Gentner as president of the Theatre Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective association of St. Louis.

Mr. Pohlman belongs to the firm of Pohlman and Zimmerman, who own and operate the Comet on Market street.

Vera Mellish Decides to Abandon the Legitimate

Kalem Star, Who Captured New York Theatregoers by Her Work in the "Blindness of Virtue," Thinks Seriously of Entering Film Drama Permanently

THE legitimate stage stands in danger of losing one of its most charming actresses. Vera Fuller Mellish, who recently captivated the New York theatregoers by her work in "The Blindness of Virtue," is so pleased with her experience in Kalem's three-act Broadway favorites feature, "The Bondwoman," that she seriously contemplates abandoning the legitimate stage in favor of the silent drama.

Miss Mellish has just returned from Kalem's Jacksonville, Fla., studios, where "The Bondwoman" was produced. She expressed herself as being highly pleased with the role of Amy Blanchard in "The Bondwoman." This character purchases her father's freedom when the latter is threatened with a felon's fate, and the price she pays is—herself. The role is intensely dramatic and therefore offered Miss Mellish a splendid opportunity to display her histronic ability.

VERA FULLER MELLISH IN "THE BONDWOMAN" (Kalem)

Born in England, Miss Mellish came to this country when a child and received her education at the Villa Maria. Her desire to become an actress was manifested at an early age and she frequently appeared in amateur theatricals.

Upon her graduation, Miss Mellish succeeded in securing a position in a Boston stock company. After several seasons of this work, the charming young actress was engaged to appear on Broadway with Billie Burke, in "The Mind-the-Paint Girl."

VERA FULLER MELLISH

McQUARRIE JOINS MINA IN LOS ANGELES

The latest acquisition to the Los Angeles company producing MinA films is Albert McQuarrie, a photoplayer of much experience.

His first picture with MinA films is called "The Stolen Case," which is to be released June 24.

Fox Exchange Managers to Meet in Convention

Event Is Scheduled for July 1, and Will Be Held Five Days—Auditors and Bookkeepers of Home Office Will Be Present to Answer Questions

A HIGHLY interesting convention will take place in New York on Thursday, July 1, when the first annual convention of the managers of the Fox Film corporation will take place. The representatives of the Fox Film corporation from coast to coast will meet William Fox, the president of the Fox Film corporation, and

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN

Winfield R. Sheehan, the general manager of the concern.

During the convention, which will continue for five days, Mr. Fox himself will explain to his branch managers and other representatives gathered his ideas on the problems and situations which they find themselves called upon to meet.

The first session of the convention will be called to order on July 1. The first day's business, will, so it is expected, be devoted to a general discussion of conditions throughout the country, and Mr. Sheehan, who has recently returned from a painstaking tour of investigation throughout the country, will give to the delegates the results of his observations, which have resulted in the compiling of an immense amount of extremely valuable information concerning trade conditions.

Auditors and bookkeepers from the executive offices of the Fox Film corporation will be present at the convention to answer any and all questions which may be put by the various representatives present. Mr. Fox believes firmly in keeping in personal touch with every phase of his business, and the object of the convention, aside and apart from vital matters which will be discussed and decided upon, is to foster that "get-together" spirit without which no such great organization can attain the highest degree of efficiency. Mr. Fox himself intends to outline to the assemblage the future plans of the concern, which embrace the most ambitious program ever conceived by any film magnate. It is noteworthy in this connection that a highly important new policy which Mr. Fox inaugurates in September will be explained at great length to the end that the exchange men may thoroughly appreciate the great advantages of this new policy and be able to preach the gospel of prosperity to the various exhibitors of their territory with a full and complete understanding of the situation involved. Included in the list of those who will attend the convention, are the following exchange managers:

Atlanta, Ga., O. P. Hall; Boston, Mass., H. F. Campbell; Chicago, Ill., C. L. Worthington; Cincinnati, O., A. M. Muller; Cleveland, O., P. C. Mooney; Dallas, Tex., Leo F. Levison; Denver, Colo., Field Carmichael; Detroit, Mich., A. E. Siegel; Kansas City, Mo., Chas. W. Hardin; Los Angeles, Cal., A. T. Lambson; Minneapolis, Minn., E. A. Westcott; Newark, N. Citron; Seattle, Wash., E. R. Redlich; St. Louis, Mo., S. J. Baker; Syracuse, N. Y., Herman Robbins; Washington, D. C., J. P. Anderson; New York, N. Y., Louis T. Rogers, and Harry Leonhardt, Pacific coast manager, 734 South Olive street, Los Angeles, Cal.

Summer Weather Brings Added United Production

Arthur Smallwood Secures New Studios for His Company—Franz, Premier Director, Returns to Santa Paula, Cal., and Begins Work on Westerns

WITH the beginning of the summer, the producing companies of the United program are taking on an added activity, which insures even better short story films of a high quality, for the United Film service then in the past.

Joseph J. Franz, formerly director of the Premier company at Santa Paula, Cal., has returned to the studio after an absence of some time, and will continue his work of directing the making of two part dramas of western life. Two other new members, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Garcia, have joined the company and will support Lillian Hamilton and Fred Church, the leading players.

At the beginning of the week Arthur Smallwood, president of the Smallwood Film corporation, announced the fact that he had secured new studios for the Pyramid company, of which Edwin August is the star and director, at Ridgefield Park, New Jersey.

The studio occupies a new building especially erected for the purpose and is one of the largest glass-covered studios in the country. The stage is large enough to permit the setting of four large scenes at one time. Here two reel dramas in which Ruth Blair and Florence Hackett, the newest acquisition to Mr. August's company, will support the well known star, will be produced.

With the addition of Gertrude Bondhill to the Lariat company at the Garden of the Gods studio, this company will deviate from its policy of making only western two part dramas, and will add Biblical and poetical photodramas to its output.

The Superba company has decided to greatly enlarge upon the size and pretentiousness of its one reel comedies for the United by adding a large company of new players. Edith Thornton will continue to play leads, supported by W. E. Browning, Joe Burke and Max Uligh.

The new outdoor stage of the Empress company at Flushing, is enabling Joseph Levering to stage with great efficiency the two reel sociological and psychological dramas which are being written for his company by Rev. Clarence J. Harris. Under the direction of three directors, Frank Beal, Carl Levins and Webster Cullison, the Ideal company at Hollywood is making film history in their excellent dramas of domestic heart interest and thrilling varieties.

Farrar Dinner at Lasky Studios Brings Out Notables

List of Guests Reads Like a Roster of Broadway Celebrities at Height of Theatrical Season in New York—Diva's Arrival Duly Celebrated

BEYOND doubt one of the most important social functions yet recorded in the moving picture field took place in Los Angeles, Cal., on Saturday, June 12, when Messrs. Lasky, Goldfish and De Mille gave a dinner, reception and dance in honor of Geraldine Farrar, who had just arrived at the Lasky studios to pose for a series of photodramas.

This dinner took place at the Hollywood Hotel, and the list of important guests reads almost like a roster of the famous Broadway theatrical companies during the height of the season.

Among those present at the dinner in addition to Miss Farrar and Mayor Rose of Los Angeles, were John Drew, Raymond Hitchcock, Julian Eltinge, Mary Pickford, Fannie Ward, Charlotte Walker, Laura Hope Crews, Flora Zabelle, Blanche Ring, Julia Dean, Blanche Sweet, Alexandria Carlyle, Francis Ring, John Mears, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gest, Mrs. David Belasco, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Farrar, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zukor, Owen Moore, Carlyle Blackwell, Pedro DeCordoba, Orrin Johnson, Hale Hamilton, Frank Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reicher, Mr. Hector Turnbull, Jack Dean, Tully Marshall, Marion Fairfax, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lasky, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Goldfish, Mrs. Lasky senior, Theodore Roberts, James Neill, George Melford, Alfred Hertz, Louis Gottschalk, Thomas Meighan, Ralph Kellard and Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Buckland.

During and after the dinner, many of the stars entertained, and the succeeding dance was especially brilliant. Geraldine Farrar and John Drew did a one step which was the hit of the evening.

Biograph Re-Issues Six More Griffith Pictures

"Man's Genesis," a Prehistoric Subject, Set for Release on July 23, Will Be Followed by "The Battle at Elderbush Gulch," Ready for Bookings on July 30

SIX more of the Biograph re-issues through the General Film company, of pictures produced by D. W. Griffith have been chosen from the many subjects which Griffith directed for Biograph. They are "Man's Genesis," "The Battle at Elderbush Gulch," "Her Mother's Oath," "The Last Drop of Water," "Death's Marathon" and "The Sheriff's Baby."

"Man's Genesis," which will be released July 23, is the first picture of prehistoric times ever made. It was followed by a flood of cave man pictures by other companies but has never been surpassed. Weakhands, played by Robert Harron, invents the stone headed axe and so routs Bruteforce, played by Wilfrid Lucas, the rival for the affections of Lilywhite, played by Mae Marsh, Charles H. Mailes, W. C. Robinson and W. Chrystie Miller play cave men.

"The Battle at Elderbush Gulch" is rated by Mr. Griffith himself as the third best picture he ever made; the other two being "Judith of Bethulia" and "The Birth of a Nation." The order of these two is chronological. It is a two-reel subject released July 30 and, without a doubt, one of the finest battle pictures ever made. The players include Mae Marsh, Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Robert Harron, Alfred Paget, Charles H. Mailes, Kate Bruce, W. Chrystie Miller and W. C. Robinson.

Jennie Lee, the veteran character woman, does some wonderful acting in "Her Mother's Oath," released August 6. Dorothy Gish, playing her daughter, runs away with an itinerant actor, Henry Walthall. The mother has taken an unrelenting oath but finally forgives her daughter. Charles H. Mailes and Robert Harron are in the cast.

"The Last Drop of Water" comes August 13. A renegade husband, played by the late Joseph Graybill, nearly loses the lives of others through his carelessness with the water bottles when crossing the American desert under attacks by the Indians. Blanche Sweet plays the wife. Charles H. West, William J. Butler and W. Chrystie Miller are in the cast.

An unusual story is told in "Death's Marathon," released August 20. The husband, in business troubles, is about to shoot himself. He calls up his wife and tells her so. She tries to hold him on the wire till friends can reach the office and stop him but Death wins the marathon.

Henry B. Walthall is the husband and Blanche Sweet the wife. Others are Walter Miller, Lionel Barrymore, Kate Bruce, Robert Harron, William J. Butler and Joseph McDermott.

"The Sheriff's Baby" comes August 27. It tells the story of a man's redemption through a baby's influence. Henry B. Walthall, Harry Carey, Alfred Paget, Kate Bruce, Jack Dillon, Robert Harron, Lionel Barrymore and Joseph McDermott are in the cast.

Rafferty, New Comedy Character, Makes a Hit

O'Hara, President of All-Celtic Film, Saw Chance for Popular Approval of Picture Depicting Irish Traits Without Offensive Burlesque

A LITTLE over six months ago Charles C. O'Hara organized the All-Celtic Film company, of which he is now the head. The intention of the company at that time was to make dramas as well as comedies.

He seems to know precisely what the exhibitor and public want. This has been proven by the welcome the "Rafferty" series of comedy pictures received the country over. No one ever thought of putting an Irish character on the screen with a silk hat. It was generally conceded that to get a laugh with an Irish character he must wear chin whiskers and carry the hod and be of the burly type.

"I worked hard to get the All-Celtic company where it is at the present time," says Mr. O'Hara. "Many obstacles were thrown in my path, but I weathered the storm.

"My pet creation, 'Rafferty,' I believe will become the most popular picture character in the United States.

"Last week Joseph Sullivan, who portrays the title role of Peaceful Rafferty in the 'Rafferty' series, appeared in person at the Claremont theatre, at 135th street and Broadway, New York, when the picture, 'Rafferty Settles the War,' was shown for the first time, and you should have seen the hit it made.

"The manager of the theatre, Fred Dollinger, thought so much of it that he sent a letter to me saying that it was the best comedy picture he ever saw, and immediately signed up for the entire series with us.

"This is but one instance of the value of our product, for we are in receipt of many letters from exhibitors in all parts of the country, complimenting us on our fine pictures. The success of 'Rafferty' was almost instantaneous, for they knew a good thing when they saw it."

The Federal Company Completes Its First Picture

A NEW company, the Federal, that will produce comedies only has been organized, and has already completed its first picture, entitled, "Nothing But Love," which was taken at the studios in Bay Ridge. Fort Hamilton figures in the exteriors, and many of the soldiers and officers of the fort appear in the picture. Many of the big cannons figure very prominently in some of the scenes. There is also some new water "business" that is bound to get the laughs.

The company will produce a one-reel comedy every week, directed by Al Ray, the well-known comedian and producer, who has been signed up by this company for two years. The company will have winter studios in Hollywood or Los Angeles, Cal.

Austin Bartz, who does all the traveling for the company, has left for the coast to select a site for the new studio. Many well-known comedians have been signed up by this company, and several very familiar names will appear in the cast of "Nothing But Love."

The company has gone to work to secure the best people for all branches of work in the company. Al Palumbo, who was chief cameraman with foreign Pathé for four years, has been engaged by this company. He is an expert in all branches of trick photography.

The company will most probably release through United service, as a deal is being arranged by which that organization will handle the output of Federal films. Several members of the cast received numerous injuries while filming "Nothing But Love," but all were able to leave for Coney Island, to take "His Jealous Wife." The scenes of this picture will all be taken on the boat going to the island, and on the beach and amusement places.

RAMO STUDIOS ARE COMPLETED

The Ramo company is now producing the Regent brand for the United program, besides preparing for large productions on another program.

NEXT V-L-S-E RELEASE IS ON JUNE 21

The next feature scheduled for release on the V-L-S-E program is "The White Sister," an Essanay five-part production that introduces to picture audiences the justly renowned star Viola Allen.

In this feature, which will be released the week of June 21, Miss Allen will appear in the role that created a furore when she interpreted it on the speaking stage.

It will be remembered that "The White Sister" as a spoken drama was a wonderful success, and the vehicle in which Miss Allen starred her greatest dramatic triumph.

LUBIN ACTRESS, EXPERT WHIP, DRIVES 4 HORSES FOR SCENE

The ability of Edith Ritchie of the Lubin players to drive a four-in-hand stood her in good stead this week in one of the big scenes in "The Great Ruby," by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, which the Lubin company is now making into a feature production, under the direction of Barry O'Neil.

LUBIN PLAYERS AT THE RACES IN "THE GREAT RUBY" (Lubin—V-L-S-E)

Miss Ritchie in private life is Mrs. Stephen Morris, a prominent Philadelphia society woman, who became a motion picture player with the Lubin company about a year ago.

Miss Ritchie has driven coaches in Newport, R. I.; Philadelphia, New York and other fashionable centers in this country and abroad. A number of coaches were used in the race track scene in "The Great Ruby," and Director O'Neil got Miss Ritchie to take one of them.

The way in which she drove the four grays from the Lubin ranch at Betzwood, Pa., to a picturesque country inn several miles away, and then to the race track, won her the applause of all the other players. At the race track she parked the big coach with the ease and skill of a professional whip.

"THE KICK-OUT" WILL BE RELEASED JUNE 23

The forthcoming release of Knickerbocker Star features, for the General Film program is redblood picture, full of thrills and intense situations involving political intrigue and cunning. The leading parts are taken by Ralph Stuart, as the mayor; George Howard, as the newspaper man; Helen Case, as the mayor's daughter, and MacBarnes as the boss. These players under the direction of Robert T. Thornby, the director, present a drama of action and stirring punches of unusual character.

The script is from the new editor of the Knickerbocker Star features, Rev. C. J. Harris, who, with Director Thornby, worked out the plot which holds the interest with intensity to the final "Kick-Out" of the boss; which involves a railroad wreck; the mobbing of the mayor and the boss; the wrecking of the newspaper plant; but the final trimuph of justice as the automobile engine serves well in running the presses which prove the salvation of the city.

"The Kick-Out" will be in three parts, released June 23, and the first of these regular feature releases on the General Film company's program for alternate Wednesdays.

KLEINE'S "THE SPENDTHRIFT" TO OPEN IN CHICAGO

George Kleine's latest six-part feature, "The Spendthrift," featuring Irene Fenwick, will be given its premier Chicago presentation at the Fine Arts theatre. The attraction opens a two-week's run at the big Hamburger house commencing June 26.

"The Spendthrift" is fresh from the Kleine New York Studios and marks the latest addition to the long list of recent Kleine successes, featuring in addition to Miss Fenwick an unusual cast of well known Broadway players. Cyril Keightley, the Australian actor, who appeared with Miss Fenwick in "The Song of Songs" at the Eltinge theatre, New York, is seen opposite her in "The Spendthrift." Malcolm Duncan is also seen in the big George Kleine film.

"The Spendthrift" is founded on the famous stage play by Porter Emerson Browne and is scheduled for general release in the United States through the George Kleine offices, June 21.

DESMOND IS A MOROSCO PLAYER OF LONG STANDING

William Desmond, now playing leads with the Morosco-Bosworth in the new picture, "Kilmeny," was the leading man Oliver Morosco chose for his first production in New York, "Judge and Jury." The honor was fairly earned as "Bill" Desmond had been a Morosco stalwart for years, and during his incumbency at the Burbank he formed with Blanche Hall what is now pronounced one of the greatest drawing teams in stock.

Mr. Desmond, for the past two years, has been supporting Lenore Ulrich in "The Bird of Paradise." Miss Ulrich is also the star he is supporting in "Kilmeny."

LIGHTNING STRIKES PATHE STUDIO

Just as the "Romance of Elaine" company and the Whartons were saying their farewells in the Pathe studio recently, lightning struck one of the chimneys. Some of the players were hurled to the floor and badly shaken up, but no serious damage was done.

Pearl White was thrown against an iron pillar and slightly bruised, and Lionel Barrymore was hit by a chimney brick which crashed through the glass roof. After the confusion was over it was regretted that a cameraman had not been on the job to film another exploit of the diverting Elaine.

McNAUGHTON JOINS FILM RANKS

Tom McNaughton, the famous English eccentric comedian, has become a photoplayer.

This interesting announcement was made this week by the Lubin company, which has secured the services of McNaughton for an indefinite period. The funny Englishman will make his screen debut with Marie Dressler in the Lubin feature comedy, "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," written by Acton Davies, and now being produced under the direction of Howell Hansel.

McNaughton has achieved an international reputation as a comedian. He came to this country about eight years ago with his brother Fred to play a special vaudeville engagement of six weeks, and their eccentric act, with its burlesque boxing bout and duel, made such a hit that the brothers remained here for some time.

About five years ago Fred McNaughton returned to England, but Tom liked it so well in this country that he remained and went into musical comedy. He was with "The Spring Maid" for nearly three years.

It was in this production that he did his now famous recitation, "The Three Trees." Following "The Spring Maid" McNaughton was in "Sweethearts," "Suzi," and "Fads and Fancies."

Lubin Plant Running at Top Speed on New Subjects

One Million and a Half Feet of Film Is Produced Weekly at Factory in Betzwood—Company Secures Property in Vicinity of City Studio

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, June 14.

THE Lubin Manufacturing Company is having the busiest time in its history. Marie Dressler has begun on a five reel comedy entitled "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," under the direction of Howell Hansell. The scenario was written by Acton Davies, formerly of the New York "Evening Sun." Tom McNaughton will support Miss Dressler.

The Terwilliger company will in a week or so begin its annual summer pilgrimage to Newport, there to film aquatic and "society" stunts. The Romaine Fielding company will move from Arizona to the West coast for the summer months. The Jacksonville company is already at Atlantic City. At Betzwood, where the factory work is done, one million and a half feet of film is being produced weekly.

Property in the neighborhood of the city plant has been secured and extensive alterations will shortly be made comprising additional studios and other improvements. There are more than two thousand people on the regular Lubin pay roll.

The Lubin favorites were much in evidence at Reading. A party of about twenty-five, headed by "Pop" Lubin himself, attended the festivities. Amongst those who attended were Allen Boone, of the publicity department, Ormi Hawley, Earle Metcalfe, George Soule Spencer, Mary Charleson, Crane Wilbur, Rosetta Brice, Kempton Greene, Shannon Fife, and several camera men. The latter made pictures of the big parade, which were rushed back to Philadelphia, made into film and shown the following night at the banquet.

Several prizes were carried off by the Lubin contingent. Kempton Greene was the man of the winning dance couple amongst the stars. Allen Boone also carried off a dancing prize. Mr. Lubin was presented a silver cup for bringing the largest crowd of players to Reading.

Next week the Lubin studio will present for the benefit of the Lubin Beneficial association, George Cohan's "50 Miles from Boston." Some of the leading parts in this production will be taken by Mary Charleson, George Soule Spencer, Kempton Greene, Arthur Matthews, Clara Lambert, Ferdinand Tidmarsh, Clarence Jay Elmer, Peter Lang Carson Davenport, Marie Sterling, Gilbert Ely, Leon Kelly, Frank Smiley.

The entire Lubin cast will appear in the chorus. Marie Dressler, Billy Reeves and Tom McNaughton will give monologues during the evening. The production is under the direction of Percy Winter. There will be 150 players and a special orchestra, composed largely of Lubin artists. Many nearby photo players will be present to see their reel friends in an unreel production.

Director Nowland reviewed the subject in a scholarly and thorough manner.

Film Makers Must Help Managers "Re-Sell Public"

C. R. Seelye, Assistant General Manager of the V-L-S-E, Declares That This Is the Duty of Manufacturers to Exhibitors

"THE days of supplying exhibitors with pictures and then letting them worry along and get what they can out of them, has gone by," says C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager of V-L-S-E, "Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay realized this when they affiliated their feature interests.

"The industry has now reached the stage where the manufacturer must help the exhibitor 're-sell to the public.'

"The efforts of the V-L-S-E to increase box office receipts for exhibitors, are directed along two distinct lines—the production of exceptionally meritorious features and the equally important work of conducting a campaign to secure proper recognition of motion pictures from every newspaper in the nation.

"Every newspaper of any consequence runs a sporting page, while motion picture news is either ignored, or poorly edited, and given very little space. More people are interested in motion picture news than are interested in baseball, consequently, more people will read a well-edited picture department, than read the sporting page.

"V-L-S-E has instructed every branch manager and every salesman on the road, that his first duty is to interest the newspaper publishers in the establishment of a motion picture page, and that a page of this kind will increase circulation, which, in turn, increases advertising.

"The V-L-S-E representatives have been furnished with definite, intelligent arguments in favor of motion picture pages, and they have been instructed to present these arguments to the editors and publishers, and to keep everlastingly at it, until every paper in their individual territory gives as much space to motion picture news as is given to sports.

"Another condition that we intend to bring about, is the re-adjustment of newspaper advertising rates. We are pointing out to the publishers of the country that motion pictures should not be confused with theatricals, and that the advertisements for picture theatres should not be charged at the amusement rate which is in all cases, higher than the regular display advertising rates, and in view of the fact that a greater amount of advertising can be secured from the picture theatres than is secured from the department stores, newspapers should give to the exhibitor, the same low advertising rate that is accorded the department stores.

"Our salesmen have been instructed to first go to the newspapers, present their arguments and offer to co-operate with the newspaper not only for their news columns, but in the matter of advertising as well, a plan we feel sure will prove advantageous."

SWANSON MAY BRING OUT NATURAL COLOR SUBJECTS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 14.

William Swanson is in Los Angeles, and according to his statements his trip here is in no way connected with business, but many of the film colony expect to hear of something new started by this former exchange man.

It will be at least five months, Mr. Swanson told the News representative, before he has a word to say to the motion picture trade. At that time he promises to make his first announcement relative to a new process of making pictures that will render them stereoscopic and appear in their natural colors.

"At this time there are a number of subjects completed," Mr. Swanson stated, "but we are not in a position to publicly tell of this innovation that I believe will mark a new epoch in matters pertaining to motion pictures. The pictures have been shown to a number of the best known men of filmdom and none so far have had other than enthusiastic words of praise for the pictures."

Mr. Swanson expects to remain here for several weeks and will then return to New York and complete arrangements for placing the new process pictures on the market.

With the acting of Betty Nansen as Alaine de l'Etoile, and Valdemar Psilander as Marc Arron, and the rich and beautiful settings of the Great Northern Film company, this production should meet with great success.

JOSEPHINE EARLE LEFT COMEDY ROLES FOR VAMPIRE PARTS

Josephine Earle, of the Vitagraph players, is a lovable and charming girl, in spite of the fact that she is invariably cast for vampire roles. Miss Earle scored a hit in the role of Jennie, the ganster, in "The Return of Maurice Donnelly." It was the first vampire she had ever played, her previous work being the light comedy role of the Beauty Doctor in the famous "Jarr" series. But after her characterization of "Jennie" she has been kept playing vampire.

Her latest part is that of Meta Delateur in "The Writing on the Wall," a five-reel feature. Her gowns will create a sensation. They were especially designed for her.

Miss Earle is remembered for her work on the legitimate stage as Beauty in H. W. Savage's "Everywoman." She has a soprano voice and played a season in stock, singing the prima donna roles in Gilbert and Sullivan's operas.

THE MAJESTIC JUVENILE COMPANY IN "PIRATES BOLD," WITH VIOLET RADCLIFF (June 15)

FILM COLONY IN JACKSONVILLE ACTIVE

Special to Motion Picture News

Jacksonville, Fla., June 16.

Robert Vignola is now producing "A Weaver of Dreams," featuring Hal Forde, a Broadway star brought from New York especially for this production.

The Reliable Photo-Play Company has decided to build its studio in Riverview, a suburb of Jacksonville on the St. John's river. This is the second company to locate there within two months, and most likely others will follow as Riverview is an ideal spot for producing. The company will live at the Riverview House, a new hotel opened especially for the players of the two studios.

Jewel Shepard has been engaged as ingenue in the Reliable Photo Play Company's stock. Miss Shepard is a beautiful little southern girl of seventeen, and has turned down several offers to go on the legitimate stage. Miss Shepard takes a very fine photograph and her work on the screen is unexcelled.

The Imperial theatre has been exhibiting pictures made in Jacksonville one day of each week, and generally has the attendance of the players and other members of the profession.

Robert Stevens is expected in the city during the week, and will begin work immediately on some scripts for the Reliable company.

LUBIN PLANS ELABORATE MILITARY AND NAVAL FILM

Arrangements are now being made at the Western Lubin studio at Los Angeles, California, to put on a series of military and naval dramas in which all the forces of the United States government, including the army, battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, aviation corps and every other branch of Uncle Sam's forces will be utilized.

The timeliness of such a subject during the present agitation by national defense societies for preparation against war is evident.

MISS MICHELENA TO STAR IN "SALVATION NELL"

"Salvation Nell," one of the most famous plays ever shown on the American stage, is soon to be adapted on a markedly pretentious scale to motion pictures, by the California Motion Picture corporation, in San Francisco.

This firm, through a special arrangement with Edward Sheldon, author of the play, has already begun active work on the production and announces its final completion for an early release.

Like so many celebrated dramas, "Salvation Nell" offers opportunities to the motion picture camera that can never be realized in the more cramped limitations of the stage. The rapid action of the play, combined with the numerous advances through which its intense situations develop, make a frequent change of scene highly desirable It is in just this respect, more, probably, than anywhere else, that the screen excels the stage.

Another feature of "Salvation Nell's" adaptation to motion pictures, that bespeaks it an immediate favor with the public, is the appearance of Beatriz Michelena in the leading role. Never has this star found a part better intended to call upon the whole fund of her acknowledged dramatic versatility than that of the heroic Salvation Army lass depicted in Edward Sheldon's play. Here all the art that she has displayed in her various roles of the past—her Salomy Jane, Mignon and others—must be combined in one.

SCARDON IS A MASTER OF MAKE-UP

Paul Scardon as Anatole de Voie, the French proprietor of an aristocratic gambling establishment, in "The Sins of the Mothers," presents one of the strongest characterizations in which this past master of the make-up art has ever been seen.

Mr. Scardon's versatility is well known, yet in "The Sins of the Mothers" his characterization is a presentation of the unscrupulous foreigner, sinister, smiling, courteous and tricky.

The part of Anatole de Voie is an especially difficult one, and its excellent handling by Mr. Scardon contributes heavily to the perfectly sustained interest.

LAX MEMBERSHIP IN PITTSBURGH IS ENTERING WEDGE FOR CENSORS

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 16.

There is some talk among exhibitors in Pittsburgh of making a more thorough canvass for membership in their organization. In the past matters pertaining to membership have been very lax, and the result is that some of the exhibitors who are members have dropped out of the organization, while others never attended any of the meetings.

This state of affairs has made it possible for the public safety department of the city to put across some measures that were obnoxious to the exhibitors.

Several other measures are contemplated by the police department, and it is to offset these measures that the exhibitors are getting together stronger and looking after their membership so that they can send a delegation to the mayor with the request that he go a little lighter on the exhibitors than in the past.

The screens of many of the Pittsburgh theatres are being used to fight some of the present measures of the police department, and it is said that the screens will be used more freely in the future unless the police go a little slower and treat the owners of the theatres more justly.

An attempt is being made in Pittsburgh to organize a film baseball league. A number of the exchange houses have their teams, and several teams of operators are in the field. Now the attempt is being made to form two organizations and have them battle against each other for a flag.

The operators' teams state that they can whitewash any team that the exchanges can gather together, and it is possible that some good talent will be brought out as a result of the competition for places on the various teams.

"MI PERDIDA," A VITAGRAPH, IS COMPLETED BY HANDWORTH

"Mi Perdida" (My Lost One), a Vitagraph three-part Broadway Star Feature, in which Nicholas Dunaew appeared in the leading role, supported by Dorothy Kelly and William Dunn, has just been completed by Director Harry Handworth.

The leading characters are all Italians and the scenes laid on the East Side of New York City. The one portrayed by Mr. Dunaew was that of an old music teacher and his work, that showed careful study, was so exceptional it was the means of his attaining a goal to which he has long aspired—a directorship on the Vitagraph staff.

The first picture to be produced under Mr. Dunaew's direction will be a one-part comedy entitled "An East Side Othello," of which he is the author. This will be followed by a series of dramas, mostly of his own composition. "The Path of Struggle," written by Mr. Dunaew as a six-part Blue Ribbon feature, and "No Title," a three-part Broadway Star Feature, are already announced, while other dramas in preparation are picturizations of the works of famous authors.

American Correspondent Film Enters News Field

Company, Under the Guidance of M. B. Claussen, Is Organized to Supply a Quick Service of Political, Industrial and Educational Topics to Dailies and Film Organizations

M. B. CLAUSSEN, president of the American Correspondent Film company, at 30 East Forty-second street, New York City, recently outlined the purposes of his company.

"I feel that the cinematographic newspaper will have in not so remote a future the same importance as the printed newspaper nowadays," he declares. If the cinematographic newspaper develops into real importance and increase in volume, in frequency of issue and interest of matter, cinematographic news agencies must help. This conviction led me to create the American Correspondent Film Company. We are not exhibitors of film, nor are we renters, nor have we any film renting organization throughout the country.

"We are merely an agency which supplies political, sensational, industrial and educational news to newspapers, to film organizations and to film renters of reliable standing who are interested themselves in putting cinematographic news before the public. Our correspondents are officially admitted to the German and Austro-Hungarian war fronts. One of our correspondents, A. K. Dawson, is now on the Italian frontier. Another correspondent, Fritz Arno Wagner, who is well known in this country through having made sensational pictures in Mexico for Pathe. He is making pictures for us at the German fronts.

"Edward Lyell Fox, author of "Behind the Scenes in Warring Germany," is going back to Europe for us at the end of this month.

"We are making arrangements to have a correspondent in England, France and Italy.

Mr. d'Emery is now crossing South America and we expect his first pictures within a very short time."

Selznick and Bernstein May Soon Combine Forces

A $3,000,000 Company, Financed by Eastern Backers, Is Expected to Produce on the Pacific Coast, Probably San Diego, a Feature and a Comedy a Week

A UNION of Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film corporation, and Isidore Bernstein, former general manager of Universal City, may be expected in the near future according to well substantiated rumor.

The report runs that a $3,000,000 concern, backed by Eastern capital, will make a feature and a comedy a week for the World Film corporation on the Pacific coast with Bernstein as the active head. The Equitable Film corporation, an established but so far inactive company, will be the connecting link between the new concern and the World Film.

Mr. Bernstein, when seen, referred the question to Mr. Selznick. In his turn Mr. Selznick did not want to say anything, but intimated the trend which matters are taking by referring to past statements of his.

"The World Film is rapidly expanding," said Mr. Selznick. "While it is our policy to own our producing companies, we do not wish to keep outside producer of good pictures out. Our main object is to eliminate the waste in the production end and so save money for the exhibitor and ourselves.

"Next week I will be ready with a definite statement on the Bernstein matter in MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

While Bernstein did not wish to talk, it is known that he has been looking over sites for a producing plant at San Diego, Cal., and other points on the Pacific coast.

"NATION" ENTERS FOURTH MONTH OF NEW YORK RUN

D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," is well in its fourth month at the Liberty theatre, where it remains the biggest attraction of the season. This wonderful film series of history and romance retains its drawing powers in every essential, and continues to unfold a narrative of thrilling interest touching upon scenes prior to and during the Civil War.

Great battlefields, enormous armies marching to conflict, the daring rides of the Clansmen and the thousand and one details of gripping heart interest which Griffith has crowded into his story set the whole production apart from the average and make it intensely real and life-like.

CABARET LIFE AS MIRRORED IN KALEM'S FORTHCOMING FOUR-PART FEATURE, "MIDNIGHT AT MAXIM'S"

"MIDNIGHT AT MAXIM'S"

(Kalem Special—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

AS some musical comedy ads read—girls, girls, nothing but girls. Girls surely are the main feature of this production. The main intent of the picture is to give an idea of an evening in a gay metropolitan cafe, Maxim's having been selected as a thoroughly representative establishment.

At considerable expense the Kalem company built a facsimile of the interior of Maxim's and then went ahead with the picture, most of the action taking place in Maxim's. The plot is only a thread on which to hang the dances and chorus numbers.

In the pictures are seen the principals and choruses of the revues at Rector's, Bustanoby's and Maxim's; the total must be one hundred girls. Many spectacular numbers are shown and also several feature dances introducing Bert Weston and Dorothy Ozuman, Baroness Irmgard von Rottenthal, Pirnikoff and Rose and the Cameron girls. Of the specialties one of the most entertaining was the donkey dance.

The chorus numbers included the vest number, the bon-bon girls, the pajama parade, a Chinese fantasy, the muff number, the eye promenade, Maxim's ballet, bathing revue and the final ensemble.

The sub-titles are so worded as to carry the music cues.

Finally Mr. Shye finds out that Tottie Twinkletoes, whom he is pursuing, is another's wife and thus the action ends.

Most persons, especially suburbanites, will want to visit Maxim's at midnight after seeing the picture.

"THE GODDESS"

(Vitagraph—Chapter Six)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN these two reels Celestia, the Goddess, further proves her right to be termed "an angel come from Heaven," for she is constantly doing all in her power to help the suffering crowds of New York's Eeast Side.

As yet she appears still clad in her noticeably unstylish robes, and these, combined with the good she does and the fact that she continually impresses all who come in contact with her with the fact that she has come from Heaven, instill a strange faith in the minds of the lowly foreigners. In these people she has made friends.

During her wanderings in the crowded slums Celestia encounters many a sad spectacle. However, she is successful in again brightening the lives of many who had given up in despair. She prevents an aged couple from committing suicide, she keeps a despondent girl from going astray and she completely reforms a confirmed girl of the streets.

In these scenes the Vitagraph company has awarded to Miss Stewart the best support possible. Three characterizations rendered by Mary Maurice, Ethel Corcoran and Mary Anderson are noticeable for their sympathetic realism.

Tommy does not enter into this chapter at all. But Sweetzer is scouring the city to discover the whereabouts of Celestia, for in the last chapter it will be remembered he bought and paid for her after his own fashion. Freddy the Ferret discovers the girl's haunts but instead of informing his master, Sweetzer, of the fact he is so reformed that he resolves to cease hitting the high spots for the time being. Stilleter also discovers the hiding place of Celestia.

"THE POMP OF EARTH"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE ninth of the "Who Pay?" series, this picture presents a condition which is probably more common than anything yet shown in the group. It deals with the exceedingly common situation of a young man of promise and honesty, who becomes a crook through the influence of a girl, whose only objection to him is that he has not enough money.

A bank president, who has plundered his bank, is released from prison after a very light sentence, while the cashier is left to serve a long term, although entirely innocent. The cashier swears to have revenge.

Cole, the president, goes West under the name of Walker, and using the stolen funds poses as a capitalist and society man. He is spotted as a fine catch by the avaricious mother of a girl who is loved by a young and moderately successful broker.

The girl is of the weak sort, who is willing to sell herself for luxury, but gives the broker a chance to show that he can become rich. Goaded by the fear of losing the girl he embezzles customers' funds as well as those of a club of which he is treasurer. Meantime the girl announces her engagement to the successful thief.

The broker decides to kill him, but on that very night he is slain by the cashier who has escaped from prison. The broker takes the only course he sees left and commits suicide. The girl's greed has killed a true lover, and brought only ruin to herself.

As usual Henry King and Ruth Roland play leads.

"THE MOONSTONE"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE subject matter of Wilkie Collin's novel, "The Moonstone," from which this picture is adapted, has been greatly favored with the attention of all producers in the past. But the fact that the culprit of the plot is not to be even guessed at before he is revealed by the author is the main point on which "The Moonstone" differs from the ordinary, and it is also the point which elevates the picture in hand from its less illustrious forerunners.

The plot hinges about the sacred gem referred to in the title. This is stolen by an Englishman from an Indian idol. Three priests are delegated to recover it.

THE PRIESTS DETERMINE BLAKE IS THE THIEF

In England it comes into the hands of Rachel Verinder. One night it is stolen. Rachel's lover, Franklin Blake, it develops, has taken it while walking in his sleep. It is stolen from him by his friend, pawned and regained, but finally it is recovered by the priests.

In the production of the picture the salient features of the robbery are not disclosed until many interesting situations have been introduced. Frank Crane, director, has well succeeded in presenting the play in such a manner that few will suspect the outcome unless familiar with the novel.

A striking feature of the production is the naturalness of the scenes supposed to take place in an English mansion. The atmosphere is realistic, while the players in these scenes look their parts to perfection. The exterior and spacious grounds of an estate near New York are well worked into the picture, while in every scene pleasing photography predominates.

The cast is headed by Elaine Hammerstein as Rachel and Eugene O'Brien as Blake. The latter endows his character with the correct personality, yet we hope in the future he will restrain himself from posing in so many scenes. William Rosell is good as Godfrey, the thief, while Ruth Findlay gives a most pleasing performance as the Maid. Miss Hammerstein makes a sympathetic heroine.

"RAFFERTY AT THE HOTEL DE REST"

(All-Celtic—World Film)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

RAFFERTY comedies surely are a realization of clean fun. Rafferty is a wholesome sort of Irishman who enjoys himself and makes others enjoy themselves without resorting to vulgarity. Any Rafferty comedy of those seen so far would make an ideal running mate for a feature drama.

When Rafferty visits the Hotel de Rest, accompanied by his two friends, the three have hilarious adventures culminating when they hear a parlor orator shouting "fire" in the course of his declamation. Thinking the hotel is on fire they flee their rooms en deshabille. All the Rafferty favorites including Peggy Shannon, Tommy Mullins and Pat Foye are in the cast.

"THE ARAB"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EDGAR SELWYN, author and producer of "The Arab," as a play, here stars in a screen visualization of the same subject. It is an exceedingly original offering from first to last, and as produced the picture lifts the spectator from his seat and for the time being transports him to Arabia, so realistic is the atmosphere.

A great number of the scenes have for their background a desert which to say the least looks as if it were actually a desert of the old world, especially when peopled with principals and extras, who have been well trained in the customs and actions of habitues of such a place.

The street scene of the Turkish municipality is also perfect in detail, and besides, it possesses a stability that is sadly uncommon in many productions. The many rooms of the governor's house, including his harem, are blessed with the same qualities of the other scenes already mentioned.

The story relates how an Arab became infatuated with a missionary's daughter, and how, after turning to the Christian faith he rescues both her and her father from the Turkish governor of the town. There seems to be a slight inconsistency in the construction of the story in one of the last subtitles in which Jamil, the Arab, is invoking the blessing of Allah on the American girl, immediately after he has well demonstrated the fact that he has become a Christian. Aside from this there is nothing to criticize in story or production.

The picture boasts of many spectacular scenes, including the charge of the mounted Bedouins through the governor's harem, and several flashes showing in a vivid manner the massacre of the Christians.

"YOU WANT I SHOULD MARRY YOUR DAUGHTER?"

Mr. Selwyn gives a concise and finished performance in the title role, while Gertrude Robinson playing opposite as the American girl enacts her part in a pleasing fashion. Theodore Roberts has the heavy role of the governor, and as usual acquits himself in excellent style. Sydney Deane appears as the missionary.

"UNDER THE CRESCENT"

(Gold Seal—Fifth Narrative)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MUCH action that is of decided interest transpires in this number. The story continues to be most exciting and the plot, constructed along the lines of a combined melodrama and adventure novel, grows in intensity as the last narrative of the series is approached.

A short synopsis of the action in these two reels follows. Zohra, accompanied by the princess and the American, wanders to the camp of her father, the Bedouin chief. Here the little dancer recovers her child, and with it her reason returns. For the time being the three fugitives are sheltered by the heart broken leader of the desert pirates.

Soon after this the rascally prince turns up once more. The princess and the American escape across the desert, frustrating the plans of the prince, who in a rage kills the Bedouin chief. Zohra swears vengeance over his dead body.

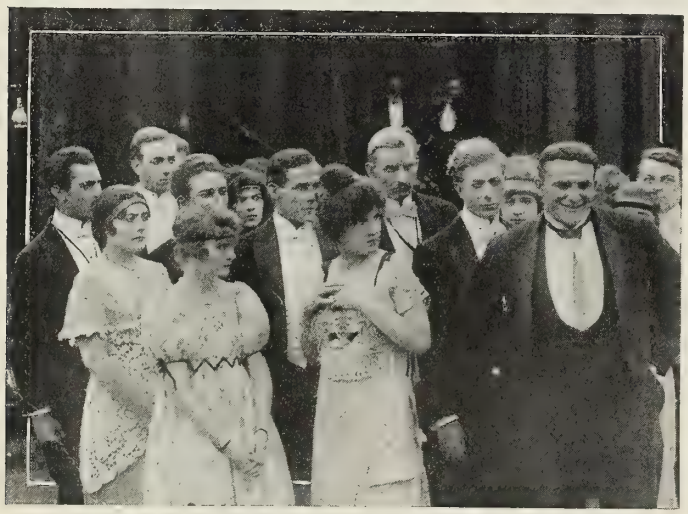
In the desert the two fugitives encounter an exhausted messenger, who is bearing a paper to the English soldiers, telling them of the contemplated massacre of the Christians. The American goes on with this message, successfully evading the Turks, who guard the edge of the desert.

The princess, however, is captured by the soldiers, and taken to their master, a cousin of the prince. This gentleman attempts to take liberties with the lady, with the consequence that she stabs him to the heart.

"HER SHATTERED IDOL"

(Reliance-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR



SOMETHING is wrong with the person who does not enjoy this picture. It is an excruciating comedy, burlesquing hero worship. The idol which is shattered is personified in a blacksmith, a fine burly brute with a chin like the prow of a battleship, arms like pillars and a chest guaranteed to make evening clothes burst their seams.

Mae Marsh, as the girl, is affianced to the boy, played by slim Bobby Harron. But when she meets the blacksmith, played by Elmo Lincoln, his sheer brute strength wins her fancy. After a fine elemental courtship they plan to be real romantic and elope.

But the wise old uncle, played by Spottiswoode Aitken, realizing that if he gives the blacksmith enough rope he will hang himself, takes the glamor out of the romance by inviting the blacksmith to the house and making him the central figure of the announcement party.

Naturally the untutored child of nature is at a loss in evening clothes, on a slippery floor, in handling the dainty demi-tasse and in bandying the small talk of the ball room. May realizes that the mud of her idol's feet extends way up through his hair and takes Bobby back into her heart.

But that only gives an idea of the rich fun which pervades the entire picture, greatly helped by the Georgeadian subtitles. The only possible fault lies in the fact that the opening subtitles give the story away and the fourth reel is a "tag" reel, though a good one. "Her Shattered Idol" is funny with the humor that is only possible when a really big theme lies concealed behind the joking. John B. O'Brien directed the picture.

"THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode One)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

WITH a change in title this serial is a continuation of the adventures which have been keeping Elaine and her friends busy for the past twenty-four weeks, episode one of the new serial being the twenty-fifth of the whole.

We have found it necessary to say much in praise of the series, and the opening of the third section of chapters gives promise of the same constant improvement which has been the rule throughout its predecessors, an improvement all the more remarkable because of the near perfection of each instalment.

Arthur B. Reeve and Charles Goddard, the authors, and the Wharton brothers, the directors, have grasped the whole nature of making and putting on a serial motion picture effectively.

Not only are all the fundamental elements of suspense, action and the like taken care of, but there are many other points of excellence. Perhaps the most important feature is the nature of the story, which is so ingeniously constructed as to interest audiences of every class. This alone raises the production to the masterpiece class.

At the opening of the chapter under consideration Lionel Barrymore appears as a new member of the cast, taking the role of Maricus Del Mar, a secret agent of a foreign government. Arnold Daly, since he plays the missing Craig Kennedy, disappears for a time. Pearl White, of course, continues as the charming Elaine.

DEL MAR IS UNPLEASANTLY SURPRISED

Knowing that one of the models of Kennedy's famous torpedo has been lost, owing to the death of the man who stole it. Del Mar with his confederates prepares forged credentials, and leads Elaine to believe that he represents the United States secret service.

The only reason that he does not succeed at the start is that Elaine's collie digs the torpedo from its hiding place in a flower pot, and hides it in an attic closet. This scene introduces one of the finest pieces of animal acting yet seen on the screen.

Del Mar, however, is followed closely by a mysterious old gentleman, who is the center of some surprising scenes. Altogether the episode is excellent.

"THE CRIMINAL"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture belongs to that class of crook stories that will always remain popular. A deserted girl is brought up among a gang of professional crooks, being led to believe that their leader is her father. Her real father is elected district attorney, and after the girl has faced many a trying situation, even having been accused of murder, she discovers his identity. Then she is able to forsake the crooked gang for ever and live in peace and happiness with her father and mother.

This theme is replete with appealing situations, the true values of which are exceedingly well interpreted by the members of the cast. Norma Talmadge is seen as the girl. Miss Talmadge make a truly appealing figure of the innocent victim of circumstance, performing in all her many scenes in a finished manner. Maurice Costello appears as the district attorney, giving a forceful characterization of the part.

Van Dyke Brooke, who is also the director of the subject, plays Jim Wells, the boss gangster, while others who appear are Estelle Mardo, Maud Milton and Thomas Mills.

The story was written by Anna Bressmen and is constructed as logically as the circumstances would permit. It interests one practically all of the time, without resorting to the sensational to excite the spectator. It should prove a worthy addition to the bill of any house that makes a specialty of three-reel features.

"CONSCIENCE"

(Imp-Universal—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IF we may be permitted to discriminate, "Conscience" is certainly the piece de resistance of the Universal program for the week of June 21. In fact, it is one of the most evenly meritorious pictures that we have ever seen Universal place on the market.

"Conscience" may be classified as a melodramatic detective story. It was written by Curtis Benton, a member of the Imp stock company. As a detective play it far excels most visualized subjects of the same nature.

The web of circumstancial evidence that is responsible for the conviction for murder of an innocent man is skillfully conceived, and the following unraveling of the entire mystery by the detective is faithful to logic and realism.

Stuart Paton, who is rapidly gaining well deserved recognition as a director, produced the picture as well as adapted Mr. Benton's story for the screen. It is only reasonable to assume that the two men worked together on the whole picture, and both are hereby heartily congratulated for their efforts, which we hope will often be repeated in the future.

In the first part of the picture an innocent man is convicted of murder. He suffers death. Later a detective, who is also somewhat of a criminologist, takes up the case. He discovers that the murderer is the dead man's partner, and subsequently he gets a confession from him by working on the contortions of his disordered mind.

The arrangement of the story, its development and its intense situations, create the utmost suspense, and it is suspense that reigns throughout the picture.

The entire cast renders most efficient work. William Welsh carries the role of the murderer and gives the character a most realistic air. His latter scenes, while suffering the tortures of his conscience are marked by finished acting.

THE CONFESSION OF THE MURDERER

Curtis Benton himself, appears as the detective and makes the figure very real. Allen Holubar does some fine work in the first part of the picture as the innocent man. Others in the cast are Frances Nelson, Bill Bailey and Howard Crampton.

"THE REWARD"

(Ince-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HERE is a dramatic feature which is excellent for three reasons, any one of which is enough. It has a good story well told, the plot is never vague, being carried by two people and the two people, Bessie Barriscale and Arthur Maude, give fine portrayals of their parts.

Bessie Barriscale has a part that fits her like a wet glove as Jane Wallace, the chorus girl who wants to earn the respect of others by her virtue and whose heart is broken when she finds that her friends of the chorus only pity her because of her shabby clothes.

Arthur Maude plays Dan Conby, a rounder, who sets himself to entrap the girl and then finds he loves her after she has deliberately decided to sacrific her self-respect and take up the gay life. Jane goes to Dan and tells him of her intentions.

Realizing his changed ideas he endeavors to dissuade her but to no avail. So he gives her the key to his apartment and tells her to wait there for him. As she is unlocking the door, a doctor comes from another apartment and asks her help. She finds herself caring for a new born baby. Thus she realizes that the reward of virtue is untainted motherhood. Dan, seeing the mother and her baby, takes Jane in his arms, saying: "I guess that is why God intended women to be good, and men, too."

THE OTHER GIRLS SLIGHT JANE

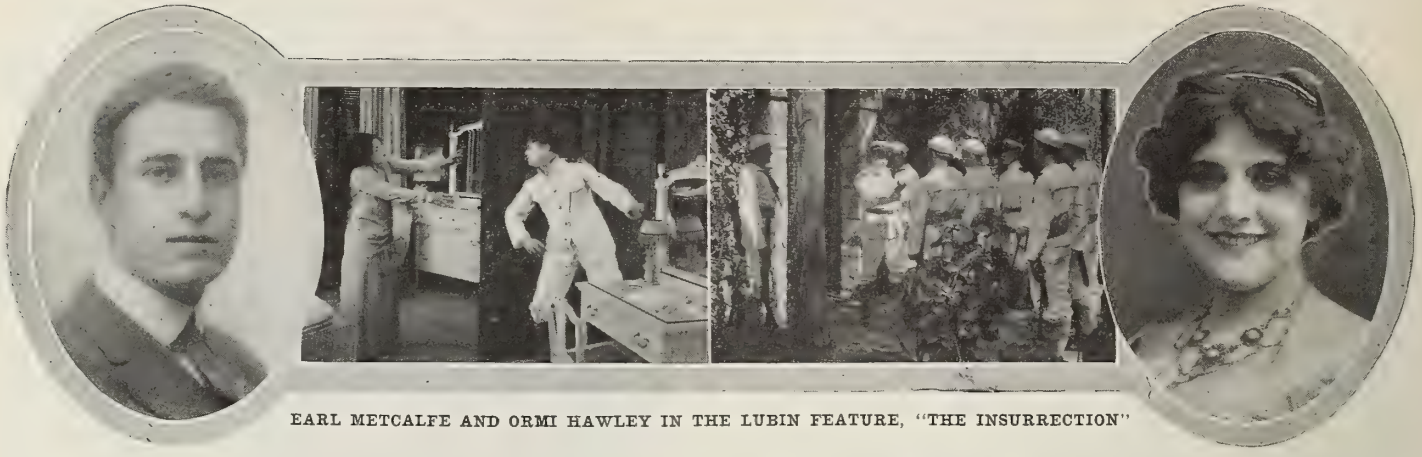
Bessie Barriscale does wonderful work in this picture, aided by many effective close-ups which give her glorious eyes their full value. She is one of the few actresses who can successfully look right into the camera.

Her work as Jane Wallace ought to make a reputation for her if she hadn't already won one on the stage and screen. Louise Glaum and Margaret Thompson are very effective as chorus ladies. The picture contains many good dressing room and cafe scenes.

"RAFFERTY GOES TO CONEY ISLAND"

(All-Celtic—World Film)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR



THE high Rafferty standard of clean fun is fully maintained in this comedy. Rafferty and his two pals go to Coney Island, all three eager to see the same girl. They have exciting adventures with Coney Island characters, such as a fortune teller, and Rafferty puts in one of his funniest days.

RAFFERTY INVITES HIS SWEETHEART TO LUNCH

Pretty Peggy Shannon plays the girl, of course. To the many people to whom Coney Island is a name to conjure with, this should prove especially interesting. Besides that it is a good, clean, funny comedy, fitted to round out a well assorted bill at any theatre.

EARL METCALFE AND ORMI HAWLEY IN THE LUBIN FEATURE, "THE INSURRECTION"

"THE INSURRECTION"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WERE George W. Terwilliger, joint author and producer of this photoplay, a prophet of old, he could not have been more inspired as to a timely topic than he found in the big scene of this three-reeler when a submarine torpedo blows a boat into smithereens. And this scene was filmed a year ago at Newport, so the Lusitania's fate could not have suggested it.

It is another coincidence that the release date, also fixed months ago, should be just at this particular time. I saw the completed film before the big liner was sunk, but that event has made this pictured story seem more like real life.

Besides this thrilling explosion scene, there is the view of a mine planted by Uncle Sam's sailors; close views of the mechanism which controls torpedoes; U. S. sailors and marines doing real drilling, skirmishing and firing, and a view of the big fleet on parade. In fact, a decidedly naval flavor all through.

The photography is excellent; you can see the whole flight of the torpedo as it is hurled through the water and presto, bang! the boat is hit from below, and that is the end of her.

Added to this realism (attained by using a big battleship for many scenes) an exciting love story with those popular and sterling actors, Ormi Hawley and Earl Metcalfe, as the lovers; a South American revolution as a background, and you have all the elements of a big successful feature. In fact, "The Insurrection" could well have been placed on the list of Lubin Liberty Bell features.

And now for a little of the story. Lolita, half American through her mother, loves Lieutenant Hubbard, while opposed by her Spanish father, the head of the revolutionists.

When the U. S. fleet comes to protect American interests during "The Insurrection," the father, well acted by Herbert Fortier, uses Lolita, unwittingly to give wrong information to the lieutenant. The result is a skirmish in which Hubbard is captured and condemned to die at dawn.

Lolita, with her dramatic Spanish tendencies, determines to kill herself when her lover meets his doom, but first she manages an interview with him in prison, in which he shows her how to signal the U. S. fleet.

Through this warning, the admiral of the fleet sends his guns against the town, which catches fire.

A shell strikes his prison shack, frees Hubbard and he reaches his sweetheart just as the fatal poison is raised to her lips. When the revolutionists try to escape by boat the fatal torpedo gets in its deadly work.

"THROUGH TURBULENT WATERS"

(Edison—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

LIFE behind the scenes furnishes dramatic material which seems to have a special charm for the public whether shown on the stage or screen. In this picture theatrical life in New York is portrayed with considerable realism.

The villain is a type unfortunately common among stagefolk, particularly in the metropolitan section. Endowed with natural grace and a real ability to act, Paul Temple ruins his life and that of his wife by his fondness for liquor, and when his wife is dead as a result of his treatment, he sinks still lower in crime. His end is a violent one.

Gertrude Lyon, the author, has constructed a well-built plot with plenty of attention-holding incidents. Duncan McRae, as director, and also as a member of the cast, has acquitted himself creditably. Gertrude McCoy, who plays the leading role, does acting of the highest grade throughout a story by no means easy to play.

Frank Farrington, as the villain, and Edward Earle, as the hero, do excellent work. In fact, the entire cast is a good one including besides the above, Bessie Learn, Helen Strickland, Mabel Dwight, Robert Brower, Marjorie Williams, Maxine Brown and Frank McGlynn.

Paul Temple having literally killed his wife by neglect and abuse, meets her former friend, Alice Robinson. Seeing that she has talent he induces her to allow him to instruct her so that she can get away from her place in a small stock company.

HER REALIZATION OF THE DEED

As a result the pair land the leading roles in a Broadway production, and Alice marries Temple because she sees no other course. The wedding is a faked ceremony. Shortly after the father of the actor's former wife appears looking for vengeance, and causes the death of the blackguard actor. His supposed wife is suspected but a young lawyer who is in love with her clears her from the charge. Thus there is a happy conclusion.

"BRAGA'S DOUBLE"

(Essanay—Two Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"BRAGA'S DOUBLE," to be released on June 22, is the first of a series of pictures, each complete in itself, dealing with the adventures of Dominica, a beautiful Parisian adventuress.

The work of Sheldon Lewis as the "Clutching Hand," in the "Exploits of Elaine," demonstrated his ability to sensationally portray such a character as that of Seigneur Braga, a daring South American criminal.

He also takes the role of "Braga's Double," an American engineer, but without sufficiently losing the foreign mannerisms which make his characterizations of Braga so convincing. Nell Craig's interpretation of Dominica Meduna is all that can be desired, and these two principals receive excellent support from Ernest Maupin and Frank Dayton. The settings, particularly the café scenes, are well staged and the picture throughout is pervaded with a decided foreign atmosphere.

Realistic rough and tumble fights and exciting situations supply plenty of action to keep the audience's interest intense.

Braga and Dominica are companions in crime. Gaston LeGrand is a government official who has been extorting silence money from Braga.

BRAGA PLANS THE MURDER

The latter decides to do away with LeGrand, and in order to establish an alibi in case he is charged with the murder, he sends Dominica to the cafés to find a man who resembles himself. She discovers a perfect double in Lemuel Taylor, an American engineer.

While she is spending an exciting evening with this unsuspecting American, Braga unsuccessfully attempts the murder of LeGrand. Taylor departs the next day, leaving Dominica disgusted with the life she has been leading and particularly with Braga.

"THE DREAM DANCE"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WHILE there is a certain fascination in vampire stories, there is always the feeling of regret with many people that "it didn't end right." These folk forget that in real life the tragic ending is more often the real one.

THE ARTIST MEETS MIGNON

This photo-play is very well done in every particular.

L. C. Shumway gives a fine impersonation of Leon, the youthful artist, who marries in haste and then, aided and abetted by Pepita the soulless dancer, repents at leisure, meantime breaking the heart of Mignon, his little Gascon wife.

Of course the story runs the usual course of vampire themes.

When Leon neglects his work and spends his last sou on Pepita, she scorns him for a rich lover. He is disinherited and dragged down to abject poverty, retaining secretly the painting of Pepita, which brought him to ruin, forgetting Mignon, whose picture first brought him fame and fortune.

While dying from starvation the vision of the "Dream Dance" comes to him. Pepita lures him with love and laughter. When he would clasp and caress her, she steps back in the frame. This scene gives the picture its name and, incidentally, the author and producer, Leon Kent, a chance for some good double exposures.

Velmat Whitman as Mignon, and Natalie de Lontan as Pepita, give creditable impersonations of the leading women characters.

Others are Melvin Mayo, Mary Coughlin, George Berrell, Adelaide Bronti, George Routh, Ricardo Espino and little Leon Routh.

"SANDS OF TIME"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

WHILE the story pictured in this production verges on the morbid, its treatment is well done, effectively bringing home the truth of the oft quoted adage, that "the wages of sin is death."

Equally convincing is it in showing the unhappiness that is bound to result from a marriage between a pleasure-loving girl and a man past the age when the lighter and more frivolous things appeal.

A young girl marries an elderly physician, who has devoted his life to the conscientious furtherance of medical science. After the marriage his work is still paramount and leaves him little time for dinners, theatre parties and the other pleasures necessary for his wife's happiness.

Of course, there is a younger man—in this case, the doctor's assistant—to sympathize with the unhappy wife, and to ever keep before her her husband's seeming neglect. Finally she elopes with her tempter and the heart-broken old physician, realizing the mistake of his marriage, consents to a divorce.

By the time this is granted, the man she loves has grown indifferent and refuses to marry her. She flees from him and one night in desperation, throws herself into the river near her old home. A few days later the doctor's clinic is assembled in the dissecting room. A sheet-covered body is brought in, the doctor lifts the sheet and discovers the lifeless form of the woman he has never ceased to love.

The scenes, particularly those laid in the laboratory, the hospital and the clinic are realistically put on. Occasionally, during the picture, allegorical parts are introduced, as when an hour glass is flashed on the scene showing the fleeting sands of time. This adds considerably to the effectiveness of the production.

The cast includes Harry Lonsdale, as Doctor MacGregor the husband, Martha Boucher as Enid, his wife, and Wheeler Oakman as Dr. Blake, the young assistant.

"PEGGY LYNN, BURGLAR"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE life of Peggy Lynn, who at the death of her parents, is left in the hands of a band of crooks, furnishes the material for this picture, which will be released on June 21.

Under demoralizing surroundings, with Andy, a hunchback, her only friend, she develops into a beautiful girl. The thieves with whom she is living learn that Terrell, a wealthy bachelor, is about to leave on an extended trip, and one evening, in a fierce electrical storm, they send Peggy out to rob his home.

Just before Terrell's departure, he suddenly becomes so ill that his trip is postponed. The family doctor, whom the servants call, pronounces it a case of smallpox. At this moment, lightning strikes the telephone, cutting off the connection and later the doctor is hit as he is going to the nearest drug store to communicate with the health officers.

In the meantime the terrified servants depart, leaving their master to his own resources. When Peggy appears on the scene with the intention of robbing the safe, she finds the house unoccupied, except for a delirious sick man.

After two weeks, during which time the doctor is lying unconscious in a hospital, she nurses him back to health, and when the real nurses arrive pronouncing the case simply chickenpox, Peggy departs, leaving no clue as to her whereabouts.

Later Terrell discovers her as she is being tried for a robbery committed by one of her companions. He secures her release, but she again slips away from him. The jealousy of one of her companions has been aroused and that evening he goes to Terrell's house to kill him.

PEGGY AT HOME

Peggy follows and saves Terrell's life and they realize they are in love. The settings both in the wealthy home and in the squalid tenement are most appropriately staged.

The rain scene is excellently photographed and the technique used in registering the striking of the lightning is really remarkable.

Vivian Rich, Joseph Galbraith, Harry Von Meter and Jack Richardson make up the strong and efficient cast.

"CHINA"

(Six Reels—United Photoplays)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE second series of the Dr. George A. Dorsey travel pictures is being exhibited at the Studebaker theatre in Chicago, and is receiving comment from local papers which is fully as favorable as that accorded the initial production of "Japan."

This six thousand feet of film deals with the China of today, where the old customs of centuries are just beginning to lose out in their fight with the civilization being brought in by more progressive nations. Everyone who views these pictures will be impressed by their educational value, in the recording of the customs of a queer people, and in picturing the land in which they live; their cities and the surrounding country filled with such historical landmarks as the Great Wall, one of the seven wonders of the world; the Sacred Road, the tombs of the emperors, the stone images of great warriors and heroic animals guarding the valley of the tombs.

While these pictures are mainly educational, it is hard to conceive of any audience which will not find them thoroughly entertaining. The human interest element is brought in by depicting natives, young and old, both at work and at play. One sees

A GROUP OF CHINESE MISSION CHILDREN

Chinese girls and boys playing about the same games that are popular in America.

One sees the wierd street performers in masks, the street restaurants at which their peculiar foods are served, the rope makers in action, and the street cobblers. Then in other reels are shown the camel caravans which until recently served as their only access to the interior.

Almost one entire reel is devoted to the wonderful work of the foreign missionaries, not only in christianizing, but in educating the Chinese children. All these things and many others are exhibited with clear photography in a most entertaining manner.

"ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Part Eleven)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

HERE is indeed "The Valley of the Shadow," for Alene's execution is fixed for a few days hence. Dane, desperate at the failure of every effort to save his dearly beloved, has an inspiration at almost the eleventh hour, "The Silver Cup." This must hold the solution of the mystery. He recalls the mysterious jingle engraved thereon:

Drink without a fear,
Life I promise here;
But death to whoso dare
Touch his lips elsewhere.

The court refusing to lend, Dane steals the cup from the court records, having first secured water from the Elmhurst spring with which to experiment. Desperately wounded by the watchman, he escapes to his room and starts to work chemically, with the cup, in spite of his bad injuries.

Suspecting the thief, detectives go to arrest Dane and in this plight we must leave him until next week. Crane Wilbur shows his finished acting in his big scenes here.

"HONOR THY FATHER—"

(Kalem—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

IN this production the Vignola and Hobart combination has scored another triumph. A more interesting story, or a plot with greater heart interest would be hard to find. And in addition we have an excellent cast that lives up to the respective roles, perfect photography, and settings both interior and exterior, that are realistic to the smallest detail.

The story deals with a lonely couple who have sacrificed their all, that their ingrate son migth have a college education. How their home is finally lost to them by the neglect of the son; how the latter in his new position of district attorney sends his father to prison to gratify his own personal vanity; how the son is ensnared by an adventuress only to be finally recued by his mother; these are only a few of the passages in this most interesting photo play.

There is a good moral in this play, and the beholder is not conscious of the passage of time, so absorbing is the plot. There is action in every foot of the film and not a dull moment.

Harry Millarde plays the part of the ungrateful son, but the honors are due Helen Lindroth, who in the role of his mother gives a wonderful presentation. Henry Hallam is also good in his interpretation of the father.

All together this production is one of the best of the month. It will fit on any program, and is equally suitable to a large theatre or a church benefit performance.

"FATHER FORGOT"

(MinA—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WE are led to the conclusion, from the manner in which this number was received at a program house, that no matter how familiar are the situations dealt with in a comedy offering, they produce the desired effect if handled with capability.

"Father Forget" embraces no mean collection of stock comedy moments, interspersed with a smattering of slap-stick action that was responsible for great hilarity.

The story runs as follows: Two old friends agreed that their children should marry. Consequently the young man is sent to meet the girl. But her father has forgotten all about the agreement, allowing his daughter to marry another man. On his visit the son discovers another girl much to his liking, marries her and sends word to his father that he has become a benedict.

MATTERS THREATEN TO BECOME SERIOUS

After this introduction, which consumes the greater part of five hundred feet, the most effective comedy starts in, with the son trying to pass the other girl off as his wife. Complications arise of course, but things are cleared and father is pacified before the close of the picture.

It is evident that George Ovey, playing the son, has a greater appreciation of humor than the rest of the cast, which acts as the chief comedian's foil. Goldie Colwell, Jefferson Osborne and Dolly Larkin are the other principals.

If the judgment of one house may be taken as a criterion, "Father Forget" should prove its worth in theatres exhibiting a collection of short films.

"THE SHADOWGRAPH MESSAGE"

THIS is one of the most novelly conceived subjects that the New York Motion Picture corporation has produced recently. It was written by J. G. Hawks, elaborated upon and prein prison, but on the way to the jail an automobile accident paves the way for his escape.

In the meantime the specialist has employed a deaf and dumb assistant. One evening while the expert and his wife are out, and the assistant has been left to take care of the little girl, the criminal enters the house. He binds the mute person and is engaged in looking for the specialist when the couple return home.

The wife going upstairs and confronting the forger, faints. Then the husband starts to go up, but in the meantime the assistant has freed himself, and making use of a miniature projection machine, he flashes a message to his master warning him of the danger. Consequently the forger is caught before he commits any further mischief.

This has been excellently acted and the originality of the theme and the intense power of the situations combine to make it a most acceptable feature. Howard Hickman appears as the assistant, Walter Edwards as the forger, Arthur Maude as the specialist, Margaret Thompson as his wife and Thelma Salter as the child.

"UP FROM THE DEPTHS"

(Reliance Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THOUGH the title would indicate that this is the story of a soul's regeneration, the action will probably impress more persons, especially during the first three reels, as a slap at revivalist preachers. The insincerity of Davids, a revivalist, furnishes the motive and works the wrongs constituting the depths from which he and Daire Vincent finally succeed in rising.

Davids, a revivalist, makes love to Daire, then deserts her and her child. He goes to the city where his field is richer. Daire sinks till she becomes a dance hall habitue. Davids, to show off, wants to make a spectacular raid on the dance hall. When Daire is approached by one of Davids' detectives she takes her child and confronts the father.

THE DETECTIVE MEETS DAIRE — THE WIFE AND DAIRE'S SON

But Davids, in the meantime, had fallen in love with and married another woman, a childless and sickly creature. When Davids' child is brought to his home by Daire the shock is too much for the ailing wife and she dies.

In his raid on the dance hall Davids is wounded. Then Father White, a slum worker, and the one sincere force for good, intercedes with Davids to marry Daire. Davids and Daire are married and later each is shown rising from the depths to a fuller, richer life.

Courtenay Foote is Davids and plays the mean part very well. Gladys Brockwell is Daire and Thomas Jefferson is Father White. The picture is excellently produced. Davids' despicable nature is well brought out. The camp meeting and dive scenes are interesting, though in differing ways.

"THE WILD OLIVE"

(Morosco-Bosworth—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

A BOSWORTH-MOROSCO picture is never a disappointment. On the other hand, an announcement of a new production by the company creates exceptional interest.

The "Wild Olive" is founded on the novel of the same name by Basil King, appearing serially in "Harper's Magazine," and later in book form, with the distinction of being a best seller possessing literary qualities of a high order. The producers have managed to retain in the play some of the book's literary flavor—as near as a motion picture is capable of conveying by action such a delicate and elusive quality.

The photography deserves particular mention for clearness and sharpness of outline, in such scenes as the fight on the log over a stream, where the hero throws into the water five men who have attempted to exact toll from a pretty girl in the shape of kisses.

Novel close-ups are shown in the dinner scene in which the emotions of several characters are depicted with unusual effectiveness.

The dramatic value of each incident is evident throughout the whole picture; the little touches so necessary for perfect finish are all here.

The wide range of scenes, from an American lumber camp to certain phases of life in South America, gives the film a pleasing variety of locale. The dissolve in the episode where the real murderer sees in a remorseful mood his victim rise from the bed and point an accusing finger at him will stand out for its novelty and the vivid impression of horror the incident produces on the mind of the murderer.

The acting of the principals and their support was superb, each player, evidently trained in the modern school, conveying the idea of tense emotion in the tragic scenes without undue strain. A quiet repression of the turbulent feelings affecting the characters in the more dramatic moments marked the work of the cast.

Myrtle Stedman played Miriam Strange, the Wild Olive, with a sweet winsomeness unfailing in its directness of appeal. Forrest Stanley as Norrie Ford, the unlucky youth upon whom is fastened the crime of murder by the cunning of the real agent, gave a happy presentation of a manly fellow more sinned against than sinning.

"WORK"

(Essanay—Two Reels)

THE latest of the Charles Chaplin features is one of particular excellence as laugh-making material. The antics of a comedy paper-hanger have often been seen, but they are always funny when well done, and needless to say Mr. Chaplin leaves little to be desired in the matter.

The famous comedian is seen as the assistant of a paper-hanger. He is called with his boss to do some work in a high-class home. The trip through the streets is exciting since the assistant has to draw a cart filled with the papering outfit, and surmounted by the boss. Traffic in the city is brought to a standstill by the passage of the strange load.

At the rich man's house a lavish use of paste puts things in a terrific mess. Then the gay assistant is asked to regulate a gas stove which is not behaving properly.

To cap the climax a flirt calls to see the lady of the house and her husband pursues him about the place with a revolver. As the excitement is at its height a particularly strong explosion in the gas range blows up the whole place. Everyone disappears in the pile of wreckage, but Chaplin comes out smiling and happy.

"VICTOR'S AT SEVEN"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Vitagraph company has here revived and produced the old story centering about the confusion caused by two men bearing the same name, one of whom has a date to meet his wife in a restaurant at seven, the other an appointment with a chorus lady at the same hour and in the same restaurant. But revival or no revival, old or new, the audience which witnessed this production at the Vitagraph theatre laughed long and loud over the resulting conglomeration of mistakes, which entangled every player in the cast.

Eugene Mullin, the author, provided the players with plenty of uproarious situations in which to disport themselves, and disport they certainly do with a pleasing whole-heartedness that counts much for the success of the comedy. C. Jay Williams directed the work and has done well also.

The cast is made up of a distinguished group of Vitagraph comedians. Charles Brown, as Professor White, who meets the chorus girl instead of his wife, and in the course of the evening drinks so deeply that his reputation is totally lost, is a mirth-provoking figure in every scene. Kate Price as his raging wife is another humorous figure. Hughey Mack, as Hughey White, who meets Kate instead of Fifi, is supremely ridiculous, while Fifi is cleverly played by Anna Laughlin. Nicholas Dunaew, as Nick Hotstuff, Fifi's jealous admirer, is a weird and comical figure. John T. Kelly and Ethel Lloyd also do some very good work.

Inasmuch as three-reel comedies often miss their mark, it is most pleasing to be able to note here that the picture is really funny as it stands.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Fifteenth Chapter)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is the last number of "The Black Box," and, as anticipated, it completely clears the mystery which heretofore enshrouded Professor Ashleigh and his servant Craig. Withal the termination is entirely appropriate and satisfactorily concludes the detective story.

Professor Ashleigh, we are informed, is the perpetrator of every crime that has been committed in the serial. While hunting in South Africa the professor had been bitten by an angry ape, with the result that the man had then contracted a disease similar to hydrophobia, which, although it left him sharp and cunning, completely dulled his finer sensibilities.

Craig, his servant, determined to aid his master and consequently was accused of the crimes, because of his peculiar actions. The armless and bodyless hands are attributed to the fact that the professor donned a black costume, which, when charged with a certain current, made the wearer invisible. Those catering to steady customers will by no means be disappointed in their patrons' reception of "The Black Box."

"THE DEVIL'S DAUGHTER"

(Fox Film Corporation—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THEDA BARA has one of her regular vampire parts in this adaptation of D'Annunzio's "La Gioconda." In interpreting sensuous roles Miss Bara easily stands in a class by herself. She is the perfect siren of the screen. Here she plays the beautiful La Gioconda, who decides to revenge herself on all men when she is deserted by her lover.

She picks out Lucio Satello, a young sculptor, as her victim and poses for him. The sculptor's wife, Silvia, mad through jealousy, quarrels with La Gioconda. A violent fight ensues, the statue is knocked over but falls on Silvia and does not break.

Insane through the sinister fascination of La Gioconda, Lucio tries suicide. He is nursed back to health by his loving wife.

THE ARTIST MEETS LA GIOCONDA

Then come semi-fanciful scenes showing Lucio's hatred of the woman who wrecked his life, his remorse over his treatment of his wife and the horrible end of La Gioconda.

Theda Bara's physical charms and many scenes chosen for their photographic beauty give the picture considerable artistic value. In fact the whole handling of the theme, under Frank Powell's direction, is artistic. The plot cannot be taken literally. One seldom meets beautiful creatures half-clothed on the beach or roaming through the woods.

But the picture, as an artistic, dramatic conception and a vehicle for Theda Bara, is quite sufficient. Doris Heywood distinguished herself as the wife and Jane Miller was good as the sister. Paul Doucet was fine in the hard role of Lucio. Victor Benoit is Lucio's friend, Robert Wayne, the master sculptor, and little Jane Lee got in some of her clever work as the baby.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Eighth Chapter)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS chapter, entitled "A Mind in the Past" neglects the romance of Arthur and Esther for the time being and almost uninterruptedly follows the adventurous course of the diamond. A few scenes at the outset of the chapter are centered about Esther's mother, who is temporarily demented, due to the blow she received on the head from Blair Stanley. She is continually referring to the past, and in the presence of Esther raves about her stolen child, which only mystifies her adopted daughter all the more.

"I HAVE GONE TO THE FOOT OF THE GALLOWS FOR YOU!"

The diamond is stolen from the little colored boy by a tramp. This tramp, by the way, wears very well ventilated clothes, which besides, bear very clearly the tailor's creases. The tramp goes to the city and repairs to an opium den where the diamond is stolen from him by one of the Chinamen in charge.

In the meantime, a syndicate has been formed to regain the lost jewel. In this Blair and the adventuress are most actively interested. One night these two and another couple journey to Chinatown and enter the same den. Here they discover the diamond, which Blair manages to escape with. One of the Chinamen wore poor makeup.

"FROM CHAMPION TO TRAMP"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IN the triple part of author, producer and leading man, Romaine Fielding gives a good account of himself in this interesting story of a college youth, champion of his team, losing all he held dear through the crime and false accusation of a rascally college mate.

The climax of the story lacks strength and some of the scenes could be improved, but on the whole it is quite interesting, with a plot that will appeal.

The mountains and valleys of Arizona give scope for some beautiful photography.

Shirley Christy, former champion mile runner of the world, finds himself a tramp because Jamison accused him of striking down a rival in a race, and the judges found him guilty, though Jamison was the real culprit.

When the tramp arrives at a Western mining town, he finds this very Jamison up to his old tricks. Taking the place of the runner doped by Jamison, Christy wins the race and later the mine owner's daughter, while the crook is forced to confess his crookedness.

All sorts of exciting scenes fill in the story. Vinnie Burns is the girl. Some of the others are: Jack Lawton, Roscoe Karns, Audell Higgins, Noble Johnson, Henry Russell, Monroe Johnson.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"A Sport of Circumstances." (Edison. Wed., June 23.)—An amusing comedy in which a dignified minister puts on a jockey outfit, thinking it is a masquerade costume. He is then mistaken for a belated jockey, and is rushed onto a horse which he rides to victory in spite of himself. Lots of real fun, and sure to keep any audience happy. Raymond McKee and Caroline Rankin are "among those present."

"Through Turbulent Waters." (Edison. Four Parts. Fri., June 25.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Breaks of the Game." (Edison. Sat., June 26.)—A stirring adventure story in which a girl reporter is captured by Chinese opium smugglers about whom she is trying to get a beat for her paper. Another reporter, who is in love with her, arrives in time to rescue her when he is following a different lead on the same story. The principals are played by Augustus Phillips and Maxine Brown.

"The Man Who Found Out." (Essanay. Mon., June 21.)—A drama of a man who allows himself to be so influenced by jealous suspicions that he regards everything that his wife does as improper. Finding a man in the bathroom one day he starts terrible scene only to learn that the visitor is an honest plumber repairing the water pipes. There is a happy ending. In the cast are Sydney Ainsworth, Beverly Bayne and John Thorn.

"The Fable of the Search for a Climate." (Essany. Wed., June 23.)—Another of George Ade's sprightly fables in slang. A searcher after climate and health went all over the world accompanied by his thirst and a supply of liquor. When an accident laid him up at a farm near his home town he had to get along without any booze. Soon he looked and felt like another man, and found that he had lost his thirst.

"A Hot Finish." (Essanay. Thurs., June 24.)—A farm girl has dreams of a life on the stage as a great star. Neither of her parents sympathize with her views to any extent. A rural comedy acted by Marjorie Reiger, Bob McKenzie, Eva Heazlet and Harry Pollard.

"A Dignified Family." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., June 26.)—Having engaged in a prize fight the son of a family, who are strong on dignity, has to leave home. He falls in love with a mountain girl. Later his brother meets the girl while on a vacation, and after proposing throws her over at his father's command because she is illiterate.

The girl at once goes to school, and after acquiring a social polish takes care to meet the faithless city youth. She accepts his renewed proposal, but gets revenge by announcing her engagement to his brother at the dinner he had arranged for the purpose of announcing his. Improbable but interesting. In the cast are Ruth Stonehouse, Grant Foreman and Eugene Acker.

"The Missing Man." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., June 21.)—An interesting story, replete with tense situations, well acted and good photography. A detective drama that carries its secret until the very end, with action in every foot of it. One very thrilling moment in the second reel is when the girl, in escaping from the bandits, falls from a bullet wound on the tracks in front of an oncoming train and is lassoed and drawn from the rails in the nick of time by her mounted sweetheart. Bound to please any audience.

"In High Society." (Kalem. Tues., June 22.)—These Ham comedies are certainly making good. This last is one of the best. One laugh follows the other in quick succession, while Ham's attempts to keep his footing on the slippery floor of the ballroom are nothing short of side splitting. There is no plot to speak of, but the inimitable grotesque contortions of Ham and Bud, in their attempts to appear at home in "High Society," make that fact negligible.

"The Vivisectionist." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., June 23.)—A story out of the ordinary run, with good acting and excellent photography. A doctor, about to perform an operation whereby an arm from one man is to be grafted upon another, is interrupted by the police who, acting on misleading information, fear foul play. The denouement is held until the very end, and is one that holds an unlooked for surprise. Marian Sais plays Hilda, the detective, very satisfactorily, and W. H. West makes a good doctor.

"Honor Thy Father." (Kalem. Three reels. Fri., June 25.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"In Danger's Path." (Kalem. Sat., June 26.)—Another one of the "Hazards of Helen" series, with just as good acting and photography as its predecessors. But this time there is no definite story and not as much attention paid to details as one is bound to expect.

After witnessing the last few releases it comes as a shock. There are the same tense situations. This time a turntable and burning box car furnish the thrills.

"The Road o' Strife." (Lubin. Part twelve. Mon., June 21.)—The noble sacrifice of Daisy, the show girl, and the desperate means she takes before resorting to the end, make this part, "The Sacrifice," full of thrills. Dane succeeds in proving to his own satisfaction that the silver cup contains poisonous minerals which kill when not neutralized by the mineral water of the spring. Being arrested for the theft of the cup before he can appeal to the governor, Daisy undertakes this task, which she performs in a highly sensational manner. When the governor refuses to listen to her tale, she proves the truth by herself drinking from the cup, first the harmless mineral liquid, then the fatal plain water, and falls dead, sacrificing her life to save the two she loves.

Alene is thus reprieved by the governor as she is being led to her death. The film is being kept up to its high standard all around. Rosetta Brice in her death scene does a good piece of work.

"With the Help of the Ladies." (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., June 22.)—Lots of fun will be had out of this comedy of errors by those who are addicted to the laugh habit. A big mix-up occurs when the chief of police and his lieutenant disguise themselves in their wives' clothes and sally forth to capture a purse snatcher. The clothes cause all kinds of trouble until the disguise is finally penetrated. The help of the ladies is required to bring this about.

"Father Said He'd Fix It." (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., June 22.)—When Luke complains to his father that Widow Wash thinks he is not good enough for her daughter Lyn, the deacon in a rage says "He'll fix it"; but instead he courts the widow for himself. When the young couple get tired of waiting and decide to elope, they do not dream that the old folks have also decided on the same plan of getting "spliced."

When the two couples happen to meet the same night at the parson's there is a chance for some good comedy work. It all ends in mutual forgiveness and a double wedding.

"The Life Line." (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., June 23.)—An unusually interesting story for a two reeler is this, with a good heart interest, some exciting moments and a happy ending.

Well acted, too, by Lottie Briscoe and Arthur Johnson as principals, assisted by Leon Kelly, Howard Mitchell, Eleanor Blanchard.

The "Life Line" is thrown by Rolf Howard, as boss, to his gum-chewing, dance-hall loving little stenographer, an interesting creature with lots of the faults but more of the virtues of her class.

First Howard tries to wean her from her sordid pleasures by substituting others. Later he saves her from the effects of forgery of his own name, a deed committed in desperation to save her brother from prison and herself from degradation.

Mary's gratitude, coupled with her tardy realization of her attempted crime, makes a different girl of her, and soon she and Rolf have their little romance culminated in marriage.

The troublesome brother and the more troublesome villainous admirer vanish and are heard from no longer.

"Her Answer." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., June 25.)—Grace, the innocent girl he is trying to marry, and Madge, the woman he has wronged, meet in an unexpected manner, in the presence of the man, Victor Sherelan.

Although his perfidy is not revealed and Madge doesn't even see him, nevertheless this episode with its attendant circumstances, decides Grace to make her answer "no" instead of "yes." A touch of pathos in this picture that has its appeal to many.

"The Fortunes of Marianna." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., June 21.)—A human interest drama well acted by Estella Razetto, Lamar Johnstone and Scott Dunlap, in which a little girl of the tenement is taken out of her squalid surroundings and given a chance in life.

She later repays her benefactor, the prosecuting attorney, by disclosing a plot in which her brother is implicated, to steal the testimony in an important corporation suit.

"With the Aid of the Law." (Selig. Tues., June 22.)—A moonshiner-detective story varying little from the average production of this kind. There is much action and fitting acting throughout the reel. The mountain scenes are most pleasing. It is one of Tom Mix's dramas.

"The Onion Patch." (Selig. Wed., June 23.) A novel story written by Maibelle Heikes Justice. A very pretty romance is the basis of the picture. Joe is in love with the woman for whom he works as a gardener and also with the school teacher. In a novel way he finally chooses the latter.

"The Tiger Cub." (Selig. Sat., June 26.)—One of Selig's jungle dramas of decided merit. It was written by Emma Bell and produced by L. W. Chaudet. A guide and his companions are taken prisoners by savage natives of Africa. They are cast into a den of tigers, but what is the hunter's surprise to discover that a tiger in the den was once his pet. Of course they are saved.

"Mr. Jarr and Love's Young Dream." (Vitagraph. Mon., June 21.)—A jealous girl puts some poison ivy in the roses which she sends to her sister just before her wedding to a wealthy young man. The roses are handled by a number of persons besides those expected to by the joker, and the result is a postponement of the wedding and a lot of very uncomfortable people.

Mr. Jarr is a victim, but finds consolation in the discovery that his boss has also handled the flowers, and is due for some of the same trouble. The usual cast is seen. Billy Billings and Belle Bruce are seen as the Cackleberry girls. The story is No. 12 of the Jarr family series of comedies.

"Meet Me at Seven." (Vitagraph. Three reels. Tues., June 22.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"An Intercepted Vengeance." (Vitagraph. Wed., June 23.)—A Western drama depicting the closing incidents in the life of a man who tried to make his way by blind, unreasoning fighting. He vows to kill an Easterner because he is in love with the girl the bad man has picked as his. Instead of carrying out any scheme of vengeance he is killed by an Indian who refuses to stand his abuse any longer. Margaret Gibson, Jack Mower and George Stanley are the principals.

"What's Ours." (Vitagraph. Thurs., June 24.)—The plot of this picture, said to be written by Winona Godfrey, is strongly reminiscent of a magazine story written by a widely-known author, and published last summer. It leads with a young man of wealth who marries a department store clerk in spite of family opposition, which leads to disinheritance. Raymond Bloomer and Muriel Ostriche are the lovers.

"Their First Quarrel." (Vitagraph. Fri., June 25.)—The regular first quarrel of newlyweds is used in this comedy by Cyrus Townsend Brady, and the result is an entertaining and high-class comedy. There is nothing novel in the situation, but it is one which when well handled always has a strong appeal. The newlyweds are most effectively played by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

"The Silent W." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Sat., June 26.)—The old story of mistaken identity, this time caused by the fact that two girls have the same name except that one spells it Ray and the other Wray. The situations are cleverly handled, and altogether the picture is an excellent one. Lillian Walker and Lillian Burns are seen as the two heroines.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Mutual Weekly, No. 22." (Thurs., June 3.)—A picture of ex-President Victoriano Huerta, of Mexico, on his Long Island estate is interesting, while the ruins of the city of Colon, Panama, recently destroyed by fire, is timely. President Wilson delivering an address in Washington, and the war news, are the other items of exceptional interest.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 23." (Thurs., June 10.)—An unusually wide variety of subjects are offered in this number of the weekly. At the start are a number of views from Europe, although none of them are directly from the war area. In addition to the foreign views no less than thirteen news incidents in this country are depicted.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 24." (Thurs., June 17.) A view of ex-Secretary Bryan is an interesting feature of this number, while others of note are Mayor Mitchel of New York and party visiting the expositions, and Italian reservists departing to serve their country. Many other timely items make this number decidedly worth while.

"Those Bitter Sweets." (Keystone. Mon., June 7.)—Here Harry McCoy appears as he is, playing the suitor who is displaced for a while by a soda fountain tender, who poses as a nobleman. There is much that is funny in this, a wild chase bringing the reel to a close. The same young lady appears and does most pleasing work.

"A Hash House Fraud." (Keystone. Thurs., June 10.)—A clever story is the foundation of this reel, yet there is litle that is original in the actions of the players. There are some funny points to the comedy, but as a whole it fails to measure up to Keystone standards.

"The Ten o'Clock Boat." (Reliance. Fri., June 11.)—The widow of a counterfeiter, who has died in prison, vows to keep her little daughter ignorant of the past of herself and her husband.

When the girl is grown up a former pal of her father appears, and by threats of exposure forces the woman to help him pass counterfeit bills. Having told her daughter one morning that she is about to take the ten o'clock ferry for town, she goes out to distribute some of the fake money and is arrested. Prison is inevitable, but as the ten o'clock boat has been sunk and many of the passengers lost, the woman gives a fictitious name and goes to jail leaving her daughter to believe that she has been drowned on the steamer. In the cast are Catherine Henry, Margie Wilson and Joseph Henabery.

"Merely a Married Man." (Keystone. Sat., June 12.)—Harry McCoy again in his ultra-ridiculous makeup playing the part of friend hubby much abused by his mother-in-law. The pretty Keystone comedienne appears as friend wife. This is an excellent comedy with McCoy responsible for most of the laughs.

"The Burned Hand." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., June 13.)—Three chums vow eternal friendship. Later the sweetheart of one is kidnapped by her father after her parents have been divorced. The three youths go to the town where the girl is kept locked in her father's place, and succeed in rescuing her.

Her lover burns his hand while fighting with the father, and in order to aid in his escape one of the chums burns his hand in the same way. In the cast are William Hinckley, Miriam Cooper, W. E. Lowery and Cora Drew. Well acted and with one spectacular fight.

"Unwinding It." (Komic. Sun., June 13.)—This is an unusually clever comedy, featuring Fay Tincher. The most original touch is the unwinding of a spindle of string, which a careless clerk forgets to break off after wrapping up a purchaser's package. The string trails for blocks behind the girl, and when the clerk discovers it a rapid rewinding deprives the puzzled buyer of her purchase. An excellent comedy in every way.

"The Old Batch." (Reliance. Mon., June 14.) 14.)—The children's act in hiding their uncle's savings prevent him from being robbed. Save for a poor moral effect this drama is pleasing, the leads being played by two juveniles, Mildred Harris and Paul Willis.

"The Country Girl." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., June 15.)—An enjoyable adaptation of David Garrick's comedy. An old squire plans to marry his niece himself, and pairs his sister off with an aged beau. but two younger men neatly frustrate his plans.

The locale of this is England. Much attention has been paid to detail of the props and costumes, while the story is rather loosely hung together, but as a whole the offering is most pleasing. Flo La Badie and Harry Benham lead the cast.

"Pirates Bold." (Majestic. Tues., June 15.)—A juvenile comedy-drama of the better sort. The leaking of the boat puts a stop to the activities of the play-pirates. The fact that the boat is plainly resting on the bay's bottom detracts from the element of suspense in the final scenes.

"The Housemaid." (Reliance. Wed., June 16.)—A clecerly conceived drama that will do credit to the producers as well as the program of any house. There is a lot of real "meat" in the story, enough to justify most directors in stringing it out over another reel, but as produced here it is teeming with interest resulting from well-founded situations, good producing and acting. Marguerite Loveridge, Frank Bennett, Wilbur Higby and Mae Gaston are the principals.

"Little Herman." (Falstaff. Split reel. Fri., June 18.)—On the same reel with "Ebenezer Explains." A humorous animated cartoon depicting the miraculous stunts of a magician.

"Ebenezer Explains." (Falstaff. Split reel. Fri., June 18.)—On the same reel with "Little Herman." A rube returning to his home town tells of meeting an actress, when in reality he has not. When the actress comes to town he is obliged to make good his boast, which he does in a clever style. A good comedy, containing a good plot.

"In the Valley." (Thanhouser. Fri., June 18.)—The country girl goes to the city where she falls in with bad companions. A vision of her mother comes to her when she is about to go on a midnight party with the result that she quits the city life and reurns home to her mother and country lover. Lorraine Huling and Boyd Marshall are the leads in this drama which is only fair.

"Peggy Lynn, Burglar." (American. Two reels. Mon., June 21—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"A Deal in Diamonds." (Beauty. Tues., June 22.)—A clean and amusing comedy showing the struggle of two rivals for the hand of a boarding house keeper's daughter. A worthless paste diamond brooch in an expensive looking case supplies the humorous situations and is the cause of the penniless suitor's victory over his rival. Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell play the leads.

"One Woman's Way." (American. Wed., June 23.)—A wife risks her honor to obtain money for an operation to restore her husband's sight. After the operation, the husband's suspicions are aroused and he is only convinced of his wife's innocence just as he is about to murder the man whom he thought she had given herself to in order to secure the money. A strong drama, well acted by Vivian Rich, Joseph Galbraith, Jack Richardson and Louise Lester.

"Hearts and Swords." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., June 24.)—A fairly good drama concerning one of the broils in Mexico. When her brother is wounded and unable to take a message through the enemy's lines, his sister dons his clothes and attempts to evade the spies. But she is caught and so is her brother.

But the fact that he girl's sweetheart is on the other side saves the day. There is a good suspense to this and a wealth of daredevil riding. Two thrilling falls are shown. George Fisher and Louise Glaum play the brother and sister.

"The Floating Death." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., June 25.)—How a neglectful shipowner who disregarded his brother's advice that he overhaul his vessels met his death in a collision at sea makes the basis of this enjoyable melodrama. The ship afire at sea is a most realistic spectacle, while the explosion of the villain's yacht is effectively handled.

An admirable bit of the production is that scene in which the spirits of the many people who have lost their lives in the fire make an appeal to the shipowner. There is plenty of action in this and a love interest of considerable power.

"The Stolen Anthurium." (Falstaff. Fri., June 25.)—A very pretty romance indulged in by an old maid and an old bachelor. A stolen flower is the means of bringing them together.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 171." (Wed., June 16.)—Of the sixteen interesting events comprising this number the most noticeable are: a picture of William Jennings Bryan and Robert Lansing; aviation manoeuvres at Fenton, Mich.; the parade of the New York City firemen, and a number of views closely relative to the European war.

"Circus Mary." (Victor. Three reels. Mon., June 21.)—Mary Fuller plays the title part in this drama, which embraces two roles, that of the mother and the daughter. An attorney deserts his wife, a circus girl, that he may be free to pursue his ambitions. Years later, when he is governor, he learns that the fiancee of the district attorney is none other than his own daughter.

This is a very good offering, containing many scenes productive of suspense, including a tight-rope walking scene. Mary Fuller's interpretation of both parts is sincere and appealing. Charles Ogle and Matt Moore lend effective support.

"Mismated." (Imp. Mon., June 21.)—Another of the King Baggot-Jane Gale department store comedies of most decided merit. Various customers' shoes get mixed, due to the flirtations of the shoe clerk. A comedy reel which will do credit to the most exacting house.

"Under the Crescent." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Fourth Narrative. Tues., June 22.)—Reviewed at length in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, issue of June 19.

"A Mountain Melody." (Rex. Tues., June 22.)—The innocent attentions of a city musician to a country girl afford her lover great anguish, so much so, in fact, that he attempts to kill him; but he is not successful. He discovers later that the man is married and that his sweetheart still cares for him.

Only a plain story, but produced with decided originality. The little bit of double exposure work is admirably well handled. The locations are artistic and pleasing and the photography clear. Joseph De Grasse directed this with Pauline Bush, William Clifford and Ray Gallagher in the leading parts.

"A Peach and a Pair." (Nestor. Tues., June 22.)—Two rivals are told by the object of their affections that the one who reaches the city first will find a surprise awaiting him. They both arrive together and discover that she was married on the preceding day. The burglar brought into the sleeping car scenes is responsible for much humor. One of Al Christie's good ones, with Ed Lyons, Victoria Forde and Lee Moran featured.

"The Boob's Romance." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., June 23.)—The clerk in the country grocery store is a boob in all the many senses of the word. When a traveling road show comes to town he gets a job as a soldier and spoils the entire performance.

A fire breaks out and the boob is the only one brave enough to rescue a very pretty girl. For this heroic act he is sent to college by the girl's father, and four years later comes out very much improved and transformed.

In the role of the boob Bob Leonard renders some very fine comedy performances, while the support furnished him in these scenes is most appropriate. Ella Hall appears as the girl and Harry Carter as her father. There is much good comedy of the burlesque variety in this picture and the two reels should take strongly.

"A Dismantled Beauty." (L-Ko. Wed., June 23.)—Three men are rivals for a woman who turns out to be a crook. This isn't much good except in the final scenes when a few real comedy touches appear. Harry Gribbon is in the cast and doesn't do much that is original.

"Larry O'Neil—Gentleman." (Imp. Two reels. Thurs., June 24.)—To win a bet a wealthy clubman takes a laborer from the street and introduces him to his friends as a powerful business man from another city. He competely takes his friends in, but the man falls in love with a rich girl. When he realizes his true position, he informs the girl of his trick. He quits the game, makes good in business, and returns to meet the girl on her own social standing.

William Garwood and Violet Mersereau are the leads in this comedy-drama, which contains a very good story. It has been produced fairly well, although it could have been done better. However, there are many scenes in the two reels which amuse and many more which entertain by their dramatic value. It is a very good addition to the Universal program.

"The Tinker of Stubbenville." (Big U. Thurs., June 24.)—The old tinker in the small country town is also the most beloved of the inhabitants. In this reel he suceeds in reforming a drunkard in a most pleasing style.

There is not much action here yet the strong character portrayal rendered by Murdock MacQuarrie in the title role causes the picture to be decidedly attractive. Those who know MacQuarrie's high grade work will readily appreciate the fine qualities of "The Tinker of Stubbenville."

"Laddy Baffles and Detective Duck in 'An Eighteen Carrot Mystery.'" (Powers. Thurs., June 24.)—Laddy Baffles thinks to steal an eighteen carat necklace held by Detective Duck, but instead she gets an eighteen carrot vegetable affair. This is very funny, with the same cast appearing as before.

"Conscience." (Imp. Four reels. Fri., June 25.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"We Should Worry About Aunty." (Victor. Fri., June 25.)—One of Harry Myers' rollicking comedies, with himself and Rosemary Theby appearing in the main parts. Aunty is much against her niece's plan of eloping with a young college man, but Aunty is frustrated every way she turns. This ought to go over anywhere.

"The Test of a Man." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., June 26.)—Again under the direction of Henry McRae the villain and hero strive to gain the upper hand. This time the hero is an engineer while the villain is a discharged employee of a railroad construction gang. The picture is a very good melodrama punctuated now and then by scenes of a most thrilling variety, among them being two explosions.

This will entertain all the time, as the action is rapid and the story well formed. Wellington A. Playter, Sherman Bainbridge, Marie Walcamp and Rex de Roselli appear in their customary roles.

"When Shultz Led the Orchestra." (Joker. Sat., June 26.)—This is not as good as the Allen Curtis-Joker company is capable of doing. The orchestra leader flirts with the chorus lady until his wife arrives on the scene, when a riot ensues. Max Asher, William Franey, Lillian Peacock and Gale Henry handle the important roles.

"Learning to Be a Father." (Powers. Sat., June 26.)—A most enjoyable subject featuring Daddy Manley and Lydea Yeamans Titus. The old sea captain is a confirmed woman hater until he sees the mate's baby. Then he adopts a child of his own and has to have a nurse. Things end up by the captain marrying the nurse and giving permission to his second mate to marry. This is very light but well done. Jacques Jaccard directed.

"Eleven to One." (Laemmle. Sun., June 27.)—The busy man who is called upon for jury duty suggests that he and his fellow jurymen flip a coin to decide whether the prisoner is guilty or not. Guilty he turns out to be and that night the man discovers that he has convicted his own son-in-law. He informs the judge of his neglect of duty, but the real criminal confesses and saves any further complications.

This is an excellent story, most original and produced and acted well. Many of its situations are very strong. The scenario was prepared by Harvey Gates and Frank Lloyd, and the latter also directed and played the innocent prisoner. Marc Robbins is seen as the father and Miss Hart as his daughter.

"THE VALLEY OF LOST HOPE"

(Lubin Liberty Bell—Five)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THIS is a smashing play. It has force in its plot. It has strength in its characters. It has thrills enough to satisfy the appetite for sensation.

Shannon Fife has made a more than usually interesting scenario for this picture.

Romaine Fielding, while not having a great part in the role of the "Sky-pilot," John Royce, gives an excellent production. There is no all star cast, but the players are adequate in their respective roles.

Mildred Gregory, B. K. Roberts, Peter Lang, Minnie Pearson, Robin Williamson appear. Williamson makes the most of the villainous husband, Dick Flint.

A little baby cooing in the midst of the landslide and finally coming out unharmed, relieves the tenseness of the big scene and touches the hearts of the spectators. A train collision is not absolutely new in a picture, but never has a more realistic one been filmed. There is no dummy; no delusion. The trains actually collide and are really wrecked.

As to the plot. It concerns an exploiter of fake mines, who after salting a location and starting a gold rush, quits town, leaving his son, Bob. in charge. Bob evolves a conscience, and when he finds how matters really stand, proposes to give back to the purchasers the money fraudulently wrung from them. His love for Dora, sister of the minister, helps to awaken him to the evil his father has wrought.

Dora's having a rascally husband prevents any thoughts of her marrying Bob, but when Dick in revenge for fancied wrongs fires the dynamite fuse, he meets his doom, at the hands of preacher John Royce, who has to kill him in self defence.

Bob's father and his cronies are killed in the train wreck, while trying to run away in their private car from the vengeance of the aroused people. When everybody that ought to die is killed in one way or another, the story ends happily and peacefully.

Bob and Dora are married by the parson. They adopt Granny Dean as a member of the family and all go riding away from "The Lost Hope" in an old prairie schooner.

Another One of the Same Kind This Week

On behalf of my friends and myself I would like to thank the Vitagraph Company for having given us at last, in the "Jarr Family," a real comedy—that we can enjoy, laugh at and keep awake through. Every one of the Jarr pictures have been thoroughly enjoyable—many hearty laughs for the audience. The Vitagraph has always stood for the highest and best in moving pictures and in producing the "Jarr Family" has made another step forward. The public, when it finds out that it can be made to laugh, without seeing someone kicked in the ear or paralyzed by a brick, will go where they can see comedies like the "Jarr Family" and not the slapstick which adds another terror to life.

MR. EXHIBITOR

The first time Peaceful Rafferty appeared before the public he was a riot. Why? Because he made good and made more real money for the box office than any other character in filmdom. Ask anyone that has played him.
He does not have to resort to slapstick stunts or vulgarity to make people laugh, for he is a real performer, supported by real actors.
Give your patrons what they want, and stop kidding them about not being able to get clean pictures, for we make them.
For reference as to what Peaceful Rafferty can do, ask the following Live Wire Rafferty Exhibitors:

Claremont Theatre, New York — Orpheum Theatre, Chicago
Crescent Theatre, New York — Orchestra Hall, Chicago and practically every other large theatre in the United States

Theatres and Airdomes Spring Up Like Mushrooms in a Night Throughout Iowa and Nebraska, Pleasing Exchange Men With Prospects of Big Business

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Omaha, June 16.

LISTEN to this story from the Middle West!

"I estimate there will be at least twenty-five to thirty new airdomes opened this summer in Iowa and Nebraska. Many automobile dealers, realizing the opportunity, are opening airdomes and operating them along with their other business," said P. H. Goldstone, manager of the Omaha, Neb., office of the World Film corporation, who keeps in close touch with the situation.

"It is certain now all airdome records will be broken in Nebraska and Iowa this season," remarked Manager Taylor of the Mutual's Omaha office.

"I have an opinion no other part of the United States is showing such a marvelous growth and prosperity as Nebraska, Iowa and the Dakotas," declared F. A. Van Husan, manager of the Laemmle Film Service company's exchange in Omaha.

All three added that this applies not only to airdomes, but to regular, all-year houses. Besides the number of new airdomes and motion picture theatres in the Middle West, as published in recent issues of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, here is further evidence that the managers' statements are correct:

"Our Garden," Omaha, is a big, new airdome to be opened within the next week. This airdome eclipses any such structure now in Omaha or vicinity, both in size and attractiveness.

Milburn and Weinberg, in opening with the World feature, "Women and Wine," a new airdome at Murray, Neb., last week, threw open the doors of the first motion picture theatre in the town.

H. M. Mason opened a brand new airdome at Greenwood, Neb., with the World feature, "America," and charges twenty-five cents admission straight. This is the first motion picture theatre ever in Greenwood, which is a small, thriving Nebraska village.

J. Biermacher has opened a new airdome at Wahoo, Neb., and is enjoying big attendances.

Harry Musselman, of Shelby, Neb., last week opened a new theatre at Osceola, Neb., which seats four hundred people, shows four reels regularly every day, charges ten cents straight admission and which is one of the most up-to-date houses in the territory.

The first motion picture theatre ever in Crofton, Neb., under Manager Tucker, has developed into a thriving enterprise.

M. A. Multing, in opening a new theatre at Hardington, Neb., opened the first motion picture theatre ever in that busy little western town.

A. J. Dix has opened the New Gale theatre at Mitchell, S. D., showing World features.

The Palace, Waterloo, Neb., is being remodeled and improved even better than before.

Film men call attention to the fact of motion picture theatres being started in so many small towns this year. This, they say, shows the steady growth of business and promises future prosperity better than anything else can.

More prosperity from Omaha's territory. The Rome Garden, showing the World film, "Little Miss Brown," and a cabaret show, was opened Tuesday, June 15. Joseph Bonaff is manager. The stage has been rebuilt, new screens hung, and the entire inside of the garden remodeled.

C. C. Boyes, owner of the Elite theatre, Hebron, Neb., has opened a new Airdome there.

The Majestic theatre of Waterloo, Neb., formerly a vaudeville house, opened with Janet Beecher in "Fine Feathers," and will hereafter be a feature film house, exclusively.

H. W. Powell has leased the Cal opera house at Algona, Ia., and will show World films.

J. C. Jenkins opened his New Auditorium theatre, costing $25,000, on June 19, at Neligh, Neb. He is showing world features.

O. N. Johnson, of Livermore, Ia., recently opened his new theatre, the Idle Hour, and reports excellent business thus far.

The warmer weather made it possible to throw open the airdomes, and reports are that the first week's business has broken all records of previous years.

"The Tragedies of the Crystal Globe"

"Marvelously beautiful. Truly a great picture," writes the Dramatic Mirror.

The transcendent dramatic power of the story of a love that survives ruthless death—a love that goes down through the ages through re-incarnation, carrying in its death-defying sweep the souls of a man and woman who follow each other, to meet, to painfully suffer and be torn apart by death when earthly happiness is theirs. This mighty appeal is made soul-absorbing by that artist of the screen, Mabel Trunnelle, whose art stands forth with the fulness of dramatic beauty which a story by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow and the direction of Richard Ridgely always provide. Released Friday, July 2, on the regular program.

Miriam Nesbitt in a tragedy of everyday life, "Was It Her Duty?" 1000 feet. Direction J. W. Castle. Released Saturday, July 3.

(Animated) "Cartoons in the Hotel," by Raoul Barre. Variety of fun—actors and cartoons. 1000 feet. Released Wednesday, June 30th.

Mutual Masterpictures

Set a new standard in Motion Pictures

Because they do not shock the intelligence of the audience or play over their heads.

Because they are made to anticipate the demand for the best pictures.

Because they are tremendously profitable to the exhibitor and give reputation to his house.

Because they are contrived from master stories, by master directors, and played by master players.

Because they have been given a national reputation through consistent and consecutive advertising in the Saturday Evening Post and other publications.

Success—profit—reputation are the natural results that follow in the wake of Mutual Masterpictures.

Mutual Masterpictures are made by the New York Motion Picture Corporation, Reliance, Thanhouser, Majestic and American Companies.

Q. 1—What are the principal parts of a motion picture machine?

and sliding rails upon which the lamp house may be moved forward and back and sideways, as illustrated in Figure 1.

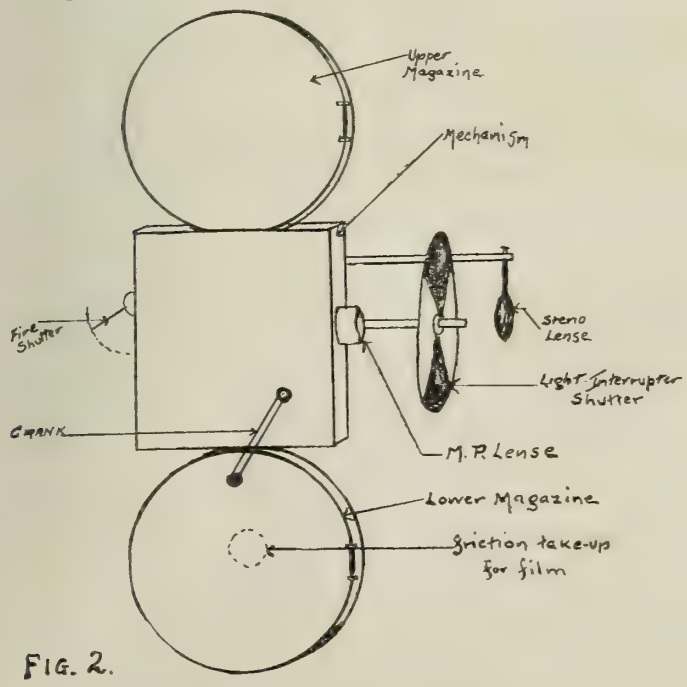

FIG. 2.

2—The mechanism, equipped with automatic fire shutter, film guards, moving picture and stereopticon lenses and rotating light interrupting shutter.

3—Upper film magazine.

4—Lower film magazine with take-up feed, as illustrated in Figure 2.

5—A suitable base or stand upon which the entire apparatus is mounted, together with switch and flexible cables for carrying the current, if the illuminant in the lamp house is an electric arc.

6—Some form of rheostat or other means for controlling the arc, as illustrated in Figure 3.

Q. 2—What is the first thing you would do after assembling and placing the machine in the operating room when the electric arc is used?

A.—I would test the insulation between the body of the arc lamp and each carbon holder to make sure that there is no ground. I would also test the machine switch to make sure that none of its terminals are grounded on the switch casing or machine stand. I would preferably make this test with an electric bell and two good batteries, unless the entire machine stand was thoroughly insulated from the ground, or if I was sure one wire of the lighting company's system was not grounded, then I might use the regular test lamp operated by the lighting system.

Q. 3—What would you do next?

A.—I would make sure that the rheostat or current controller is suitable for the current supplied by the electric lighting company.

Q. 4—How would you do this?

A. 1—If I did not know whether the current was alternating or direct, I would look at the name plate on the meter which generally states whether the system is a.c or d.c.

2—If the meter name plate should not indicate the current supply, I would inquire of the electric lighting company to make sure, and I would furthermore inquire if the transformer, feed wires and meter are large enough to supply the number of amperes which will be required for the rheostat or other current controller furnished with the machine.

Empire in Montgomery a Cozy Little Theatre

THE Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., with a capacity of eight hundred, is a new house attracting favorable notice among patrons of screen drama in that city. A feature of the decorations consists of colored electrical effects in a water fountain, and in the ceiling of the stage, controlled from the orchestra pit. A series of floral decorations along the frieze contains hidden incandescent globes which add effectively to the display.

THE STAGE AND ORCHESTRA, EMPIRE THEATRE, MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The orchestra pit has also the appearance of a flower garden, and is not in view of the audience during the run of the pictures.

The house has a balcony decorated in keeping with the rest of the interior. Four large exhaust fans and thirty-five oscillating fans and thirty ceiling fans maintain any desired temperature.

The operating booth is equipped with two Powers 6-A motor-driven machines, with an overhead fifty-two-inch exhaust fan pulling directly from the operating room.

The Empire is the first theatre in Montgomery to put on a regular feature program, and has contracted for the showing of Fox and Paramount pictures to be repeated thirty days from the date of the first showing.

Percy L Smith, the manager, is well known in film circles. Besides managing various theatres he was associated at one time with the Theatre Supply company of Roanoke, Va.

St. Louis Theatre to Cost $40,000

A NEW theatre costing $40,000 is soon to be erected on a site at 208-10 North Sixth street, St. Louis, by the St. Louis Amusement company, which has taken a ten-year lease on the property. The tenant of the present building on the ground is seeking new quarters for his cafe, after which the old house will be demolished and a handsome new theatre will be begun and completed so as to be ready for business in the fall.

The new playhouse will be an exclusive motion picture house, and will run only high-class pictures and features. It will be fireproof and contain all the latest improvements. The lower floor will seat six hundred and the balcony four hundred, and the decorations and furnishings planned for the Ritz, as the new house will be called, will make it a most luxurious and inviting theatre. Alfred H. Murphy is president of the amusement company, and George E. Lawler, secretary and treasurer.

The real estate market in St. Louis has been active in theatrical and amusement investments. A theatre building is being projected for the southeast corner of Ninth and St. Charles streets by the Orpheum Theatre company, which has taken a ninety-nine year lease, and will erect a building that will cost about $400,000.

A very imposing motion picture house on Delmar, near Hamilton, will soon be finished and ready for business. Plans are being made to erect a costly and substantial theatre on Shaw and Vandeventer avenues.

In all parts of the city new theatres and airdomes are springing up almost over night, and the tendency is to build larger and better houses in nearly every case.

War Pictures of Eastern Front Not Shown Yet

IN reply to a query from a New Orleans exhibitor as to "what pictures are they showing in the eastern theatre of war?"

If the questioner means to ask what pictures are coming from the eastern battle lines in Europe, there is no doubt but that the Pathé Freres organization, which has been appointed official cinematographer to the Czar, is getting the most pictures in that region.

No pictures have come in yet from photographers with the German army, for such pictures would have to be taken and smuggled out with the greatest precautions as the Germans do not want their operations recorded.

Camera Man Ercole of Pathé has been the star with the Russian army, and has been decorated by the Czar for bravery in filming a charge. He has sent over many interesting subjects taken in the Russian lines and from the Russian view point. The charge scene has not been released here, though.

All of the concerns handling topical subjects, Selig, Universal, Mutual and others, have a liberal quota of war pictures, many of which come from the eastern theatre of war.

Simmeral Places Automatics in the West

H. C. SIMMERAL, western representative of the Automatic company, is in New York for a few days following his attendance at the Reading convention. He reports good business throughout the West, having placed several machines in Detroit and Pittsburgh, even going into Canada to open up a new market.

Among recent installations are the Hippodrome in Detroit, the Saginaw in Saginaw, Michigan, New Lakewood in Detroit, Lipp & Cross, Battle Creek, Mich.

The sales of the Automatic have not been confined alone to motion picture theatres. Machines have been installed in F. W. Pierce's "Race Through the Clouds," and in the ticket offices of the White Star line ferries, in Detroit. E. S. Bowman, sales manager, is about to leave on an extended western trip.

Owners of Burland Theatre Form Connection with Miner Estate

PICKER AND BENNETT, under whose management the Burland theatre, in the Bronx, has achieved such a success, have formed a connection with the Henry C. Miner Estate by which the latter becomes interested in their latest moving picture theatre venture, located at Flatbush avenue and Cortelyou road, Brooklyn, with a seating capacity of 2,300.

Henry Clay Miner has already made the application to the board of licenses for permission to build on this site.

These associates have also in contemplation a moving picture theatre on the East Side of New York.

No More Five-Cent Houses in Los Angeles

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, June 14.

THE first time in the history of the exhibition of motion pictures in Los Angeles, there is not a five-cent house on Broadway, the main thoroughfare of the city.

Within the past few weeks the smaller theatres have all followed the action of the larger in the increase in price policy. The American, owned by Peter Gavurtz, has approximately four hundred seats and shows a regular program for ten cents.

The Comedy, with three hundred seats, is using Mutual Master-Pictures, choice second-run, for ten cents, and the other theatre to recently change is the Palace of Pictures, which is using the "Who Pays?" series in addition to a four-reel regular program, for a general admission of ten cents.

Frisco Screen Club Holds Open House

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, June 14.

THE Screen Club of San Francisco held open house on the evening of June 5, at its recently completed club rooms on Eddy street, and entertained two hundred friends at a high jinks and dance. A raffle of candy and dolls, together with dancing, served to entertain the visitors until theatrical talent from the various theatres and from the Exposition commenced to arrive.

Manager Sid Grauman, of the Empress theatre, who is also president of the club, was the master of ceremonies.

ADVERTISING THE MAN IN THE BOOTH

BY ALFRED JENKINS

I AM an operator. I know the song of the intermittent sprocket and the hum of the arc is music to my ears.

I have read hundreds of pages of theatrical matter, but only in rare instances have I seen the name of any operator mentioned and I put the query:

Why is this so? The answer is simple. He has never advertised himself to the public of his possibilities as a factor in the now one of the greatest industries in America. He alone of all people connected with theatrical work has remained silent as to his ability to make or unmake the success of the theatre at which he is working.

Ten years ago there was no such thing as a science of projection. Mathematical calculation in motion picture work did not figure very much as to the success of the show. Motion pictures were a novelty and the novelty drew the crowds.

The theatre man of then was content to pick up almost any man and say, "John, you turn the crank." And this opinion has gone clattering down the corridors until it has become a custom in many parts of the country to think of the motion picture operator as a man devoid of brains, without feeling, and invulnerable to anything human.

The opinion was circulated broadcast that a man could learn to run a machine in about a week and the willy-nillies looking for a soft snap to make a "little change" were drawn into the maelstrom and the unsuspecting public suffered. What a fallacy! Yet, this is the opinion entertained by many people today.

New Era in Projection Has Dawned

Such is not the case, however. A new era has dawned both in the making and projecting of pictures and this within the last three or four years!

This has called for a new type of man in the booths. It has called for a man that has mastered the basic principles of every department of the business and who knows instantly how to meet any difficulty that may present itself in projection.

The wise operator will plan not only to hold down his present position, but to keep abreast of the new ideas that are being produced by enterprising manufacturers. It has called for a reaching out for the experience of others and in several motion picture magazines of the country, operators are already exchanging ideas as to the problems that confront them in grim reality. And if one conclusion can be drawn from this, it is: The rule of thumb operator must go! Those men in the booths who insist on old time projection will be supplanted by those who are anxious to serve, to the best of their ability, both patrons and managers.

For years business men have been educating the public to the high standard of their wares by scientific advertising and publicity until the demand for their goods has built up the modern commercialism whose bounds have surpassed even the dreams of a decade gone. Operating is a form of labor and labor is a condition, which cannot be solved but can only be improved, and these improvements must come by advertising.

The condition in which the operating profession is today is the result of these years of the mistaken idea that the art is not dignified by the name of a profession and that anyone can do the work, when once shown how by the machine salesman. When once this idea is refuted by the consistent work of the good operator and the public realize that they see perfect pictures in some houses and poor ones in others, the patronage is sure to go to the better pictures.

This fact is being realized today by the leading managers, but they have not divulged the reason why they have been making their house pay better than their competitors.

What Brings the Patrons to the Theatres?

This is shown directly by the little bit of conversation overheard near one of the leading houses in Detroit. Said Mr. A., "I noticed you in the picture theatre tonight and waited for you. I thought you said you did not like pictures and I find that you are as much of a bug as I."

"Yes," said Mr. B. "I have taken quite an interest in the pictures here. I never used to go except to bring wife and the kiddies and then I tried to get out of it if possible. But, you know, there is something different about these pictures. They do not hurt your eyes and you are not always annoyed by trouble in the operating room. They seem to know their business better than the rest."

"Yes," said Mr. A. "That is what brings me here. There is that finished touch and do you know I really hate to leave." Did it pay this theatre to hire an efficient operator? So, why not advertise the quality of projection shown in theatres if up to standard?

Advertising in other lines brings out the details of the superiority of one product over another and it will soon be the general policy of calling attention to the superiority of operating rooms as well as the class of films which they show. The best films poorly handled produce but meagre results and while the public may not know the reason, they will patronize the house where they get the greatest value.

Skill in the operating room since the days of the dissolving lantern seemed to be one of the lost arts, but today first class men who know, who are skillful electricians, and who understand refraction, are speedily brought to the front.

It is to the interest of the management and stockholders that such a man has charge of their booth. His salary may be high, but it is his work that the public are paying their money to see, and in becoming used to perfect work, they will patronize no other.

Editors Note.—This communication has been sent in by one of our readers in the interest of the operators. We earnestly hope that others who have ideas which are worth expressing will follow Mr. Jenkins' example and send them in to us. We want them.

The Growing Importance of the Exhibitor

THE custom is growing throughout the middle west of naming new theatres after the owner. Whether this is due to a dearth of such common names as "Lyric," "Elite," "Princess," "Parlor," and the like, is unknown, but it is a fact to be noticed.

The builder and owner want to get a name as short as possible because paying for electric signs and their upkeep presents quite a problem in most cases. Then, in this part of the country, the name of the man who runs the theatre adds to it a touch of personal interest that is valuable in securing patronage.

Exchange men encourage the practice. They find it not only easier to keep the name of the theatre and the proprietor in their minds and in their books better, but it leads to a personal acquaintance, almost, with the exhibitor before they meet him.

The exhibitor is coming to be a man of no little importance in his community. If he shows the best pictures, caters to the right kind of people and employs modern business methods in courtesy and giving full money's worth, he has a personal influence that counts not only for the uplift of his community, but in boosting his own business. If a man runs the kind of show where he does not want his name to become known in connection with it, he should get out of the business.

The idea is being talked up throughout Omaha's territory of having theatres wherever possible named after their owners or proprietors. The day when a man remained in charge of a motion picture only a few days, has passed. Today the motion picture exhibitor is a settled factor in his community.

The argument that the name of the theatre would be too frequently changed, cannot apply in the present situation throughout the middle west.

Minusa Screen in Williamsport Theatre

AN example of the care and attention that is given to every detail of the exhibition of motion pictures is evidenced in the action of the Grand theatre, of Williamsport, Pa., which has had an expert survey made of the projection possibilities of the theatre, by the Ludwig Hummell company, of Pittsburgh.

A Minusa Gold Fibre screen, size 13 x 17, will be installed to meet the projection condition of the Grand.

Davenport, Iowa, Theatre Near Completion

THE new Casino theatre nearing completion at Davenport, Ia., will be one of the most complete picture playhouses in the West when it is finished.

Manager Greenbaum is having the best of seats and projection machines installed, a Minusa screen is part of the equipment in the Casino.

Questions Answered

Repairing Equipment

"Hallberg Helps" has taken the place of the Projection Department. Here will be found the answers to any questions which you may send into us. No matter how trivial or simple or how complex or difficult they may be they will be answered by an authority who knows and can give you actual help in your work.

Action of Irregular Current

H. R., Anoka, Minn.—I thank you for the instructions. You hit it on the head when you supposed that I was a conscientious operator. Nothing is too good for me in projection. Some people will say, "Oh, well that's good enough, nobody notices it." Not so with me, I want it right. I am getting better results now but my juice is bad.

Some days I have all the current I need to a get clear white spot and again I can't get a white light at all. The current is up and down all the time. There is one question which I want to ask now. "Is it a rise in voltage or amperage that causes an arc to sizzle when running?"

I know that the closer the carbons are together the more current flows, but as to arc sizzling when running I don't understand, because sometimes I cannot get a good light unless the arc sizzles and at other times the sizzling seems to kill the light after the arc has been running steadily and giving a good light.

ANSWER.—Not knowing whether you are using direct or alternating current, it is difficult for me to answer your question completely. I assume, however, from your description of the trouble, that you have alternating current. A fluctuating voltage will make it almost impossible to maintain a good steady light at all times.

However, by proper setting of the carbons, using the proper kind, and by constant and careful feeding, much of the bad effect due to the unsteadiness of the current can be overcome. I herewith give three illustrations of different carbon settings of which I recommend either fig. 2 or fig. 3 for you to experiment with.

If you set the carbons as in fig. 1, you will expose only one crater and you would work with a long arc, maybe from ⅛ to ¼ of an inch in length. This arrangement will make the arc run without a sizzling or frying noise; there will merely be the regular hum of the alternating current, but in view of the fact that you lose the illumination from the lower crater, the illumination at the aperture plate will be much less than if you arrange the carbons so that both craters will be exposed as illustrated in Figs. 2 and 3.

The setting in Fig. 2 has been found very satisfactory for alternating current and the carbons are then kept very close together with the upper one right above the lower, and maybe slightly ahead of it, so as to burn off the front edge of the lower carbon. If the carbon points are made to burn as illustrated in Fig. 2, both craters give the maximum illumination, which can be focused on the film at the aperture. The arc itself is of no use in producing illumination for projection, in fact it is a detriment, and acts like a cloud or a veil in front of the craters. You understand, of course, the arc is necessary in order to maintain the high temperature at the craters on the carbons.

Fig. 3 is merely a modified setting for No. 2, and is often found very satisfactory. It has the advantage that as the carbons burn away the upper crater does not constantly fall back of the lower, which necessitates pushing the upper carbon forward all the time, as it burns away with the Fig. 2 setting.

When Points Are Glazed

With settings in Figs. 2 and 3 when the arc is first started it will burn noiselessly, but after the points become slightly glazed or hardened, and when the core has consumed the part back of the carbon surface a sizzling, like the hum of a circular saw will be heard. This sound is always present when a good light is obtained and the carbons are then very close together, maybe only 1/64 inch apart.

If you feed the carbons together too much, so that they almost touch, the air required for proper combustion will be excluded at the carbon points. Under that condition the carbon will not consume all together, but will be shaped like a saw with many small hard points and instead of the sharp noise there will be a much softer frying sound.

It is impossible for you to get a good light until you allow the arc to burn with carbons apart for several minutes or by shutting down your arc. With a coarse file remove the damaged carbon points. Then you may restart the arc with fresh points, and by observing care in feeding the carbons your light will be steady and brilliant.

The back and forth adjustment of the upper carbon is a very valuable one to the operator because it is possible to shape the craters so that they will be exposed and kept in that condition during the entire performance. Without this adjustment it takes a very expert operator to secure perfect results.

60 Cycle Compensarc Will Not Work on 25 Cycle Current

W. M. W., Alderson, Okla.—I am using 25 cycle, 110 volt current through a rheostat, but have a 60 cycle 110 volt Fort Wayne Compensarc. How can I use the Compensarc on 25 cycle current? Can it be done? Some say it can while others say it cannot.

ANSWER.—You cannot use a 60 cycle Compensarc on 25 cycle current. A 60 cycle Compensarc is so designed that there is just enough iron in the core and turns in the coils to give a potentiality of about 35 volts across the arc at either low, medium or high amperes.

The highest notch on the Compensarc usually gives 60 amperes to the arc when the primary or line coil is supplied with the correct voltage and cycle current. If you put a 60 cycle Compensarc on 25 cycle current supply the inductive resistance of the Compensarc will be less than half what it ought to be, due to the low frequency, and as a result over double the number of amperes would flow through the arc in consequence of which the coils would overheat and burn out.

Even if you could prevent the over-heating of the coils, the arc could not be regulated so as to burn steadily.

Twenty-five cycle current is very unsatisfactory for picture projection because the low frequency causes interruption of the arc current which shows a decided flicker on the screen even though the machine should stand still and the light be projected straight through the aperture on the screen.

Where it is not practical to change the 25 cycle A. C. to D. C., I recommend that you secure a 25 cycle Economizer, Compensarc or other transformer to use in place of the rheostat. In making your selection of your transformer get one that will permit the carbons to be held almost together.

In other words, which gives two craters, one on the upper and one on the lower carbon which can be held so close together that they may be focused simultaneously on the film at the aperture. By holding the carbons very close together the arc is at the minimum, merely acting as a medium for keeping the carbon points hot.

Remember that the longer the arc maintained between the carbon points, the greater the flicker. A high amperage with very low arc voltage and the carbons close together gives the best results with 25 cycle A. C. at the arc.

Minusa Cine Factory Working Overtime to Fill Orders

THE Minusa Cine Products company, of St. Louis, shipped sixteen Minusa screens to various parts of the country, on Decoration Day, May 31. The factory force was compelled to work part of the holiday to finish late orders.

The St. Louis office of the Minusa Cine Products company reports the shipment of five Minusa screens to as many different exhibitors in Tennessee. All of the screens were rush orders and went forward on the same day. The screens went to the Dreamland and Gem theatres, at Maryville, the Vaudette at Lenoir, the Bijou at Knoxville, Tenn., and one to H. C. Jackson, who is building a new house at Morristown.

Universal Camera Tripod Is Satisfactory

THE stability of a tripod is a very important factor of the quality in the production of films.

Good things in the line of construction are always simple. Of all the tripods that have been made up to the present time, the manufacturers claim the Universal tripod is at once the simplest in construction, and most rigid, durable and generally satisfactory.

The manufacturers call attention to the segmental slide movement used for tilting. It runs on a track with a wide bearing and absolutely eliminates twitching.

The company has issued a beautiful catalogue of moving picture apparatus.

Minusa Takes Over Canadian Territory of World Features

NEGOTIATIONS which have been going on for some time between the officials of the World Features, Ltd., and the Minusa Cine Products company of St. Louis, have resulted in the formal annexation of all of the western provinces of the Dominion of Canada to the Minusa company's trade territory.

The World Features, Ltd., is the largest distributors of feature films and motion picture accessories in Canada, and has its general office in Calgary, Alta.

STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY
109 N. 10th St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Hallberg Equips Temple Theatre, St. Mary's, Pa.

THE Temple Theatre company, St. Mary's, Pa., has ordered from J. H. Hallberg, of New York, complete equipment for The Temple theatre. Among the installation there is a Hallberg alternating to direct current electric economizer or motor generator adjustable from 20 to 70 amperes d. c. at the arc with switchboard constructed to allow two arcs of 25 to 35 amperes each at the same time or one arc adjustable from 20 to 70 amperes.

On this switchboard there is also a set of special switches by means of which it is possible to operate on two Hallberg Standard type alternating current economizers with alternating current at the arc in case of an emergency.

There are two ampere meters and two volt meters which operate and indicate on either alternating current or direct current and the controller for the arc current with either one or two lamps burning is also mounted on this switchboard.

The Temple theatre is a 1,500-seat house of latest design and construction and is one of the most modern theatres in Pennsylvania. The machine equipment consists of one Simplex latest type motor driven projector and one Power's 6-A motor driven machine of the latest type and Gundlach lenses are used.

Claims Ocean Grove Auditorium Is Largest Film Theatre

OSCAR A. MORGAN, resident manager of the Paramount theatre, of Newark, N. J., is the latest person to break into the argument as to which is the largest motion picture house in this country with the statement that the Ocean Grove Auditorium situated at Ocean Grove, N. J., holds that honor, or will hold it, beginning June 21.

He states that the auditorium has a seating capacity of a little over 10,000, claiming that Madison Square Garden will only be able to seat about 8,000 in such a way that full number can see the screen.

The throw from the projector will be 221 feet. It is stated that Paramount pictures will be used. The managing director will be Tali Esen Morgan, at present managing director of the Broadway theatre, New York City, and the Paramount in Newark. Oscar A. Morgan will, as usual, do the press work for the big building. The largest organ in the world is located in the auditorium.

Pathescope's Winners Get Prizes

TWELVE Pathescope projection machines were formally presented to the winners in the St. Louis Times contest which closed recently. Eight public and four parochial schools were awarded machines, which were presented to them by Mayor Kiel at a celebration held at Forest Park Highlands, on June 8.

The winning schools were represented by all the pupils, and in consequence the Highlands has seldom held a larger or more enthusiastic gathering. Motion pictures were taken of the event for the local film weekly and will no doubt be in demand at the theatres near the prize winning schools.

Japanese Tea Garden Decoration Is Effective

THE Knickerbocker theatre, Cleveland, O., has donned summer decorations, the front of the house being made to resemble the entrance to a Japanese tea garden.

The back of the house carries out the same effect. Manager Emory Downs has consigned his full dress suit to the locker for the summer. He is a bright and shining mark at the door of the theatre. His Palm Beach suit has been commended innumerable times by the patrons.

Riviera Roof Instals Simplex Projectors

THE spacious roof garden atop of the Riviera theatre, at Broadway and 97th street, New York city, was opened by the Fox Amusement company on May 31. The projection equipment is of the latest design and includes two motor driven Simplex machines.

Los Angeles Slide Company Moves

THE Los Angeles Slide company, formerly located at 432 S. Main street, Los Angeles, has moved its plant to new quarters at 511 W. Eighth street.

Theatre Construction in Various States

PENNSYLVANIA

Several airdome theatres have opened in this section, but so far they have not been able to reap a golden harvest, as was thought would be the case. Last year there were a number of them started, but they were all closed before the end of the summer, with but one exception.

P. P. Shevlin, of Brookline, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, has opened an airdome, and so far has been able to break even. The same report comes from Hazelwood, Pa., where James Smith, of the Smith theatre, has opened his open-air theatre. This has not been much of a success so far on account of the weather, although the shows given are of first class calibre.

Arrangements have been made to remodel a number of theatres in the Pittsburgh district this summer. This is the season of dullness here, and many of the theatre managers are taking advantage of the slowness and are putting freshening touches to the interiors and exteriors of their theatres.

The theatres that have announced a program of remodeling so far are the Colonial at Erie, The Star at Roscoe, Pa., The Majestic at Charleroi, Pa., The American at Braddock, Pa., and a number of others.

NEW YORK

William Frischknecht has purchased the Orpheum motion picture house on Clinton avenue. The building was sold under foreclosure proceedings. It was originally a Lutheran church and was leased several years ago by Mr. Frischknecht. The Orpheum has been doing a splendid business ever since it was opened.

Work on the new Pine Hills, Albany, motion picture house is progressing. J. C. Green, the owner, has leased the structure for a term of years to F. R. Billman, who is well known in the moving picture enterprise and he expects to open the house in the early fall with a fine lot of pictures.

Now that warmer weather has arrived a number of new airdomes have sprung up in Albany. The Parkway theatre on Madison avenue has opened its airdome adjoining the theatre and uses it on pleasant nights, going back to the building when the weather is inclement. On Second avenue, in the Delaware avenue section, two new airdomes have been started within the past fortnight.

In Rensselaer, two have opened up this week and it is said that another is soon to be started in the central section of the city.

St. Louis Airdome Cleverly Decorated

A VERY clever and ingenious plan of interior decoration has been adopted by the Olivette airdome, on Olive street, between Grand and Vandeventer avenues, St. Louis. At the left of the auditorium was a large space that could not be used for seats on account of the position of the screen.

A landscape gardener was consulted, who converted the bare and unused spot into a beautiful terraced garden, beginning with a diagonal line running from screen to fence of small plants and shrubs, and using larger and taller plants and trees behind the little ones, giving a beautiful effect from the front.

O. T. Crawford is manager of the Olivette, and deserves to be complimented on the attractiveness of his outdoor theatre.

Building and Furnishings

Strides Made in Interior Decoration

A FEW years ago, the idea of decorating either the lobby or theatre proper with artificial flowers, would have been received with derision by the average theatre manager. A few floral pieces, say a horseshoe or wreath for an opening night, was all that was deemed necessary, but dressing an entire theatre was unheard of.

Probably the first theatre in the East to go in for this floral decorating scheme was the Strand of New York, and now there are no less than ten of the finest houses, in New York City alone, so equipped.

And now the progressive theatres all over the country are embracing this practically new departure, and not only decorating the stage and screen with artificial flowers, but are making veritable gardens of the foyers and lobbies.

Artificial flowers interwoven in trellis and lattice work give the theatre lobby a pleasing effect to say nothing of presenting a cool atmosphere effect for the summer months, and a spring appearance in winter.

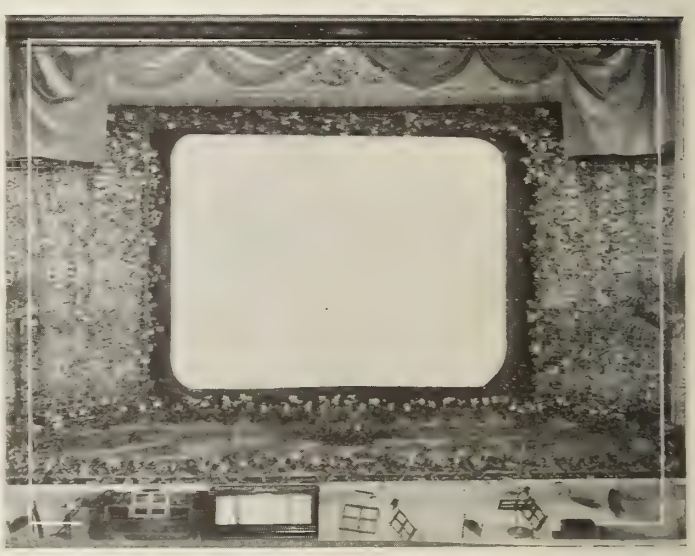
Much credit for introducing this idea in theatres throughout the Middle West is due Gustave Schroeder, president of the Schroeder Art Flower Decorating company, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Among the big contracts for this kind of work undertaken by this firm recently, are, the Hippodrome and the Alhambra, Cleveland; Keith's theatre, Cincinnati; Kunsky's new house in Detroit.

FOYER, KEITH'S HIPPODROME, CLEVELAND, O., DECORATED BY SCHROEDER

Mich.; Majestic, Lorain, Ohio; Dreamland, Columbus, and the Majestic, Springfield, Ohio.

One of the innovations supplied by this firm is that the trellis or lattice work is guaranteed to be fireproof.



Combination Effects in Shades

There is probably no more pleasing feature for the average patron of a theatre to be enjoyed than a special equipment of artistic decoration. Especially so when the pleasing effect can be enhanced by the proper use of electrical lighting effects. By a combination of emerald and amber shades over electric lights most wonderful effects are obtained.

For a theatre that is fairly light when the pictures are being shown on the screen, wall baskets with flowers of light pink and highly tinted foliage, both in the baskets and surrounding the screen, would show up beautifully.

The Schroeder people claim that "flowers of light pink masked in with our special highly tinted green foliage show up just as well as when the lights are on." The contrast is there, and their assertion is creditable. In addition to this, flowers, foliage and baskets are fireproof.

In the Hippodrome theatre there are pillars that have a lattice work around them and the side walls covered with a foliage of light green so as to give the inverted light a proper effect. This is festooned with a pink clematis and the combination is a winner.

Theatre managers and proprietors might do well to consider the plausibility and advantages to be derived from some such flowery dress and act accordingly. Flower decoration, real or artificial, has come to stay, and there is nothing that would so please the eye of the prospective and regular patron as this floral atmosphere.

$50,000 Theatre Under Way in McKeesport

THE foundation has been started for the new Lyric theatre at McKeesport, Pa., which is to replace the building destroyed by fire some time ago. Frank Natopolis is the proprietor of the house and states that he intends making it one of the best in the state for the showing of motion pictures.

The new house will be built of concrete and will have a seating capacity of 1,200. It will cost when completed above $50,000. It is expected the house will be ready for occupancy by August 15.

The work of erecting the William Fairgrave building at Erie, Pa., on State street, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, has started, and it is said the Grand theatre, which is to be located in the building, will be ready for occupancy early in the fall.

The seating arrangements for the house are such that the capacity will be three hundred and fifty. The building will be thoroughly fireproof throughout and modern in every respect.

A feature of the theatre will be the construction of the projection booth, which will be lowered from the ceiling. The larger part of the booth will be above the first floor and will be absolutely fireproof, being erected of steel and concrete. This will be the first theatre with this kind of booth equipment.

All of the machinery to be used in the theatre will be of the latest pattern, including the best projection machines on the market. Red leather-covered chairs of a well-known make will be used in the theatre.

A Week's Changes Among the Theatres

NEBRASKA

O. L. Baker has bought the North theatre at Columbus, Neb., from J. W. Hansley and opened Saturday, June 12, showing "The Boss," a World feature.

The Orpheum theatre at Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, has been turned into a feature motion picture theatre. Lincoln, like all other cities of the Middle West, is enjoying its most prosperous motion picture year of history.

Legitimate theatres, so called, experienced difficult times during the latter part of their season because of motion picture theatre competition. As one film salesman put it, "The Middle West has gone picture hunting, and they are going to hunt until they get the pictures they want." Reports are that another Orpheum will be built in Lincoln.

MICHIGAN

The lease of the Addison theatre, Watson and Woodward avenues, Detroit, Mich., has been bought from Chris E. Pudrith by A. Arthur Caille and Henry J. Guthard. Mr. Caille is president of the Majestic theatre company and Mr. Guthard is secretary and treasurer.

The lease held by Mr. Pudrith, which is to be extended for the new holders, will run approximately forty years, and the transaction, which includes the taking over of an additional 47-foot frontage on Watson street, figuring the long lease and rentals, involves an investment of approximately $200,000.

"It is our intention to greatly improve the property by putting on an addition to the building. The theatre will be entirely remodeled during the summer and seating capacity materially increased. Earl Hennesy is manager of the Addison, which was opened about a year ago.

A. Bregger has purchased the Melcher building at Crystal Falls, Mich., and will remodel it into a moving picture theatre.

C. C. Randolph, formerly shipping clerk with the Casino Feature Film company, is acting manager of the Gotham-Wolverine Feature Film company, Campau building, Detroit, Mich.

T. H. and J. W. Goodspeed will build a moving picture theatre on Monroe avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., that will cost $35,000 and seat about 1,000.

The Ferry Park Theatre company, which will erect a $100,000 theatre at Grand River and the Boulevard, Detroit, Mich., has changed its name to the Ferry Field Theatre company.

SOUTH DAKOTA

John Cox, owner of the Imperial and Ruby theatres at Madison, S. D., has sold out to Mulvy, Henkins and Ketchum. The name of the Ruby will be changed and both houses will be remodeled and improved.

TEXAS

Professor Frank J. Herb has taken over the management of the Empire theatre, 1103 Congress avenue, Houston, Tex. He has remodeled it and has made it one of the neatest houses in Houston.

Sign Extends Length of Theatre Front

"SOMETHING different" in lobby display is seen at the Empress theatre, Washington, D. C., under the management of John R. Heine. This is a sign proclaiming the Paramount program, the center of which is portable. In this is inserted the particular production of the day. The sign extends across the full length of the theatre, and in this case dark green, red and gold predominate in the color scheme.

Of course any program which the house may be using would take the place of Paramount in this instance. The whole is attractive and dignified and is the conception of J. Boyd Dexter, who is responsible for most of the innovations in sign and lobby displays of Washington, a man who has grown ahead of the motion picture business in his particular line.

It is hoped that this will supplant entirely the banners that now mar the architecture of many of the motion picture theatres, but that point of good taste has not yet been reached.

The managers assert that a lavish display of posters brings the patrons, but the sign display at the Empress should certainly be as convincing.

A prize of twenty-five dollars is being offered for a more suitable name, each admission ticket purchased entitling the patron to submit a name. On one warm day recently each visitor to the house was given a glass of Bludwine as a treat, arrangements having been made by the manufacturer of this drink, making this possible.

The American theatre, located on upper Market street, San Francisco, and conducted under the direction of Edwin James, of Portland, Ore., has been closed for the purpose of making improvements. This house has been devoted exclusively to pictures for several months with a fair degree of success, and it is believed that when the proposed changes are made it will increase in popularity.

The posts on the lower floor are to be removed and the seating capacity of the balcony will be increased. The house will be redecorated throughout and will be opened again as soon as this work can be completed.

The two-reel subject, "The Battle of Elderbush Gulch," was featured during the past week, and played to good business.

The Auditorium theatre, the largest at San Pedro, which has been closed for several months, has been leased by Gagnon and Gunther, and reopened this week with a program of United subjects. On the opening night, Manager A. B. Lang, of the Los Angeles United exchange, was present, and the new manager of the theatre induced him to make a curtain talk, explaining the merits of the various pictures which would be shown in the near future. This means an epoch in the matter of film exploitation and is possibly the first time a direct representative of the manufacturer has made appeals to the ultimate consumer.

The Vienna roof garden, conducted by N. O. Emmett at Calexico, was recently totally destroyed by fire, when the building on the top of which this elaborate amusement place was located was burned. The roof garden had a seating capacity of seven hundred, besides the seats on the pergolas surrounding the auditorium. The finishing includes a very handsome soda fountain and luncheonette. The projecting equipment consists of a two-power 6-A machine. The loss to Manager Emmett is estimated at $4,000.

Applestill, who owns and controls five theatres located at El Centro, Calexico, Imperial, Brawley and Holtville, has been in Los Angeles for the past few days arranging for future bookings for his five houses. Mr. Applestill was the first to enter the field in the Imperial Valley, he having built his first theatre, the Tulane, at El Centro, when it was a town of but 1,200.

He has taken an option on the St. Andrews theatre at 873 West Jefferson street, and is now managing the same.

E. Kehrlein, Jr., owner of the Cinema theatre at Fresno, is spending a week at Los Angeles making plans for the enlargement of his house. He now has a seating capacity of 1,500, and at the close of the summer or about September first the size will be increased so that three hundred additional seats may be added.

Predicts Motion Picture Operas

IN the attempt made by Motion Picture News and several film companies to furnish musical programs for pictures, Frank E. Doyle, a vocal instructor prominent in Boston musical circles, sees a sign of the coming of what he believes will be the most revolutionary feature the animated screen world has produced—motion picture opera.

"And it is not far in the future," says Mr. Doyle. "Something akin to film opera was written a year or so back by Chadwick in his incidental score for 'Everywoman.' Of course, the music will have to be almost wholly illustrative of action, mood having a small part in film stories.

"Mr. Griffith has recently predicted the million dollar film. Why is it beyond the vision of good judgment to predict that half of this million will be devoted to securing a musical score by some noted composer? And if the time is coming when the motion picture audience will seek out films by its favorite authors, that time will also see lovers of music flocking to the film theatres in larger numbers than ever before, because their favorite composers will be writing music for the screen shows.

"This is not overdrawn prophecy. It is only conservative looking ahead. And it is time right now for some composer to come forward to this new work."

2,500 Seat Theatre Will Be Built in Detroit

A PICTURE theatre will be built at the southeast corner of Grand River avenue and Bagg street, Detroit, Mich., by a company just organized, and headed by Harry Goldstein, of 22 East Forest avenue, to be known as the Astor Theatre.

The site is now occupied by the Wagner Baking Company, which will move to its new location on the opposite corner July 15. The Astor Theatre company has taken a lease of the property for forty years. Rent for the entire period of lease is said to involve more than $500,000.

Work on the theatre building will start the latter part of July, and the theatre will be operating by January of 1916. There will be stores and the theatre on the first floor, while the second floor front will be for offices. The building will be 155 by 172 feet, and will cost $225,000.

The seating capacity will be 2,500. The seating arrangement will be along the lines of the Majestic theatre, Woodward and Willis avenues, in which Mr. Goldstein was originally interested, having just disposed of his stock in that enterprise. There will be a $35,000 pipe organ, a twenty-five piece orchestra, an electric fountain, and many other big improvements. He plans to leave this month on an extended trip to all of the principal cities of the country. C. Howard Crane, architect in the Dime Bank building, Detroit, is now at work on the plans.

Duzee Sells Five Theatres and Gives Farewell Dinner

Special to Motion Picture News

Minneapolis, June 16.

AS a farewell to his employees with whom he severs relations because of the sale of five of his theatres, C. E. Van Duzee, a pioneer film exhibitor in Minneapolis and long a worker for the best interests of the exhibitors, entertained the employees at a dinner in the Wonderland theatre building, 27 Washington avenue South. Forty-five men and women were his guests. Several other exhibitors and film men were special guests.

The theatres which Mr. Van Duzee has sold are all enjoying a good business. The theatres and their new owners are: Majestic, 1326 Washington avenue, South, A. F. Hickman; Wonderland, A. J. Weisman; Joy, 38 Washington avenue, South, Frank Dillon; Isis, 30 Sixth street, South, Great Western Investment company, and Seville, 413 Hennepin avenue, Great Western Investment company.

Mr. Van Duzee has retained the Empress, Central avenue and Fourth street, and will continue as head of the Twin City Calcium company, 740 Temple Court building.

Silverman Breaks Ground for Another Theatre

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., June 16.

ISAAC SILVERMAN, who has just sold the Photoplay theatre, this city, to the George Brothers, owners of the adjoining Victoria theatre, who propose to throw the houses into one large motion picture theatre, has left the city for Altoona, where he and his brother, Jacob Silverman, owner of the Pastime theatre in the latter city, have started building a new picture house.

The Silverman Brothers, while continuing to operate the Pastime, at 1504 Eleventh avenue, Altoona, will operate also the new theatre which will be known as the Strand, and which will be located at Eleventh avenue and Sixteenth street.

It will be a modern fireproof building with a seating capacity of 1,800.

Finds Piano Renting More Satisfactory Than Purchase

DOES it pay to buy pianos for a chain of theatres in preference to renting them? John H. Kunsky, who has eight theatres in Detroit, says he finds it a better proposition to rent them instead of buying them outright. He probably spends seven or eight hundred dollar a year for rented pianos, but from his standpoint, he says this is better than laying out $5,000 or more for pianos.

By renting them he is always sure of the very best instruments. If one gets out of order he immediately gets another. And then by renting a number of pianos, he gets a reduced rate per year.

THE TECHNICAL PRESS NEW YORK

"——I'LL TEAR IT UP!"

After Arthur Ensign, scientist, has sold the stove to keep his aged wife from starvation, he discovers the ether wave—

The War Office conducts a successful test and foreign spies lose their lives in an attempt to steal the secret—

The aged inventor has a dream—he is a general in an army — invaders are ravaging the country—his powerful explosive, "Trixite" and the "ether wave," are utilized, and battlefields are piled deep with dead bodies—

But Ensign's triumph turns to gall and wormwood when he discovers the lifeless body of his beloved daughter on the field of carnage—

A vision of the Christ appears and the inventor is told: "You live that men might die; HE died that men might live!"

Then come grief-stricken wives, mothers, and sweethearts; then come orphans crying for bread; come the lame, the halt, and the blind made so by the hideous god, War—

The sleeper awakens and is overjoyed to see his cherished daughter and her husband approaching—they have come home to visit the "old folks."

Government officials accept Ensign's formula—they tell him that fame and riches are now his for the asking. They request the formula—

Surrounded by his loved ones, the aged man sacrifices the labor of a lifetime—"I'll tear it up," he slowly says. The prized secret becomes scraps of paper—

"War o' Dreams," a Selig Diamond Special in three reels, released in regular service on July first, is a strong sermon written by W. E. Wing opposing the ruthless slaying of human beings—

"War o' Dreams" possesses the punch, the power, and the appeal—Miss Bessie Eyton is the star; thousands of soldiers engage in realistic warfare; the lesson is such that all who run may read—

Sherman said that war is hell! "War o' Dreams" proves convincingly, impressively, that Sherman was right—Book "War o' Dreams" and in so doing you will have added to the Widow's Mite!

Miss Viola Allen in "The White Sister" Sweeps the Public off its Feet

Have you seen Viola Allen in "The White Sister?" This is what every one now is asking of his neighbor.

When a play makes such a success that it is the first topic of conversation that enters the mind when two friends meet, you may know it has some genuine attraction, that it is irresistible.

Every once in a long time there is a play that not only succeeds in the ordinary way, but has some great fundamental human element in it that sweeps the public off its feet.

That is what "The White Sister," Essanay's six act photoplay, written by F. Marion Crawford has done. It is the talk of the hour. Critics who saw the play before its release predicted a wonderful run. It has surpassed all expectations. It is the rage; it is the fad of the day.

You know what that means in drawing crowds; you know what it means in swelling your box office receipts.

Have you booked "Graustark," the great six act feature photoplay by George Barr McCutcheon? Have you booked "The Slim Princess," the four act photocomedy by George Ade? If you have not you have something good in store. Thousands of exhibitors have attested the wonderful drawing power of these two plays.

Book them at once through any of the branch offices of the V. L. S. E., Inc., if you would get plays that are sure to please your patrons.

Essanay Studios, June 21.

My Dear Mr. Exhibitor and the Photoplay Public:

I wish to thank you for your many kind inquiries about my health. I am willing to stake my word of honor that I am alive. My moustache still has that funny little quirk and my feet twinkle when I walk.

I have been unable to convince any insurance company that I have been ill, injured, killed or otherwise incapacitated. Some people are unkind enough to say I am crazy. All are entitled to their own opinions, but I would say in defense that they don't know me.

I certainly am still on the job. If you don't believe it, watch me "WORK". I will show you everything you ought to know about interior decorating. If I don't make you laugh I will admit that I am a dead one, but not until then.

Yours in fun,

Charles Chaplin.

Henry B. Walthall, Greatest Photoplay Actor, Joins Essanay

CHICAGO, Ill., June 25.—Henry B. Walthall, the world's greatest photoplay actor, has joined the Essanay company and is now working on a great three act emotional drama, "The Fatal Temper."

It was in line with the policy of George K. Spoor, President of Essanay, to obtain the very best actors in the world, that Mr. Walthall was engaged. For Mr. Walthall is just that, a real actor, a man of wide experience both on the speaking stage and in photoplay work.

HENRY B. WALTHALL

As the leading character in plays produced by other companies, Mr. Walthall was distinctly the feature of the dramas. He has advanced steadily in artistic accomplishments and popular favor until at the present time he stands at the head of his profession.

Mr. Walthall is a master of subtle expression and in dramas requiring a display of emotional feeling has no equal. He will appear both in features released through the V. L. S. E., Inc., and the General Film Co.

KILLED IN ACTION

might easily be applied to hundreds of exhibitors throughout the United States today, only "inaction" would be the word. The reason so many exhibitors are not getting bigger returns is that they are not getting the pick of the programs.

The Keynote of the Feature Situation

THAT exhibitors everywhere are keenly alive to the necessity of adequate service with big features is evidenced by the letters aroused by last week's editorial.

In one, a leading exhibitor from Pennslyvania takes exception to our statement: "He ought to be as sure of getting this advertising service as of getting the picture. He ought to get both at, at least, the same time."

* * *

"YOU are dead right in the first statement, but dead wrong in the last," writes this exhibitor, and he adds:

"The exhibitor ought to get his paper, slides and lobby display in advance of the picture, two weeks, yes, three weeks.

"The bigger the feature and the price he has to pay for it, the more in advance he needs his publicity, and let me tell you he needs mighty good publicity to put the picture across."

* * *

VERY true. The editorial tried to convey the fact that the service should go with the booking, not with the picture's showing.

But we are glad of the opportunity to emphasize again what seems to be the very keynote of the big feature situation as it exists today.

That is, the necessity of adequate advertising service with the picture.

THE idea of booking at any odds is all wrong. Any concern that so instructs its salesmen, or countenances such a policy, or any concern that utterly neglects its service department is a concern that will exist for today only.

* * *

AND just as logically it follows that the successful picture concern of the future will be the concern not alone successful in the quality of its product, but also in the selling power of the service that goes with it.

In fact, success will be measured just as surely by one as by the other.

WE are constantly in receipt of letters which read like this: "———— pictures are the best pictures. But we get better paper and better advertising help with ———— pictures. Therefore we are forced to book the latter."

Surely the lesson is clear enough.

AND the whole industrial and commercial world gives past and present proof to it.

The concerns in the forefront today—in the making and distribution of food, clothing and the like—are the concerns which are just as keen on moving the goods from the dealers' shelves as they are keen on putting them there.

Back in the rear ranks are the concerns which try only to sell and not to resell their product.

IN these days—days of urgent competition—you have got to grease the sales of a product right up to the final consumer, otherwise, it will stop and the field of the maker will be clearly limited by this stopping point.

All of which applies to pictures—every bit—just as to food and clothing products.

THE making of selling helps for the feature ought to begin with the making of the picture, and be planned as carefully.

To every print there should be apportioned a sales help expense and this appropriation should include the best possible quality of paper, announcement slides, lobby display, newspaper advertising and publicity helps, and whatever novel advertising suggestions the brains of an advertising man can conjure up.

ALL this, of course, within the limit of selling expense the picture can stand; but it must be ready.

All of these advertising helps should go into a container just as surely as the print goes into a case; and this container should reach the exhibitor surely and sufficiently in advance of the feature.

TOO much expense? Not a bit.

Not for the well-organized, well-intrenched concern playing for the future; nor for the exhibitor who isn't a fly-by-night fooler of the public, but can look beyond present pennies and see future dollars.

* * *

SAID a prominent producer to one of his road-men the other day:

"What is your first duty to this house?"

"To sell pictures," answered the road-man.

"No, it isn't," corrected the producer. "Your first duty is to help the exhibitor sell them."

Here is a producer whose front-rank position is already guaranteed.

The Business Man's Recognition of the Motion Picture

THE invitation extended by the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce to the Exhibitors' League local of that city to be represented in the chief mercantile organization of the Ohio city is a striking testimonial to he esteem in which business men in many quarters hold the motion picture industry.

It is an indication that the men who compose the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce regard the exhibitor as a business man like themselves.

HITHERTO, the motion picture field has not been treated nor regarded as a business. It has been considered as an amusement, as a speculation, as a klondike—as anything and everything but a business.

The change of attitude cannot fail to be beneficial. The affiliation of the Cincinnati exhibitors with so powerful a body as the Chamber of Commerce cannot fail to bring them manifold and manifest advantages.

They will in no way lose their identity. The association will not impair the strength of the exhibitors' league; it will rather fortify and increase the usefulness of that body to its members.

And that the alliance will enable the Ohio exhibitors in that section to ward off invidious legislation more successfully than they have been able to in the past goes without saying.

THE increase in dues is certain to be repaid over and over in tangible benefits to the exhibitor, in gaining for him many of the objects for which he and his leaders have in the past striven in vain.

And what applies to Cincinnati applies with equal force to every city in the country. Such a step identifies the motion picture business with other recognizedly "legitimate" businesses in a manner that is not open to any question.

The motion picture ceases to be an interloper, a parvenu in mercantile life. It is "taken up," established, and acquires the same rights and privileges as other established forms of business enjoy.

They existed before, it is true. But in this case, recognition is nine-tenths of the battle.

The Film Business Worse Off by One More Censorship Law

BY July 1 the motion picture industry will be worse off, by one more state censorship law, than it was before that date. And it is largely the fault of the motion picture exhibitors of Illinois that it is so.

Illinois is the latest state to follow the lead of Ohio, Kansas and Pennsylvania and invite the motion picture men of the commonwealth to support a few "deserving"—to use the favorite word of a well-known statesman (?) in this connection—individuals at the rate of one dollar for every thousand feet of film that is shown within the borders of the state.

ONCE more the exhibitors are the victims of their own laziness and stupidity. It is of no use to mince words, or to be polite about the matter.

It may be an unpleasant fact, but it is still a fact, that it was laziness that kept the exhibitors of Illinois from fighting the law on the floor of the Legislature.

It was nothing but stupidity that led any exhibitor to believe that, of two evils, state censorship was less burdensome than local censorship because it would do away with the latter.

* * *

STATE censorship did not do this in Ohio; the case of "Three Weeks," which every Ohio exhibitor recollects proves that.

It will not do so in Illinois.

The Chicago exhibitor will reap the reward of his indolence when he finds out how badly he has been deceived by the Springfield politicians; he is likely to realize, if he never realized it before, that it is more costly to do without an organization than it is to support one.

THE Illinois censorship law was a grossly political measure. The Springfield State Register was right when it declared, just before the bill was passed, "We have not heard one demand for state censorship of the motion picture business.

"There might be an argument for a measure of this kind if the motion picture business was run along immoral lines. But it isn't. Motion pictures today are becoming more refined, more elevating, more entertaining than ever before. Even the old-time melodramatic picture is becoming relegated, not because it was immoral, but because it didn't take with the general public."

IT was emphatically a political measure, so much so that the legislative proprietors of it did not even attempt to justify it by attributing it to "public opinion," but sneaked it through the last hours of the session, when there was no chance for opposition.

The average motion picture exhibitor seems to rival the Russian peasant in his ability to stand unlimited punishment and abuse with absolute stolidity. Is there any limit to his impassiveness?

Illinois Censor Law Takes Effect on July 1

The Measure Was Rushed Through at the Tail End of the Legislative Session, Though the Public Had Signified No Desire for a Law of This Character—State League Failed to Present Opposition —Censor Fee Will Be $1 Per Thousand Feet—Penalties for Violation

Special to Motion Picture News

Springfield, Ill., June 23.

WITH the signature of Governor Dunne to the bill now before him, censorship of motion pictures by a state board will become a law in Illinois on July 1. Ninety days after the law takes effect every motion picture film exhibited in the state must bear the stamp of the Illinois Board of Censors.

With no apparent public demand for such a board, and with numerous newspapers in the state opposing it, the censorship bill was passed during the closing hours of the forty-ninth general assembly with but little opposition. The measure was introduced in the senate by Senator Albert J. Olson, of Woodstock, and passed that body early in the month. It came up in the lower house on June 18, the day before adjournment, and was passed there by a vote of 95 to 16.

Manufacturers appeared before the committee and opposed the passage of the bill, but their efforts were fruitless. A more or less half-hearted opposition to the measure was voiced by exhibitors throughout the state, but with the Illinois branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America but loosely organized the opposition wasn't strong enough to stop the measure.

Chicago exhibitors gave the bill little attention, probably taking the view that another censorship of films wouldn't hurt any more than the present Chicago censorship, and might have the effect of eliminating the censor's work there.

The bill which becomes a law July 1 puts the board of censors of motion picture films, which is to be known as the Illinois Board of Censors, under the authority and supervision of the secretary of state. The board is to consist of three persons, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, and they are to be appointed by the secretary of state with the approval of the governor. All are subject to removal by the secretary for cause.

The secretary is to furnish the board with all necessary equipment, offices and employees necessary to carry on their work, and each member of the board is to receive an annual salary of $2,500.

The board is to examine and censor all motion pictures to be displayed in the state, and those films must be submitted by manufacturers, dealers and exchanges before they are delivered to the exhibitor. Members of the board are given power and authority to require any or all motion pictures submitted to be displayed before them for the purpose of censorship, and may require a description of any motion picture film or reel to be furnished describing the scenes.

The board will charge a fee of one dollar for each reel of film to be censored which does not exceed one thousand feet, and one dollar additional for each reel exceeding one thousand feet. The money received is to be paid to the secretary of state, and all moneys so received shall be accounted for by him and paid into the state treasury.

Only such films as are in the judgment and description of the board of a moral, educational, or amusing and hramles character shall be passed and approved. All films passed will be stamped or otherwise designated and consecutively numbered.

The Illinois board is empowered to work in conjunction with any censor board or boards of legal status of other states as a censor congress in approving or rejecting films. All films passed and approved by other boards or congress may be shown in the state when the regular fees have been paid to the Illinois board, and shall then be considered approved by the Illinois board.

The law provides a penalty of a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisonment of not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both, for each violation, upon conviction thereof.

Manufacturers who are dissatisfied with any order of the board may, under the provisions of the law, apply for a rehearing, and upon refusal of it, or upon decision after a final hearing, appeal to the Circuit court of Sangamon county at Springfield for the purpose of having the reasonableness of the decision inquired into.

Members and employees of the board are given authority to enter any place where motion picture films are being exhibited for the purpose of detecting any violations of the law. They will be provided with badges showing their authority.

The new law does not take away any of the powers now existing of any city, village or incorporated town of 100,000 inhabitants or over, to regulate motion picture exhibitions, provided that no such city, village or incorporated town shall permit the exhibition of any motion picture films unless they have been approved by the Illinois board.

Representative Jackson's bill, which was aimed to forbid the showing of motion pictures likely to excite race hatred, and which was aimed particularly at such pictures as "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Nigger," was killed. The bill passed the lower house, but met death in the senate.

United Bankruptcy Petition Is Only a Friendly Suit

Reorganization Is Planned by Producing Companies for the Inauguration of More Efficient Methods Expected to Permit Eventually the Issuance of a 21-Reel Program

THAT the petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court against the United Film service is a friendly suit brought by the producers, who are closely affiliated with the distributing company, to make possible a quick realization of extensive plans to increase the number of weekly releases and form a bigger and better organization is made known by J. C. Graham, president and general manager of the company, who will remain at the helm and work in conjunction with Leo C. Stern, the receiver appointed by the court.

The suit was brought about by conferences of all the parties interested, in which efforts were made to keep the several valuable properties and the splendid organization, recently perfected, intact during the working out of the plans that have been carefully made to place a program of at least twenty-one reels upon the market immediately.

Mr. Graham is convinced that this friendly suit will result in more quickly accomplishing the results for which the United Film company has been striving since its reorganization several weeks ago.

The receiver, Leo C. Stern, of 15 William street, New York; his associate receiver, Langdon P. Marvin, and the officials of the United are in perfect accord, and will co-operate in every way to increase the rapidly growing business of the United exchanges.

Mr. Graham emphasized the fact that the affiliated companies had no desire to tear down the carefully erected structure of the releasing company, but took the action they did in order to facilitate the growth of the organization by establishing a basis of pro rata values for all concerned, and at the same time doing away with the extraordinary demands on the part of the few that had a tendency to interfere with rapid expansion.

Leo C. Stern, who is a lawyer and also a member of the board of directors of the United Film Service, Inc., believes implicitly in the policy followed by the United Film service since it began issuing a regular weekly program, and is convinced that the class of film produced is in great demand at the present time. He also realizes the necessity of a reorganization that will result in the issuing of a program of twenty-one reels at the earliest possible moment, and will do all in his power to aid it.

SEGAL AND RANDEL ORGANIZE COMPANY

H. G. Segal, who has been manager of the New York office of the World Film Corporation, and Henry Randel, who was affiliated with the Shuberts for the past few years, have organized the Equitable Film Company, with offices in the Fitzgerald building, 1482 Broadway, New York.

U ESTABLISHES ALL-YEAR STUDIO AT LAKE TAHOE

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 21.

The Universal Film company has completed arrangements for the opening of a permanent studio at Lake Tahoe, in the northeastern part of California, which will be in charge of Jacques Jaccard and where two companies will work.

Mr. Jaccard will supervise the productions of both organizations, one of which will feature J. Warren Kerrigan, supported by Hazel Buckham, Norbert Miles, Helen Leslie and others. Ben Cohn, of the Universal scenario department, will be in charge of preparation of script. The players and assistants number twenty-five in all, and departed for the northern location this week, and it is understood that an entirely different class of pictures will be made at this studio.

Studio, Largest in World, May Be on Lasky Ground

Goldfish Discloses Plan for Erection of Structure of 100 Dressing Rooms, with Gymnasium Attached, and Stage Accommodating 8 Closed Companies and 8 in Open Air

THAT the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company will greatly increase its activities as soon as a big new studio can be built on the Pacific coast is the decision reached by Samuel Goldfish, treasurer and general manager, on his return from California.

"We are going to build the biggest studio in America, if not in the whole world," said Mr. Goldfish. "To give you an idea of its size, let me say it will have one hundred separate, fireproof dressing rooms, each with its own shower bath. It will be a combination of a glass and an exterior studio. One enormous stage will be built which will accommodate eight working companies in the open air and eight working companies on the part under glass.

"We are going to do one thing which has never been done before—build a gymnasium for the members of our stock company, directors and writers. This will cost a lot, but we will get returns in increased efficiency. The people in the production end at the Lasky plant are working hard all day. When night comes they take no exercise. So the desk work develops sedentary habits. Consequently they get in poor physical condition and cannot give their best work.

"This will be a great boon for our writers, Marian Fairfax, W. C. DeMille, Margaret Turnbull, Hector Turnbull and Cecil DeMille, as well as for our directors, Frank Reicher, George Melford, Cecil DeMille and J. P. McGowan.

"The Lasky company has the finest efficiency system in the world, because the head of each department participates in the weekly meetings of the efficiency board.

"Take our sets, especially the exterior sets. When 'Jimmie Fadden' is released you will see the New York Bowery as we built it on the coast, and you will swear it is the real Bowery. The exteriors for Geraldine Farrar's 'Carmen' are now built on our 10,000-acre ranch—a Spanish bull ring and a street of Seville we put up when I left the coast.

"Wilfrid Buckland, whom we secured through our association with David Belasco, has built up a wonderful art department. All of the producing is under the personal supervision of Mr. Lasky and Cecil B. DeMille.

"One thing which my transcontinental trip impressed on me is that sensational pictures are the bane of the industry at present. By that I mean pictures exploiting infidelity and the grosser passions.

"It is impossible for each picture to be more sensational than its predecessor. The exhibitor who trusts to a sensational picture to boost business finds that he scares away the family patronage and attracts only sensation seekers. Then, when he has no sensational picture to show, he falls flat."

No NYMP Releases Through Mutual After Sept. 1

President Kessel Points to Triumvirate of Directors, Griffith, Ince and Sennett, and Its List of Stars as an Indication of Quality Expected in the Company's Pictures

A. KESSEL, president of the New York Motion Picture corporation, when asked by a representative of Motion Picture News for further information as to the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination and its intention as stated last week in the daily papers of presenting two dollar pictures in a chain of theatres here and abroad, said: "I have nothing to say this week, except to lay emphasis upon this triumvirate of directors—Griffith, Ince and Sennett, whom we consider, and justly so, the three greatest directors in the world.

"Also, our list of stars, when announced, will show at a glance the same undoubted preeminence.

"The names of these stars, more than twenty-five in number, and remarkable in every instance, will be announced, together with a complete ctatement of our future activities and policies in next week's issue of Motion Picture News.

"You may simply say that after September 1 the New York Motion Picture Corporation will not release any of its pictures upon the Mutual program."

It is to be noted that a very busy and optimistic atmosphere pervades the New York Motion Picture offices. At the time of the visit of the Motion Picture News representative there were present De Wolf Hopper, Nat Goodwin and Eddie Foy.

"We have always believed in taking chances," said Mr. Kessel, "big chances. Our past success has been largely founded upon the big, progressive policy. Our future lines are laid out upon this same basis, much greater because the business is now much greater in scope."

As to the peraparation for these new and sweeping plans it may be recalled that Mr. Kessel has spent most of the past six months upon the Pacific coast, undoubtedly in close co-operation with Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett, and the big producing plants of the New York Motion Picture Corporation at Inceville and Hollywood.

National Secures Norma Talmadge for 5 Reelers

Vitagraph Actress, Who Gained Screen Reputation for Comedy and Dramatic Roles, Following a Successful Career of the Speaking Stage, Will Go to Coast After July 1

NORMA TALMADGE, whose five years with the Vitagraph company have established her as one of the foremost young, emotional, screen actresses, is leaving that company to join the National Film corporation producing forces at Los Angeles, Cal. Miss Talmadge will appear only in feature productions of five or more reels, which will be produced under the personal direction of Bruce Mitchell.

Norma Talmadge is the elder of the Talmadge sisters. She went to the Vitagraph stock company from the speaking stage when she was only sixteen. Her first picture was "A Dixie Mother." Since that time her biggest successes have been "Good-bye Summer," "Pillar of Flame" and "Janet of the Chorus." Her face always commands attention on the screen by its intensity. In addition, she has good cause to be called beautiful, for she is a remarkably pretty girl.

Miss Talmadge can play either comedy or dramatic roles. Of late she has been seen more often in dramatic roles, for young players who can really act are scarce and Miss Talmadge is one of the very best interpreters of gripping parts on the screen.

The National Film corporation plans to let Miss Talmadge do even bigger things in the future than she has in the past. She will appear in film versions of popular novels and plays, picturized by M. Coldewey. Rights have already been obtained to five plays and seven novels. Suitable vehicles will be selected for Miss Talmadge from subjects which have a reputation in themselves.

Miss Talmadge leaves for the Pacific coast soon after July first.

INCE IS PLANNING ANOTHER BIG SURPRISE

Speaking both literally and figuratively, Director General Thomas H. Ince has something up his sleeve. In the literal sense, he is still wearing splints as the result of the recent accident in which the bones of his shoulder were broken. Some day Mr. Ince is going to spring a great surprise. This is to be his master production.

It is a big mystery about the studio, the secrets of which are known only to Raymond B. West, who is Mr. Ince's right-hand man in the production of "something," and a certain successful publicity engineer in the exploitation of celluloid masterpieces. Furthermore, men of the industry are to be kept in the dark for months and months.

But here is a prediction; Mr. Ince must surely be making a multiple reel feature which is to eclipse its most recent masterpiec

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XXI

Exhibitor Voices Complaints Against Manufacturers—He Objects (With Good Reason) to Advance Payments for Features Which Are Delivered Too Late for Advertised Runs—Films, Worn and "Rainy," Are Often Shipped When They Should Not Leave Exchange Vaults

"AFTER reading several articles in your publication on 'Weak Spots in a Strong Business,' I am tempted to write you a few things I have observed in my experience extending over five years in the motion picture business," writes an exhibitor. "In these days of keen competition in which nine or ten reels are frequently shown at five cents admission it is high time some of the abuses long tolerated by exhibitors were eliminated, and to those who pay their bills and otherwise conduct their business along business lines, some consideration should be shown, even though their theatre be small, as is the case with me.

"In the first place, I wish to emphazise this, that with few exceptions the so-called stage stars are not the box office attractions as some producers seem to think. The players most popular today are the actors and actresses long associated with the regular program companies, and, to my mind, the best way to popularize any star is to give him a good director, many good stories, and release such films on a regular program.

"After such popularity has been gained among the picture fans—who, by the way, have seldom heard of many of the stage stars now appearing in feature pictures—same can be coined into big dividends for the company who backs the plan.

"Another thing that retards the advancement of the industry is, a lack of an efficient credit bureau. Every exhibitor today is a business man or he cannot remain long in the business. Why can't the leading exchanges and producers establish a credit bureau which will eliminate a forced advance payment for the use of service whether on a daily or a weekly basis?

"The advance payment for service has several drawbacks.

Credit Due Theatre Managers

"The exhibitors are entitled to credit. We have a bank account through which our financial standing can be ascertained. A great many exhibitors have ratings with business agencies which are equivalent to bank references. Suppose, for the sake of an argument, service is paid for in advance and the films booked do not arrive in time, thereby necessitating a change in program or the purchase of an additional show until such arrival.

"The exchange refused to make good because of the late shipment which has caused considerable monetary loss, besides loss to the reputation of the house, claiming that the man using service ahead of you is to blame. There is little justice in this claim, but one is forced to accept the inevitable and swallow the loss besides a considerable amount of inconvenience.

"A word regarding late shipments which frequently happens in all parts of the United States; at present the principal reason for such is the daily change which is still necessary in the smaller cities and the tardiness of some exhibitors.

"Regarding the latter, if some are found who persist in holding up shows they should be cut off without service until they can see that others have rights besides themselves. Very few exhibitors ever think of buying labels to facilitate the handling of film boxes, but I am glad to say, I have noticed an improvement along this line.

"Not long ago I advertised a five-reel feature with a star of big drawing power, and in order to close at the usual hour I stated that I would open at 9:30 a. m., usually at 10 a. m. The picture was used in Buffalo eight hours away by train the day before and did not arrive until 2 p. m. I lost four and a half hours on this picture, at least four hundred ten-cent admissions, and as many people were brought to the theatre only to be disappointed, turning away from the box office in disgust. This has not only happened to me but to many others as well. It is time the big men awoke to the dangers of their methods.

Leaving the Exhibitor in the Lurch

"If there is anything worse to an exhibitor than to be left without a show which has been heavily advertised in advance, I would like to know it. In the case mentioned, I was forced to spend three dollars in telephone charges, buy another subject for the day, which was used until 2 p. m., and could only charge five cents until the feature arrived, and at that I paid for it in advance.

"Of course, I stopped payment on the check, which is still in the hands of the exchange manager. I hope to arrive at a peaceful settlement of the dispute, but there is no doubt that the advance payment is a wrong system, and once it is done away with the exchanges will note an improvement in business.

"Besides, if we are not to be trusted for a day or week's rental of film service, why trust us with the film which is worth a thousand times more than the mere rental price.

"Another abuse—in making titles, subtitles and letters in films the manufacturers should increased the length so that every one in the audience can read them. Frequently an important letter or announcement will show on the screen and only a small part of the audience can catch it because of insufficient length.

"Oftentimes the enjoyment of an entire feature is spoiled in this way and the exhibitors are helpless to remedy the abuse. If operators cut the film it is up to the exchanges to find out who does this, and cancel service until such abuse is remedied.

Abuses of Feature Exchanges

"On the part of the big producers who are continually vying with each other on the protection given their customers, I wonder how many endeavor to ascertain the truth in the matter. Recently I showed a feature at ten cents matinee and twenty cents at night.

"I paid a high price for the picture on account of first run. A few days later the same picture was booked in one of the opposition houses and the admission price for the run was only five cents. The public do not know that the first run house had to pay twice as much for first run as the second run house. This abuse is one of the main faults of the feature exchange.

"Another abuse is the receipt of film in bad condition. If by chance a booking is requested by an exhibitor on a picture and the same is in bad condition, such condition should be reported to the exhibitor and the booking cancelled. No theatre catering to an intelligent audience can show scratched or worn out film to that audience.

"No exchange should rent such film, knowing the condition to be bad. Of course, if the exhibitor pays a nominal rental he cannot expect the best in pictures. I speak, of course, of the high price feature or of the higher rental films.

"Now comes the last and worst abuse, or rather the lack of aid, on the part of the exchange or manufacturers' co-operation in advertising helps and general knowledge of what is needed by the exhibitor. This can be better illustrated by the following: Recently I booked a fine picture which has failed in other theatres.

"The reason—the name was such a jaw breaker—none could pronounce it. Besides the six-sheet posters showed a war scene which in the picture only amounted to an incident to explain the thread of the story and in reality had no significance in the story.

Want More Help

"This poster war scene lost business for all houses in the smaller cities because the public is tired of viewing war pictures. Thinking the picture a war story, they walked away and did not even waste time to find out the worth of the picture. In a way, you cannot blame anyone for so doing.

"This particular film is a fine drama, but as I say, it does not get the business because of the name and the poster made for it. Manufacturers in every line of business spend large amounts of money in advertising for use of the retail merchant. How many film manufacturers even allow an exhibitor to borrow a cut when he is perfectly willing to pay for newspaper or other advertising, which ultimately helps both himself and the manufacturer.

"I cannot understand the density of these publicity departments. Every avenue of help to get business is closed unless you pay in stamps in advance for the smallest cut or other advertising help, which out of courtesy should be loaned free of charge.

"Waterman's fountain pens are widely advertised with window displays which cost the Waterman company thousands of dollars annually. It must pay or the Waterman company would not keep the plan in operation. Of course I only cite this firm for example. Wake up, Mr. Manufacturer, and help us to get business, and do not look for the small payment of cuts in advance.

Mailing Cuts Leisurely

"To illustrate the above, I will tell you of my experience with one of the old line companies. I wrote in for several cuts and was refused in a letter asking for a check for $2.75 in payment of same. Needing some badly, I mailed the check at once. About two weeks later I was still waiting for the cuts. I had occasion to go to New York and called up the publicity agent and he knew nothing of my letter or check. A few days later he found it and mailed the cuts. I waited in all about three weeks for these cuts, and when they arrived it was too late, as I had used the picture for which they were intended.

"I have written you the above to let you know a small exhibitor's end of the business as he sees it. Help correct these faults and abuses and you will be doing this great wonderful industry a big service. 'He profits most who serves best'"

Cincinnati May Affiliate with Chamber of Commerce

Move Will Mean Recognition of Screen Amusement Enterprises as on Same Ground as Other Business Interests, and Point Out Way for Leagues Elsewhere

Special to Motion Picture News

Cincinnati, O., June 23.

ONE of the most important alliances in the history of the motion picture business in Cincinnati, from the exhibitor's viewpoint, is now being projected in the efforts of a number of prominent exhibitors to affiliate the local exhibitors' league with the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

The proposition was made by officials of the commercial organization during a membership campaign now in progress in which every line of business is sought to have representation in the body. Letters were sent out to Fred L. Emmert, president of the Cincinnati Exhibitors' League, and other prominent exhibitors several weeks ago with the result that the question was taken up and discussed.

From the league the matter went to the various smaller organizations of exhibitors, through which advantageous film bookings are made, and the conclusion was reached that representation of the motion picture business in the Chamber of Commerce would be advantageous to the business. While the question was discussed, many of the exhibitors were called in conference with officials of the Chamber of Commerce and a plan was put forward whereby it was proposed that if fifty members of the league would join the commercial body, the league might be regarded as part of the Chamber of Commerce, thus enabling it to work for legislative reforms to the advantage of the business through the powerful merchants' organization and still retain its individual integrity.

Viewed in this light the matter gave a still more favorable impression to the exhibitors, and Mr. Emmert appointed the following members of the league, a committee to sound sentiment on the proposition: A. G. Hettesheimer, the Orpheum; John Weinig, Western Hills Amusement Company; Fred L. Emmert, the Marvel theatre; C. K. Howard, the Forest theatre, and Charles Weigel, the Alhambra theatre.

The plan for affiliating with the Chamber of Commerce was all the more favorably received because it came at a time when dissatisfaction was being expressed by some members of the league regarding the local by-laws. Many exhibitors remained out of the organization because they feared to be tied up by rules that they believed would limit their business affairs and force them in strict compliance with the rules of the organization to do some things that would not be in keeping with their business judgment.

These laws were modified, but many of the larger exhibitors were still considering a plan to form a new organization of what they termed a "more substantial" nature. This proposed organization was to be formed for the purpose of warding off legislation unfavorable to the interests of the business and to lessen the possibility of municipal interference in censoring.

The dues were to be made heavy enough to put aside a fund that would be sufficient to carry out an extensive campaign for improving local conditions. When the proposition to affiliate with the Chamber of Commerce was made, these exhibitors saw that by such an alliance the exhibitors would command a great prestige by reason of the connection and through the powerful business organization of the city; would be able to wield a tremendous influence in the matter of legislation and in civic affairs. No definite action has yet been taken, but it is regarded as practically certain that the plan will be carried out. It virtually means that the exhibitors will have to be members of both organizations and thus will have to pay double dues:

"But that should be the least consideration," said Charles Weigel. "It is my opinion that the exhibitors in the past have been penny wise and pound foolish. I am heartily in favor of this affiliation. This opens the way to a new plan for strengthening organizations of motion picture men. If the alliance can be made successfully in Cincinnati, why can it not be done in other cities. We will thus be on even ground with the other business interests of the country and our business will be better understood by the business men."

Chinese Magnate Erects Theatre in Milwaukee

Millionaire Oriental Plans Decoration of 450 House with Material Imported from China, and Will Charge from 25 Cents to Dollar Admission

Special to Motion Picture News

Milwaukee, Wis., June 23.

MILWAUKEE is experiencing its annual summer building boom of motion picture theatres. No less than two new down town houses are now in the process of erection while rumors fly thick and fast regarding others that are to be erected. The first of the new houses to open will undoubtedly be the Toy Theatre, which is expected to be completed September 1. As exclusively reported in the News some months ago, this theatre will be the first Chinese photoplay theatre in the country.

Charles Toy, millionaire Chinese importer, is erecting the house which will seat 450 people. The decorative scheme will be of a highly Oriental flavor, Mr. Toy importing most of the decorations direct from China. It is his intention to run nothing but the highest class of photoplay productions of ten or more parts whenever possible. But two shows will be given daily.

The Merrill building theatre is the other house now under construction. It will not be completed until late in the fall and will seat well over a thousand people. Nothing definite has as yet been learned regarding the policy of the house though it is expected that it will run a straight program at ten cents.

Architect F. W. Andree, of this city, is erecting a theatre and office building between Park and Bellview avenue for Julius Straus. The building is to be 90 x 122 feet and will seat about eight hundred.

George T. Smith, of Ellsworth, Wisconsin, is contemplating the erection of a moving picture theatre in that city. Up-to-date he has let no contracts for the work.

ROTHACKER WILL LEAVE ON WESTERN TOUR

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Industrial Moving Picture company, leaves next week for a combined business and pleasure trip through the west.

He will first go to Venice, Cal., where his wife and daughter have been for the last few months. He intends to make a thorough visit to the studios around Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, and then after viewing the Industrial Moving Picture Company's exhibits at the San Francisco Fair, he will make an extended tour of the larger western cities.

CAN'T DO BUSINESS WITHOUT THE "NEWS."

A. H. McDonald, of the Rex Theatre, Eugene, Ore., while in Portland this week, told a representative of the Motion Picture News that he could not do business without the Motion Picture News, and further stated that he considered it one of the fairest film journals in the field today.

Final Arrangements for Convention Completed

Chairman Cory Puts the Finishing Touches on the Work of the Committee in Charge of Preliminary Matters, and San Francisco Is Ready to Welcome Visiting Exhibitors in Accordance with the Traditions of Hospitality of "Native Sons of the Golden West"

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, June 21.

THE final arrangements are now being completed by the committee for the national convention to be held in San Francisco July 13 to 16. Chairman M. E. Cory has just returned from Los Angeles after having completed arrangements for the attendance of most of the prominent screen favorites at the grand ball, which closes the convention, Friday night, July 16.

The attendance of the following players is definitely assured: Blanche Sweet and Carlyle Blackwell of the Lasky company; House Peters, William Hart, Bessie Barriscale and Marguerite Thompson of the New York Motion; William Duncan, Myrtle Gonzales, of the Vitagraph; Mary Alden, Mae Marsh, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, of the Majestic; Kathlyn Williams and Tom Santchi, of Selig; Charles Chaplin, of Essanay; Ruth Roland and Thomas Allen Rector, of Balboa. This couple will be featured in exhibition dancing.

Ford Sterling, Owen Moore and Mabel Normand, of Keystone; Beatrice Michelena, of the California Motion Picture;

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

Francis Ford, and Grace Cunard, Bob Leonard and Ella Hall, Herbert Rawlinson, and Anna Little, Cleo Madison, Al. Christy and the entire Harrigan company, from the Universal.

Speeches by Laemmle and Selig

In addition to the above stars, Mr. Lasky is trying to induce Geraldine Farrar to attend and has placed a private car at her disposal for the trip if she will consent to make it.

D. W. Griffith, the world's famous director, has consented to address the exhibitors during one of the business sessions of the convention.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, will be at the convention the entire week and will make an address at one of the business sessions.

Col. W. N. Selig will also be in attendance and give everybody some good, fatherly advice. Col. Selig plans to make the trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco to meet the Selig special and will return to Los Angeles immediately after the close of the convention. It is planned for the entire party to come to Los Angeles and spend several days in visiting the large studios. Elaborate plans are being made for entertaining the visitors. At the Selig plant, after inspecting the zoo, a luncheon is to be served, followed by a dance in the large open air dancing pavilion. Universal is planning to film a spectacular scene, and also give the visitors a chance to watch Nat Goodwin and Director Otis Turner, producing the Universal feature. Visits will also be made to the Majestic and Ince studios.

Bushman Day at Exposition

The administration committee of the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco has announced Francis X. Bushman day July 15, with the noted star and his leading woman, Marguerite Snow, as the special guests of honor, with special functions and awards in honor of the event.

The following telegram from Sol Lesser, California, representative of the Metro Pictures corporation, outlines the affair:

Richard A. Rowland,
Metro Square,
42nd St & B'way,
New York City.

Have received notice from exposition committee July 15 to be Metro day with Bushman and Snow guests of honor. Entire fair given over to us for day. Special award of gold medal to Bushman and Snow following enactment of silent dramatic piece in front of administration building. Entire evening devoted to fireworks display and Bushman's likeness to be burned in set piece fifty feet high. Metro will be luncheon hosts to all photoplayers and exhibitors attending. Am forwarding official document from exposition officials.

SOL L. LESSER.

Harry Reichenbach, of the Metro forces will leave New York for San Francisco July 2, accompanied by Mrs. Reichenbach and a number of Metro stars and will take with him the artistic display Metro will use at the motion picture convention.

Francis X. Bushman, who is now at work at the Quality-Metro studio, Los Angeles, will arrive at San Francisco about July 10 and when he gets off the train he will be the most surprised man in the world for the Metro company will plaster coast cities with twenty-four sheet pictorial paper announcing July 15 as Bushman Day and inviting the people to witness the enactment of a thrilling silent drama.

Mr. Bushman and Miss Snow will be accompanied to San Francisco by Willard Bauman, the director, Fred J. Balshofer and Charles "Feature" Abrams. The dramatic document Bushman will use for his public performance will be a powerful one act playlet from the pen of Robert W. Service, who is responsible for "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," "My Madonna" and "The Spell of the Yukon," and "Through the Door," which was written by Mr. Service for the late Clara Bloodgood. Mr. Bushman will be supported by the Quality Pictures players.

MARGUERITE SNOW

Fireworks Display

For the firework display General Manager Rowland of the Metro company, has completed arrangements with the directors of the Consolidated Fireworks company for the construction of a set piece fifty feet in height, with as near a likeness of Mr. Bushman and Miss Snow as it is possible to arrange.

By telegraph, Harry Reichenbach has arranged for two pages in one of the big San Francisco dailies in which the life story of Bushman and Snow will be published, and in another, "Through the Door" will be run serially for a week previous to the date of its enactment.

The Metro party will leave New York for San Francisco on the exhibitors' special, arranged for by the convention committee at the time of Mr. Cory's visit here. This will undoubtedly be the greatest gathering of motion picture people in the business and if the exhibitors throughout the country, are brought to the full realization of the importance of the event, many of them will undoubtedly make a special effort to attend, and a large attendance is all that is needed to assure success.

The floor space has all been contracted for and the committee is now trying to arrange additional space for those who neglected the matter until the last minute. A great many concerns have also doubled the space originally contracted for. The Paramount people will use four booths instead of one. One booth being used by the Paramount exchange and one by each of the three Paramount producing companies. Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players is now in San Francisco, conferring with Mr. Webber and Mr. Cory regarding the Paramount exhibit.

Governor Johnson has consented to make the welcoming address at the opening session of the convention. The governor and Mayor Rolph will both be present at the dance and officiate in leading the grand march and introducing the screen favorites. The day following the close of the convention is Liberty Bell Day at the Panama-Pacific exposition. The players will be guests of the exposition company on this date, and participate in the ceremonies being arranged.

Special Train Schedule Not Settled

It has been found impossible to arrange the special trains as originally contemplated, owing to the fact that a great many of the exhibitors from the East are leaving ahead of time and making various stops en route. Also the people having charge of the exhibits for the various companies have found it necessary to arrive in San Francisco several days in advance of the opening date. The same condition applies to those coming from Los Angeles.

The first contingent comprising representatives of the press and the publicity men of the various studios will leave Los Angeles in a special car Sunday night, arriving in San Francisco Monday morning, July 12.

The San Diego and Los Angeles exhibitors will leave in two special cars the following night, while the actors and actresses will leave Thursday night. A great many others, in addition to the artists above mentioned, have expressed their intention of attending the convention during the last day or two, and taking in the dance. In fact, Joe Brandt says it seems they had just as well close up Universal City entirely and let everyone go.

Hotel Manx has been selected as the official headquarters and those expecting to attend the convention are urged to write or wire the committee immediately regarding the desired reservations.

At Los Angeles the party will be quartered in the Hayward and Angelus.

SILENT AND SPOKEN DRAMA WILL GO HAND IN HAND

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope company, Kathlyn Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Tyrone Power and their little son, motored recently from Los Angeles to Riverside, California.

Mr. Selig discussed the future of the motion pictures with interviewers. He believes that the spoken and the silent drama will more and more work hand in hand, each being benefitted by the other.

Paramount Staff Tenders Dinner to Hodkinson

Event Takes Place at Hotel Claridge, New York, Night Before President of Corporation Departs for Six Weeks' Tour of Country

ON the eve of departure on a six weeks' tour of the country, W. W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, was tendered a surprise dinner by the members of the Paramount staff at the Hotel Claridge, New York City, on Friday, June 18. The dinner was an informal, family affair, the spontaneous expression by the staff of the esteem in which they hold their chief.

THE PARAMOUNT ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF MR. HODKINSON—"BEFORE"—

A neat menu card, with "Build" blazoned across the front, was at each plate. Opening it the diners found the following foreword:

"After years of thought and unremitting labor, W. W. Hodkinson, founder of the Paramount corporation, and originator of the Paramount idea, is tonight with those whom he has taken into the Paramount fold.

"If they have been of service to him in the past they are glad. They realize that his has been by far the greatest burden.

"Here, tonight, they gather to wish him bon voyage, to assure him that nothing is too much for him to ask of them that they may take their share of the load—it matters not how heavy it may be.

"The men are together. They are strong for each other and for Paramount. They are willing to work any number of hours for any number of days to spread the gospel of Paramount throughout the length and breadth of the United States, and from one side of the world to the other.

"A pleasant trip and a safe return—the staff."

—AND "AFTER"

Inside the menu were printed good natured caricatures, both in rhyme and verse, of the members of the staff, headed by Mr. Hodkinson himself. The others were: Jack Eaton, J. H. MacFarland, Louis Loeb, George M. Welty, Raymond Pawley, Jane Stannard Johnson, T. S. Barrett, J. H. MacPhee, Tarleton Winchester, George R. Meeker, Frank D. Sniffen and Howard Spaulding.

125 Horsley Animals Will Caper in MinAs by July 1

Bostock Trainers, Under General Direction of Bonavita, While Waiting for Builders to Put Last Touches to Arena for Camera Performances, Rehearse Their Charges

THE finishing touches on the big arena wherein the Bostock animal players, owned by David Horsley, will pose for MinA pictures, are being applied rapidly, and it is expected that by July 1 work will be started on the first of these subjects.

Meanwhile the Bostock trainers are perfecting the pets for their camera debut. Captain Bonavita, with his assistants, has been busy for three months and has his charges working with the precision of veteran players.

The actors will work in the open with the animals. There will be no bars of cages or a dividing line of any kind between the two species of performers. The full limit of realism will thus be secured and an effort obtained which will be thrilling in the extreme.

Precautionary measures have been taken by Mr. Horsley, who designed the arena, by providing a means of escape for the actors, but to which the animals do not have access.

In these pictures the entire Bostock group, comprising one hundred and twenty-five specimens of animal life, will be used.

OFFICIAL GERMAN WAR FILMS ARRIVE FOR "STAATS ZEITUNG"

The official war film department of the New York "Staats Zeitung" has received a number of films direct from the front. These pictures have been turned over to the "Staats Zeitung" by the German government, but are not in any sense of the word German propaganda.

Several prints were lost in transit, making those that did arrive particularly valuable. This is a new departure for newspapers. The films will be booked direct.

VETERANS FROM SOLDIERS' HOME PARADE FOR MANAGER

"THE Birth of a Nation" began its seventeenth week at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, June 21, and has been enjoying good business during the week. It is very probable this subject will be continued there for several weeks, as the attendance has been very satisfactory to the management.

OLD SOLDIERS' PARADE TO CLUNE'S AUDITORIUM, LOS ANGELES

Manager Lloyd Brown recently secured considerable advertising for the picture by inviting the six hundred veterans at the Federal Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle to attend the showing of the picture as his guests. By arrangement with a traction company he secured transportation at very low rates, and he acted as host for the old soldiers from the time they left their home until they returned there.

The event was slightly marred by an unusual shower at the time of the arrival of the special cars at Los Angeles. However, the soldiers' home band and the veterans paraded through the streets from the interurban station to the theatre.

ADVERTISING IN LOCAL DAILIES ON LARGE SCALE

HARRY MORY, manager of the Midget, and Julius Leopold, manager of the Mecca, at Dayton, Ohio, have taken a lead in newspaper advertising which should be seriously considered by the management of other theatres in Dayton and elsewhere.

An illustrated write-up, carried by two pages of advertising, appears on the outside back cover of the West Side News, a magazine section of the Dayton "Sunday News," and gives an interesting description of the two houses.

The advertising of screen theatres on this scale cannot fail to produce results gratifying to any management undertaking a publicity campaign of this magnitude.

The article describing the theatres and their attractions was longer and illustrated with more effective half-tones than is customary with the majority of publicity notices for "legitimate" houses in daily newspapers. The importance of motion picture theatres created in the mind of the average reader by advertising of this character is inestimable exhibitors all acknowledge.

FILMS SHOWING HIGH SCHOOL BOYS POPULAR IN BOSTON

FROM Keith's Boston theatre "regatta week," exhibitors may be able to grasp a helpful hint. Annually the schoolboy crews race on the Charles river for the Keith trophy. This year the Dadum company, of Boston, furnished films of the high school boys coming from their several schools, and of their crews on the river.

The lobbies of the theatre were thickly hung with school pennants, and the swelling of the receipts, with the frequent cheering during the showing of the school films at each performance, proved the worth of the scheme.

BOOKSELLERS' DISPLAYS HELP PICTURES

A. K. PAY, manager of the Colonial theatre at Sioux Falls, S. D., noticed that many of the plays he was giving on his World Film Days were previously in book form. He arranged with the Cataract Book company to offer on sale, a week in advance, the books from which the plays were taken.

Large window displays were used, along with plenty of advertising space in the daily papers. In the windows were displays of the books, at bargain rates, with pictures, lithographs and photographs. In return Mr. Pay runs a slide on his screen to help advertise the sale of books.

The plan, which Mr. Pay declares is a success, has several direct results. People, after reading the books, become interested in the picture. It is an ideal advertising scheme for the motion picture, as well as for the book store.

ALL KINDS OF PUBLICITY FOUND TO BE SERVICEABLE

THE attention of the Middle West has been called to the advertising of the Empress, Airdome, Family, Casino, Palace and Garden theatres of Des Moines, Ia.

These houses, besides using pages of advertisements in the newspapers, employ wagons, bands and billboard service to keep the public informed of what they are showing. The public responds with full houses, is the report.

Mack Sennett, managing director of the Keystone Film company, has completed the first picture in which Raymond Hitchcock appears, and it will be released within a few weeks under the title of "The Stolen Magic." Mr. Sennett has personally directed the entire picture and has played an important role as well. Miss Mabel Normand, Owen Moore, Mrs. Davenport and other famous Keystone players are in the cast and the offering will be an important event for exhibitors of Keystone two-reelers.

Coming Fox Releases Make Noteworthy Quartet

"Should a Mother Tell?" "Doctor Rameau," "Lady Audley's Secret" and "Princess Romanoff," Well Cast and Produced with Care, Are Capable of Strong Appeal to Public

WILLIAM FOX announces that the next four releases of the Fox corporation will be as noteworthy in every way as those already shown by his company. Mr. Fox advises exhibitors to prepare for a record-breaking business with a quartette of photoplays, headed by "Should a Mother Tell?" in which Betty Nansen is starred, supported by a company including Stuart Holmes, Arthur Hoops, Jean Sothern and Claire Whitney. The play was written by Rex Ingram especially for Miss Nansen's talents, and was directed by J. Gordon Edwards.

The second release of the near future is "Doctor Rameau," by George Ohnet, with Frederick Perry, late star with "On Trial," who makes his screen debut in this drama, and a cast which is notable in the annals of photodramatic history for its unusual strength and excellent balance. Associated with Mr. Perry, in "Doctor Rameau," are Dorothy Bernard, Stuart Holmes, George Allison, Jean Sothern and Edith Hallor. Will S. Davis directs.

Just a little bigger and stronger than any part she has yet portrayed upon the screen, is the role which Theda Bara, last seen in "The Devil's Daughter," enacts in "Lady Audley's Secret," the third of the coming Fox productions. The book and the play are known wherever there are civilized beings. The greatest work of Miss M. E. Braddon, "Lady Audley's Secret" has been translated into every language of the globe. Miss Bara plays the role of Helen Davennent, afterward the bride of Sir Michael Audley. When her first husband unexpectedly returns, she rids herself of him by a crime which shadows and affects the lives of all concerned. Miss Bara is supoprted by Clifford Bruce, William Riley Hatch, Stephen Gratten, Warner Richmond, and others equally eminent. Twenty-five of the most beautiful girls of the Broadway stage also appear in "Lady Audley's Secret." The picture is directed by Marshall Farnum.

Frank Powell, director of "A Fool There Was," "Children of the Ghetto," "The Devil's Daughter," is producing "The Sorceress," by Victorien Sardou, author of "Princess Romanoff." The star of this drama, which excels in thrilling situations and great dramatic climaxes is Nance O'Neil. The part she enacts in "The Sorceress" is one that is eminently fitted to Miss O'Neil's superb tragic genius.

In support of Miss O'Neil, a cast containing many famous names has been engaged. Among the noted artists appearing in "The Sorceress" are Alfred Hickman, creator of Little Billy in Trilby, and a Broadway actor of stirling reputation, Macy Harlan, equally well known in his profession, Stuart Holmes, Ada Sherman, Ada Nevill, Jane Miller and Robert Wayne.

Mr. Fox declares, without reservation, that "Should a Mother Tell?" "Doctor Rameau," "Lady Audley's Secret" and "The Sorceress" are the greatest and strongest releases that have yet appeared under the brand of the Fox Film corporation.

Vitagraph Forces in Santa Monica May Be Increased

Manager Smith Needs Stage Enlarged to Accommodate Six Larger Sets at Once—Director Sturgeon Completes South Sea Drama

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, June 21.

THE present quarters of the Vitagraph company at Santa Monica are inadequate, and it is the desire of Manager Smith that he secure sufficient room so that a stage large enough to accommodate six large sets at one time can be built. This possibly means that the western producing staff may be increased, to what extent is as yet undecided.

The organization now consists of three directors and players. Furthermore, the conditions for filming at Santa Monica during the past several months have been very satisfactory because of fogs, which do not rise until late in the morning, thus causing considerable loss to the producing companies.

All three companies at the Vitagraph studio are now engaged in making two-reel subjects, having just completed one three-reel, one two-reel for the General program, and a four reel for the V-L-S-E program.

"The Lorelei Madonna" is the title of a South Sea Island drama made by Director R. S. Sturgeon.

"The Barrier of Prejudice" in two reels, featuring Ann Shafer and Jack Weatherby, is a drama, the plot of which evolves about the attempts of a society woman to wean her son away from the girl of his choice whom he met at a fishing village, where twenty years before she had floated ashore from a wreck clasped in the arms of her dead mother. The young man's mother is successful for a time, but the couple are finally reunited because of the father's love for their baby.

The direction of this was in charge of David Smith.

The V-L-S-E subject is one of the stories submitted in the recent thousand dollar contest. The title is "Troubled Waters," and MacLeod is the author. Alfred Vosbert and Myrtle Gonzales appear in the leading roles of actor and actress, who are wedded following a pretty romance which began when the actress was rescued from peril by the man years before when he was an unsophisticated country boy. In crossing the ocean their ship is wrecked, and they float to a desert island. There they remain for months and learn the simple life, happy and contented with their child born there. Finally they are rescued, and upon their return to their native land they are besieged with offers from managers, but finally they realize the emptyness of the life of make-believe, and seek the simple life in the country. The direction of this production was in charge of Ulysses Davis.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 20.

THE Ideal Feature company is now located at its new home at the Masterpiece studio on Gordon street, and last week took up the first production there. This is an adaptation from the Arthur Stringer story, "The Secret Agent," dealing with the work of the United States secret service officers who decoy a pair of international criminals by the use of artificial gems.

In this subject there is a chase around the world, and for the selection of scenes for this, the location man has been busy for the past week. A part of the exterior scenes were made at San Francisco. The subject will be completed in two reels.

The Ideal Features will soon have three companies at work at all times. As was recently announced, Manager Robert Levy will direct one company, but no statement has been given out as to who the other directors will be.

A two reel comedy introducing a number of photographic novelties has just been completed by the Fred Hornby National company. The title of this is "The Bachelor's Dream," featuring Russ Powell and Rena Rogers, supported by Constance Johnson, Will Sieter, Raymond Moore, Kathrine Griffith, and Mrs. C. I. Hitchcock.

The story deals with a bachelor who did not believe in the Darwinian theory, but was brought to realize the correctness of the same in an unusual manner. The subject will abound with double exposure work perfected by Gus Peterson, the cameraman. In a number of scenes United States torpedo boats are used.

Members of "The Marriage of Kitty" producing company of the Lasky company were at San Francisco last week where dock scenes representing the New York Harbor are being made. Recently when the Lasky company visited San Francisco, Kenneth McGaffey, in charge of the publicity department, discovered a view which makes it possible to secure pictures of buildings closely resembling the Woolworth and Singer buildings in New York. Those in the company at San Francisco are Director George Melford, Cleo Ridgley, Jack Dean, Tom Frohman and Percy Hilburn.

Filming "Black Birds"

Another Lasky company to go to San Francisco is that filming "Black Birds," under the direction of J. P. McGowan. Last week they were making interior and exterior scenes at Beverly Hills hotel just out of Los Angeles, and upon the completion of this they went north. Laura Hope Crews is featured in this, supported by Tom Meighan Anita King and Ray Hatton.

Here's a new story Jessie L. Lasky is telling. Exterior and interior sets representing a New York Bowery bar were recently completed at the studio for use in one of the big productions. Gus Schoot, property man for the enclosed studio, wandered about the grounds and found the bar.

He gave it the "once over" and a few minutes later when he saw Mr. Lasky, he told this owner of the company that he greatly appreciated the installation of a bar on the grounds, and he knew that all the other boys would, but he added, "I don't think it will ever pay.'

Margaret Engeline, "legitimate" stage star, lately featured in "Beverly's Balance" has been added to the stock company of the Lasky producing force and will play leads.

Motion picture rights have been secured by the Universal company on "Colorado," the Augustus Thomas play, and scenario for this is now being prepared by Harvey Gates, and the film version will feature Hobart Bosworth. At the present time Mr. Bosworth is appearing as the actor in "The Little Brother of the Rich," which will be completed within the next week.

The Number One Nestorite company is just completing "Little Egypt Malone," with Lee Moran in the name part, that of an Oriental dancer, and Eddie Lyons as the front platform barker. The story brings out the fact that two college boys, sons of the idle rich, spend all their money in entertaining chorus girls, and their fathers refuse to come through with additional coin for them to return home for their vacation. The two boys take over a bankrupt "hutch" show and get the money. Then their sweethearts learning of their want for funds, induce the fathers to come through. The result is the money from home and the box office receipts make them "tremendously" rich.

Laura Oakley in Funny Nestor

Another Nestor of the week is that made by Director Horace Davy, "The Tale of His Pants." Here Laura Oakley as the old maid induces the wealthy new arrival at the tank down to fall for her charms, when he sits down in a platter of taffy at a church sociable, rips out the seat of his trousers, and she helps him out of the predicament by the aid of a needle and thread. Others in the cast are Billie Rhodes, Neil Burns, Harry Rattenbury, and Lee Moran as the bachelor.

The Robert Leonard Gold Seal company is completing the two reel subject, "Heritage," which deals with the attitude of the wealthy class with regard to people of the slums, the wealthy being of the opinion that the poorer people cannot accustom themselves to the ways of sophisticated society. In this Ella Hall appears as the girl of the slums wedded to the son of the rich. He fails to give her half a chance to become accustomed to the new life before he abandons her. Her old admirer of the slums, Big Bill, played by Robert Leonard, learning of this, by force induces

The cast for the Bosworth-Turner production of "The Little Brother of the Rich" has been announced, and is as follows: Tom Meighan, playing the name role; Hobart Bosworth, that of the actor; Jane Novak, the small town sweetheart of the Little Brother, and others are: Maude George, William Worthington, Walter Belasco, and Jane Bernoudy.

"According to Value" is a two reel subject for the Laemmle brand from a story and scenario by Harvey Gates and Frank Lloyd, dealing with the attempt of a broker, who employs an ex-convict as clerk and then persuades him to steal a number of bonds left in care of the broker. The theft is discovered by the daughter of the broker when she is leaving the house to elope with the brother of the ex-convict who is confidential clerk for the broker. The girl secures a revolver and shoots the supposed burglar just as his brother arrives. The match is broken off temporarily but all ends happily when the broker confesses. Those in the cast are: M. K. Wilson, Frank Lloyd, Marc Robbins, and Vera Sisson.

Languid City People Flee to Woods

How two city young people who came to hate their idle life found happiness when they were attempting to live as country people is brought out in "Where Happiness Dwells." The man poses as a woodsman, the woman as an artist in search of good scenes. By accident they meet, and a pretty romance follows. Scenario is by Ben Cohn, and the production is in charge of Burton King, and the leading parts are taken by Edward Sloman and Adele Lane.

The 101 Bison company has completed another two reel jungle, entitled "The Daughter of the Jungle," featuring Marie Walcamp. For big punches in this, Rex de Roselli permitted one of the big lions at the Universal zoo to jump on him. Later a leopard alighted on his back, and there are numerous other thrilling scenes.

Elsie Jane Wilson, "legitimate" stage and photoplay star, has become leading woman for the Joseph De Grasse Powers brand company, and will make her initial appearance under the revolving globe brand in "Bound on the Wheel." This is a story of slum life in which the leading woman marries the son of the family living in the tenement below for the sole purpose of trying to make a man of him.

In this she fails, but by accident she is saved from becoming his tool in the robbing of a friend of her parents family. Lule Warrington appears as the girl's mother, and Lon Chaney as the husband. The story is by Julus Firthman.

"The Violin" is the title of another character sketch featuring Murdock McQuarrie as the old musician who recovers his favorite violin which he pawns in order to secure medical aid for his granddaughter, who is ill. The scenario is by H. G. Stafford.

Worthington Company in "Gopher"

The William Worthington company is making a drama which has a decidedly distinctive plot. The title of this is "The Gopher" and is from a scenario by Harvey Gates. The name Gopher is given to a doctor who goes west to a mining district, where he lives in a cave that he may have absolute quiet and other proper conditions for the successful perfection of a device to register the thoughts of the sub-conscious mind.

By this instrument, when it is completed, he is successful in proving the guilt of the men who broke up his home and later commit numerous crimes. Herbert Rawlinson appears in the role of the doctor and Anna Little as his wife.

The latest Alan Curtis Joker is entitled "A Dip in the Water," in which Max Asher as Schultz, the wife hunter, has many unpleasant experiences when he goes bathing in a secluded spot, and a picnic party of girls steal his clothes, just at a time when the widow he has been trying to win comes to fill an engagement with him for a pleasure ride on the sea. Others in the cast are Gale Henry, William Franey, Wilborn Moranti, Lillian Peacock and Arthur Moon.

Director William Christie Cabanne, who is now making the final scenes for the Mutual Master-Picture, "The Martyrs of the Alamo," will next take up the filming of "In Old Mexico," a thousand-foot subject which deals with a case of mistaken identity, which nearly results in the death of a girl who closely resembles her married sister. The husband not being acquainted with the sister, believes her to be his wife, courted by another man. The cast includes: Sam De Grasse, Ora Carewe, Evelyn Carewe, Walter Long and Alfred Paget.

A good fortune of a pair of vaudeville players who resort to street faking in a rural town by the use of the old shell game forms the plot for the Reliance subject, "The Healers," a production of which was begun last week under the direction of Francis Powers. The players of this subject are Billie West, Bert Hadley, Violet Wilkey, Kate Toncray, George Beranger, and William De Vaull.

The Juvenile Majestic company is just completing a burlesque put on by children of a magician's act they have seen at the theatre. In addition to the regular child players of this company, Jennie Lee, character actress, is playing as the cook, Vera Lewis as the boy's mother, and Jack Hull as his father.

Next this company will take up the filming of "A Ten-Cent Adventure" from scenario by Anita Loos, wherein George Stone borrows ten cents from the banker in order that he may show the banker's daughter the time of her life.

George proves to be a regular business man, returning the money on the day it is due—the end of a week to establish his credit and himself in the good graces of the man of wealth. In this Richard Cummings appears as the banker and Carmen De Rue as his four-year-old daughter. Both of these productions are filmed under the direction of S. A. and C. M. Franklin.

Conway Produces Army Drama

"The Fortification Plans" is the title of a Reliance army melodrama being produced by Director Jack Conway. The story deals with the differences which arise between two lieutenants who are rivals for the love of their commanding officer's daughter. An international spy figures in the story and the "pa-pairs" are stolen again. The players for this are Elmer Clifton, Vester Perry, Gladys Brockwell, F. A. Turner and Benjamin Wilson.

Charles Clary is being featured in a Reliance subject, "A Breath of Summer," from a scenario by Bernard McConville, wherein Agnes employed in a sweat shop making khaki outing suits, writes an appeal for financial aid that she may send her invalid mother from their home in the tenement to the country and thus save her life.

She writes several notes which she sews on the inside of the garments. One garment is purchased by a wealthy philanthropist who discovers the note on a fishing trip. He returns and investigates the claim of the girl, arriving at her home just in time to prevent her arrest for stealing money to accomplish her purpose.

The philanthropist aids her and a pretty romance follows. The direction is in charge of George Seigman, and Mr. Clary is supported by Francelia Billington, Cora Drew, and William Hinckley.

A big theatre fire scene was staged last week at the Reliance-Majestic studio for scenes in the two reel Reliance subject, "The Headliner," a story of theatrical life, love affairs and display of "temperamentalities." For these scenes a duplicate of a Coney Island theatre was made. Irene Hunt is featured and she is supported by

FRANCELIA BILLINGTON IN "CHILDREN OF THE SEA" (Majestic—July 4)

George Walsh and William Lowrey. F. A. Kelsey is in charge of the direction.

A one reel costume photoplay for Reliance brand is being made under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham. The scenes for these are laid in France in the early Eighteenth Century. The cast includes Teddy Sampson, Mabel Wiles, Ray Myers, George Pierce and Maxfield Stanley.

Highby, an Old "Trooper," Joins Mutual

Frank Drien is a new member of the Komic brand at the Reliance-Majestic studio. He was for fourteen months with the stock company of the Liberty theatre at Oakland, following two seasons on the Orpheum circuit where he was featured.

Wilbur Highby, a well-known character actor has also been added to the Reliance-Majestic studio. He is an old tropper and knows the game from A to Izzard.

The L-Ko company has just put over the thrill of thrills which will be released under the title of "Gertie's Joy Ride," featuring Gertrude Selby and Hank Mann. The sensational scenes for this comedy were made at Ocean Park pier when the leading players drove an automobile off the pier at a thirty-mile clip.

Another company under the direction of Dave Kirkland has just finished "Under the Claws of the Law," featuring Harry Gribbon and Peggy Pierce.

Harry Edwards is directing the production of a two reel subject "In a Hospital," with a cast headed by Billie Ritchie, Louise Orth and Henry Burgman.

William Robert Daly has been engaged by Colonel William H. Selig for production of pictures at the jungle-zoo, and this week took up the filming of the first which will feature Kathlyn Williams, who is also the author of the story. This is a psychological animal story with scenes laid in California, and the plot centers about the daughter of an animal trainer and collector. Guy Oliver, Frank Mayo, Emma Clifton, Bert Grasby, and Utalina Lareno have been selected to support Miss Williams.

Fritzi Brunnette, who is Miss William Robert Daly in private life, has also been engaged by the Selig company, and her initial work for this organization will be an important part in "Mizpah." The filming will not be taken up for several weeks owing to the many massive sets made for the production.

Colin Campbell and company of players including Edith Johnston and Wheeler Oakman were at Catalina last week, making exteriors for a sea story.

Eugene Bresserer is being featured in a two reel production now being made by Frank Beal. The title of this is "The Way of a Woman's Heart." Miss Bresserer portrays the part of an actress and demonstrates the many sacrifices a temperamental woman will make for the man she loves.

Edendale Company Films Society Play

One of the Edendale companies is filming "The Face in the Mirror," a two-reel story with brand new situations. It is a society drama in which crooks are introduced in a very logical and at the same time decidedly interesting manner.

Director Marshall Neilan is now completing the second of the "Bloom Center" comedy series at Bloom Center, a complete small town, occupying a choice site at the Selig jungle-zoo. There have been numerous changes in the personnel of the company making these subjects. The complete cast who are taking part in all of the subjects is as follows: Jack Dillon as Bill Hard-up; Sid Smith as Johnnie West; William Hitchins as Constable Plum; Lillian Leighton as Mrs. Plum; John Lancaster, Postmaster Pash; Cash Darrell, Deacon Moon; Martha Mattox as Salina Tubbs; H. Dougherty, Tripod Bill; Martin Kinney, village saloon keeper; William Scott as Arthur Holt; Leon Coleman as Hurry-up; Alice Rolland, Miss Prevost; and Irene Wallace as Mag Tate.

The Lewis Chaudet animal company is filming "Reunited in the Jungle Wilds," by William H. Lippert. This portrays the work of a girl to reform her dishonest father, she saving money from her meager wages that she may take him to South Africa. Dick Loreno and George Larkin have very important parts.

Helen Holmes is now playing leads and also doing the directing of the railway films at the Kalem studio. She is now making the "Substitute Fireman," and in this she plays the part of the substitute who takes the shovel at a critical moment.

Director Tom Ricketts, of the American studio, at Santa Barbara, is spending a few days in Los Angeles, the first vacation he has had since taking up the filming of Mutual Master-Picture early in December. He has just completed "The End of the Road."

TWO VIEWS OF THE VILLA IN WHICH GERALDINE FARRAR WILL LIVE DURING HER ENGAGEMENT AT THE LASKY STUDIO, HOLLYWOOD, CAL.

Bessie Barriscale has begun work on "The Last Act," a narrative of a girl's rise to success on the stage.

Another subject is "Redeemed from Bondage," which will serve to introduce Forrest Winnant, the Broadway star, who recently arrived at Inceville. Scenarios have been prepared in which other "legitimate" stage stars will appear.

Katherine Kealred will be featured in "The Winged Idol," Frank Keenan in "Blood Will Tell," and Orrin Johnson

MAUD ALLAN IN "THE RUGMAKER'S DAUGHTER" (Bosworth-Morosco)

in "The Three Musketeers," adapted from the Alexander Dumas novel.

More than forty of the NYMP stock players will take part in an entertainment to be given on June 29 for some three or four hundred members of the National Editorial association, which will vist the studio while here attending a national convention.

For scenes in "The Last Act" the NYMP secured the use of the Morosco theatre in Los Angeles recently, and made pictures from midnight until dawn. More than four hundred people were used in these scenes, and six cameras were on the job at all times.

Perhaps the most elaborate panel in pictures is that just completed by a sculptor for use in the NYMP multiple reel subject, "The Conqueror." This panel is 8 by 12 feet, hand carved, and will be installed in a drawing room set.

The story of a prizefighter's experiences in the West forms the plot for "The Golden Trail," a two-reel subject being made for NYMP release. The scenario of this is by Thomas H. Ince. The producing cast includes Margaret Gibson, J. P. Lockney, and Robert Courtland.

House Peters has been added to the NYMP stock company, and others now at this studio are Lola May and Wedgewood Newell.

The "Peer Gynt" Morosco-Bosworth company spent three days this week at Palm Plains, in the Imperial Valley, where Cyril Maude was mistaken by the Bedouin as a prophet and elevated to the rank of an Arabian sheik. Later a two masted sea-going schooner was chartered and used for two days. The company went to Catalina, where slave ship scenes were made. About seventy-five people were used in this scene.

Announcement has been made of the titles of four multiple reel subjects productions of which were taken up at the NYMP studio during the past two weeks. "The Conqueror" is a Wall Street story featuring Willard Mack as the wolf of finance. This is under the direction of Reginald Barker.

Julia Dean is playing the leading part in "Matrimony," a problem play of four or five reels, which gives the actress great opportunity to display her compelling emotionalism.

Miss Dean brought her maids with her to the NYMP studio, and when no accommodations had been prepared for them, the actress caused a chase to be enacted by suddenly disappearing from the set in which she was working and starting in search of Business Manager E. H.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK (Keystone)

Allen to make arrangements for the maids.

All other members of the cast for "Matrimony," including the director, had a very merry time, and finally found the leading woman after climbing over many of the hills of the six thousand acre canyon studio ranch.

The Charlie Chaplin Essanay company is making the final scenes for "The Woman," a one-reel comedy featuring Charlie. Mr. Chaplin announced this week that he has been working for several days on a multiple reel comedy which may reach six or seven reels. This is to be made in connection with other pictures, and will in all probability be ready for release the latter part of August or the first part of September. The title for this has not been announced.

A private audience which viewed "The Hideous God, War," at the Selig projecting room, pronounced the battle scenes as realistic and thrilling as any which have yet appeared upon the screen. This story, a powerful preachment against war, was written for the Selig Polyscope company by William E. Wing, and will be released on the General Film program.

"Bloom Center" again is making history. For a "rube" town it certainly is providing stirring events for the world at large for Director Marshall Neilan is sending out a two-reel story from the busy burg each week, portraying vividly the excrutiatingly humorous doings of the town. The comedy series was interrupted but, with the engagement of Director Neilan, the fun is bubbling up steadily at the Selig Jungle Zoo's country village.

Howard Scott, the dignified character

GEORGE FAWCETT IN "THE MAJESTY OF THE LAW" (Bosworth)

man from the old Belasco stage, has not escaped his share of the strenuous life since joining stock at the Selig Jungle Zoo. Director L. W. Chaudet needed a good actor to dally with wild animals in "The Puma's Lair." Scott did not flinch from the imputation or the Puma's. However, when he emerged from being "chewed," Broadway never would have known its favorite.

Statistics gathered by the publicity department of the Keystone shows that a new Buick owned by Chester Conklin, known in films as Mr. Droppington, will kill as many chickens, and escape as many motorcycle cops as a six-cylinder Pierce Arrow.

U BEAUTIES ON SHOW IN FILM AT LOS ANGELES

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 21.

The first showing of the pictures made of the Universal beauties while en route to and during their stay in Los Angeles was made Monday evening at the Symphony theatre, when all the members of the beauty party were guests of the management.

Many of the scenes were taken in and about Grand Canyon, where the party spent a day, one of the prettiest ones being the girls arranged to form a mammoth U with President Carl Laemmle in the center. The reception tendered the party at San Bernardino, their arrival in Los Angeles and greetings tendered them by thousands on the streets, and Universal City on Saturday, were also shown.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

OUTLOOK FOR SUMMER BUSINESS IN CINCINNATI LOOKS GOOD

VERY promising is the outlook for the summer among Cincinnati exhibitors. Following the dull business of the spring months the almost unexpected stimulus which came with the warm weather was an agreeable surprise. Exchange men as well as exhibitors are generally enjoying prosperity where they had looked for the usual summer slump.

C. E. Holah, manager of the Pathé exchange there, declares his business has increased three hundred per cent. in the last few months, and other exchange men report corresponding increases. In addition to these pleasing prospects several additional theatres are to be constructed shortly, it is rumored.

Manager Holah, of the Pathé exchange, has just completed a tour of his territory, including Indianapolis, Louisville, Ky., Dayton and Columbus, Ohio, and has reported good business and great prospects at all points.

While in Indianapolis he arranged for the Pathé staff cameraman to take a serial picture of the Indianapolis Speedway races and very successful views are obtained, five hundred feet of which have already been shown in Cincinnati and vicinity. Several changes in his sales staff were made by Mr. Holah this week.

J. N. Gelman has been transferred from West Virginia to Kentucky with headquarters in Louisville; D. E. Parham, formerly of Louisville, is now in West Virginia; C. J. Howard, a new recruit, has been given the Dayton, O., territory.

SIMPLEX INSTALLED IN PATHE OFFICE IN CINCINNATI

A MOVE of much interest to exhibitors was made by the Cincinnati office of the Pathé exchange when it installed a new model Simplex projector and operating booth in order to project the Pathé release for customers.

A large room in the second floor rear of the building occupied by the Pathé offices at 217 East Fifth street, has been fitted up as a projecting room and the exhibitors are given private views of the new releases as they arrive in the city. On Monday and Thursday of each week the serials will be shown and on Friday all other releases of the coming week will be reeled off.

At these exhibitions the customers are able to see the productions in advance, and in this manner gather ideas for advertising and publicity that would not be afforded in any other way.

Because of the fact that the Cincinnati branch is supplied with non-inflammable film from the Bound Brook, N. J., factory, and every precaution is taken in the matter of projection, all possible danger from the use of films in the office is eliminated. This alone is an innovation in a city where particular care is exercised by officials who enforce a rigid rule on all motion pictures.

BERNFIELD, BOSTON MANAGER FOR PATHE, WAS WITH BARNUM

SAMUEL BERNFIELD, one of the first of the old Eclectic Film company managers, and as such later inherited by the Pathé exchange when it took over the Eclectic business, is a native of New Haven, Conn., where he was born on September 27, 1887. He broke into the film business through the circus route, having formerly been with Barnum and Bailey as assistant manager of the side shows and arena announcer.

SAMUEL BERNFIELD

He entered the film business by installing an inspection department for the General Film company in Portland, Ore., in 1910. In 1911 he was transferred to the Seattle office of the same company and then to St. Louis as a solicitor.

In 1913 he came to the New York offices of the General, later being put in charge of the "masterpiece" department at Boston. Early in 1914 he was made exchange manager of the Boston Eclectic office, and has remained there ever since with the exception of a few months when he was manager of the Salt Lake City office of the same company.

Bernfield is a hard worker and a good producer. Under him the Boston Pathé office has more than held its own.

SEATTLE PASSES EXCHANGE ORDINANCE

THE Seattle city council has passed the ordinance regulating film exchanges, over the mayor's veto.

KANSAS CENSOR LAW IS HARD ON EXCHANGES

THE Kansas censorship law which is now in full force, is proving hard on the exchanges. Each exchange manager sending films into the state for exhibition is required to present subjects to the censorship board at Topeka for inspection before they can be shown to the public.

A fee of two dollars per reel has to be paid in advance, and if the film is rejected the exchange men have a right to an appeal to the appeal board, which consists of the governor, the attorney-general and the superintendent of public instruction. In case this appeal board upholds the decision of the censors the film is barred from the state for good.

It is also necessary for the film companies to hire a theatre, pay an operator, buy carbons and current used in presenting the films to the censors. This along with railroad fare, express charges and the censorship fee makes it rather hard on the film companies.

The law does not apply to nor is there any penalty attached to a company renting the film, but applies only to the party or parties exhibiting the same, but in order that the film exchange men may carry on their business they have found it necessary to pay this fee and have the photoplays passed.

LENHARDT BOOSTS ADMISSION PRICES IN NEW MEXICO

WEST COAST DISTRICT MANAGER HARRY LENHARDT, of the Fox Film corporation, has returned from a tour over the entire territory.

At Denver he found the recent increase in prices to ten cents by Manager Baxter, of the Isis theatre, where Fox films are shown, to be highly successful. The Isis is enjoying a very good patronage in spite of the fact that it is the only theatre charging more than five cents in Denver. While on this trip Mr. Lenhardt induced the manager of the theatre at Albuquerque, N. M., to increase admission price from ten cents to fifteen cents, and also to put on a midnight matinee Saturday of each week. These matinees have since proven very successful.

MOTHER OF BROOKHEIM DIES AT AGE OF 65

MRS. EMMA BROOKHEIM, mother of Charles L. Brookheim, manager of the New York and New Jersey Gotham Film exchange, died at her home in New York City last Wednesday.

Mrs. Brookheim was born in New York City sixty-five years ago. Four children survive her.

BEACH RESORTS INCREASE BUSINESS IN BAY STATE

UNSEASONABLE weather conditions have charmed the dollars into the pockets of New England exhibitors recently. Because of the cold, rainy weather many houses have kept open, getting a big day now and then to tide them by, though ordinarily closed about this time.

Opening of the beach resorts, too, has had a stimulating effect on the business of the exchanges. In the rush for the trade of the beach houses Manager Campbell, of the Fox exchange in Boston, claims a high place. He has placed service at York, Kennebunk, Nantasket and Hampton beaches, and at Bar Harbor, Newport, Onset and Winthrop.

Mr. Campbell reports business in the best of condition. "No kick coming at all," he says. "Our own much disputed film, 'The New Governor,' objectionable to the negroes, has, of course, met with opposition, but this has not amounted to much."

In Boston proper Mr. Campbell says he has "more business than the other big fellows combined." The Fox has the Modern for first run, the Scollay Square Olympia for the second, and a dozen other houses.

PIERCE OF V-L-S-E HELPS PICK LOS ANGELES OFFICES

E. B. PIERCE, West coast district manager for the V-L-S-E, was in Los Angeles recently conferring with the local manager, Harry Naugle, and aided him in the selection of offices for the company's local exchange. Mr. Pierce had just returned from a trip to Seattle where he reported that Tom North, recently made manager there, is getting the business like a whirlwind.

The organization now has working exchanges at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Salt Lake. No manager has been announced for the latter. Mr. Pierce left Los Angeles for Salt Lake and will there supervise the opening of a permanent exchange.

METRO OPENS IN KANSAS CITY

A NUMBER of exchanges have been opened in Kansas City. Among the new ones is the Metro Picture Service, with Charles F. Miller as manager. This exchange will cover the Kansas City territory, which includes, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa and Nebraska.

The Picture Playhouse Film Company, with J. H. Gilinsky, as manager, will serve the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa and Nebraska. John Hardin will serve this territory as manager for George Kleine.

FOX TRAIN PICTURE SERVICE IS EXTENDED TO DENVER ROUTE

THE William Fox company, which is responsible for the idea of equipping with film entertainments transcontinental trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, carrying exposition-bound travelers, is making arrangements to extend the service to all trains west of Chicago passing through Denver.

For the edification and entertainment of the traveling public, the diners will be equipped with motion picture machines and a picture served at the end of each meal.

The Fox films will be used starting with the William Farnum pictures, "The Nigger," "The Plunderers," and "The Gilded Fool."

V-L-S-E OPENS OFFICES IN CINCINNATI AND DETROIT

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the V-L-S-E of the establishment of two new offices; one at Cincinnati, Ohio, and the other at Detroit, Michigan.

The Cincinnati office will be in charge of R. S. Shrader, well-known in film circles throughout the middle west, and the Detroit office will be looked after by R. R. Hutton, who has distinguished himself as a member of the new school of business boosters.

With the opening of these two offices, the Big Four family has increased from six to sixteen branch offices in less than three months' time, and every one of the sixteen offices now in operation is working to capacity.

GENERAL OFFICE IN CRESCENT CITY WILL MOVE JULY 1

IT is announced that the General Film company's New Orleans exchange would move into the three-story building, 343 Baronne street, every inch of which will be occupied by the fast growing exchange.

The General Film company heretofore has occupied rather cramped quarters in Perdido street, until it found that business justified making the present move.

The building on Baronne street is being thoroughly remodeled to meet the demands of the new tenants. When completed it will be one of the finest exchange buildings in the south. The date of the removal is July 1.

LESSER BOOKS "SPOILERS" IN ONLY EXPOSITION THEATRE

SOL LESSER, of the Golden Gate and All Star Distributors exchanges, paid a vist to the Los Angeles establishment, in charge of E. H. Emmick, during the past week.

Mr. Lesser has "The Spoilers" booked for an indefinite run at Filmland, the only motion picture theatre inside the San Francisco exposition grounds, and is making other bookings every week in the better houses of the West coast.

MACK REPORTS DEMAND FOR WAR SUBJECTS

W. J. LOWERY, special representative, booking "Runaway June" in New York state for the Reliance company, is with Metro and is now traveling out of Buffalo.

W. A. V. Mack, manager of the Syracuse office of the Picture Playhouse Film company, reports that the office is almost unable to handle all the requests for booking on the European war, which subject is being exploited by that company.

YATES MANAGING WASHINGTON, D. C., EXCHANGE

J. L. YATES has assumed the management of the Washington Film exchange, handling the Universal program, succeeding S. J. Meyer. Mr. Yates comes direct from Baltimore, where he was manager of the United exchange. Prior to that he was associated with the General Film company for several years. For about a decade he has been identified with the film business, being at one time associated in Washington.

Asked how he found his new post, Mr. Yates said, "I find affairs in good shape and despite the present dull wave, Universal is holding its own. I find the Washington managers a congenial and co-operative set and feel quite at home.

"Already I prevailed upon Mr. Harry Crandall, manager of Crandall's theatre, for a private showing of our big feature, 'Scandal,' a Smalley production.

"A goodly gathering of the managers and press was present and with one accord the picture was acclaimed a good, moral, entertaining story, without aspiring to be sensational.

"Already bookings for this feature are close in my territory, with the outlook that it will be solid for a good period as soon as released.

"I might add that I believe in co-operation with the manager, for it is the exhibitor who makes the manufacturer's business possible, makes my position necessary and the channel of output for our films.

"We can't get along without him and we need him and it is wisest to secure the manager's friendship. It is the best relationship, for he is our best asset."

LIKE BROTHER BEAR, PITTSBURGH MEN LIKE TO BE IN THE WOODS

BRADFORD'S WOODS, just outside of Pittsburgh, was the scene of a picnic of the exchanges of Pittsburgh. This is the first outing the film men have held, and it is to be made an annual affair, so the ones who attended the picnic state.

More than forty went to the woods early in the morning and spent the entire day there. They had several baseball games and other sports were indulged in.

A chef was taken to the grounds and attended to the repast and tables were set out among the trees where the picnickers dined. A number of speeches were made and altogether it was a most successful outing.

LEAVES CLERICAL POSITION IN EXCHANGE FOR SCREEN POSING

MINNIE PONEDEL, who has been connected with the Los Angeles General Film company branch since its opening, serving in the capacity as billing clerk, later bookkeeper, and for the past several months as cashier, has resigned this position to accept an offer of a Los Angeles film manufacturer to appear before the camera.

Miss Ponedel is perhaps the best known woman to exhibitors of that territory, and her many friends of the industry in that section will watch her career on the screen with much interest.

HOT WEATHER JINX BANISHED

HOT weather, the jinx of many motion picture exhibitors, is going to meet its Waterloo in the middle west this summer. The idea of canceling film contracts just because hot weather is coming, and with it the customary tendency of a few patrons to prefer their front porches or the ice cream parlor!

Exhibitors throughout Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and the Dakotas are canceling fewer contracts than ever before. In almost every instance where a contract is being canceled an airdome is being opened to take the place of the theatre, and the exhibitor who has the theatre is most generally the one who is opening the airdome.

Philip Goldstone, manager of the World exchange in Omaha, tore open a letter from the Lyric theatre at Orange City, Ia. The letter said the Lyric was closing for the summer. Then Goldstone showed a big order for films for the opening of an airdome at Orange City.

Many are like W. T. Weddell, of Murdock, Neb., who not only bought a new machine to put into his theatre, but who is repainting, redecorating, putting in an up-to-date system of ventilation and making everything attractive for the sweltering summer trade. Murdock is not a large place, and this is the first summer it will have a motion picture theatre open all season.

All exchange managers in Omaha declare fewer theatres are closing.

FLARITY IS IN CHARGE OF PATHE IN SYRACUSE

WITH the transfer of V. H. Hodupp to Chicago comes the announcement that Fred Flarity has been appointed successor as manager of the Syracuse branch of the Pathé company.

Mr. Flarity has been in the show business ever since he was twelve years old but only recently has he been connected with the film industry.

He has been an exhibitor in Auburn, N. Y., and in Philadelphia, Pa., but has been identified with the exchange business only since February 1, 1915.

At that time he made his debut as a road salesman, and the fact that in four months he received the appointment as manager of an exchange of the importance of Syracuse testifies as to his ability.

Mr. Flarity has under him five roadmen and an office force of sixteen people and at this writing he states that business is increasing so rapidly that it will be necessary to greatly increase the force within the next month of two.

Mr. Flarity has a host of friends throughout the state who will be glad to know of his advancement and who will wish him all manner of success.

BAXLEY IS TRAVELING FOR PICTURE PLAYHOUSE

L. C. BAXLEY has been appointed traveling representative of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, with Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico as his territory. He is said to have secured considerable business already.

Mr. Baxley was formerly with Warner's Features in the San Antonio, Tex., office. He has traveled over Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas in the film business for the past five years.

LAMPSON FINDS BUSINESS IN EXCELLENT CONDITIONS

THE Fox Film corporation, Los Angeles exchange, has been permanently located at 736 South Olive street, where it purchased the equipment of the California Kriterion exchange. This branch is in charge of F. P. Lampson, and is receiving splendid patronage from local theatres. S. McIntyre, owner of the Photoplay theatre, No. 2, and formerly connected with local exchanges as salesman, has been employed as assistant to Mr. Lampson.

STEDMAN OPENS EXCHANGE IN MINNEAPOLIS

THE Star Feature Film company has opened offices at 507 Boston block to handle exclusive features in Minnesota and North and South Dakota.

B. Stedman, president of this concern, is well known in New York City to thousands of exhibitors. He has secured the services of Harry Schwartz, who is general manager.

FLOODS HURT BUSINESS IN KANSAS CITY TERRITORY

The exchange men of Kansas City have been experiencing difficulty in getting films to their exhibitors in the central part of the state owing to the near flood conditions.

It was found necessary by many to call their men in off the road.

MURPHY VISITS NEW YORK

MANGER Fred B. Murphy of the United Film exchange in Boston, spent several days on business in New York recently.

VAN HUSAN, LIKE THE BEE, "IMPROVES EACH SHINING HOUR"

MANAGER F. A. VAN HUSAN of the Laemmle Film service exchange at Omaha, has a decidedly new idea for a vacation. It consists of talking with an exhibitor in the exhibitor's theatre. So during his weeks of vacation he will travel about the Omaha territory, throughout Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and the Dakotas, and just visit exhibitors.

He will talk to them about business, equipment, ventilation, pictures, tickets, advertisements, and other things that lie nearest the exhibitor's heart. It will not be a drumming-up-business exhibition, but a pleasurable jaunt that is made pleasant by frequent conversations with exhibitors.

Incidentally, this exchange is counting upon its Broadway Star special releases about July 1 to nip in the bud any start of the summer-closing movement throughout the Middle West. Manager Van Husan declares fewer exhibitors are closing their theatres this summer than ever before, but the new release promises to help keep up the fine business conditions.

APEX MANAGER LEAVES NEW ORLEANS FOR NEW YORK

FOLLOWING the closing last week of the New Orleans branch of the Apex Feature Film company, Meyer Simmonds, its manager, left for New York City.

Mr. Simmonds did not announce his plans, but it is understood that he will re-enter the exchange business in the Crescent City after the affairs of the Apex company are settled satisfactorily.

NORTH LOCATES IN SEATTLE

TOM NORTH, Northwestern representative of the Big Four productions, after looking over the Portland and Seattle territories, decided to locate in Seattle for the present at least.

BUSINESS BOOMS IN KANSAS CITY TERRITORY

DESPITE rain, hail and storms that have deluged the Kansas City territory for the last two months, the exchange men, exhibitors and the traveling film men have enjoyed an unprecedented spring business. But few of the exhibitors in the territory have not reported an exceptionally large business for this season of the year, and this despite the fact that for the last four weeks all shipments made by the exchange men to their exhibitors have been taken by the express companies subject to delay.

Some of the exhibitors have been compelled on account of floods and high water to close their houses for two or three days at a time, being unable to get films, but when they do open they more than make up for the time lost.

The exchange managers in Kansas City, without a dissenting voice, are of the opinion that this year will be a good one for the producer, the exchange man and the exhibitor.

C. S. Edwards, Jr., Pathé manager, did a record breaking business last week, and is of the opinion that the coming week will be still better. According to his views the bumper wheat crop in Kansas, which will shortly be harvested, is going to mean big business for the moving picture business.

An instance that shows the prosperity of the moving picture business in that territory is the fact that J. E. Haggard, proprietor of the Photoplay theatre at Nevada, Me., has contracted for the entire output of the Universal and Mutual, taking 24 reels from each and picking from them the best six of each. When an exhibitor can do this it can mean but one thing—remarkably big business.

M. E. "Marty" Williams, Mutual manager, has just returned from a trip in Kansas, and reports business good and prospects better than ever. According to him, things look better for the business than for some time.

NEW MINA COMPANY ORGANIZED FOR COAST

A second comedy company to produce MinA films has been organized, and began work at MinA's new studios in Los Angeles, June 12, under the direction of Jack Byrne.

The organization of this company was prompted by the success of the first MinA company, directed by Milton Fahrney, who produced all of the releases of the new MinA series to date, beginning with "Life's Mysteries," released June 3, on the program of the General Film Company.

The new company, like the first organization, will make only one reel subjects. The productions made by the two forces will be released alternately. Jules Mendel is playing leads with the new company.

DAMERAL, LIGHT OPERA STAR, JOINS MINA IN LOS ANGELES

Charles Dameral, brother of George Dameral, the popular light opera star who is now playing over the Orpheum circuit, has deserted the legitimate and joined the forces of MinA films in Los Angeles. This will be Mr. Dameral's first experience before the camera. He will play important comedy parts in the one-reel productions made by the company under the direction of Jack Byrne.

Other additions to the MinA personnel are Mrs. Harry Davenport, Henrietta Holle, Dorothy Black, Helen Rupport, Pat Wheelan and Arthur Harrison. They will appear in the MinA animal productions in connection with the Bostock animal players.

Famous Studio on Coast Closes; Forces Come East

Mary Pickford, After Short Vacation, Will Appear Under Direction of Allan Dwan in a Tenement Story, "Miss Jinny," by Miss Delano, Author of "Rags"

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, June 21.

DECISION was made this week by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players company to close the Los Angeles studio at once. Arrangements are now completed for the producing staff here to return to the New York studio, and the members will leave Los Angeles, Sunday of this week. After a brief vacation, Mary Pickford, under the direction of another director will take up her work at the New York studio. The party from here will include Miss Pickford and her mother, Al. Kaufman, studio manager; Allan Dwan, Mrs. Zukor and her daughter, Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator, and a number of others.

Mr. Zukor left here Thursday for San Francisco where he will complete arrangements with Chairman M. E. Cory, of the committee in charge of arrangements for the exhibitors convention, for the display of the company at the convention exposition. This decision of President Zukor is a great disappointment to the convention committee, for they had planned to have Miss Pickford lead the grand march of the convention ball, Friday evening, July 16, at the new San Francisco Civic Auditorium, on the arm of Governor Hiram Johnson.

It is the intention of the Famous Players company to do all its producing at the New York studio until the latter part of November or the first of December, when in all probability two or three companies will be sent to the coast.

A novel incident connected with the trip is that Miss Pickford and her company will enact a feature film story en route from California to New York. A special story was devised for this purpose, so constructed that the plot begins in the West and terminates in New York, where the subsequent scenes will be produced.

This is probably the first time that a motion picture star utilized the time consumed in traveling between two film studios in this unique manner. The subject will be produced under the direction of Allan Dwan, who has produced in California two of the most recent Pickford subjects not yet scheduled for release.

Upon the arrival of Miss Pickford and Allan Dwan, preparations will be made for another unusual production, starring Mary Pickford. This will be an elaborate photo-production entitled "Miss Jinny," a tenement story from the pen of Edith Barnard Delano, the author of another forthcoming Pickford production, "Rags," to be released August 2.

At the conclusion of this subject, Mr. Dwan will direct Miss Pickford in a series of important screen vehicles, notable among which will be "The Heart of Sally Temple," the famous novel and play by Rupert Sargent Holland, and "Audrey," adapted from the famous novel by Mary Johnson and the play by Harriet Ford.

Mr. Zukor will remain in California with Mrs. Zukor and his son and daughter three or four weeks longer. His purpose for this long sojourn at the coast is, as was announced upon his departure from New York City, to complete negotiations for the purchase of a large tract of ground in California, whereon the Famous Players intend to erect three separate studios, so equipped as to enable them to adequately produce the important series of subjects planned for creation at the coast studios during the coming year.

July Will Bring Four 5-Part V-L-S-E Features

Two Comedies and Two Dramatic Productions Featuring Frank Daniels, Tyrone Power, Romaine Fielding and Bryant Washburn, Will Be Released, the First a Lubin

DURING the month of July, the V-L-S-E program will offer four features each in five parts, that include two comedies and two dramas, and will present two distinguished stars of the speaking stage in the persons of Frank Daniels and Tyrone Power, and three screen favorites in Romaine Fielding and Bryant Washburn, and Edna Mayo who is already as popular on the screen as she was on the stage.

For the week of July 5, the Lubin contribution is "The Valley of Lost Hope," by Shannon Fife, produced under the direction of Romaine Fielding who assays the leading role. This is an elaborate, spectacular drama, and is reported to be a picture that will strongly appeal to all classes of audiences.

"Crooky Scruggs," scheduled for release July 12, is a Vitagraph production, staged under the direction of C. J. Williams, in which the inimitable Frank Daniels will make his initial appearance on the "Big Four" program. This feature which is in five parts, is from the play by Paul West, and as Mr. Daniels is said to be even more funny on the screen than on the speaking stage, this feature should be a liberal contribution to the world's laughs.

"The Blindness of Virtue," by the Essanay Company, will be released July 19, and Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn will make their second bow to the "Big Four" followers.

Charles Hoyt's greatest American comedy, "A Texas Steer," is the Selig contribution for the week of July 26. In this play, Tyrone Power, whose reputation is known to every one, will be seen in the leading role.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Metro Obtains Many New Plays and Stage Favorites

THE activities of the Metro Pictures corporation and its five producing allies are assuming wider proportions with each fleeting week. General Manager Rowland of the Metro company announces the acquisition of numerous new plays among which are, "Pigs in Clover," "Richard Carvel," "Rosemary for Remembrance," "The Purple Lady," "Baccaret," and "The Silent Voice," all of which have been procured during the past week and allotted to stars on the Metro roster.

Five new players of stellar position have been procured and installed at the head of special casts for immediate work in Metro productions. Emmy Wehlen the famous Viennese actress, last seen at the Casino theatre under the management of the Liebler company will make her appearance for B. A. Rolfe in the principal role in Charles Horan's romance, "When a Woman Loves." Miss Wehlen recently returned from a long tour of Continental Europe where she is a prime favorite.

A well-known male star will play opposite Miss Wehlen in "When a Woman Loves."

Ralph Herz and Lois Meredith will appear also under the Rolfe banner in a screen production of Sid Rosenfeld's successful drama, "The Purple Lady." Emily Stevens, last seen in a Rolfe production, will make her second appearance on the Metro program in Rolfe's production of "The Liars" in which she will be supported by Hamilton Ravelle. "The Liars" is an original manuscript possessing many valuable situations, admirably adapted to Miss Steven's talents.

For the popular plays and players, Gail Kane will make her appearance on the Metro program in the production of Clyde Fitch's famous play, "Her Great Match." Miss Kane was last seen in George M. Cohan's picturesque play, "The Miracle Man" and before that starred for two years at the Astor theatre in Cohan's other success "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

Edmund Breese is working in the final scenes of his second screen effort for the Popular Plays and Players in Robert W. Service's famous poem, "The Spell of the Yukon," while Ann Murdock has begun work in the screen version of Charles Frohman's stage play, "A Royal Family." This will be Miss Murdock's first appearance on any screen. William Nigh, until a few weeks ago associated with the California Motion Picture corporation, has joined the B. A. Rolfe forces and will have charge of the production of "A Royal Family." Charles Horan will stage "When A Woman Loves." Herbert Blache will produce "Her Great Match" with Gail Kane while Jack Noble will direct "The Purple Lady" in which Ralph Herz and Lois Meredith appear.

The above productions are now about to go into work at the various Metro studios at Thirty-fifth street, Sixty-first street, Fort Lee and Los Angeles, California.

"BONDMAN" IS THE NEXT FOX SUBJECT

It is announced by William Fox that the next release in which William Farnum will be seen is a strikingly dramatic screen version of Hall Caine's novel and play, "The Bondman." Like all the other productions in which Mr. Farnum has been starred under the William Fox management, namely, "The Nigger," "Samson," "A Gilded Fool," and "The Plunderer." "The Bondman" will be directed by Edgar Lewis.

Mr. Farnum and Mr. Lewis are now combining business and pleasure by fine-combing the north shore of Long Island for good locations in the former's fifty-foot 45-horse power motorboat, which is thoroughly equipped for cruising. The Hall Caine book calls, in its scenario, for rugged coast scenery and scenes afloat both in fair weather and foul.

It is expected that it will be possible to complete the filming of "The Bondman" on the northern Long Island shore, and the company will not have to go further afield than Sag Harbor, where Mr. Farnum has a handsome country estate.

MACE IS BACK WITH KEYSTONE

Fred Mace, of "One-Round O'Brien" fame, one of the four original members of the Keystone company, is back again under the direction of the master mind of the Keystone forces, Mack Sennett.

Mace left the Keystone company to produce pictures for himself, and after an absence of two years decided that he could make more money as a salaried employee of the Keystone company.

Mace is said to be receiving a salary from the Keystone company now that is equalled by but few motion picture actors.

FAHRNEY GETS HUMOR IN MINA'S "HARMLESS FLIRTATION"

Director Milton H. Fahrney has succeeded in getting an unusual amount of action in all of his productions, but none of them have so bubbled over with such snappy and surprising situations, coming one on top of another, and with such effervescent humor, as in "A Harmless Flirtation," a one-reel MinA, release for Thursday, July 1, on the program of the General Film company.

The story centers around Jerry, who flirts with a pretty girl named Nellie, but who wreaks vengeance upon others who follow his example. So many things happen to Jerry and his opponents that when all misunderstandings are peaceably settled the characters have gone through nothing less than a cyclone of events.

George Ovey does some very excellent comedy work in which Goldie Colwell ably assists. Louis Fitzroy, Janet Sully, Albert McQuarrie and others are also in the cast.

"VAGABOND," FINISHED BY JOSE, READY FOR COLOR IN FRANCE

The Pathé officials had their first view last week at their new six-part picture "The Beloved Vagabond," adapted from William J. Locke's novel of the same name. It was pronounced by all who saw it to be one of the best pictures they had ever seen. Edward José, who produced it, has shown a rare artistic talent in his selection of backgrounds, and in every detail of his direction.

Edwin Arden, as Paragot, has interpreted that wilful, big hearted, irresponsible character in a way that leaves nothing to be desired. He is ably supported by Bliss Milford and Katherine Brown-Decker.

JOANNA HEARS OF THE SUPPOSED DEATH OF PARAGOT

Pathé will send "The Beloved Vagabond" to France to be colored, and it probably will not be released before August.

LASKY RELEASES FOR JULY ANNOUNCED

Two or three minor changes in the Paramount releases agreed upon for the four Jesse L. Lasky productions, to be released during July, make it advisable to announce the Lasky portion of the program for that month, once again.

Blanche Sweet in "The Clue" will be released on July 8; Charlotte Walker in a picturization of "Kindling" by arrangement with E. J. Bowes, will be the attraction for July 13; Laura Hope Crews, in the Lasky-Belasco photoplay version of "Fighting Hope," will be the attraction for July 19; and Ina Claire and Carlyle Blackwell in a photo-dramatization of "The Puppet Crown," by Harold MacGrath, will be released on July 29.

"PINTO BEN" PICTURIZED AT INCEVILLE

A picturization of William S. Hart's famous poem, "Pinto Ben," is being made at Inceville. "Pinto Ben" deals with the love of a Western cow pony for its master, and the stanzas of the poem will be used as the sub-titles.

Hart is staging the first few scenes in and about the Inceville corral, but during the week will journey all the way to Oceanside to obtain the big cattle scenes.

"Little Pal" Will Be Next Famous Players' Release

FOLLOWING her triumph in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," Mary Pickford, the star of the Famous Players Film company, will next be seen in "Little Pal," a feature to be released on the Paramount program, July 1. It is one of the most unique roles in which she has ever been presented.

The photoplay was woven about the star, and presents a strong tale of primitive emotions and primal passions, evidencing a hitherto unsuspected aspect of Miss Pickford's versatility. This is probably the first time in Mary Pickford's phenomenal screen career that she has ever impersonated an Indian Girl, and as Little Pal, Miss Pickford furnishes ample proof that to her boundless art nothing is impossible.

Throughout the entire production she literally lives the life, and apparently without an effort suggests all the mannerisms and emotions of the little Indian girl, and in her wondrous characterization one forgets even the brilliant ability of the star and sees only the creature which she similates.

The atmosphere of this subject is entirely distinctive. The greater part of the story is laid in Kilisnoo, Alaska, at the time of the rush to the goldfields, and amid the environment of gambling houses and saloons Little Pal grows to womanhood, with the evil influences that surround her unable to crush the courage, heroism and morality innate within her.

"Little Pal" will be recorded as another triumph for Mary Pickford's versatility, and is another evidence of the Famous Players Film company's constant efforts to produce a feature program of wide variety.

Brenon Wounded by Revolver Directing Fox Film

THOUGH bleeding profusely, as a result of having accidentally shot himself in the leg, while directing the making of a picture at the Fox studio in Jersey City, Director Herbert Brenon, of the Fox Film corporation, who is making "The Soul of Broadway," with Valeska Suratt, pluckily continued with his work for three-quarters of an hour, until a surgeon, summoned from Christ Hospital, arrived with the ambulance, and he was compelled to desist while his wound was dressed.

In directing a mob scene in the film play it was necessary for Mr. Brenon to convey instructions by revolver shots, so that they might be heard above the mob noise. Though the cartridges were all blanks, one of them was wadded rather heavily, and it was this one which was discharged in such a way that the wadding struck Mr. Brenon's leg, severing a small artery. He was bound, however, to proceed with his directing and it was with difficulty that he was induced to stop.

After his wound was dressed he was conveyed in his automobile to his home in New York. Though rendered weak by loss of blood, his injury is not serious.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

Airdome Tax Equals Closed House Levy

EXHIBITORS operating airdomes are to be subjected to the same amount of tax as those operating closed houses, according to a new ruling of the commissioner of internal revenue, W. H. Osborn, at Washington, D. C., although those operating the latter having an airdome adjoining or nearby will be required to pay but one special tax, provided that exhibitions are not given sumultaneously in both. The commissioner had heretofore ruled that proprietors of airdomes had merely to take out a special tax at a cost of ten dollars, this, in the case of operators of closed houses regardless of a previous tax paid on such theatres.

Considerable dissatisfaction was manifested by the theatre people; yet, on the other hand, it was not felt that those operating airdomes for a few months only in each year, and at that subject to weather conditions, should be made to pay the full rate.

The matter was taken up by a number of exhibitors with Commissioner W. H. Osborn, who seemed to be inclined to agree with the protestations of both classes. Thus it is that his decision comes as a bolt from the clear sky, for it was thought that the matter had been definitely settled.

Commissioner Osborn holds that airdomes are subject to subsection six of section three of "An act to increase the internal revenue, and for other purposes," enacted October 22, 1914, which provides that proprietors of theatres, museums and concert halls shall be taxed according to the seating capacity of such places—having a seating capacity of not more than two hundred and fifty shall pay $25; between two hundred and fifty and five hundred, $50; between five hundred and eight hundred, $75, and more than eight hundred, shall pay $100. Airdomes had been taxed under subsection eight of section three, providing for the payment of $10 for other exhibitions or shows where an admission fee is charged, which are not enumerated in any other place in section three.

The Decision in Full

Commissioner Osborn's decision in full is as follows:

"To Collectors of Internal Revenue, Revenue Agents, and others:

"This office has previously held that proprietors of airdomes in which operatic, dramatic or other representations, plays, or other performances, motion picture shows, etc., for admission to which entrance money is received, are given, are required to pay special tax under the provisions of the eighth subdivision of section 3, act of October 22, 1914.

"However, upon further deliberation, it is now of the opinion of such airdomes are required to pay a special tax under the provisions of the sixth subdivision of section 3, act aforesaid, such tax being based upon the seating capacity of such airdomes.

"Where such airdome is adjacent to a theatre, for which the special tax has been paid, and the seating capacity of the airdome does not exceed the seating capacity of the theatre, and performances are not given simultaneously in the airdome and theatre, the special-tax stamp secured to cover the theatre will cover performances given in the airdome.

"Where the proprietor of a theatre operates an airdome at another location upon closing his theatre he may transfer the special-tax stamp issued for such theatre to the airdome, provided, of course, the seating capacity of the airdome does not exceed the seating capacity of the theatre and the special-tax stamp issued to cover performances given in an airdome, may be transfered to cover a theatre owned by the same party, under the above conditions.

"Proprietors of such airdomes who have paid special taxes under the eighth subdivision of section 3, act aforesaid, unless they hold special-tax stamp for a theatre which may be transferred to cover such airdomes, will be required to take out special-tax stamp under the sixth subdivision of section 3, act aforesaid, and may thereupon present for redemption special-tax stamp secured under the eighth subdivision above mentioned. Of course, under such circumstances, liability to fifty per cent. penalty will not be incurred.

"All previous ruling conflicting with the above are hereby revoked.

"W. H. OSBORN,
"Commissioner of Internal Revenue."

Whether or not this new ruling is necessary because of the fact that the finances of the government have gotten into a most deplorable state cannot be determined, yet the increase will result in a much greater return.

The war tax has been something of a fizzle in the way of raising funds to the level required because of the low tariff; nor has the income tax proven any great success, and the Treasury officials are facing an enormous deficit in the income of the National Government, and it is believed that when the books are balanced for the fiscal year ending June 30, it will be found that Uncle Sam is short in his funds something like $60,000,000.

It is another case of robbing Peter to pay Paul—taxing motion picture theatres and airdomes to make up in part for the reduction in the tariff on imported articles so that the high cost of living might be lowered, but which scheme has failed in every particular in that the cost of living is higher than ever before.

Full Tax an Injustice

The full tax on motion picture theatres as provided by subsection six, of section 3, of the law quoted, however taken, is an injustice to exhibitors in that they are subjected to the same amount of taxation as are the legitimate theatres for admission to which the charge is many times greater than that exacted by exhibitors.

When Congress comes again into session it will find itself face to face with the necessity of devising ways and means for securing funds to continue the government. The first consideration will be the reenactment of the war tax measure. Now, it is not believed that Congress really intended to place so heavy a burden on motion picture theatres and airdomes seemingly the butts of all sorts of legislation, so exhibitors should take the matter in hand and advise their representatives in Washington how they stand in the matter—urge them that if the war tax measure is again considered, they should use their influence to have that sum to be assessed against the screen houses made more in keeping with the admission charges made.

FARM PAPER EDITOR IS MADE CENSOR BOARD MEMBER

Thomas F. Sturgess, of Omaha, head of the "Twentieth Century Farmer," a farm paper, has been appointed a member of the national advisory committee of the National Board of Motion Picture Censors. Mr. Sturgess gained considerable reputation in Omaha and throughout the West as president of the social service board, which is the only organization heretofore to censor motion pictures in Omaha.

May Limit Minneapolis Theatres to Special Sections

JUST when the Minnesota motion picture troubles have been ended by the defeat of the proposed obnoxious legislation and when the Northwestern Motion Picture Exhibitors Association thought it was entitled to a little respite, a patrol limit is proposed for motion picture theaters. In itself this proposal is not offensive, but the fight has given rise to bitter talk, to suggestions for censorship and to statements that, were it not that they might be believed by the narrow minded, would be taken as merely humorous.

The stir began when Joseph Ranger, a Minneapolis business man of high standing wanted to build and operate a motion picture theater at Nicollet avenue and Forty-third street. This is in reality in the residence district though there are stores on the street in that locality.

Residents of the thirteenth ward, members of associations, churches and others protested against theaters in the locality saying that they should be confined to business localities and certain traffic arteries of the city.

The association does not oppose patrol limits but they want them reasonable. Some of the antagonists want the shows confined to the downtown business district and to the larger outlying districts. In arguing against allowing theatres to spread through the city generally they have charged that boys learn how to commit crimes by seeing motion pictures, that many murderers and bandits got their first lessons there, that the darkened room encourages immorality.

Parents will be unable to keep their children home, no child will study in school, some of them will follow the example of the Chicago street car bandits and many other direful things will happen if the theaters are within walking distance of the homes.

These arguments lost much of their weight however, when it was shown that some of the best residence districts, which are just off the trade arteries, have motion picture theaters and when it was also shown that the children even when allowed to attend these theaters alone did not loiter before or after the performances.

These children were shown to be the equal of any in the city with fewer cases in juvenile court.

The patrol limits ordinance will probably pass but the council ordinance committee will decide just how far the limitation will go.

Every person who appeared before the council committee admitted that he liked motion picture shows itself, though they refused to be influenced thereby.

Mr. Ranger's offer to keep children out of the theater unless accompanied by adults, to give a children's performance once a week and to co-operate with the residents of the district in the selections of high class programs were ignored.

This plan has already been carried out in northeast Minneapolis where the theater managers, school teachers and parents talk things over frequently, decide on what good films should be shown and what should not be shown.

It is noticeable that this plan of co-operation, which has resulted in a correlation of the motion pictures and the school work, is in a district containing the largest proportion of foreign born. The people of that district are mostly Austrian, Russians, Italians and numerous groups from the various eastern European peoples.

SELIG AND CAMPBELL ARE CUTTING "NE'ER-DO-WELL"

Colonel William N. Selig and Director Colin Campbell are busy cutting the "Ne'er-Do-Well" at the Selig Edendale studio. This is no small task, as more than 20,000 feet of negative was exposed in putting Rex Beach's great story into film picture.

Mr. Selig accompanied a company of players to the Canal Zone when the story was filmed. It will be released soon as a Red Seal play. Many interesting and educational scenes along the great Panama Canal will be shown.

Portland, Ore., Exhibitors Lose Censorship Suit

THAT the motion picture censorship ordinance of Portland, Ore., providing for a censorship board and requiring all pictures to be approved before they are shown, is thoroughly legal and valid, was proven when Circuit Judge Davis decided to this effect in the case of Edwin F. James against the city, to test the validity of the recently adopted ordinance.

This gives the measure a legal standing, unless the case is appealed to the State Supreme Court.

It is not known yet whether an appeal will be taken.

The measure passed several months ago upon the appointment by the mayor of a censorship board. The ordinance requires that before a picture is shown in any theatre in Portland, it must first have been viewed and passed by the local censorship board, or by viewers appointed by them.

Manager James of the Majestic theatre, having had several pictures turned down by the board before they became legalized, and one picture absolutely condemned by both advisory and appeal boards, started suit, contesting the proposition on the ground that the measure was illegal in that it was a delegation of power on the part of the city council, and that the system involved the confiscation of property without due process of law. It was contended that the city has no right to pass upon motion pictures except to the extent of eliminating those which might be obscene.

City Attorney La Roche filed a demurrer to the complaint in which contention was made that the measure was valid in every respect, the delegation of power to the censorship board being in compliance with the city charter and state laws. Circuit Judge Davis sustained this demurrer, thus settling the case in favor of the city and the censor board.

Harrisburg Curfew Law Is Now Operative

MOTION picture exhibitors of Harrisburgh, Pa., are anxiously awaiting the effect on their new business of the curfew law that, despite much opposition, was passed by the city commissioners last Tuesday and became operative on June 21.

The ordinance provides that all children under fifteen years old, unaccompanied by adults, must be off the streets by 9:30 o'clock or their parents or guardians will be subject to a fine of five dollars, or imprisonment for not more than twenty-four hours.

What concerns the exhibitors most is how strictly the police intend to enforce the law with respect to children going to and from motion picture theaters. It is conceded that if the letter of the law is carried out, children, who may have gone to a theater early in the evening, will subject their parents to arrest if they are seen going home from the theater alone after 9:30 o'clock. Whether this will have the effect of keeping the children away from the theaters in the early evening, on the theory that they will not go unless they can have time enough to see the whole show, is causing the theaters a good deal of concern.

One rather surprising feature of the situation is that the police have made it known that they are going to request all the theater managers to throw announcements on their screens a few minutes before 9:30 so that the children can get home before the curfew hour. As one exhibitor said today:

"That is a good deal like 'rubbing it in.' The city authorities pass a law which quite likely may hurt our business, and then look to us to help injure our trade by turning the children out in the middle of a performance."

SCHENECTADY PLANS TO LIMIT THEATRES, ONE TO EACH 5,000

Proprietors of motion picture theatres in Schenectady, N. Y., are making an effort to limit the number of screen houses to one for every 5,000 residents. Under the terms of an ordinance the number of picture play houses to be licensed on the basis of the present population would be fifteen.

There are now in operation nineteen houses. None of these would be refused a license and licenses may be transferred. The ordinance provides that no new licenses can be issued until the ratio is less than one to every 5,000 persons.

Opposition to the ordinance when it comes up for final passage will be along the lines of preventing a monopoly of the motion picture business. It is stated that if the ordinance is adopted the association of motion picture theatre managers will immediately increase the admission price.

J. R. Freuler Succeeds Aitken As Mutual Head

Annual Election of Officers Brings Organizer of American Film Manufacturing Company and North American Film Corporation to the Helm—Edwin Thanhouser Fills Berth Left by New Chief—Felix Kahn Re-elected Treasurer—Mr. Freuler Outlines Policies He Will Pursue in Extended Statement

THE annual election of officers of the Mutual Film Corporation was held in Richmond, Va., June 23. John R. Freuler was elected president and general manager, succeeding Harry E. Aitken; Edwin Thanhouser, first vice-president, succeeding Mr. Freuler; Felix E. Kahn was re-elected treasurer; Daniel M. Field, secretary and general counsel, succeeding Miss E. L. Thomas in the former position, and Arthur N. Seligsberg in the latter.

These officers, with Crawford Livingstone, compose the executive committee. Other appointments to official positions will be announced.

The business statement issued after the meeting declared a growing volume of business and handsome profits as the summary of the twelvemonth.

To Lay Emphasis on Selling End

With the election of John R. Freuler to the presidency of the Mutual Film Corporation, a man who has made a big success as a theatre owner thus becomes the head of this organization of independent manufacturers. Mr. Freuler has, for years, conducted a chain of profitable theatres in the West.

The Mutual, therefore, will devote its activities to the selling end of the business, as Mr. Freuler is determined to perfect his plans of distribution so that exhibitors will be given every facility to conduct their enterprises profitably.

Mr. Freuler discussed the situation immediately after the meeting which resulted in his election as president.

"The relation of this organization to the film business combines the responsibility of distributor and jobber as well as wholesaler. Our chief task is merchandising our products so that we may all secure a reasonable return for our money. Hence the necessity of doing everything possible in the interests of the exhibitor or retailer that he may secure returns, without which this business cannot be conducted successfully from either the manufacturer's or distributor's standpoint.

"We want to do for the retailer everything that will prove of benefit to him. We want the exhibitor to be put into a position where our service will be helpful and will neither begin nor end with simply supplying him with films.

Attractive Programs at Low Price

"On the other hand, the exhibitor must not be passive. The best show in the world will not be a success unless the exhibitor co-operates, unless he arranges his lobby attractively and varies the same with regularity. He must advertise attractions so that the public will know what he has got. The exhibitor, therefore, must realize his own responsibility and though we can do a great deal for him, he has got to be his own greatest help.

"The regular program of the Mutual Film Corporation will be strengthened in every possible way. I am one of those who believe that the moving picture business is one of volume. It has been so successful because it has brought to millions a form of entertainment that is interesting and instructive.

"Big investments have been made in staging moving picture plays, and the money has come back to the manufacturers with interest, because of a fact that enables an organization like Mutual to distribute many prints of these pictures. When you consider that on an average of 18,000,000 people every day go to the pictures in this country, the importance of this volume angle will be apparent.

"While occasionally features of unusual nature may command two dollar admission prices, one must not be confused over the real destiny of the moving picture business. It is essentially entertainment for the masses and not the classes. Hence it is our duty to furnish a program that may be used in a big, broad way by theatres charging fifteen, ten and five cents.

"It is my intention, as soon as possible, to supply the exhibitors all over the country except in perhaps two or three metropolitan centers, with a plan of model exchanges. It is my purpose to establish these model exchanges wherever practical on the ground floor. This is done entirely for the convenience of the exhibitors.

"I want our representatives to sell the theatre men service plus merchandise. There is a responsibility on the representatives of Mutual beginning before the delivery of the film and not ending either with the showing of the story on the screen. In other words, it is my desire that a spirit of co-operation prevail throughout all Mutual offices and I will work to that end."

John R. Freuler, the new president of the Mutual, was born in Monroe, Wis., forty-two years ago. The family later located in Milwaukee, where Mr. Freuler received his schooling and early business education.

How Freuler Rose in the Film Business

The future head of the Mutual was one of the pioneers in the moving picture business. He started one of the first exchanges in Wisconsin, with headquarters in Milwaukee. This was placed on a paying basis in so short a time that he was prompted to extend his activities to St. Louis, Joplin, Mo., and many other western points.

JOHN R. FREULER, THE NEW PRESIDENT OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

Out of these few exchanges really developed the idea of the Mutual Film Corporation, although Mr. Freuler, for some years, handled licensed products prior to the "independents" getting together.

From the very beginning Mr. Freuler's policy has been one of helpfulness to the exhibitor. He learned from his experience in other business that the spirit of service made for success not only with the consumers, or users of the product, but also with the retailers; hence, his anxiety to help move resistance so that exhibitors might have profitable returns from films leased.

Mr. Freuler started the Calumet Film exchange in Chicago, which subsequently was sold to the General Film Company.

With S. S. Hutchinson, Mr. Freuler organized the American Film Manufacturing Company, with its manufacturing plant in Chicago, and studios in California. Other manufacturers, who discovered that they were up against a stone wall, in their efforts to secure a market, were quick to see the advantage of cooperating with men like Mr. Freuler and Mr. Hutchinson, whose experience not only included the making of pictures, but the distribution and leasing of them as well.

Mr. Freuler, in co-operation with Mr. Hutchinson, planned the manufacture and distribution of the big, continued photoplay, "The Diamond from the Sky." Out of this grew the North American Film corporation, of which Mr. Freuler is president.

While Mr. Hutchinson was the master producer on this picture at the Santa Barbara studios, Mr. Freuler completed one of the most elaborate and probably one of the most successful programs of distribution ever attempted on any big film feature. That he applied real business methods to this enterprise is manifested by the record-breaking bookings which "The Diamond from the Sky" has secured all over the country.

Mr. Freuler will take up his residence in New York as the president of the Mutual Film corporation. He is moving with his family, which consists of Mrs. Freuler and two daughters.

VAN HUSAN'S NEW PROJECTION ROOM

Manager F. A. Van Husan, Jr., of the Leammle Film Service Exchange at Omaha, is completing a projection room in connection with his exchange, where he will review every film before it is released.

The recent trade report in "Motion Picture News," wherein he found better pictures were in demand in the Middle West, led him to plan the new room.

"If the exhibitors want better pictures, I am going to do everything I can to furnish them," said Van Husan. "In this new room I will privately view every picture. If it does not look good to me, it won't to the exhibitor out in the State. I can then be in a position to personally advise each exhibitor whether the picture he is getting is a good one, to be boosted with advertising, or whether it is only fair or even poor."

WALTHALL IS IN STRONG FIRST PLAY FOR ESSANAY

Henry B. Walthall takes a part in "The Fatal Temper," his first photoplay with Essanay, which is exceptionally well adapted to his type of acting. Mr. Walthall's strongest work is in portraying intense emotion. His skill in bringing out all the deep feelings of the human heart is well known.

In this three reel play he takes the part of a fine, likable youth, but who has a violent temper. His father also has an ungovernable temper, but lacks his son's happy, forgiving disposition. Finally the boy is forced to leave home through clashes with his father.

He returns to effect a reconciliation. The father upbraids his wife for permitting him in the house. He raises his hand as though to strike her and the son hurls a paperweight at him, killing his father.

All the various shades of emotion, of anger and grief, shown by the character, are clearly portrayed by Mr. Walthall, and brought out with intensity.

The Warners and Lichtman Form Standard Pictures

Proposed Plan Embraces the Manufacture of 18 Features and Short Subjects a Week, and Includes the Pictures from Studios Already Well Known

An important alliance of producing companies to make and distribute a program is announced by Al Lichtman, Abe Warner and H. M. Warner. This is Standard Pictures, Inc., formed to distribute the output of prominent American manufacturers. The plan is to manufacture and distribute a program which combines features and short subjects. The start will be with eighteen reels a week.

The production end will be in the hands of Combined Photoplay Producers, Inc., making pictures under the following brands: Gaumont (Empress brand), Crystal, Ideal, Starlight, Grandin, Pyramid, Lariat, Premier, Sunshine and others. These brands have already entered into a contract with Standard Pictures, Inc.

In outlining the policies of the new company, its heads made the following statement:

"All of the brands connected with this Combined Photoplay Producers, Inc., are well known throughout the country and some of the men connected with the producing corporation have achieved great prominence and success, among them being: Ludwig G. B. Erb, Joseph A. Golden, G. V. Hamilton, Emiel Offerman, Otis B. Thayer, Harry and Aubrey Mittenthal, and A. N. and Ray Smallwood.

"Among the stars appearing in the productions of this program are such favorites as: Ethel Grandin, Edwin August, Dot Farley, Reeva Greenwood, William V. Mong, Walter Fishten, Wharton Jones, Charles Hutchinson, Edith Thornton, George and Dolly Larkin, Edna Payne, Fred Hearn, Will Scherer, James Aubrey, Walter Kending, Frederick Church, Lillian Hamilton, Marian Swayne, and Joe Levering.

"Several prominent exchange owners have already signified their intention to handle this program in their respective territories and exchange affiliations will soon be completed."

Al Lichtman, Abe Warner and Harry Warner, the three heads of Standard Pictures, Inc., are all well known in the business. Mr. Lichtman was sales manager of the Famous Players Film company from its start until last fall. Then he started the Alco Film company and organized the exchanges. Since then he has been connected with the Select Film Booking agency and has been in business for himself. He is a thoroughly competent and practical film man.

A. Warner and H. M. Warner are two of the brothers who started Warner's Features. They have been feature distributors for about five years and know that end of the industry thoroughly.

Associated Film Sets First Release for August 16

Date for the Service Postponed in Deference to the Wishes of the Exchangemen Arranging to Handle the Products of the Company

At the New York offices of the Associated Film Manufacturers, Inc., General Manager Bard announced that the first releases of the new concern, which is to launch a new programme of twenty-one reels a week, would occur on or about August 16.

Several months have already been consumed in surveying the market, and in determining definitely the policy of the new concern. Then production at the plants of the seven contributing companies began, and tentative arrangements were made to begin releasing during July.

This intention was entertained up to within a few days ago when several of the exchangemen who are to handle the Associated service, voiced an opinion that the new service would meet with a better reception in August than it would at the early date.

500 EXTRAS APPEAR IN "FLOATING DEATH"

Five hundred men, women and children worked under the direction of Richard Stanton at night recently in some scenes for "The Floating Death," a two-part melodrama of the sea that will be released on the Mutual program by the Kay-Bee-New York Motion Picture corporation, June 25.

The scenes were made in the waters of San Pedro harbor to depict the burning of a vessel at sea.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By George D. Proctor

THE most startling news of the week lies in the details of the plans of H. E. Aitken, C. O. Baumann, Adam Kessel, Jr., D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett. Those names mean a lot in the film business. Aitken financed the Mutual and made it what it is today, being its president and active head. Kessel and Baumann are the heads of the New York Motion Picture corporation and men who have always believed in making good pictures first and counting the cost later.

Griffith, Ince and Sennett are surely the best known and probably the best directors in the country. Griffith stands alone in drama and Sennett in comedy. Ince has been regarded purely as a director of spectacular subjects, but pictures like "The Alien" make one think that he is not so far behind Griffith in drama.

Everybody knows who they all are, anyway.

The point is that the formation of a $4,000,000 company to make fifty pictures a year at an average cost of $100,000 each and operate a chain of 400 two-dollar motion picture theatres in this country is announced by these gentlemen.

Stupendous is the only word.

In this shape, the plans must be a little idealistic. "Cabiria" and Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" are the only two-dollar moving pictures yet made. More than a year was spent in making "Cabiria" and more than eight months on "The Birth of a Nation." So it will require a large crew of very fine directors to make fifty two-dollar pictures a year. All this without touching on the work necessary to annex 400 houses fit to show two-dollar pictures.

For all that there is no doubt but that this combination will make more expensive pictures than anyone else has ever averaged and get better prices for them. Kessel and Baumann always believed in the high class picture. Mr. Aitken's ideas now reflect those of Mr. Griffith who has always believed in high class pictures and has done more than any other one man to advance the cause of the motion picture art.

This combination is an affiliation of men who will never balk at spending money, no matter how much, in the producing end (and shrewd marketers withal) with three men who are probably America's greatest directors.

Probably Messrs. Aitken, Kessel, Baumann, Griffith, Ince and Sennett do not expect to make fifty pictures classing with "The Birth of a Nation" in a year. But if any group will go ahead and make the very best pictures possible, regardless of expense or time, this is the bunch.

And the good motion picture theatre won't be overshadowed, not even by a chain of two-dollar theatres. The man who reaps the financial benefit of every boost given the artistic end of the industry is the exhibitor. He should remember that and be grateful.

Another important angle of this announcement lies in the fact that Aitken, Kessel and Baumann have been important factors in the business end of the Mutual Film corporation, for which company Griffith, Ince and Sennett have been making pictures.

Before this edition reaches the Mississippi, the names of the new officers of the Mutual Film corporation will be common knowledge. Barring the utterly unexpected they may be confidently forecasted as: President, John R. Freuler; third vice-president, J. N. Naulty, a re-election; and treasurer, Felix Kahn, succeeding himself. This supposition is made on the strength of the first meeting of the board of directors held Wednesday, June 13, at Richmond, Va.; for the Mutual is a Virginia corporation. At that meeting Roy Aitken, brother of H. E. Aitken, and A. P. Gleichman, were replaced on the board by J. W. Smith, of New York, and S. M. Field, of Milwaukee, both Freuler men. So it seems that Freuler controls the situation and, if he so sees fit, can elect himself president, which he will probably do.

The contract of the New York Motion Picture corporation with the Mutual expires in August. The entry of Kessel and Baumann upon their new venture will leave the Mutual with the Thanhouser, American, Beauty, Falstaff, Royal, Reliance and Majestic brands. But H. E. Aitken is a big factor in Reliance and Majestic and, even if the Mutual retains the brand names, the services of D. W. Griffith will be lost.

The hole made by the withdrawal of Kay-Bee, Keystone, Broncho and Domino must be filled some way. This paves the way for a further shake-up in the alignment of the producing companies of the industry.

Going from financial to international conflict without pausing for breath, Joe Farnham's talk on the European war at the Screen Club last Thursday evening was the most revealing and compelling discourse heard in many a long day. Joe's words were those of a man who has just returned with a view point gained through passports better than those of a newspaper correspondent.

Joe's intimates have known for a long time that he is a public speaker of personality and ability. Last Thursday he demonstrated that quite successfully before about five hundred persons, standing room being at a premium. Hearing him was like being transported to the embattled portion of Europe. Let's hope he gives the public a treat ere long; for this is no idle jest—his talk was a treat.

No truce has been declared in the war against persons "discovering" that "the motion picture is only in its infancy." Peggy Shannon of United please take warning.

The bankruptcy proceedings brought against the United Film service constitute a friendly suit, according to J. C. Graham, the general manager. Not only will business go on as usual but the program will increase from twelve to twenty-one reels a week soon, Mr. Graham says. Leo C. Stern, an attorney of 15 William street, is the receiver.

The engagement is announced of Bert Adler, manager of the Universal-Coytesville studios, and Miss Kitty Katz, of the Universal head offices. Beg pardon, sir, but Kitty Katz is a feline name.

Jewelry valued at more than $8,000 was recently stolen from the Chicago home of Col. W. N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope company. The stones were several diamonds and a ruby, most of them set in rings.

P. A. Parsons, Pathe's busy little advertising man, whose energies right now are concentrated on "Elaine" is taking his first vacation in ten years, accompanied by Mrs. Parsons and a fishing rod. He leaves behind his new office on the thirteenth floor of 25 West Forty-fifth street, and George Seitz, scenario editor, who has just moved over from Jersey City.

"I'm surprised that you didn't win a prize," was the popular remark of the evening when the rain finally decided to let the Universal hold its outing on the steamship "Mandalay" as a consolation affair for the beauties who did not win trips to California in the contest just ended. All the Universalites and friends were there.

The inevitable dancing contest was won by Rose Cohen and George Wollmer with Helen Conboy and W. J. Moore, Itala's busy life-saver, second. Mr. and Mrs. John B. Clymer would have won third prize if there had been any, take it from John. Peter Milne's partner promised him a consolation prize which is eagerly awaited in the cause of Universal peace.

William F. Haddock, the Screen Club's own "Silent Bill," realized for the 'steenth time the trials of a director when a premature explosion knocked Betty Marshall, star of the Gotham Film company, and Frederic DeBellevile, off a scow into the water, injuring them both. It was planned to blow the scow up for "A Trade Secret" after the players had jumped, but the explosion, unlike pardon, came too soon.

Incidentally Bill has just been elected president of the Actors' Society of America for the third consecutive time.

Henry Schlatter, vice-president and treasurer of the All-Celtic Film company, and Hazel Montgrieffe were married recently. The honeymoon includes a trip to the San Francisco fair. The groom's All-Celtic associates gave the pair a cut glass vase.

William Fox's invitations drew a large crowd Sunday morning to the Riviera theatre roof, in Upper Broadway, to see motion pictures in the taking. Scenes were filmed of Valeska Suratt's act "Black Crepe and Diamonds." The guests composed the audience and were photographed too.

Hugh A. D'Arcy, who has been press agent at the Lubin Philadelphia studio for nearly four years, is taking a well earned vacation. He is spending three months in the Catskills and will write scenarios as well as acquire a fine, healthy bronze tint. The end of the Summer will find him back at Philadelphia. Hugh's literary accomplishments, among them "The Face on the Floor," are well known and recognized. If he turns out a script as widely known as his verse, his fortune is made.

Jule Brulatour, the Eastman agent, is omitted from the list of dealers in films. Everything else is about as accurate. Duncan McRae Is Made Director General for Edison

Arrangement Will Give Horace G. Plimpton More Time to Devote to the Business End of Studio Management—New Director in Films Less Than Two Years

METEORIC indeed is the career of Duncan McRae in motion pictures. Scarcely a year and a half ago, entering the film world from the legitimate, he made an immediate impression on the screen in memorable impersonations. But a month ago he produced for Edison, which company comprises his entire motion picture experience, his first picture and acted in it—"Through Turbulent Waters." Almost immediately after the presentation of this picture Mr. McRae's appointment as director general was announced at the Edison studio.

DUNCAN MacRAE

The creation of director general marks a distinct change with the Edison company, as it places the destinies of that company in the hands of two, one—Mr. McRae—to devote his entire time to supervising and generally directing all the productions and the centering of Mr. Plimpton's time more on the purely business end of the studio management, though he yet will exercise an overseeing hand over the whole studio.

Previously, Mr. Plimpton's time has been spent both on the "floor" and at the business executive's desk, but the greatly increasing cares, since that company has gone in for weekly three and four reel features on the regular program and the production ultimately of longer features, the selection of a director general became necessary.

Mr. McRae is now finishing a three-reeler in which Gertrude McCoy is featured, after which he will assume his new duties. He will no longer produce nor act, but give his whole time to the bettering of the Edison productions.

Despite Mr. McRae's short experience in films, he draws from a long and successful career as actor, director and manager, most of which was gained in the best English companies and theatres. 'Twas most natural that Mr. McRae should choose the theatrical profession, as many of his family have occupied distinguished positions in it, numbered among those being the eminent Sir Charles Wyndham, his uncle, and Bruce McRae, his brother.

As an actor, some of his most striking screen work has been his evident versatility, ranging from splendidly sketched light comedy characters to "heavy" eccentric impersonations, not to speak of an unusual presence that tended to heighten his personality and intellectual interpretations. This wealth of successful experience, with his at-finger-end knowledge of stage and screen craft, will be bent and applied with characteristic intensity that Edison films will indirectly register the hand behind them all.

Along with this change are the appointments of Albert Kelly, of the scenario department, to assistant to Director John Collins; Charles McGee as assistant to Director Langdon West; and that of Bernard Durning from assistant directorship to assistant stage manager.

16 V-L-S-E Features for Second Quarter Announced

All Releases Are Founded on Well Known Dramatic Productions, and Star Players of Note Recruited from Speaking Stage

THE Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, in announcing its list of releases for the second quarter, beginning with August 2 and ending November 15, makes public a list of features that in variety covers every field of the dramatic art, and embodies themes of all human emotion.

In the sixteen features that will come into screen evidence on the Big Four program in the next three months, the principal characters will be portrayed by an aggregation of stars recruited from the foremost ranks of the stage, and the heights of motion picture popularity.

In the production of these features it is estimated that the Big Four have expended approximately half a million dollars, and in many cases the features were made under the personal supervision of the heads of the four pioneer manufacturers in the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay affiliation.

Among the stars who will appear in this exceptionally strong program of picture plays are Marie Dressler, Robert Edeson, Edith Storey, Joseph Kilgour, Virginia Pierson, Myrtle Gonzales, William Duncan, Dorothy Bernard, George Soule Spencer, Grace Darmond, Harry Mestayer, Antonio Moreno, June Keith, Johnny Slavin, Beatrice Morgan and Octavia Handworth, supplemented by a host of players popular alike to dramatic audiences and picture play patrons.

August 2 Lubin will release "The District Attorney," adapted from the successful play of the same name, written by Charles Kleine and Harrison Grey Fiske. Dorothy Bernard and George Soule Spencer asume the leading roles, supported by a strong and evenly balanced cast of well-known Lubin players.

"The Chalice of Courage," produced by the Vitagraph Company from Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's novel, was made by the western Vitagraph players, and is a play teeming with the most intense interest from its opening to closing reflection. Myrtle Gonzales and William Duncan portray the leading characters, and the support they receive from the rest of the extensive cast is of superior dramatic excellence.

"A Bunch of Keys," Essanay contribution for August 16, is the film version of Charles Hoyt's successful stage comedy. June Keith and Johnny Slavin will be seen in the leading parts.

"The House of a Thousand Candles," from Meredith Nicholson's novel, will be presented by the Selig company on August 23, with Grace Darmond and Harry Mestayer presenting the principal characters.

"Tillie's Tomato Surprise," in which the inimitable Marie Dressler is expected to repeat the success she made upon the occasion of her first film appearance, will be offered by the Lubin company on August 30.

In addition to these, five big productions will be released the first month of the second quarter of the V-L-S-E program. The Vitagraph will offer "Mortmain," with Robert Edeson, on September 6; "The Dust of Egypt," with Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno, on October 4, and "The Writing on the Wall," with Joseph Kilgour and Virginia Pierson, November 1.

The Essanay company will present "The Man Trail" September 13, from the story by Henry Owens, author of "The Misleading Lady"; on October 11, "In the Palace of the King," and on November 8 a screen version of the famous stage success, "The Tin Soldier."

The Selig company will offer "The Circular Staircase," on September 20; "Whom the Gods Might Destroy," on October 18, and "The Ne'er-Do-Well," on November 15.

The Lubin company will contribute an adaptation of the remarkable dramatic success, "The Great Ruby," on September 27, and on October 25 a film adaptation of the recent dramatic success, "The Great Divide."

PNEUMONIA STOPS WORK OF GOLD SEAL COMPANY

Universal City was startled this week when Cleo Madison and Ray Hanford, both members of the Gold Seal company, were stricken with pneumonia. Charles Giblyn and the Gold Seal company were finishing a two-reel story of society life, entitled "The Flight of the Nightbird," by H. G. Stafford, when Miss Madison and Mr. Hanford, both of whom had been suffering from heavy colds, were suddenly taken ill.

Miss Madison was taken home in her car, while Mr. Hanford was assisted to the hospital in Universal City. Mr. Giblyn immediately stopped work on the production.

SONG WRITTEN AROUND RAFFERTY ISSUED BY MUSICAL PUBLISHERS

Peaceful Rafferty, the genial Irish character who made his bow to screen audiences only a few months ago, has proven so popular that Earnest Ball and J. Kernan Brennan have written a song around him which will be issued this week by the musical publishers, Witmark & Sons.

Rafferty appears to picture theatre audiences once a week.

Elmer Booth, Star in Mutual Komics, Killed by Auto

Comedian, Who Taught in St. Vincent's College Before Appearing on the Speaking Stage, Was in Car with Two Griffith Players, Who Escaped with Slight Injuries

BROADWAY heard with regret confirmation of the rumor that Elmer Booth, long prominent as a comedian, met death in an automobile accident in Los Angeles last week. Tod Browning and George Seigmann, well known photoplay directors and actors, were injured at the same time. All three were employed by D. W. Griffith at the Mutual Film Corporation's Hollywood studios.

ELMER BOOTH

Browning and Seigmann are both in the California hospital, and it is hoped that their injuries will not prove serious. Booth leaves a mother and sister, who live in Los Angeles. The accident was due to a heavy fog. The car, driven by Browning, collided with a street work car loaded with iron rails. Browning did not see the rear lamp on the street car.

Elmer Booth was born in Los Angeles, where he qualified on his graduation from St. Vincent's college as an authority on physical culture, oratory and elocution.

Later he appeared under Charles Frohman's management, with Arnold Daly, in "The Boys of Company B." With Douglas Fairbanks in "The Cad" he made a pronounced hit, and in "The Gentleman of Leisure" he was declared by Alan Dale to be "the best stage burglar Broadway has seen to date—he lives his part instead of acting it."

He created the name part in "Stop Thief," and became a popular favorite. During his summers he worked under D. W. Griffith in motion pictures, and appeared with Mary Pickford and May Irwin in film dramas. He also made a name for himself as a magazine writer.

Last winter Mr. Griffith persuaded Booth to abandon the speaking stage for the films. He had appeared exclusively since then in the Mutual's Komic productions, and had built up a considerable following when his untimely end overtook him. He is deeply mourned, not only by those who watched his last appearance in "Mr. Wallick's Wallet," but by the motion picture colony in the City of Films as well.

WELFARE BOARD IN DALLAS TO CENSOR PICTURES

The Board of Public Censors of Dallas, Tex., which passes upon motion picture films and other public exhibitions, probably will in the future be under the jurisdiction of the Board of Welfare, it was stated by Mayor Lindsley, of Dallas, recently.

TIGER HUNT WILL THRILL IN VITAGRAPH SUBJECT

What will probably be one of the most thrilling scenes ever photographed by the Vitagraph company will be the filming of a tiger hunt, one of the many big scenes in "Heights of Hazard," a picturization by Eugene Mullin of Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's interesting story of the same name, now nearing completion under the direction of Capt. Harry Lambart. In staging the tiger hunt, two elephants, a tiger and fully two hundred people will be used, the cost of this scene alone approximating five thousand dollars.

"Heights of Hazard" will be listed as a Blue Ribbon feature in five parts, and will serve to introduce Charles Richman as a Vitagraph star in the portrayal of Billy Williams, the Unknown. Mr. Richman will be supported by Eleanor Woodruff as Olivia and Charles Kent as Mr. Martindale, her father.

VENTILATION TAKEN UP BY NEW ORLEANS PAPERS

Considerable attention has been given by the New Orleans newspapers in editorials and news to the ventilation of Crescent City houses. With the closing of the regular theatres and the improvement in photoplays, some big business has been done by New Orleans houses.

It is due to the very fact that large audiences pack the theatres daily that one leading newspaper has suggested that the authorities might pay stricter attention to plenty of oxygen.

Most New Orleans managers will welcome such an investigation by the Board of Health, which has been practically demanded, and virtually the only exhibitor who will suffer is he who has not provided proper ventilation in his theatre.

If plans at present under way work out, it is asserted on reliable authority that the four daily newspapers in New Orleans will print in conspicuous portions in their columns the names of the "good" and the "bad" houses.

This is an extremely radical step, it is true, but it is believed that it will be welcomed by the exhibitors.

Stereoscopic Pictures Give Sense of Depth to Images

Invention of Porter, of Famous Players, and Waddell, Late of Edison, Recently Shown at Private Exhibition in New York, Promises Revolutionary Improvement in Screen Vision

STEREOSCOPIC motion pictures, an invention on which Edwin S. Porter, of the Famous Players Film Company, has been working for about eight years, the last two of which have been in collaboration with William E. Waddell, formerly of the Edison company, have advanced so far that they were shown recently at a private exhibition.

The pictures really achieve the third dimension on the screen. That is to say, the figures have the apppearance of depth, or perspective, as well as breadth and height. They were viewed through colored lenses, green for the right eye and red for the left. The lenses may be made from glass celluloid or any transparent matter. Thus viewed the pictures have color value, but not full tones. Also, due to the eyes superimposing two images, as they do constantly in every day life, it is hard to portray action quickly crossing the lens by this stereoscopic photography. For instance, a horseman could ride at full speed straight toward the camera and be distinct, but he could not ride across the field of vision and be distinct.

From this it follows that many times, when the stereoscopic pictures portray action, the registration is indistinct. The figures seem to have three dimensions, but, through some illusion, they seem very close to the eye but small. Also the eyes feel the strain of viewing the pictures through differently colored lenses.

The stereoscopic process, according to Mr. Porter, is entirely in the film by the time it reaches the exhibitor, and may be projected on any projection machine or on any size screen.

But, because of the need for colored lenses and the sometimes imperfect registration, it is fair to say that stereoscopic pictures are not yet ready to be a commercial success. But those shown by Messrs. Porter and Waddell are far ahead of any others yet seen; so far ahead that it seems likely that the hardest obstacles have been overcome, and that perfecting the process for commercial use may be only a matter of a few months.

A stereoscopic effect can only be seen with two eyes. The reason for this lies in the fact that the distance between the eyes causes the two optics to see any article, a chair leg for instance, at slightly differing angles. The right eye sees the chair leg, and the left eye sees it. But the brain only gets one impression. So, to some extent, two eyes see around behind the chair leg, and so demonstrate, ocularly, the presence of the third dimension, depth.

The old stereoscope of childhood was a practical application of this theory. The right eye saw the right picture, and only the right picture. The left eye saw the left picture and that alone. As the pictures were the same scene photographed by lenses about as far apart as human eyes a stereoscopic effect was attained.

In obtaining a stereoscopic effect on the screen it is necessary to have two pictures, and have each eye see its own picture and only its own picture. Porter and Waddell have accomplished this by projecting simultaneously a green and a red picture, the pictures having been photographed at the same time through two lenses. Then, that each eye may only see its own picture, the green and red colored glasses are used. The green lens kills off one picture for one eye, and the red lens kills off the other picture for the other eye. So each eye sees its own picture, and only its own picture, at the same differing angles as the human eyes behold any object, and the result is a stereoscopic effect.

Naturally the stereoscopic effect, with three dimensions, is more true to life than the usual effect with two dimensions. So there is a great possibility in stereoscopic motion photography, which the invention of Porter and Waddell realizes.

Mr. Porter himself expressed his ideas on the subject by saying: "Before I am satisfied it will be possible to have the true perspective of objects and persons as they appear in life on the screen without any artificial aid to the naked eye."

The subjects shown at the private exhibition were scenic views, some of them showing Niagara Falls, and scenes from some Famous Players productions, such as "Jim the Penman" and "The Morals of Marcus."

MAE MARSH'S SISTER JOINS MAJESTIC FOR EMERSON 2-REELER

Marguerite Loveridge, sister of Mae Marsh, and a recent addition to the Reliance-Majestic forces, is to have the leading feminine role in Director John Emerson's next two reel feature, at the Reliance-Majestic studios on the coast.

MAUD ALLAN, THE FAMOUS DANCER, IN COLORFUL SCENES FROM BOSWORTH'S "THE RUG-MAKER'S DAUGHTER"

State Rights Prove Live Plan for New Cort Photoplay

Hawaiian Islands, California, Nevada, Arizona, New Jersey, New York City and Long Island, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Nebraska, Michigan, Kansas and Missouri Sold

EXHIBITORS as far away as the Hawaiian Islands will soon have an opportunity to book the Cort Film corporation's big photoplay production of "The Melting Pot," Israel Zangwill's famous play, in which Walker Whiteside was starred. Nat Magnar, of San Francisco, was in town last week and bought the rights to "The Melting Pot" for the little group of islands about twelve hundred miles west of his home town, and also took the states of California, Nevada and Arizona.

John Cort, president of the corporation, has followed out his original intention of selling the picture on a state rights basis and reports of fancy prices and spirited bidding for the first big star feature put out by his organization have come from the Cort offices in the Longacre building. "The Melting Pot" was first announced as ready for the territorial buyer last week and before Wednesday, several states had been sold.

New Jersey was the first territory sold, having gone to N. Edward Mallouf, of the Fitzgerald building. Mr. Mallouf will take the film to Atlantic City where it will have a week's run at the Cort theatre there the week of June 27. Following that, he will start the picture out as a regular picture house proposition.

New York City and Long Island were purchased by the Herald Film corporation of 126 West Forty-sixth street, which has already booked the picture for many dates in the greater city. The remainder of New York State and all of Pennsylvania were bought by the Authors' Film company, of the Empire theatre building, New Yorfk.

Iowa and Nebraska were next sold to M. H. Blank, of the Garden theatre, Des Moines, Iowa; I. N. Garson, of the Strand-Broadway theatre, Detroit, Mich., has bought Michigan; and Kansas and Missouri have gone to the Wichita Film and Supply company, of Wichita, Kansas.

It was rumored after the successful run of the Cort Film corporation's first production at the Hippodrome that several offers had been made for the picture outright, but Mr. Cort is said to have refused every offer and to have stuck to his initial idea of state rights sales.

From remarks gathered at the Cort offices he seems to have been right in his conclusions. Bids covering every available territory in the world have been sent in, and they indicate that there is still much strength in the state and territorial right method of disposing of pictures.

JANE COWL IS IN FILMS WITH UNIVERSAL

The latest acquisition to the films is Jane Cowl. The Universal Film Manufacturing company will release on July 12 from its seventy-two distributing centers a five-reel film adaptation of the late Justus Miles Forman's popular play and novel, "The Garden of Lies," with Jane Cowl.

Prominent in the cast in support of Miss Cowl are William Russell, Violet Horner, Ethelbert Hale, Philip Hahn, David Wall, Claude Cooper.

Cartoonist Smith's Creation, Old Doc Yak, Is Back

Laughmaking Character Returns from Vacation for Appearance in Chicago "Tribune's" Comic Page and the Exhibitor Through Industrial Moving Picture Company Studios

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, June 23.

AFTER a long vacation Old Doc Yak, the ludicrous character created by Sydney Smith, cartoonist for the Chicago "Tribune," is back on the screen, more comical than ever. Every Monday since June 7 five hundred feet of these clever cartoon pictures have been released at the end of the Chicago "Tribune's" new "Animated Weekly."

The other half of the weekly reel is devoted to pictures of the world's current events, photographed by "Tribune" camera men in all parts of the globe.

If the future cartoon comedies keep up to the standard set by the first three editions, they are bound to achieve great popularity among all classes of theatre patrons.

The first edition, which is entitled "He Goes Fishing," shows Doc Yak's adventures on a fishing trip, and leaves him far from the shore sinking into the depths of the sea. But nothing can kill the old Doc, for the following week he is on hand with more clever comedy in the edition called "Under the Sea."

The third edition, entitled "In the War Zone," shows him in great peril. He has drifted among the fighting battleships, where cannon balls are flying thick and fast. Here we leave the poor old Doc for Mr. Smith to bring him out of danger, or to surround him with greater perils on the following week.

The photography and mechanical production of these cartoons are of the highest order.

They are being filmed in the Industrial Moving Picture Company's studios, which fact insures the continuance of the technical perfection.

To add to the interest in this series, the "Tribune" offers a weekly prize of fifty dollars for the best suggestion for future comedies.

The Central Film Company, of Chicago, is booking these pictures direct to the exhibitor.

MRS. HITCHCOCK WATCHES HUBBY ON THE SCREEN

Flora Zabelle, Broadway star, and the wife of Raymond Hitchcock, who is now working in Keystone comedies under the direction of Mack Sennett, has been visiting in Los Angeles during the past week, having arrived from New York on June 11.

Miss Zabelle saw "Hitchy" on the screen for the first time on last Monday, and if her opinion may be taken as a criterion, Mr. Hitchcock in pictures will be quite as great as Mr. Hitchcock behind the footlights. The two have become completely enamoured of Los Angeles and the surrounding country, and their inclination is to remain in southern California indefinitely. They have taken a bungalow in Hollywood and are kept busy entertaining when they are not busy being entertained.

Exhibitor Is Always on Still Hunt for Best Subjects

If Manufacturer Makes Something Better Than the Other Fellow, His Pictures Cannot Fail to Find a Market. Says President of Gotham Film Company

"THE much used bromide of the picture business, 'Is there room for another picture program?' is very amusing to me from the point of view of a man who has been interested actively in big business," said Marshall W. Taggart, of The Gotham Film company.

BETTY MARSHALL AND FREDERIC DE BELLEVILLE IN "A TRADE SECRET" GOTHAM'S JULY RELEASE

"I have never found that the business man has asked this question in relation to his product. When the manufacturer of an automobile or of some household necessity thinks of putting something new on the market, the first thing that occurs to him is 'I must produce something of, at least, a little better quality than anything on the market, and then properly advertise that product.' If he makes something a little better than the other fellow, his product is a success; if he does not, he falls by the wayside.

"Just why this same condition should not apply to the manufacturer of motion pictures is hard to fathom. The exhibitor is not using any particular program because of his love for the concern who produces it, but because he is getting, or thinks he is getting, the best he can for his money.

"This is the principle upon which The Gotham Film company is built, and our slogan is 'Give the exhibitor the best that money can produce and conduct your business the same as you would any other mercantile line.'

"Carrying out this policy, we have secured the finest suite of offices in New York, made them a place where the out of town exhibitor can be proud to come and feel assured that he will be made fairly at home and accorded the best of treatment.

"In securing stars we have spared no expense. Our next release will feature Frederic de Belleville, one of the best known Broadway actors, who has just closed a successful season in the all-star-revival of 'A Celebrated Case.' Mr. de Belleville is receiving one of the largest salaries yet paid for motion pictures.

"As co-star we have secured the services of Betty Marshall, well known for a number of seasons to Broadway theatre goers, and a highly successful leading woman in comic opera. Miss Marshall, who is also the recipient of a very large salary, was signed by us not only because of her remarkable histrionic ability to register a charming personality on the screen. In our forthcoming picture Miss Marshall, who is an athlete to a remarkable degree for a woman, does some hairraising feats which have made the onlookers gasp and which on the screen will rank second to nothing of the kind which has ever been produced.

"In the selection and equipment of our studios, no expense has been spared. The latest developments in electric lighting and the newest mechanical improvements have been installed.

"William F. Haddock, who has been favorably known as a director since the old Biograph days, has been retained to produce these pictures, and has been given carte blanche for expense, so that nothing may be overlooked which will make a picture as nearly as perfect as present developments will allow.

"Again let me respeat that the exhibitor wants nothing but the best and that the question of room for another program is subservient to the question of features a little better than those of the other fellow."

HALL "JIMMIES" HIS WAY INTO LUBIN SUBJECT

Thurston Hall, who has achieved a wide reputation as a leading man, has "jimmied" his way into moving pictures through the Lubin company. The "jimmying" part came through the first role he played for the Lubin company, and, incidentally, the first role he ever played before a picture camera. Hall, as an English earl, breaks into a house on a dare with a jimmy. He did it most successfully, and now he's retaining the burglar's tool as a souvenir of his first day in pictures.

As a leading man in stock, Hall is widely known, having played with companies in New York, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, St. Louis, Winnipeg, Minneapolis, Detroit, Toledo, New Orleans, Rochester, Providence, Columbus, and other cities.

In his first picture, "The Earl's Adventure," Hall is playing opposite Ethel Clayton. Joseph Kaufman is directing the production.

ROWLAND NOVEL, "THE CLOSING NET," SECURED BY PATHE

Picture rights to Henry C. Rowland's "The Closing Net," have been acquired by Pathé, and work on the feature based upon the story will be commenced shortly. It is a remarkably gripping novel which first appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post" as a serial, and later became a best seller of the highest order. Production will be commenced in due course.

It is full of thrills, adventures and delightfully romantic situations. The scenes of the story is laid in and around Paris. The hero is an American, Frank Clement, who through the misfortune of being an illegitimate child is raised as a thief, but who climbs out of the slime of the underworld.

Crooks of high and low caste, blue bloods, distinguished people, fascinating women—all sorts, in other words, appear in the story.

"Maxim Girl" Button a Good Booster for Kalem Film

The Novelty Is Destined to Prove of Value to Exhibitors in Arousing Interest in Four-Reel Subject Depicting Gay Night Life on Broadway

THAT Kalem has touched a responsive chord in the minds of motion picture exhibitors in adopting the policy of releasing four-reel features in regular service, is evident to the most casual observer.

The manner in which the press and a representative gathering of exhibitors in and about New York City received the first of these four-part subjects, "Midnight at Maxim's," at a private presentation recently, effectively dispelled all doubt as to the quality of the new productions.

The policy definitely decided upon by Kalem, calls for the issuance of a four-reeler every alternate Monday, commencing Monday, July 12. These features, in turn, will alternate with the three-part productions now being released, and, like the latter, will also be Broadway favorites features. A popular player of the legitimate stage who has won success on Broadway will be starred in each subject.

An elaborate four-act photoplay production of the famous romantic drama, "Don Caesar de Bazan," will follow "Midnight at Maxim's." The former, generally regarded as being the most popular of the dramas dealing with the swashbuckling era, will be the vehicle for W. Lawson Butt, the English star. Mr. Butt has played the title role of this play upwards of three hunderd times upon the legitimate stage.

Incidentally, Kalem has issued a novelty in connection with "Midnight at Maxim's," which should be welcomed by exhibitors. This consists of a button containing a full figure of the prettiest of the Maxim beauties. This miss is shown in the act of executing a graceful step.

Underneath the figure of this dancer is a caption containing the words, "Midnight at Maxim's." The "Maxim Girl" button should be of decided help to exhibitors in arousing interest in the feature.

America's Foremost Actress in Great Fiction Character

Mrs. Fiske Consents to Appear as Becky Sharp of Immortal Fame in Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," in Elaborate Film Version Produced by Eugene Nowland, an Authority on the Great English Novelist, for the Edison Company

THE Edison Company has just made arrangements for Mrs. Fiske to star in one of the most important films of the year, a picturization of the immortal "Vanity Fair," which will be awaited with the keenest interest by persons of literary taste. It will be in about seven reels, and shown at all theatres in the principal cities.

Becky Sharp, the immortal heroine of Thackeray's novel, is perhaps associated more prominently with Mrs. Fiske's name and fame than any other role in her repertoire. Since she originated the character about fifteen years ago, its revival has been demanded again and again, until it has become one of the most familiar figures of the American theatre.

Langdon Mitchel made the dramatization used by Mrs. Fiske. For the screen, however, Mr. Mitchell's play will not be used, a completely new scenario having been written by Sumner Williams. The entire range of Becky's lively and varied experiences will be followed, introduced by a prologue which will show Thackeray, in all variety, in his study starting to write the novel. Also, every personage in the film play will be a faithful picturing of the characters of the times.

Eugene Nowland Will Direct

The Edison company has chosen for the producer of this play Director Eugene Nowland. A great lover of Thackeray, and "Vanity Fair," Mr. Nowland has for many years been collecting old prints, actual letters of the times and precious bits that bear on the story until he now has twenty-four huge portfolios as an auxiliary source of authoritative information. For several months he has been in pursuit of players of not alone proven ability but ones true to the types they will impersonate. The wide interest taken by literary people in this production has prompted the offer of many of the finest estates in the country for the proper "atmosphere."

With this is the accepted offer of two wealthy Bostonians owning an entire square, who will close off the whole square and give it over to the photoplayers, the houses being just the type needed.

A number of the society people of New York and Boston will figure in the brilliant ball scenes, the historical Duchess of Richmond's ball at Brussels and that at Gaunt House. Other scenes will be a new handling of battle scenes, including the Battle of Waterloo, Vauxhall Gardens—which Mr. Nowland knows intimately as he does many other of the original locations; the introduction a little more prominently than in the story of Napoleon at different periods of his life, Wellington, Blucher, Josephine, Tallyrand and George IV.

Leonie Flugrath, the child star of the stage, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," will be Becky as a little girl, the film treatment being that of a precious old soul in a young body. Philip Quinn will be Napoleon. Mr. Quinn has played Napoleon on the stage more than any other character. "Amelia," who has been long sought is as yet unchosen. The Marquis of Steyne is left to George Wright of "Within the Law" and "Bought and Paid For," who has made excellent progress as a film character man. Rawdon Crawley will be Bigelow Cooper; Jos. Sedley, William Wadsworth; Dobbin, Frank McGlynn; Lady Steyne, Helen Strickland; Mr. Sedley, Charles Sutton; Mrs. O'Dowd, Jessie Stevens; Major O'Dowd, John Sturgeon; Becky's father, Yale Denner.

Has "Discovered" Many Dramatists

Mrs. Fiske's position as America's representative actress is recognized universally here and abroad. She has won that leadership by virtue of genius and unswerving adherence to the finest ideals. She has "discovered" many new dramatists; she has introduced some of the best works of European authors, she has advanced the cause of truth and beauty in dramatic art, and she has exercised a large influence upon our stage throughout her active career.

The list of her productions is long, but an idea of their scope and variety may be formed from the mention of a few. These include Tess in a dramatization of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles"; Cynthia in Langdon Mitchell's comedy "The New York Idea"; Leah in C. N. S. McClellan's "Leah Kleschna"; Nell in "Salvation Nell," and Mary Page in "The High Road," by Edward Sheldon; Nora in "A Doll's House"; Hedda in "Hedda Gabler"; Rebecca West in "Rosmersholm." and the woman from America in "Pillars of Society," by Henrik Ibsen; Cyprienne in Sardou's comedy "Divorcon"; Giulia in Horace B. Frye's "Little Italy"; Magda in Herman Sudermann's drama; the Magdalen in Paul Heyse's "Mary of Magdala"; the waif in Hauptmann's "Hannele"; the social climber in Harry James Smith's "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," and the divorced wife in Mrs. Burton Harrison's "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch."

"Runaway June" Contest Will Close September 30

Candidates in Many States Run Close—Lottie Marguerite Bucklin Leads Nebraska—Lucky Young Woman Lives in a Small Town

THE "Runaway June" contest does not close until September 30. But there are already very definite indications as to the types of women most popular in various states. In many states, too, there are very close contests for the position of leader of the state. While the identity of the lucky women to go free to the Panama-Pacific Exposition and the San Diego Exposition is not yet determined, and many state leaders may be upset before the final result is announced, it is not likely that the types of the various state leaders will be altered.

Lottie Marguerite Bucklin, at the present time, is leading the state of Nebraska. She was nominated in the Empress theatre, Fremont.

Of interest to exhibitors, is the fact that Miss Bucklin comes from a city of 8,718, thus demonstrating that the small city has just as much chance as the large city.

In endorsing Miss Bucklin, Nebraska photoplay fans have established their preference for a number of things which mean much in American life. Miss Bucklin is an all around athlete. She swims, skates, dances, is fond of rowing and all forms of outdoor recreation.

She is also a musician and is a painter. Indeed her greatest ambition is to be a finely trained musician.

Miss Bucklin was born in Fremont and spent the greater part of her life there. She is a product of the American public school system.

The present leader in West Virginia is Susie Boggs, of Gassaway. Miss Boggs is having a hot fight, however, for Mattie Campbell and Miss Browning are only one vote behind her, while Jessie Lee is two behind Miss Boggs.

Miss Boggs was nominated in exhibitor James Paterson's Armory theatre in Gassaway.

Unlike the leader of Nebraska, Miss Boggs is a suffragist.

She, too, is musical and athletic, but her ambitions are not along these lines. She wishes ultimately to become an actress. The leader in West Virginia, at the present writing, believes thoroughly in travel and the widening of one's circle of acquaintances. It is for this reason principally that she hopes to go to California.

OAKLAND FIGHT BRINGS TAXES DOWN TO $50

The fight made by the motion picture exhibitors of Oakland, Cal., through the Alameda county local of the state league to bring about a reduction in the scale of license fees charged in that city has resulted in a complete victory for the theatre owners, and they have fared better than they really anticipated.

The former license tax has been more than cut in half, and is now about the same as is paid in other cities of a corresponding size. Small houses will now pay as low as fifty dollars a year, while the largest ones wil pay one hundred dollars.

The success that has been met with in securing the readjustment of license rates is attracting much attention to the work of the local and a greatly increased membership is anticipated.

This important victory follows closely upon the one won by the exhibitors of San Francisco, in causing the film exchanges to abandon their plans for charging in advance for all service.

Rosenbluh, Sure of His Ground, Offers Three Titles

Head of Variety Film Secures "Enoch Arden," "In the Ranks" and "Harbor Lights," a Popular Melodrama Remembered by Theatregoers Twenty-five Years Ago

LOUIS ROSENBLUH, known as a pioneer exchange man, formerly an exhibitor, and later associated with William Fox in the Greater New York Film Rental company, who is now managing the Variety Film corporation, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, in a recent interview, explaining his plans for marketing the pictures of his company, said:

"The basic commercial weakness of the film business is the impossibility of a uniform product. It is an uncertainty due to the fact that all feature producers are bound to fluctuate in the quality of their product. The best director in the world will occasionally turn out a weak number, and what is the result? For years I have watched exhibitors paying for a brand and a date. One week they will be satisfied and the next they will be disappointed.

The price they pay is regulated by the age of the picture, and, beyond that, both the exhibitor and the renter strike a stone wall. For while renter agrees in the principle that a weak picture is not worth the price paid for a good production, it must be borne in mind that he pays the same price for all of them.

"I have found a way out of it, and Variety films will be the practice of the preachment. I hold open to producers the gateway to the market. I offer to exhibitors pictures in single and multiple reels which they pay for only according to the class of the picture. Length does not make a film a feature, and only the quality of the offering will determine what class the picture shall belong in.

"I have spent many weeks examining subjects made by free lance makers who ask nothing more than modest profit as an incentive to continue in the field. I am bound to say there can be no shortage of excellent pictures. I have secured a four-reel version of 'Enoch Arden,' and I might say that 'Harbor Lights' and 'In the Ranks' are the titles of two more which are fit to support any program in existence. I have also secured some films showing daring work with wild beasts that will give recommendation to any source of supply.

"I have decided to open the door wide on the basis that the exhibitor pays for no more than he receives and the maker gets what his efforts deserve. Date of release will be no element of consideration, and just as there will be no limit on length, so will I accept all classes of subjects, from scenics to classics."

Mr. Rosenbluh says that film makers desiring releases are welcome to consult him personally, his projection rooms being ready at all hours for inspection of motion pictures.

1,000 Seat Concrete Theatre Planned for Panama

Fire Damaging Colon to Extent of $2,000,000 Destroys the Star and the Garden, Houses with 500 Capacity Each, Brings Stone-Building Order from Authorities

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, June 23.

IN the fire that razed twenty-five square blocks in Colon, Panama, the evening of April 30, two motion picture houses, the Star and the Garden, owned by the Tropical Amusement company, were burned. The houses each had a capacity of about five hundred, and were popular with the natives. The fire was accidental. In three hours' time, damage approximating $2,000,000 was done. United States troops saved the American part of the town by the use of dynamite.

As a result of this fire it was announced by C. Henriques, a prominent Panamanian exhibitor who has been in New Orleans, that the Panamanian government had ordered the burned section rebuilt entirely of concrete. The houses Mr. Henriques owns in Colon were not affected by the fire. If the wind had veered, however, Mr. Henriques said, the American section probably would have gone up in smoke.

Mr. Henriques also made the very interesting announcement that a company in Panama has begun building on June 1 Colon's finest motion picture palace, a building which will seat one thousand. In accordance with the government's instructions, it is to be entirely of concrete. Mr. Henriques could not give out the details of the house at present.

"We Panamanian exhibitors face troubles that you in the states never have," Mr. Henriques said. "For instance, on account of the intense heat and the usual daily siesta of the South American, we can only run our theatres four hours a day—from seven to eleven in the evening. During those hours the dark senor strolls with his senorita on the plazas, and the motion picture show is their natural gathering place. We have high rents to contend with in Panama."

ONE OF THE BEST AND LATEST POSES OF EDNA MAYO, A STAR AMONG THE ESSANAY AGGREGATION

ELEANOR FAIRBANKS WILL PLAY IMPORTANT LUBIN ROLES

One of the latest additions to the Lubin players is Eleanor Fairbanks, who achieved such a success in "A Pair of Sixes," in New York. Miss Fairbanks is playing one of the important roles in "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," the feature comedy written by Acton Davies, and in which Marie Dressler will be featured, supported by an unusually strong company, headed by Tom McNaughton, the English eccentric comedian.

ELEANOR FAIRBANKS

As a screen player, Miss Fairbanks will undoubtedly be a huge success. She is just five feet in height, has blue eyes and blonde hair, and her charming personality, coupled with her ability as an actress, makes her a valuable addition to the Lubin players.

Miss Fairbanks' first big hit was as little Miss Johnson in "Tillie's Nightmare," with Marie Dressler. She was with this production for two seasons.

8 AUTOMOBILES CARRY GUESTS TO SEE METRO SCENE FILMED

On Friday evening, June 18, the Metro Pictures Corporation, alias "Can They Keep It Up," made several attempts to photograph a village street scene on Staten Island, N. Y., for a release entitled "The Right of Way." Difficulties were encountered in the shape of a heavy fog and no wind, and although the scene was taken four or five times, it is doubtful if any were perfect enough to use in the picture.

Producer John W. Noble was at work on the picture, which is adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the same name. William Faversham is the star of the production. The street was supposed to be in a North Canadian town.

A large number of guests, including a number of press representatives, was conveyed to the spot in eight or ten automobiles, captained by Harry Reichenbach.

B. A. Rolfe, of the Rolfe-Metro Company, and manager of the Strand theatre, New York, was among those present.

THE CABARET GIRLS IN KALEM'S "MIDNIGHT AT MAXIM'S" IN A STRIKING POSE AGAINST THE NEW YORK SKY LINE

CAREFUL ATLANTIC CITY CENSOR PASSES "REGENERATION"

Chicago—the home of great industries, intelligent people, and a local board of censors.

Atlantic City—the abiding place of beauty, sanity and a stringent police department.

Both have seen the Vitagraph V-L-S-E production, "The Island of Regeneration," and it is interesting to note how the two places have received this production.

Chicago has seen it after it passed through the hands of its board of censorship. They have seen it with many beautiful and artistic scenes senselessly eliminated by the local censors, who were not satisfied with the production as approved by the National Board of Censorship. Several of the scenes that contributed to the beauty of this artistic production were considered by the Chicago board improper for exhibition to the people of Chicago.

William Riddle, mayor of Atlantic City, saw "The Island of Regeneration" when it was shown at the Vitagraph theatre in New York City, and recommends it to the people of Atlantic City as a play most interesting and ennobling. It was shown at the Colonial theatre, at Atlantic City, by special request of the mayor.

Through the cosmopolitan nature of a great portion of its population, Atlantic City has been called upon to enact many stringent laws for the safeguarding of its morals, and when the chief executive of that city goes on record as recommending "The Island of Regeneration," it is difficult to understand the action of the Chicago board of censorship.

SELIG TOURISTS WILL BE REGALED BY WESTERN CIVIC BODIES

The Chamber of Commerce of San Jose, Cal., has notified the Selig Polyscope company that a cordial reception awaits the tourists of the Selig exposition flyer when the trains arrive in that city the morning of July 14. The visitors will be taken by automobile through the beautiful Santa Clara Valley.

There are eight thousand plum trees to be seen. The civic organizations of Denver, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego have notified the Selig company that special entertainments are to be accorded the guests when they arrive at the above named cities.

2,000 Happy Souls Sail on the Universal Outing

"Mandalay" Chartered for Employees and Their Friends, and Incidentally, or Primarily, Perhaps, to Console 400 Lovely Maidens Failing to Win First Prize in Beauty Contest

A STRAW vote was cast on Wednesday June 16, by some two thousand souls, who unanimously acclaimed the heart of the Universal Film company as big as the organization itself. For, be it known this was the evening on which the aforesaid Universal company chartered the palatial S. S. "Mandalay" and sailed their many friends and employees up and down the Hudson river, until the clock registered somewhat after midnight.

Primarily the object of the excursion was to console four hundred beauties of New York and vicinity who entered the Beauty contest but failed to directly influence the results. Every member of the male species wondered if the judges were sure of their decisions in regard to the contest winners, for the disgruntled beauties were continually the object of unrestrained admiration.

But of course four hundred couldn't win at once.

Dancing, in the more or less elusive moon (search) light was the main order of the evening. There was a very heartily contested dancing contest in the course of the night in which George Warner and Rose Cohen were the winners. W. J. Moore, formerly of Universal and Itala, and Helen Conboy won the second prize. Both couples received very handsome silver cups. The very neutral judges for this affair were Julius Stern, Jack Clymer, Paul Gulick, M. H. Hoffman, Emanuel H. Goldstein, all of Universal, Ethel Mockler, of the New York "Evening World" and Mrs. Myrtle Dunham, the hostess.

While on the subject of beauties there was Miss Lillian Bradley, of vaudeville renown, who honored all the guests with three very popular selections from her repertoire of songs on the homeward trip.

Among those present were Lawrence D'Orsay, actor; Violet Mersereau, of the Imp company, and her mother; Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby of the Victor company, R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal; Julius Stern, manager of the Imp studio; Charley Simone, director; Ed. Saunders, formerly with Universal now with the Metro; R. M. Vandivert, of MOTION PICTURE NEWS; Fred E. Sniffen, General passenger agent of the Delaware, Hudson Ship company, and D. Van Wagnen, the general manager of the line.

U. K. Whipple, Universal's crack camera artist, was present to film the dancing contest and other affairs. Paul Gulick, Al Brandt and Bob Doman dispensed publicity. Jack Clymer looked after the dancing, while Bert Adler and his party, including his bride-to-be, were quite in evidence.

Less notable but no less distinguished were Lynde Denig, Wid Gunning, T. Eltonhead, Wen Milligen, Julian Solomon, Pete Schmid, Morris Pivar, Elenor Fried, Ethylle Long, Henry Walker, Ted Solomon and Jessie Barmore, of Bloch and Barmore.

FORBES ROBERTSON WILL BE HAMLET IN KNICKERBOCKER FILM

SIR JOHNSTONE FORBES ROBERTSON, the justly famous English actor, who some years ago was made a knight by the King of England, will soon appear on the regular program of the General Film Company in a magnificent three-reel production of "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark."

Forbes Robertson made his debut on the stage in 1874 as Chastelard in "Mary Stuart," played at the old Princess theatre, London. A man of splendid education and family, he soon showed signs of wonderful possibilities, and with many years of rigid practice became an actor of world-wide renown in 1895. At this time he made his first tour of the United States, being seen with Mary Anderson.

From this time on Mr. Robertson's career is well known. In 1900 he married Gertrude Elliott, sister of Maxine Elliott, and with her has appeared in many plays both abroad and in this country. Perhaps the best known of these plays to the American theatre goer are: "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," "Mice and Men," "The Light That Failed," "Caesar and Cleopatra," "The Merchant of Venice," "Othello" and "Hamlet."

The Knickerbocker production of Hamlet was made under the personal supervision of Forbes Robertson. In it he is supported by Gertrude Elliott and the entire Drury Lane Company. It will be the Knickerbocker release of July 7.

COURTLEIGH, JR., IN PATHE SERIAL, A YOUNG ACTOR OF PROMISE

William Courtleigh, Jr., who is to be featured with Lillian Lorraine in the new Balboa serial, "Neal of the Navy," to be released by Pathé, was born in Buffalo,

WILLIAM COURTLEIGH, JR.

Born into a theatrical atmosphere young Courtleigh took naturally to the stage and made his first plunge at the tender age of five years, appearing in his father's East Lynne company. From then on for a number of years he continued with his father, leaving when he was ten years old to get some schooling.

His education was continued through one year at the University of Chicago. His first job, he laughingly tells, was riding after cattle in the Chicago stock yards, but he could not long resist the lure of the stage, for being offered an engagement with a stock company in Bridgeport, Conn., he eagerly seized the chance.

Engagements at the Harlem Opera House in New York, with Robert Mantell, and in stock in Los Angeles, Atlanta and Milwaukee followed. His more recent engagements were with Ethel Barrymore in "Her Picture," "The Nightingale," and H. B. Warner in "Under Cover."

IGNORANCE NOT INNOCENCE IS LESSON OF ESSANAY FILM

Essanay has received letters from ministers and educators from all over the country, commending the company for producing the photoplay "The Blindness of Virtue," which is one of Essanay's great multiple-reel features, released through the V-L-S-E.

The moral of this photoplay, written by Cosmo Hamilton, has been approved by all. The play besides being a thrillingly interesting one, teaches a great moral lesson that educators have been fighting to instruct in schools and homes.

The story points out the danger facing girls who are kept in ignorance of the fundamental problems of life and the moral necessity of instructing them early in the problem of motherhood.

Edna Mayo, as the innocent minister's daughter, brings out all the sweetness and charm of this character with unusual vividness and strongly emphasizes the point of her danger through ignorance.

PERRY, OF "ON TRIAL" FAME, IS STARRED IN "DR. RAMEAU"

In "Dr. Rameau," one of the most powerful stories ever presented upon the screen, Frederick Perry, who achieved such an impressive personal triumph in the Broadway success "On Trial," is given a vehicle that will unquestionably add new laurels to his fame.

The story, by Georges Ohnet, the eminent French author, tells of the tremendous struggle that Dr. Rameau, portrayed by Mr. Perry, undergoes when he discovers that the child whom he has loved and cherished with a wondrous paternal love is not his own, but the child of a man he had regarded as his closest friend.

FREDERICK PERRY

Arthur Vaughan, who assisted Will S. Davis in the production of this masterly film, supervised the correctness of the details. Supporting Mr. Perry is a cast including Dorothy Bernard, Stuart Holmes, George Alison, Jean Southern, and Edith Hallor.

"THE ROSARY"

(Selig—V-L-S-E—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

MANY Selig favorites, Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary, Gertrude Ryan, Eugenie Besserer, Wheeler Oakman and Harry Lonsdale appear in this Red Seal special, directed by Colin Campbell, maker of "The Spoilers."

As the title indicates, the story is woven around the potency for good of the rosary. But the story is not sectarian nor restricted in any way in appeal.

Father Kelly, played by Charles Clary, with a serene faith, finds who caused the misery and disintegration of the Wilton home, and brings good out of evil. Wheeler Oakman is Wilton, Kathlyn Williams his wife. Harry Lonsdale is the villain.

HIS SWEETHEART OVERHEARS THE INTERVIEW

But that is the merest hint at the plot. To tell the plot in detail would require a magazine-length story. The opening scenes show the advent of Our Lord. Then come very well produced scenes laid in Ireland. The son leaves his sweetheart, becomes a priest, and comes to America. Later he adopts and raises the son of his old sweetheart. The son grows up to be Bruce Wilton. Then Father Kelly saves the Wilton home after it is seemingly ruined by machinations of Kenward Wright.

The production is interesting and interspersed with many natural touches, such as the scenes of the boys in swimming. It is well produced, and, with its notable cast, should be well received.

"SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD"

(K and R Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THAT beautiful old song "Silver Threads Among the Gold" reaches the screen in this picture, the central figure of which is Richard (Dick) José, who is best known through having sung "Silver Threads" for many years.

Appropriately, the story is given a rural setting. A country boy and girl are in love. The boy's rival, at a barn dance, slips the girl's purse in his pocket. He is suspected of theft and ordered from home by his father. This brings about a split between the father and mother.

The son goes to the city, gets in trouble, and lands on Blackwell's Island. Finally, however, all ends well. The son and his sweetheart make up and so do the father and mother. Then the father admonishes the son to love and cherish his sweetheart for all time, even when the silver threads come.

The country atmosphere of the first part of the picture is fine. Anyone who was brought up on a farm will appreciate the straw ride, the barn dance, the buggy riding and the many rural touches. Whoever wrote the subtitles "suttinly hailed from Daown East," too. Several of the city scenes show New York streets. On the whole, the production is quite adequate.

An excellent cast is seen in support of Mr. José, including Dora Dean as the sweetheart, Dick Lee as a bumpkin, little Catherine and Jane Lee in child parts, and Jim McCabe in a small part.

Pierce Kingsley wrote the picture and directed its production.

"THE PRINCESS OF INDIA"

(Sun Photoplay—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Sun Photoplay Company here presents an Italian feature made in Italy by the Gloria company. It is an excellent picture in many ways, and inasmuch as it partially fills a long-vacant gap caused by the recent absence of foreign pictures in this country its presence may be doubly welcomed.

In enumerating the merits of the offering that one which strikes the writer as the most noticeable of all is the supreme photography and toning of each and every scene. Italian camera work has long been envied by the producers of this country, but hardly ever have we seen the equal of the gorgeous photographic effects embodied in this picture. The scenes, too, have that noticeable depth, peculiar to European pictures. The settings are substantial. Indeed, it is hard to discern between the erected properties and the actual backgrounds which were employed in some few scenes.

Such scenes as the corridor of the Rajah's palace, the interior of the temple, the room of state and the scene in which the camels are crossing the desert in the dusk are fine examples of the photographic and scenic arts. It might also be mentioned that the back lighting in all these scenes is extremely good. In short, as a photographic spectacle the picture could almost stand alone without the added interest created by the story.

The plot has to do with an Englishman's experiences in India. Wild animals, chiefly tigers, are introduced with the most startling effects. Unlike most motion picture carnivori, these beasts give the appearance of being wild in reality. Especially is this fact forcibly impressed on the mind when we see a tiger fell a camel, two more of the beasts devour a kid, and another hugging a man.

And while in India the Englishman cures the daughter of the Rajah, who, by the way, is a most entrancing individual. The Rajah gives his daughter to the hunter after the young man has saved her. Lydia Quaranta appears as the princess, and while the names of the others in the cast are not available, they do good enough work to receive just credit.

IN THE PALACE CORRIDOR

NEW ORGAN IN PHILADELPHIA THEATRE

THE Jefferson, at Twenty-ninth and Dauphin streets, Philadelphia, of which Jack Delmar is manager, has been artistically redecorated and presents an attractive interior.

Besides other improvements, a new Pilcher organ at a cost of $7,000 has been installed. With an expert organist in charge, Mr. Delmar will use this music in lieu of the small orchestra previously featured.

"THE RUNNING FIGHT"

(Pre-Eminent-Paramount—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"THE RUNNING FIGHT" deals with certain phases of high finance which have made Wall Street and the money market a by-word among all classes.

Wilkinson, the president of a trust company, deliberately plans to wreck the institution for his own enrichment. He is a man who uses his clever though sinister attainments with a cold-blooded disregard for the detrimental effect of his actions on innocent sufferers that arouses a feeling of indignation in the beholder.

THE NIGHT OF THE ELECTION

Wilkinson exercises an uncanny foresight in all his dealings. He even provides for a pardon in case of conviction by aiding the election to the governorship of a man who the financier thinks will prove a willing tool in case of need.

The man does not stop at this, but to make additionally sure of his plans going through, he schemes to have the governor marry his daughter. But his attempts at personal safety fail. The arch schemer finds that the governor does not intend to be made a party to his plans. Wilkinson also finds that he cannot buy judges and juries as he had supposed.

The role of the daughter is played by Violet Heming, who makes the part pleasing. The girl, of course, is not cognizant of her father's villainy.

Action of an exciting nature is furnished in scenes giving a vivid presentation of a run on a metropolitan bank, a mob of depositors clamoring in front of the bank for an opportunity to take the law in their own hands on the person of the bank wrecker.

KEYSTONE COMPANY GETTING OUT NEW LOBBY DISPLAY

THE Keystone Company is now getting out a lobby display of 8 by 10 photographs of all its players. The photographs will be laid out in the following manner.

Straight head of the player in the center and in each corner will be the same player in different facial expressions or character poses.

These can be secured from the Publicity Department, three for fifty cents, seven for one dollar.

PRICE-CUTTING WAR STARTS IN MISSOURI

THERE is a fight on in Sedalia, Mo., and admission prices are being slashed.

The Sedalia Amusement Company has a string of four theatres in this town and their prices were ten cents before the entrance of one Mr. Truitt, who secured the Sedalia opera house and opened with three vaudeville acts and a four or five-reel feature, all for ten cents. The Amusement company, of which J. W. Brill is the manager, decided to lower their prices and are now running Mutual Master Pictures in all four of its houses for five cents.

"THE MARBLE HEART"

(Imp-Universal—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Marble Heart" is an adaptation from a play produced in New York City in 1864. The author's name is not available, but whoever evolved the drama drew a very clever comparison between the lives of the ancient Greeks and the people of his time. The producing company has taken the rightful liberty to modernize the second half of the picture, staging the action in the present.

The greatest interest will result from the similarity of the two stories, practically identical in every respect. The people of each period introduced embody the same fundamental characteristics, and the outcome of each half of the production is the same.

The first story has given the director, George Lessey, a fine opportunity to introduce a realistic street scene in ancient Greece. This, peopled with supernumeraries garbed in robes of the period, lends a decided touch of likeable atmosphere to the offering. The settings, both modern and ancient, conform well with the action.

Briefly, both stories demonstrate the triumph of money over love. In the first a sculptor carves a statue of a woman so perfect that it lives. The sculptor falls in love with his own creation, but the woman spurns his love and smiles favorably on a rich man.

In the modern version the sculptor's heart is lost to a society woman who poses for him, but she also prefers wealth to love without wealth, and so the broken-hearted artist marries the girl of his mother's choice.

The cast is the same in both instances. King Baggot enacts the sculptor, Ned Reardon the rich man, Jane Fearnley the woman, Frank Smith plays Volage and Diogenes, and Miss Hunter appears as the sculptor's servant.

"THE BROKEN COIN"

(Universal Special—First and Second Episodes)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT is somewhat over a year since the Universal company placed on the market its first serial, "Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery," in which were featured Francis Ford and Grace Cunard. After three intervening recurrent pictures comes this, "The Broken Coin," with the same two favorites again appearing in the parts of most importance.

Those exhibitors who employ Universal service can readily realize the popularity of these two stars with the patrons of their houses. They are undoubtedly great favorites. Because of their daring and dashing manner this pair fascinates and astounds those whose ideas of the film world are totally gleaned from the screen.

And so once "The Broken Coin" is journeying into your theatre, two reels for fifteen weeks, you Mr. Exhibitor, and specially Mr. Universal Exhibitor, may be certain of providing money-making entertainment for your patronage.

KITTY BUYS THE HALF-COIN

"The Broken Coin" is being written by Emerson Hough, and scenarioized by Grace Cunard. Francis Ford is producing the picture, and has already instilled in it some of his patented sensational, lightning action; enough in fact to give promise of a typical Francis Ford production.

The fights that appear in these two first instalments are exceedingly strenuous. Most of them center about Eddie Polo, who plays Rolleau. He is truly a marvelous fighter, being fully capable of getting the upper hand against ten or twelve opponents.

The locale is confined to two imaginary European principalities. The atmosphere of these places is also imaginary. Men clad in modern clothes are stirred in with sliding panels and trap doors, automobiles, Arabs, camels, deserts and robbers with a joyous incongruity that enshrouds the picture with a weird air of magnetism.

The basis of the story follows: Kitty Grey, an American newspaper woman, having found a half coin in a curio shop on which is engraved the word "Gretzhoffen," journeys to this kingdom, hoping to find there material for a serial story. By the way, the editor of the publication on which Kitty (Grace Cunard) works is none other than Carl Laemmle.

Kitty is pursued by Rolleau, an agent of Count Frederick (Francis Ford), of Gretzhoffen, who holds the other half of the coin and desires the other, so that he may determine the whereabouts of certain hidden treasure. This acquired he plans to usurp the kingdom's throne, which is held by a drunken reprobate (Harry Schumm).

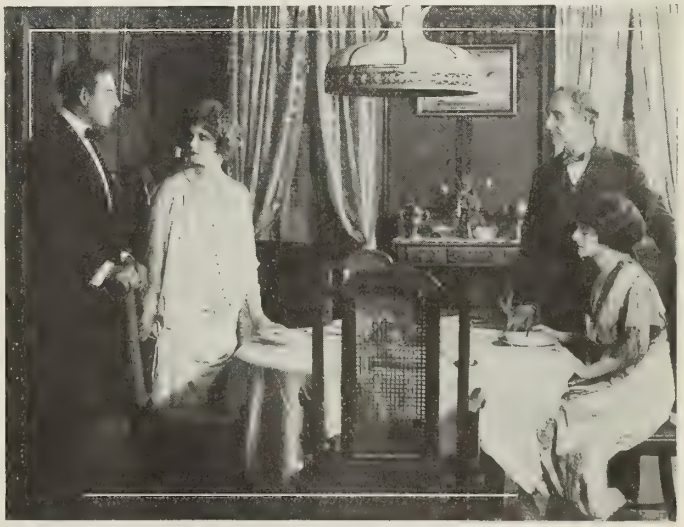
This broken coin is, of course, the object on which the entire serial will swing. The further adventures of Kitty, the Count and Rolleau, who sides with Kitty after receiving a beating from his master, will consume the rest of the chapters. Already they have been through enough hairbreadth experiences to turn the ordinary individual's hair while, and as for what is to follow—well, that remains to be seen.

"CLARISSA"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PREVIOUS to this release Hazel Dawn has appeared twice before patrons of the silent drama, but each time as a comedienne. "Clarissa," which is based on Ronald McDonald's novel, "Gambier's Advocate," is a drama and Miss Dawn's role, although containing a few humorous possibilities, is in reality a dramatic part.



The plot is most pleasing. Some of the situations are startling in their originality, others are familiar, but taken as a whole, the story appears unconventional and refreshing. An introduction of considerable length preludes the picture proper and little bits of padding have been injected here and there, but the strength of the entire offering discounts all minor detractions such as these.

Miss Dawn, appearing in the title part, renders a captivating and winsome characterization of Clarissa. The role itself calls for a complete comprehension of its novelty and originality and Miss Dawn interprets the character with evident understanding of its many possibilities.

James Kirkwood directed the production and both from a dramatic and artistic standpoint he has made a success of it. The locations throughout are well chosen and the scenes are effectively staged. The cameraman has also achieved excellent results.

Mr. Kirkwood also appears in the cast as Stephen Gambier and pleasingly performs the role of the much misunderstood lover. Fuller Mellish is cast as Vane, while Dorothy Bernard appears as his second wife. Robert Broderick plays Muir and Maude Odell interprets the part of his wife.

The story: Clarissa returning from boarding school discovers that her father has married his stenographer. She finds it hard to stifle her pride but finally becomes reconciled to the situation. Later she meets Gambier, a young lawyer. Gambier rescues Clarissa's stepmother from drowning. Some time afterwards Clarissa sees Mrs. Muir in Gambier's arms, and to prevent any complications she forces a proposal from the lawyer, whom she now heartily detests.

Then Gambier sets to work to make the girl love him. Matters are cleared by Mrs. Muir confessing of having impulsively thrown her arms about the lawyer to thank him for rescuing her. To bring the story to a dramatic close, Gambier is accused of murdering his benefactress, but Clarissa manages to secure proof from the dead woman's divorced husband that he committed the crime.

WORLD FILM HERALDS PRINTED FOR MAILING

IN printing the heralds for the World Film Corporation releases the printers have arranged it so the heralds can be mailed by folding them a certain way, putting a one-cent stamp on them and sending them out. The exhibitors say this is an excellent advertisement.

"BY THE FLIP OF A COIN"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WHILE this story is interesting and well acted, it has an impossible plot, since duelling is forbidden in England. Two men of the triangle agree on the tossing of a coin, the loser to commit suicide at a given moment. And the British officers sit by in tense groups and wait for the end.

Before this point is reached, Colonel Coll, the villain, shoots Lieutenant Gerald Netter, the hero, in the back. This is another far fetched situation.

However, the story goes that the colonel, thinking the lieutenant is to die, counts him dead, and then ardently courts Marian once more, she having previously refused him for the lieutenant. Marian, urged by her father, reluctantly marries him in the end, only to find too late that Gerald is alive.

The colonel comes in on their explanation scene. Thinking it too ardent, he demands reparation, and the coin is flipped later at the club. At the eleventh hour, Marian discovers the coin is all heads, and saves Gerald from the suicidal pact. The colonel on finding that his treachery is known kills himself.

L. C. Shumway, Velma Whitman and George Routh play the leads.

"THE TRAGEDIES OF THE CRYSTAL GLOBE"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FANTASTIC effects on the screen are always either ludicrous failures or brilliant successes. Needless to say the latter class is much the smaller one, but in it belongs "The Tragedies of the Crystal Globe." Not only is the plan of the picture at once novel and interesting, but it is well carried out in every way. Particular emphasis must be laid on the attractive settings, which please the eye at the same time that they create the right atmosphere for three different historical periods.

Robert Conness is seen as an American artist in Paris, while Mabel Trunelle is his sweetheart. Bigelow Cooper plays the role of an Oriental mystic, Muzaffer Mansur, who meets the American girl, and by hypnotic influence induces her to come to his apartment. There she gazes in a crystal globe in which she seems to see herself and Mansur in three previous incarnations.

First she is leaving a convent in the Middle Ages to marry an old man picked by her father. Mansur appears as her young lover, but has hardly met her before he is discovered and killed by a servant of her husband. The girl stabs herself and dies on his body.

Next the girl sees herself as a king's daughter in the days of the Vikings. She is sent to marry a king of an adjoining country, but instead attempts to escape with Mansur, this time seen as the messenger of the king who is to marry her. She dies in the sacred flame of the temple and her lover is killed.

The third backward vision goes to the days of the glory of Bagdad, where the girl sees herself as the favorite of a powerful Sheikh. Mansur, her lover, appears as a rug merchant, but their attachment, as usual, results in death for both. Mansur then tells the girl that he has sought her for centuries, and that now he has her. Fortunately, her lover has become alarmed and arrives with a couple of officers to rescue her from her strange predicament. Richard Ridgely directed the picture.

"THE FLYING TWINS"

(Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

MARIAN and Madeleine Fairbanks, real twins, and as dainty and pretty a pair of girls as one could see, play the title roles. The story contains many typical Thanhouser touches. Mr. Thanhouser believes in bringing into a picture scenes of beauty or heart interest, provided only they are not entirely extraneous to the plot.

"The Flying Twins," for instance, has many good views of life in and around the "big top" of a small circus and some very pleasing views of farm life, the chickens, colt, ducks and cattle. Such scenes serve pleasantly to "dress" a good picture.

An acrobat aspires to the hand of a country girl. When her uncle breaks up the acquaintance he marries a trapeze performer. Later he and his wife meet the twins, whom he remembers as the other girl's cousins, and induce them to join a small circus. The twins become trapeze performers. The acrobat cannot resist the temptation to torment the father by sending him an anonymous letter. The letter is traced and the twins found.

The end certainly contains a "punch." The acrobate tries to spirit the twins away by auto. They escape by springing to an overhanging limb from the auto. The parents rescue the twins while the auto, with the acrobat, his wife and the chauffeur, plunges into the river.

Harry LaPearl, acrobat, clown and actor, plays the acrobat. He is one of the few men who can do acrobatic work and still be a real actor. Bertha Leon, also a real circus performer, plays his wife. Lorraine Huling has an important part in the first two reels as the country girl. The circus and farm scenes are very realistic. Altogether, it is a very pleasing feature with wide appeal and a "punch."

"HER MOTHER'S SECRET"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WRITTEN by Bessie Minier and produced by Joseph Smiley, this three-reeler has touches of pathos and a sweet and satisfactory finale. Featuring, as it does, both motherly love and daughterly affection, with not a single character up to any mischief, it is suitable for the young person while also appealing to the sentimentally inclined adults.

Emily Lester, having married John Rand out of pique, never forgets Lloyd Kent, whom she jilted. When Kent returns twenty years later, a rich bachelor, it is Betty Rand, the young daughter, however, rather than his old sweetheart, now a widow, who attracts him. And Betty is flattered by the attention of the rich "old bach" and grows cool to her own young sweetheart, Hal Edwards.

Emily's mother-love dominates her jealousy, but she eats her heart out in silence. Betty, by chance, discovers her mother's secret, and not to be outdone in sacrifice, smothers her growing interest in Lloyd Kent while persuading her mother to make herself more attractive.

A costume of the old time and a dim parlor does the trick. Kent finds it is best to return to his old love, who, after all, is a more suitable companion than immature girlhood. Hal Edwards naturally reaps the benefit of the plot and is not slow to take advantage of the situation.

Clarence Elmer and Frankie Mann, usually cast in character parts, take advantage of a chance to shine as Betty and Hal. John Smiley and Carol Hallaway are good as the old lovers.

"THE WAR O' DREAMS"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"THE War o' Dreams," the next Selig Diamond special, will be released on July 1, and will prove most popular as a Fourth of July production, particularly so with the present intense interests in war and military affairs.

The plot, aided by the introduction of a dream, serves to connect a series of exciting events and to impress one with the horrors of modern warfare.

Some of the battle scenes are elaborately staged and remarkably well done. Many trained men and horses and vast quantities of ammunition are used to obtain a realistic battlefield atmosphere for the majority of the war scenes.

The story hinges upon the invention of a powerful explosive, which can be fired by ether waves directed towards it from an especially devised machine. This idea, imaginative as it may seem, is made to appear perfectly plausible in the picture.

The old inventor, who has labored through years of poverty to perfect this chemical, is about to receive a large sum of money for the formula from the United States Government when he has a dream. In this dream he sees the havoc that his invention will play in time of war and the suffering it will cause the innocent wives and children of the victims.

On a corpse-strewn battlefield he sees the body of his own daughter, who had just announced her engagement to an army officers. Her husband has been slaughtered by this murderous invention, and stricken with grief she is lying by his side. The nightmare is so realistic that when the representatives of the War Department come to buy the formula, having thoroughly tested its practicability, he tears the paper up, preferring to remain in poverty rather than to be rich at the expense of suffering to mankind.

ON THE FIELD OF BATTLE

The strong point of this picture is the realistic depiction of super-modern warfare with its machinery of destruction. This is played up in all cases with good photography. The vision scenes showing the sufferings of war victims and showing the Saviour on the cross are effectively brought in. Edwin Wallock and Lillian Hayward as the old inventor and his wife and Bessie Eyton take the leading roles.

"THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE"

(Pathé-Episode Two—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS continuation of Elaine's adventures promises, with this, the second chapter, to be as popular as was the first serial. Pearl White, as Elaine, has in her possession a model of a torpedo with which several powers wish to become familiar. Del Mar, the foreign spy, played by Lionel Barrymore, nearly gets the model. He is informed through Elaine's maid that the torpedo is in one of Elaine's trunks.

By chance Elaine changes the trays in her two trunks. So when the spy gets hold of the trunk after a thrilling chase, and throws it off a speeding train, he doesn't get the torpedo.

Four men, all at cross purposes, figure in the pursuit of the trunk. As they don't get the torpedo the way is left clear for further complications.

Craig Kennedy does not appear in this chapter. He has disappeared, but Elaine still loves and trusts him. Creighton Hale is still in the cast.

This chapter is marked by well produced masked ball and cafe scenes, as well as the thrillers in the chase of the trunk.

"ALL FOR THE LOVE OF A GIRL"

(Mirograph Corporation—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture was suggested by the theme of Rupert Hughes' novel of the same name, and as picturized by the Mirograph Corporation results in an engaging comedy-drama. H. J. Streyckmans adapted the story to the screen, while Roy Applegate produced the picture.

Mr. Streyckmans and Mr. Applegate together cast the picture, and in regard to the selection of correct and telling types they could hardly have done better. From the principals down to the various incidental characters that are introduced while the action carries the spectator to the farm, the casting has been exceedingly well done. When the neglect of the minor characters in a picture often mars it immeasureably, one wonders why all producers do not take the care in such matters that the producers of this feature have taken.

The story belongs to that class of lively American novels, full of adventure and impossibilities that are forever popular among the majority of the public, and so its power to entertain can well be estimated. As here produced the story is brought down to a par with the various pleasing characterizations. In fact there are times when its progress is completely halted to introduce comical scenes that have no direct bearing on the main plot, but it is easily picked up again when it actually advances.

However good in most respects, the production has its small defects. The wall of the hall room is plainly burlap and substantiates this statement by swaying in one scene. The players have the beginners' habit of directing most of their sentences directly at the camera, and while their sincerity counterbalances this fault, many of the scenes would have been better if enacted differently.

But we are not condemning the entire picture, for it contains much that makes it rank with the better comedy-dramas. The burlesque duel between the count and the prince is most comical, the slightly exaggerated country life is truly humorous, while the experience of the four principals in a tenement are staged and enacted with a great sense of comedy. On the other hand, the rescue of Antoinette from the railroad track by Jepson constitutes a good thrill.

Photographically the subject is not to be criticised, as every scene is clear and well defined. The settings are very good in most cases. It is a safe assertion to make that from the time Jepson is rendered penniless by the ruin and death of his father, until he has made good and won the heart of an heiress, none who witness the picture will remain uninterested.

The members of the cast are: Renee Kelly, as Antoinette; Edward G. Longman, as Jepson; Frank De Vernon, as Dinwiddie; Sue Balfour, as Mrs. Van Espman; E. T. Roseman, as Briggs, and Margaret Willard, Georgia Harvey, Al Grady, Gerald Hevener and Roy Applegate.

"THE DICTATOR"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A CASUAL passer-by, ignorant of modern literature and the motion picture business, dropping into the Strand theatre when "The Dictator" was on view, would emerge therefrom after the performance with the fixed idea that Richard Harding Davis prepared the story particularly for Jack Barrymore to cavort about in on the screen. All of which signifies that "The Dictator" suits Mr. Barrymore's humorous side to the last letter.

Fortunately, though, there are few if any such unintelligent characters in our midst, and so all the more credit is due to those concerned in the making of the picture. Oscar Eagle made it in Cuba, and has certainly done his share in the selection of locations and the general direction of the entire picture.

Mr. Barrymore carries the picture from first to last. Most of his comedy tricks give the appearance of being incidental, and so are good for twice the laughter that obviously and carefully worked out scenes would provoke. But then incidental humor is the mark of a good comedian, and Mr. Barrymore has long since proven himself an excellent comedian.

The story is a mirth provoking mixup itself. Young Brooke Travers after innumerable experiences finds himself the dictator of a tumultuous South American republic, and what's more, the general of the army feels inclined to shoot him. At the eleventh hour assistance arrives in the shape of an American battleship.

But an outline of the story cannot possibly do justice to the picture. Its humor is unbounded; it is pure, unadulterated humor in the bargain produced by a cast headed by the best comedian the screen has ever seen. The girl—for of course there is a girl, and a very pretty one—is played by Charlotte Ives.

The role of the general is carried by Walter Craven, who does some fine work. Ruby Hoffman appears as the southern "villainess," who isn't a villainess at all; while others are Robert Broderick, Esther Lyon, Harry West, Mario Majerino, Ivan Simpson and Thomas McGrath.

"THE BONDWOMAN"

(Kalem—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

VERA FULLER MELLISH, one of the Broadway players engaged by Kalem to appear in its Broadway Favorites series, has the leading role in this three-reel modern drama. She plays the daughter of an inventor-bank employee, who purchases freedom from prosecution for thefts for her father by marrying the banker. Amy feels herself a bondwoman. Her husband, failing to break down the barrier, changes his tactics and taunts her with her helplessness.

Amy tries to earn the money to pay off her father's indebtedness by her pen. The result is a growing friendship with a magazine editor. Amy earns enough to pay off the debt and leaves her husband. But Kipling's "almost inevitable consequences" arive in the shape of a baby, who brings father and mother together in conjugal felicity.

A side issue in the plot is the banker's passing infatuation for a show girl when he becomes convinced that his home is a failure.

Vera Fuller Mellish is histrionically excellent, if not photographically beautiful. Henry Hallam plays the banker. James B. Ross is the girl's father. Robert D. Walker is the magazine editor. Helen Lindroth is the show girl.

"BY WHOSE HAND?"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is a mystery drama with the interest well sustained to the very end. The picture opens with the murder of a wealthy bachelor in his city apartment. Then the scene is shifted to the country, where we are introduced to Lottie Toby.

She is in love with Jack, who helps her father till his farm. Oliver, a cripple hunchback, also appears and it develops that he idolizes Lottie. Chester Rowe, the murderer, having escaped detection, re-enters the story and immediately starts to make love to Lottie, thereby arousing the jealous hatred of Oliver. Oliver shoots at Rowe just as the latter is attacking Mr. Toby, who is returning home from the express office with a large sum of money.

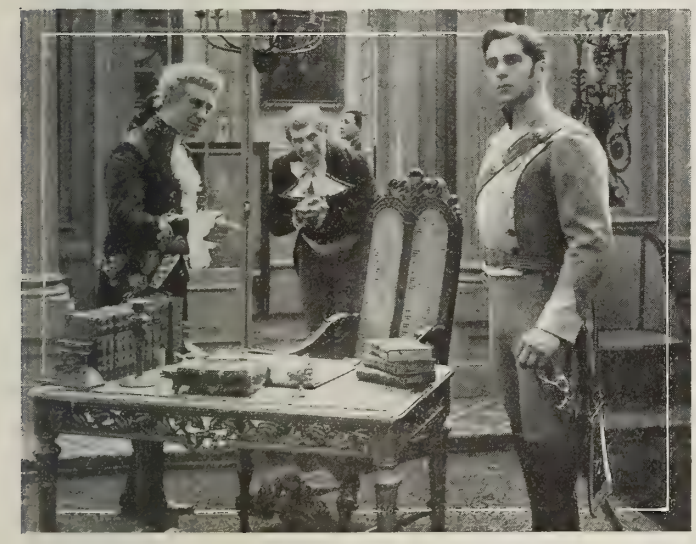
Both men fall and the hunchback thinks he has killed Rowe.

THE DISCOVERY A BRIEF INTERVIEW

Later everything ends happily, when it is discovered that Oliver's bullet hit a tree and Rowe was killed by the discharge of his own revolver.

Charles Bartlett is exceptionally good in the role of the hunchback. Winifred Greenwood plays Lottie with her usual charm. George Field, as the heavy, overdoes the part a trifle. John Steppling appears as Mr. Toby.

"THE FACE IN THE MOONLIGHT"



(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHEN Albert Capellani arrived at the World Film studio he immediately took up the work of producing "The Face in the Moonlight." Without a doubt M. Capellani has scored a notable success with this, his first American picture. M. Capellani is a Frenchman and "The Face in the Moonlight" has for its time and locale the Napoleanic days of France.

The customs of the people, the costumes, their homes and their adventurous lives all give evidence of a keen study of the period, 1815. To be brief, the atmosphere of the entire production is decidedly realistic.

Robert Warwick, the popular featured player, renders in this picture two of the most excellent characterizations we have ever seen him present. He appears as two half brothers. One is the polished soldier of the king's army, the other is the gruff, blustering and elusive robber and murderer. In the latter part in particular Mr. Warwick does some exceedingly realistic work. The scene in which he robs the inn and again where he bullies old Munier in his own home are two examples of very good acting.

H. Cooper Cliffe, as Munier, makes this character a striking one. He is the heavy of the play and interprets his role with such sincerity that he brings to mind a villain of the Dickinsonian type. Lucile, Munier's niece, in love with Victor, the soldier, is played by Stella Archer, while Montague Love appears as the father of Victor and the highwayman.

Little of the story can here be mentioned, but suffice it that due to its fine construction and the unusualness of the period, it is equipped with the power to keep the spectator on edge all the time. The two brothers, of course, get mixed.

Munier, a supporter of Napolean, causes Victor to be arrested at Rabat because he is a royalist. But matters take a different turn when Munier's niece confronts him with a charge of conspiracy with the real Rabat, so he is forced to release him for fear of his own imprisonment.

The camera work in all the scenes is most appropriate. The double exposures are capably handled while some unusual photographic effects have been introduced in substitution for the ordinary vision scene. On the whole, "The Face in the Moonlight" is exceptionally good. It is a first-class feature and worthy to lead the bill at a first-class theatre.

"THE PATH TO THE RAINBOW"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IT is refreshing to come across a clean little photoplay, well directed and well acted with a plot that appeals. No villain, no vampire, no death nor destruction—only a story of everyday human beings, with the touch of pathos all life brings, but at last ending in the happiness one expects to find at the end of the rainbow.

Most of the Shannon Fife scenarios it has been my lot to witness were melodramas pure and simple; here he shows himself at home in the realm of every-day happenings, though some of his situations seem at variance with the characters.

The story revolves around the life and character of Henry Grayson, banker, whose intense longing for a child prompts him to adopt Frances, an orphan, after he has been refused by Julia Mills. Julia marries and lives abroad.

When Frances grows to maidenhood, Henry, as is usual in guardians of fiction and sometimes in life, falls in love with his ward, but delays proposing until he has a home ready on Rainbow Hill.

Delays are dangerous with young eighteen. Frances has fallen in love with Edward Hardy, a school chum's brother. Fate has brought Edward to Chicago and Frances accepts him conditionally—if he can make a success of the factory that has been willed to him.

With hard times pressing, more money is needed to carry on the business. Without this ruin is inevitable. Frances asks Henry for this loan just as he has planned to propose.

Rising above self, after an all-night struggle, Henry agrees to the loan, and even gives the happy couple his Rainbow cottage for a wedding present.

A little later, Julia, now a childless widow, comes back home and the friendship with Henry is renewed. The inevitable rebound causes a double wedding in a short time. The last scene shows the two happy couples and their respective babies following the path to the Rainbow.

Although Ormi Hawley, Florence Hackett and Earl Metcalfe deserve their usual meed of praise, the bright particular star is Arthur Matthews. He gives a fine impersonation of the Lockish hero, and in his big scene—the struggle to be generous to his rival, he seems to grow visibly older and more haggard and wan as we gaze at his countenance—a commendable bit of emotional acting. George Terwilliger directed.

"THE GOVERNOR'S BOSS"

(Governor's Boss Photo Play Co.—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THIS picture is a species of special pleading. The producers, judging from the subject and the manner of its development, have thought more of exciting sympathy for the alleged wrongs of William Sulzer, the impeached governor of the State of New York, than making the picture a worthy example of screen entertainment. It is an instance of a film lacking dramatic value and depending for interest on the introduction of a public personage because of the notoriety attached to his name.

As the person playing the chief role in a picture of this character naturally lacks, as a rule, histrionic ability and training, his acting can be mentioned only in words of the most lenient charity.

Ex-Governor Sulzer is no actor, and shows no indication of turning his forensic powers to advantage in photo drama. He does, however, not differ from others entering this field from ranks of endeavor widely disassociated from it in every respect.

It might be supposed that many people, indifferent to a drama well produced, will be satisfied to see what Mr. Sulzer looks like. But the general run of patrons of motion pictures are not in this infantile state of mind. They will not tolerate anything that does not first and foremost attract solely on its merits as a photo drama.

An audience wants to be entertained; they don't want to just see the face of somebody who has been in the public eye, under more or less distressing circumstances.

The special pleading lacked conviction. No one will be influenced in his previously formed opinions of the ex-Governor's conduct, one way or another by a view of these reels.

This lack of interest is due partly to the plot, loosely constructed and made up of numerous scenes obviously the merest padding. The story could have been told to better advantage in two reels.

With the possible idea, so common in the minds of many scenario writers, that no plot has strength unless something objectionable is interpolated, the inevitable "ruined goil" phase was introduced with all the straining for effect associated with cheap melodrama. Instead of this part of the play arousing sympathy or even a mild interest, it falls pitifully flat, on account of the trite situations, indifferently directed and poorly acted.

The cast might have proved adequate in another vehicle, with the exception of Dorothy Kingdon, who, as Grace Ferguson, made a difficult part stand out with individuality.

"TOIL AND TYRANNY"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS picture, the twelfth of the "Who Pays?" series, tells, as may easily be imagined from the title, a story of the struggle between labor and capital. Ruth Roland and Henry King are seen in the leading roles as the rich man's daughter and the ill-fed weakling lumber hand, respectively.

The capitalist father, guided by a young lawyer with beetling brows, proceeds through the foreman to crush the life and ambition out of his employees. When they threaten to strike he lets them. As his daughter goes ahead with her lavish birthday party he orders the workmen evicted from their homes for non-payment of rent. The young lawyer aspires to the daughter's hand, and she does not exactly discourage him.

AFTER THE ATTACK ON THE CAPITALIST'S HOME

But the strike goes on and violence comes. The men attack the capitalist's home. Finally comes the ending with things straightened out, and the conclusion that it is the woman who pays.

The contrast between the luxury of the rich man's home and the poverty of his employee's home is a sharp one. The interior scenes of the rich man's home are very fine. The action is kept at a high pitch throughout, and the work of Ruth Roland and Henry King is excellent, as always. Will M. Ritchie wrote the scenario.

"UNDER THE CRESCENT"

(Gold Seal—Sixth Narrative)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN this chapter, the last of the series, the trials of the princess, the American and the dancer come to an end. Zohra, disguised as a servant, enters the household of the prince and poisons his wine. Suffering agonies the prince receives a message proclaiming him king of the adjoining principality.

He sets out for this place, but before his journey ends he dies. The princess, meanwhile, has declared herself the wife of the dead man, consequently queen of the country.

She proclaims that there shall be no massacre of the Christians. She and her few followers are forced to take refuge in the palace from the raging mob of Turks.

But just as all hope seems lost the American arrives with the Christian soldiers and saves the day.

Seldom has there been a serial of more exciting or sensational qualities than these adventures of Princess Ibrahim Hassan. Each release has been full of action, melodramatic action of a fast and most entertaining sort. There have been faults also in this number; several scenes are poorly photographed, but the good points in the production have overbalanced the defects. Doubtless many houses have been, and many more will be, entertained by the adventures of the three mistreated persons in the Turkish realm.

"THE GARDEN OF LIES"

(Broadway Universal Features—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS fine production inaugurates the policy of the Universal company of placing on its program feature pictures adapted from the works of prominent authors, and featuring renowned stars of the legitimate stage.

"The Garden of Lies" will live long in the minds of the many who witness it. It is an original story—that is, original in the world of motion pictures. The plot came from the pen of a clever author, the late Justus Miles Forman. It was prepared for the screen by Louis Reeves Harrison and produced by Jack Pratt.

To our mind there is only one fault of any note in the construction of the story as here presented. That is the swift progress of plot development at the outset of the first reel. Too much is said in the sub-titles, and some of the action is not clearly conveyed to the mind.

This may be partially alleviated, and even as it stands at present, this defect is merely apparent for the moment.

Jane Cowl is featured in the picture. It will be remembered that she scored a brilliant success on Broadway in "Within the Law." Here she appears as Princess Eleanor, the wife of the heir apparent to the throne of Novodna. Immediately after marriage the princess loses her mind from the shock experienced in an automobile accident. She continually calls for her husband, who is away attending to affairs of state.

Her friends make an experiment. They hire an American adventurer to take the prince's place. She falls deeply in love with this man; in fact, her love for him restores her memory. Then her husband returns and she learns all of the truth. She denounces the American and refuses to see her husband.

Afterwards she is captured by conspirators while both her husband and the American attempt to rescue her. In doing so the prince is mortally wounded and the American dangerously so. However, all the fear that the princess evidences is for her lover, and not for her husband, and so the termination can easily be imagined.

PRINCESS ELEANOR FINDS THE WOUNDED MEN

Such a part as that of the princess offers Miss Cowl a considerable number of scenes in which to display her emotional talent. She lives the part throughout the picture, and is continually the center of attraction.

William Russell is a realistic figure as the American, while Philip Hahn is the prince.

The production abounds with stirring action. When the scenes are not tense enough because of their situation, the interest is easily upheld by other motives. An exciting dual, a fisticuff affair, a pistol fight and several touches of humor do much to relieve the intensity of the more dramatic moments.

In the manner of scenes the picture is very good. The exteriors are most enjoyable to look upon, while the interior settings have been laid with evident care.

The photography in the print viewed was below the Universal standard in a number of scenes. "The Garden of Lies," nevertheless, is a production entirely worthy of the Universal.

"CROOKY SCRUGGS"

(Vitagraph—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

PAUL WEST, who has been writing comedy for many years, calls this a comedy of errors and it surely is a comedy and a good one. Frank Daniels makes his screen debut in the title role. Anyone who doesn't laugh at his antics is joy-proof. C. J. Williams, who directed, has provided different comedy "business" for every scene, but enough of Daniels' stage mannerisms are retained so that his peculiarities are not forgotten.

Daniels plays Crooky Scruggs, a convict, who escapes and swaps identities with Col. Bob Roberts, a wealthy rancher on his first trip East. As Bob Roberts he is enthusiastically received by John Dough, Roberts' nephew, a Wall Street broker who is mostly broke. Susan Dough, a comedy character, pursues the bogus colonel. Finally the real colonel catches up and Crooky goes back to his nice, quiet cell.

CROOKY BREAKS INTO CAFE LIFE

Vitagraph players complete the cast. Charles Eldridge is Bob Roberts, Harry Morey is John Dough, Edwina Robbins is Susan, and Anna Laughlin is Dough's pretty daughter. Evart Overton is Dough's secretary.

To detail the comedy "business" would take a long time. Suffice it to say that Scruggs' adventures in society are excruciatingly funny. Almost every scene has one or more laughs in it.

"Crooky Scruggs" will live long in the hearts of those who care for good farce comedy.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"His Fatal Shot." (Biograph. Mon., June 28.)—Bartlett is arrested, charged with the murder, in the woods, of Hillman, his rival in love. The discovery of a note proves that the death was suicide. Ivan Christy is Bartlett, Herbert Barrington is Hillman. Mary Maletesta is the girl and Frank Bates the doctor. Excellently produced under the direction of Wray Physioc.

"Love's Melody." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., June 29.)—A young actor is engaged to a beautiful girl. At his bachelor supper an old, blind street musician plays "Love's Melody" and then tells the story of life. Later the sweetheart plays the "Love's Melody," which her mother taught her, and thus it is found that she is the old musician's long lost daughter.

Jack Mulhall is the actor and Marie Newton his fiancee. Edward Cecil is the blind musician and Irma Dawkins the girl's mother. Edward Morrissey directed.

"Fate's Healing Hand." (Biograph. Thurs., July 1.)—The son and daughter of rival feudists fall in love with each other. The boy's father, missing his aim, shoots the girl. The minister prevents further killings among the factions. Eventually the girl recovers and the breach between the feudists is healed. The action is very interesting all the way. Frank Newburg and Isabel Rea are the young people and William J. Butler and Harland Winters their fathers. George Morgan directed.

"Luxurious Lou." (Biograph. Sat., July 3.)—A very good frontier comedy. The arrival of "Luxurious Lou" drives the camp's woman hater away. Later Lou threatens to sue her husband for $50,000 for ill treatment when the woman hater returns and says that Lou is his wife and has no claim on the other. So he gives Lou a ticket to Utah, some pin money and sends her on her way. Mrs. La Varnie plays the overdressed ancient Lou. Ivan Christy is the woman hater and Walter Coyle the near-victim. Herbert Barrington, Mary Maletesta, Joseph McDermott and Frank Bates are in the cast. Wray Physioc directed.

"Was It Her Duty?" (Edison. Sat., July 3.)—The old story of the girl who refuses to marry because she feels it her duty to stay with her selfish mother is used in this picture with an added sad effect. This is brought in by the fact that the girl, who is a dressmaker, has to make the wedding gown for the girl who marries the man she loves, and whom she might have married. Miriam Nesbitt is featured. Her suitor is Laurie Erskine and the other girl Margaret Prussing.

"Cartoons in the Hotel." (Edison. Wed., June 30.)—Another of the excellent series of animated cartoons by Raoul Barre. As usual there are some real actors who appear in scattered scenes between the cartoons. The drawings are so interesting that a thief has an easy time in the hotel lobby, but he is caught later.

"Trapped." (Essanay. Mon., June 28.)—The manner in which a detective gained a confession from a long unpunished criminal is strikingly depicted in this interesting reel. John Hope, John Thorn and Charles Stine are the leads.

"Dud Resolves Not to Smoke." (Essanay. Wed., June 30.)—In this comedy Dreamy Dud has such a nightmare resulting from smoking a very strong pipe that he resolves never to partake again. His experience with the moon is funny.

"A Countless Count." (Essanay. Thurs., July 1.)—A mixup resulting from the love affair of a perverse young girl. Her father wants her to marry a count, but she much prefers an American and eventually has her own way. Harry Pollard, Margie Rieger and Eddie Fries are featured in this.

"The Inner Brute." (Essanay. Two reels. Sat., July 3.)—A distinctly original offering that is very powerful even in its distastefulness. Jake inherits the instincts of a tiger due to the fact that his mother was frightened by such a beast before her son's birth. After killing his rival in love he slinks home late at night. His mother sees his face, which slowly turns into the head of a tiger, through the window and shoots him.

"Providence and Mrs. Urmy." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., June 29.)—A young girl not wishing to marry a nobleman that she has never seen elopes with a chauffeur and marries him with the understanding that he is to be her husband in name only. Then the romance starts and later developments determine the chauffeur is the nobleman.

A light comedy-drama that ought to please the most critical. The cast includes a collection of favorites. Francis Bushman and Baverly Bayne are the leads, while Helen Dunbar and Louise Crolius play the other principal parts.

"The Bondwoman." (Kalem. Three reels. Mon., June 28.—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Merry Moving Men." (Kalem. Tues., June 29.)—These Ham and Bud comedies are maintaining a very high standard. This is one of the best. Ham and Bud, hired to operate a moving truck, pile the furniture on and then run the truck over to a visiting circus.

They spend the night camping out while the owner of the furniture and his wife have to camp out in an empty house. When Ham and Bud arrive the next day the house owner hurries them on their work by shooting a revolver at their feet. When the revolver is empty, Ham and Bud take it away from him and blithely skip away, happy and care-free.

"The Accomplice." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., June 30.)—One of the girl detective series. Marin Sais foils a plot to palm off a crook as the long lost son of a millionaire, the crooks having nearly killed the real son. Many good hospital and cafe scenes and an excellent crook drama.

"The Midnight Limited." (Kalem. Sat., July 3.)—The most exciting and interesting single reeler seen in many a long day. E. W. Matlack, who is writing the series, is an old train dispatcher, and he certainly dopes out thrilling stunts.

In this picture Helen Holmes leaps from the top of one speeding train to another, crawls in and out of the windows of a speeding train and generally keeps the spectator's hair on end. This is a picture that any exhibitor who wants to put "punch" in his program can run to good advantage.

"Just Like Kids." (Lubin. Sat., June 26.)—In real life people often act as the Murphys and Schultzes in this film, ready to tear each other to shreds over some quarrel of their youngsters. By the time the parents are bitter enemies, the kids have forgotten their grievances and are chums once more.

Billy Reeves as Pat Murphy has a chance to show some versatility in an Irish character. Mae Hotely is his wife, Chas. Griffith and Imy Forrest the warring Schultzes. The scenario by Epes Winthrop Sargent was directed by Arthur Hotaling.

"The Road O'Strife." (Lubin. Part Thirteen. Monday, June 28.)—Professor Gershom gives the name to this part, "The Man Who Did Not Die." Although he was supposed to be murdered, he is rescued from the river and has been very ill ever since at a hospital. Now Robert Dane is at the same hospital suffering from his wound. Of course, they are next to each other, and on Gershom overhearing the account of Alene's pardon, nothing will hold him back.

Away from the hospital he rushes, stealing the silver cup on his way. He meets Alene leaving prison, takes her to a lawyer, cuts out a false bottom from the cup and displays a document showing Alene to be not only an heiress but a princess of Urania.

At this interesting juncture the "continued next week" sign is flashed at us. Bernard Siegel is excellent in his character role of the eccentric professor.

"Her Choice." (Lubin. Tues., June 29.)—This might be called a "comedy of errors" with apologies to the immortal Bard of Avon. Betty, in love with Harry, is also sought by Count Lamont, a favorite of her father's, and Lord Chase, championed by her mother.

To get rid of these unwelcome suitors at one fell swoop, the young lovers plan an elopement, and put the nobility in a silly predicament by requiring each to dress as a woman and repair to the minister's in silence.

When the ruse is discovered, it is too late to interfere, as the young couple are married and there is nothing to do but forgive them. Mae Hotely, Ed. Lawrence, Frances Ne Moyer, Raymond McKee, Jerold Hevener and Ben Walker are in the cast.

"A Day on the Force." (Lubin. Sat., July 3.)—Billy Reeves is supported by a company of well-known comedians in this slapstick comedy among whom are Billy Potter, Arthur Mattheus, Patsy De Forest and Mae Hotely.

Arthur Hotaling directs all and writes a number of the Billy Reeves comedies. As the name indicates, this release tells the adventures of Billy while impersonating a policeman whose outfit he stole while the officer napped.

Bill, instead of anticipated enjoyment, meets with many misadventures, winding up with a chase in which he escapes, while his pursuers fall over him in the creek. Slapstick lovers will enjoy this picture.

"The Girl and the Reporter." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., June 28.)—An engaging two-reel drama concerning the romance between a society girl and a reporter. It is full of thrills and the story is exceedingly well worked out ending with the reported rescuing the girl from the clutches of a Hindu. This will certainly please.

"On the Border." (Selig. Tues., June 29.)—An interesting subject laid in the west. The line rider apprehends two opium smugglers only after a great deal of trouble. At first they alienate the affections of his sweetheart, but the discovery of their characters turns her back to her first love.

"The Mystery of Dead Man's Isle." (Selig. Wed., June 30.)—This is quite a light subject showing the manner in which a mining engineer saved a girl from the clutches of a counterfeiter.

"Trailed to the Puma's Lair." (Selig. Thurs., July 1.)—The story of the disastrous death of her mother and her lover as told to the girl by her father so influences her that she resolves not to flirt in the future, remaining true to her husband. The puma is brought into the story as the cause of the woman's death. This is good.

"Mr. Jarr and the Captive Maiden." (Vitagraph. Mon., June 28.)—A comedy belonging to the "Jarr" series need hardly be elaborated upon in review. They have all been good and this, the thirteenth, is no exception to the rule.

"The Hand of God." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Tues., June 29.)—The minister who gives shelter to his outcast sister is believed to be a hypocrite by his wife until after considerable time her eyes are opened. A worthy feature starring Charles Wellesley, Naomi Childers and Betty Gray. It should take at most houses, for it contains the necessary qualities for arousing the spectator's sympathy for all the characters concerned.

"The Evolution of Cutey." (Vitagraph. Wed., June 30.)—Wally Van is here featured as "mamma's boy," until one day he breaks the apron strings and becomes engaged all of a sudden. A humorous number. Supporting Mr. Van are Nitra Frazer, Cissy Fitzgerald, Albert Roccardi and Edwina Robbins—a fine cast. Mr. Van produced the picture from a scenario by Templer Saxe.

"The Goddess." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Chapter seven.)—In this number Celestia continues her good work among the poor of New York's East Side. She prevents a panic in a factory fire by her quick wit, and so endears herself to the workers that the papers of the city praise her. This results in her receiving money with which to carry on her work. The fire scenes are unusually good.

In the latter part of the chapter the society girl who loves Tommy comes to Celestia, demanding that she leave him alone. Celestia refuses. Tommy is disinherited by his father, and for this reason refuses to marry Celestia at her request. And she refuses to be reconciled with him believing that he loves the other girl.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"An Unlucky Suitor." (Royal. Sat., June 12.)—A comedy number featuring a very weighty lady who is under treatment to get thin. There is quite a bit that is funny in this reel.

"The House Breaking Hound." (Keystone, Mon., June 14.)—A side-splitting comedy in which a strange looking dog adds to the gayety of nations, ably assisted by the Keystone players. Difficult to describe but highly entertaining to see.

"Not a Ghost of a Show." (Royal. Sat., June 19.)—A very poor comedy portraying the adventures of a penniless theatrical troupe who attempt to play Hamlet.

"The Old Clothes Shop." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., June 19.)—Thomas Jefferson and Bessie Buskirk are featured in this romantic picture. The old clothes man's daughter is constantly reading fiction of the Laura Jean Libby brand. It so happens that her own career works out like one of her heroines. Not only is she tormented by a villain, but she discovers the thieves who have stolen a valuable necklace, and then marries her gay hero. The incidents are such as to make the film border on the burlesque, as was doubtless intended.

"The Two Cent Mystery." (Thanhouser. Sun., June 20.)—A pretty juvenile comedy of a little girl whose two pennies mysteriously disappear. She believes fairies took them, but her playmate thinks witches were responsible. When the pennies are strangely returned the girl's view seems the better.

"Where Breezes Blow." (Komic. Sun., June 20.)—This story is built about the triumph of a country girl who is unceremoniously hustled into a bathing suit contest at a shore resort. The fact that Fay Tincher, who is featured, is really shown at the Venice, Cal., beauty contest adds to the interest. Miss Tincher won the first prize in this event.

"The Woman from Warren's." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., June 20.—When a woman who had been tricked by a man discovered the same man paying attention to a young girl her suspicions were aroused. Her betrayer's threats to expose her forced a silent game, but she easily bested the crook and sent him on his way on the evening that he had planned to carry out a mock marriage with the trusting girl. A loosely constructed but well acted story. In the cast are Lucille Younge, F. A. Turner, Billy Hutton and Charles West.

"The Choir Boys." (Reliance. Mon., June 21.)—Two boys fight, but later at a church picnic one saves the other's life. Years after one of the boys is a minister and the other has become a burglar. The latter's gang attacks the minister in his house, and when the leader discovers the identity of their victim he rescues him from his own men at the cost of his life.

"The Little Teacher." (Keystone. Two reels. Mon., June 21.)—An all-star Keystone cast help to make this picture a success. Mabel Normand is seen in title role, while Mack Sennett and Roscoe Arbuckle are rubes. The work of Owen Moore is a weak spot, as it usually is. The new school teacher proves to be "the marryin' sort" in spite of the school board's hopes. A comedy which is a sure laugh producer.

"The Ash Can." (Majestic. Tues., June 22.)—One of the excellent juvenile comedies of the exploits of Detective Dick. First the gallant detective punishes a raid on his secretary's supply of candy, and then he is led on a long chase by the fickle girl. He solves the mystery of the ash can, but not just as he had supposed.

"Which Shall It Be?" (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., June 22.)—Founded on the old Fifth Reader poem of the same name, this picture shows the way in which a poor man refuses the offer of a rich man to provide him with a home and income if he can adopt one of the poor man's seven or eight children. There is not enough weight to the story to carry it for two reels.

"The Silent Witness." (Reliance. Wed., June 23.)—The familiar story of a man who is falsely accused of crime, and who is subsequently cleared by a photograph taken accidentally of the real thief at work. The thieves are captured. Claire Anderson is seen as the heroine.

"By Whose Hand." (American. Two reels. Fri., June 25.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"When the House is Divided." (Royal. Sat., June 26.)—Two pairs of cousins don't get along well in the same house, and the old chalk line is resorted to. Matters end in a mixup. A good story is the foundation of this picture, but poor acting has marred many of its comic possibilities.

"The Madonna." (Beauty. Sat., June 29.)—Showing how a painting of the Madonna reforms a wealthy young profligate and leads him to seek the girl who posed for it. He protects her from her sister's worthless husband and declares his love. Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell are assisted by Jimsy Maye and Ray Berger.

"A Good Business Deal." (American. Wed., June 30.)—A novel and enjoyable comedy number featuring Joe Galbraith and Vivian Rich. The poor suitor won't propose, so the girl incorporates his poor business, making herself president of the concern. Then she dictates to him the girl he shall marry and the rest is easy.

"The Sea Ghost." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., June 30.)—Mutineers lead by the first mate put their captain to float in a cask. He lands on an island on which are two castaways, an old man and his daughter. They have waited a long time for a ship. At length the captain's ship comes to the island, and the brutal mate takes all the old man's money and his daughter and starts away.

The captain conceals himself until evening, when he and the old man swim out to the ship and board it. The mate, who is at the wheel, thinks he sees a ghost and is so frightened that he jumps overboard. The rest is easy.

For a thrilling sea melodrama, a perfectly impossible yet entertaining tale, this picture is one of the best we have seen. The storm at sea is very well handled. Arthur Maude is the captain, while the girl's part is taken by pretty and clever Margaret Gibson. Save for the fact that from a distance the island appears inhabited, the production is an excellent one of its kind.

"The Failure." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., July 1.)—An old and in the present case ineffectively produced story, lowers the value of this picture. The plot is made use of in which the man robs to save his child. is discovered but allowed to go free by the relenting sheriff. The locale is the west and in scenes and photography the picture is good. However, inconsistencies appear, such as a man walking into his house with handcuffs on, then showing him inside with them off. Walter Edwards and Leonna Hutton are the leads in this.

"A Woman's Scorn." (American. Fri., July 2.)—An interesting drama which shows how an attractive but unscrupulous widow tries to estrange a man from his wife by a snap-shot taken of the widow in the husband's arms. The man who is forced to take the picture confesses and everything ends happily. Harry VonMeter, Nan Christy, Beatrice Van and Robyn Adair make a good cast.

"His Mother's Portrait." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., July 2.)—The automobile in which are riding a chorus girl and her drunken escort is disabled. The girl takes refuge in a farmhouse owned by a young bachelor farmer. His simple and gentlemanly ways appeal to her, so his proposal of marriage is accepted. Slightly far fetched but most entertaining. The contrasts between the gay city life and that led by the country farmer is striking. The interior of the farmhouse is most realistic. Frank Borzage and Margaret Gibson play the principal parts.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 172." (Wed., June 23.)—This is an unusually interesting number, including such events as; the launching of our largest battleship, the "Arizona"; Flag Day events, including a view of President Wilson; a noteworthy picture of a 300,000 ton dynamite blast; and the excursion of the Universalities on the Hudson River excursion steamer, "Mandalay."

"The Cheval Mystery." (Victor. Three reels. Mon., June 28.)—A detective melodrama endowed with a large sprinkling of hypnotism enacted by the Harry Myers Victor company. A hypnotist possesses such power over a beautiful young girl that he is able to transform her from her ordinary self into a raving maniac at will. Under his influence she shoots a man, but through the efforts of a friend her actual innocence is proved.

Of its kind this is an excellent production, produced with an evident understanding as to the method of invoking great suspense and interest. Some of the settings in the rich family's home are slightly too lavish, but otherwise the properties are good. Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, a favorite combination, appear in the leading roles.

"The Mechanical Man." (Joker. Mon., June 28.)—A novel comedy offering featuring Phroso, the renowned vaudeville performer. A life-sized mechanical man is broken by the janitor immediately before its delivery. The janitor is forced to take the dummy's place, and in the home of the buyer things are very lively after the entrance of the janitor. Supporting Phroso are Max Asher, William Franey, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock.

"Under the Crescent." (Gold Seal. Fifth narrative. Tues., June 29.)—Reviewed at length in issue of June 26.

"When Hubby Grew Jealous." (Nestor. Tues., June 29.)—Most of hubby's jealousy is created by an over-polite burlesque doctor, who pays much attention to his pretty wife. The mix-up in the hospital is most humorous, likewise is the chase through the crowded streets, hubby clothed in pajamas. Horace Davey directed this "laughfest" with Billie Rhodes and Kingsley Benedict playing the couple, and Neal Burns the doctor. The latter renders some amusing work.

"The Grail." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., June 30.)—In which after a girl's faith in her lover has been shattered by the deceit of her father, he re-establishes her faith in him by proving himself only the gentleman under the most trying circumstances.

This is a very entertaining drama produced by William Worthington and made doubly interesting through the story's continual comparison with the days of old. Herbert Rawlinson, Anna Little and William Worthington handle the principal parts in effective style. The scenes and photography leave little to be desired.

"Vanity." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., July 1.)—The story of a woman who deserts her husband because of his poverty, later meeting him when the man with whom she eloped has proved a failure and her husband a success, and so being reconciled. A heart-interest picture well worked out. The scenes and photography are good, some most original locations having been chosen as backgrounds. Arthur Shirley and Edna Maison are featured.

"The Old Grouch." (Big U. Thurs., July 1.)—A very good picture with an equally fine moral. A harsh and grouchy contractor experiences a dream in which he fails utterly in business. From the people he mistreated previously he receives no help or consolation. On awakening he resolves to lead a better life. Murdock MacQuarrie is featured in this, and save for a slight tendency to overdo the name part his performance is noticeable only for merit. Edith Lehr appears as his wife.

"The Cameron Sisters." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., July 1.)—On the same reel with "Marvels of the Insect World." An interesting half-reel featuring Dorothy and Madeline Cameron in various dances.

"Marvels of the Insect World." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., July 1.)—On the same reel with "The Cameron Sisters." An excellent educational subject prepared by Professor Raymond Ditmars. The evolution of the cocoon is shown, together with pictures of various species of beetles.

"The Marble Heart." (Imp. Four reels. Fri., July 2.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"When the Spirits Moved." (Nestor. Fri., July 2.)—One of Al Christie's best, with Lee Moran appearing as Dr. Bunk, a spiritualist. Eddie comes to see his girl and discovers that her family believes in spirits. Rain forces him to remain in the house over night, and he has to sleep with the doctor. The comedy moments throughout this reel are many and uproarious. The picture should score a big success anywhere. Ed Lyons, Victoria Forde and Harry Rattenberry are also in the cast.

"Fifty Years Behind." (Powers. Sat., July 3.)—An old fashioned jeweler falls in love with a social butterfly, but discovering she is engaged returns to marry his mother's ward. This story is quite poor in development. It contains the substance of a novel picture, but as it stands it is mediocre. Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn are featured.

"A Skin Game." (Joker. Sat., July 3.)—This was produced by Bob Daly and features Fritzi Brunette, supported by Tom Walsh and Frank MacQuarrie. The plot contains several rather risque situations. Most of the laughs fall in the latter part of the reel. An artist innocently gets himself into all manner of predicaments with another man's wife, much to that gentleman's distaste. A bear and a man in a bearskin furnish the usual humorous moments.

"The Advisor." (Big U. Sun., July 4.)—An adventuress is hired to "get something on" the candidate for mayor, and because of her the candidate and his wife have a quarrel. But this is smoothed over by a doctor, an old friend of the family. A light offering but produced well. Adele Lane and Harry Linkey are the principals.

"Billy's Baby." (Laemmle. Sun., July 4.)—A pretty romance in which the young lawyer proves his worth by defeating a rascally broker who attempts to swindle the girl's landlady. Millard Wilson and Peggy Hart enact the principal roles.

"The Curse of Work." (L-Ko. Two reels. Sun., July 4.)—An average low comedy number with Billie Ritchie, Louise Orth and Henry Bergman leading the cast. Ritchie is a bootblack and poses as a baron while out of the shop. He is shown up finally. There is too much of the same thing toward the end, but there are quite a number of laughable scenes throughout the two reels.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News, No. 47."—The war section is devoted to scenes from the Russian army at the front. The Czar and Grand Duke Nicholas are both shown visiting the troops, as is the Archbishop of Poland. Another interesting foreign subject is the wreck at Gretna Green, Scotland, in which three trains collided with a loss of two hundred lives, mostly soldiers who were bound for the front. The departure of the 115-foot schooner which is going to the Arctic in search of the MacMillan polar expedition is a scene of much interest. There is also an animated cartoon and a fashion section.

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, President

223-233 West Erie Street - - Chicago

"When Charlie Was a Child." (Pathe. One reel.)—Although his name is not mentioned, Charles Chaplin is the man in mind. A juvenile actor made up in Mr. Chaplin's style takes part in a slapstick comedy with two other juveniles and several grown-up players.

"Bing, Bang, Biff." (Pathe. One reel.)—All that the name implies. A riot of slapstick comedy with no plot or attempt at a plot. Suitable for audiences who take their slapstick strong.

"The Tomboy." (Balboa. Two reels.)—A Western drama featuring Jackie Saunders. The foreman of a mine knocks down a workman who is trying to kiss another workman's daughter. Later the foreman is kidnapped by the man he has punished, and some of his pals. After exciting adventures the daughter of the mine owner saves the foreman, and a wedding ceremony closes the picture. Henry King is seen as the hero.

"When Knights Were Bold." (Pathe. Three-quarter reel.)—One of Bray's clever animated cartoons. Most of the picture shows the adventures of a daring knight who slays a mighty dragon.

"Malay Dances." (Pathe. Quarter reel.)—An educational and scenic picture showing native customs in the East Indies.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

We wish to state that in deference to the wishes of the exchanges which have contracted to handle the ASSOCIATED SERVICE, we have decided to postpone the initial release date from July 12th, as originally intended, to the early part of August.

For months past we have been concentrating our undivided efforts to the planning and developing of our project. The difficult problems of distribution have been solved, the operating details of our organization have been decided upon, and thousands of feet of film have already been completed and are stored in our vaults.

There will be, however, no cessation in the activities of the studios of the seven companies composing the Associated. These plants are running and will continue to run to their full capacity, producing the full amount of their allotted work.

While we are in a condition to begin releasing on the date at first intended, we will utilize the extra time at our disposal to bring every department of our organization to a state of higher preparedness, so that our operations, when once started, will go forward steadily, without delay or interruption.

THEY KEEP ON DOING IT

West Orange, N. J., June 10, 1915.

The Vitagraph Co.:

I have seen a good many Vitagraph pictures and I like them best of all. I asked the manager of our movie house to show Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Features, which he did. Lately we have had "The Juggernaut." It was some picture. We had it shown by request twice, it was so good. Then I told him to book "The Goddess," your serial, and it is shown every Friday night with a packed house. We are going to have another one of your masterpieces again. We get more Vitagraph pictures than any other pictures.

Wishing you success, I remain.

Something New

¶ A Convention issue that is so called simply because it comes out during Convention week means nothing in particular to the advertiser.

¶ But a special issue at Convention time so valuable that every exhibitor will have to keep it at his right hand for a year at least does give an extra value to its advertising space.

¶ The special San Francisco Convention Number of Motion Picture News will say things about the past and future activities of every important producer and distributor which will be necessary to the conduct of every exhibitor's business.

¶ Add to this a novel, striking, three color cover, a loose insert containing maps and directory of the points of interest to the trade, an added circulation and an extra advantage we will tell you about in confidence and certainly no doubt can remain of the value of strong advertising display in such an issue.

No raise in rates.

¶ For colors and preferred positions think and act NOW. Take it up with us. We can make good suggestions. Forms close July 6.

Kansas City Kills "Race Hatred" Measure

IN Kansas City last week a number of negro politicians caused a bill to be introduced in the city council aimed at the moving pictures pertaining to race problems. Their hope was to suppress any further showing of William Fox's feature, "The Nigger," and the coming exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation," which has not as yet been shown there.

The bill was framed and introduced in the lower house of the city council, where it was passed by a large majority.

Very little publicity was given the bill before its introduction in the house, and but very few persons, except those who planned it, knew that it was coming up. The bill was to go to the upper house on Monday night.

A few of the film men got real busy on the Monday morning following the introduction and passage of the bill in the lower house, and rallied enough of the lawmakers in the upper house to practically kill the bill. The bill was referred back, which is the same as killing it for good.

Chas. W. Harden, manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and Martin E. Williams, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, deserve most of the credit for having this unjust measure suppressed.

The strongest argument against the measure was the fact that the city maintains a board of public welfare whose duty it is to review objectionable subjects, and that it was not necessary to have a special ordinance and also maintain the welfare board for the same purpose.

Broach Municipal Censorship of Films for Omaha

CENSORSHIP of motion pictures was again broached in Omaha, Thursday evening, June 10, when fifty Improvement club delegates met at the City Hall to discuss what should be included in a new charter for Omaha. Those familiar with the situation say this is the most serious threat of censorship since the bill was before the legislature last winter, as the charter is almost assured for the near future.

Timely work last winter not only killed a censorship bill that was rushed through the house, but died in the senate committee, but it also pulled the teeth from a law authorizing a Welfare commission by taking away every chance the commission had of securing funds with which to work.

It was only this week, when the mayor came to appoint the Welfare commission, that its failure was noticed. Then it was discovered no reliable provision had been made for funds. Those familiar with the situation said the film men did it, as the commission had autocratic powers in censoring motion pictures and moving picture theatres.

Immediately after the discovery, talk was started of a provision in a contemplated new charter. The Improvement club federation, representing organizations of several thousand citizens, took the first step this week.

Omaha newspapers have merely mentioned the situation, refusing to take sides. Film men hope to get the influence of the big local papers when the fight begins, as there has always been a friendly spirit between the showmen and the press.

NETHERSOLE WILL BE SEEN IN "WRITING ON THE WALL"

Olga Nethersole's starring vehicle, William J. Hurlburt's psychological drama of greed, is the next big picture to be undertaken for production by the Vitagraph company. "The Writing on the Wall" has been picturized from the original play script by Marguerite Bertsch and will be produced by Director Tefft Johnson with a strong cast including Joseph Kilgour as Irving Lawrence, Virginia Pearson as Barbara, Naomi Childers as Muriel, Robert Gaillard as Schuyler Lawrence, and Bobby Connelly as Harry Lawrence.

The principal interior scene will be taken in the house at the corner of Fiftieth street and Madison avenue, New York City, leased and elaborately furnished by the Vitagraph company for the exclusive purpose of filming special scenes that require a rich background. "The Writing on the Wall" when completed will be in five parts and listed as a Blue Ribbon feature.

Growing BIGGER

"The Broken Coin"

Advance Bookings Are Growing Bigger Every Day

Just Because it is worthy of all the good things we have been saying about it; because it is the culminating and superior achievement of the Universal in serial production. Because it was written by one of the greatest American authors, Emerson Hough, who wrote and writes only big things, such as "54-40, or Fight," "The Mississippi Bubble," "John Rawn," and others, known to millions as red-blooded books written by a real man.

"THE BROKEN COIN"

Just Because the scenario was written by Grace Cunard, who is also leading woman. The same beautiful Grace Cunard who made millions of fans who saw her in "Lucille Love" think her the loveliest actress in the film world. Her work in "The Broken Coin" is far better even than it was then.

"THE BROKEN COIN"

Just Because the leading man is Francis Ford. Because Francis Ford produced the wonderful "Broken Coin." The same great actor and artistic producer who delighted all the fans in the country who saw him in "Lucille Love." Francis Ford has grown, too. He is one of the big screen stars today.

"THE BROKEN COIN"

Just Because it was staged under conditions and with facilities impossible to any concern but the Universal, at Universal City, Cal. That's the "BECAUSE" of the wonderful booking success of this world's greatest serial. Wise Exhibitors who read the Universal Weekly and the trade press know a good thing when they see it, and so they have been keeping the mails jammed and the wires hot sending in to their Exchange and to the Home Office their orders for bookings.

"THE BROKEN COIN"

Just Because you want to make a killing now. Just because you want to hook up with a sure thing. Just because here is an opportunity to capture coin and popularity for your house, and give competition a black eye; just because there has been prepared for you the strongest advertising and publicity campaigns ever prepared for your benefit—

"YOU, MR. EXHIBITOR"

Do this NOW. Wire, write or phone your Exchange this instant for your booking date, or communicate at once with the home office.

A Remarkable 5-Reel Broad

"SCANDAL"

Written by LOIS WEBER—Author of

Direction of Lois Weber

The story of "Scandal" deals with the tragedy of idle gossip. It's talented author, LOIS WEBER, the justly celebrated author of "HYPOCRITES," got her idea from a newspaper editorial, based on an every day newspaper item. Thus the story is intensely human, fascinating in its swiftly moving plot development. There is nothing morbid or distasteful about this absorbing play—but it does make one pause and think with regret of every word of idle gossip one has ever listened to or repeated. "Scandal" is the sort of photoplay that makes the movies worth while. It is the sort that gets to the movie fans hard. It is the sort of play you cannot boost too strongly. The Universal is noted for doing big things in an unusual way, and "Scandal" is one of the biggest things the Universal has ever done.

Released on the Regular Universal Program July 19

The UNIVERSAL presents ITS FIRST BROADWAY FEATURE RELEASE

THIS is the most important announcement ever made to Exhibitors. It is the proof positive that we have made good on our promise to release every week on the regular UNIVERSAL WEEKLY PROGRAM a great (and genuine) Broadway star or a famous Broadway play or best seller book. Arrangements have been made far in advance. There will be no break in our plans.

The first release on July 12, Jane Cowl in "The Garden of Lies," is more than a truly great production. It is the end for you of paying more for a "capacity" feature than your capacity receipts amount to. The advance in cost over the old program is so slight that the net to you means more money than you have ever made before.

Write or wire your Exchange for complete details. Magnificent advertising matter has been prepared. Everything is ready for a tremendous success. The Universal assures you that this is the greatest opportunity ever presented to Exhibitors. When the Universal says it, it's true.

The Most Impressive Picture That Has Ever Come to My Vision"

The Commercial Review

THE COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL JOURNAL OF THE WEST

CALGARY ALBERTA

May 25th. 1915

Mutual Film Corporation,

New York, U. S. A.

Dear Sirs:

Two weeks ago I read your ad. in the Saturday Evening Post; last evening I had the pleasure of witnessing the most impressive and reasonable picture that has ever come to my vision -- that picture was "The Absentee."

As you perhaps know, a great many films of various studios are released here. A certain young lady and myself see every one of any importance, we learn a great many things from the movies, these things are not always visible, but they are there.

I simply had to write this note of appreciation, not that my conscience troubles me one iota but the solemn truth of it all, the wonderfully true situations and vivid picturization of the weakness of our strength and the natural solution that lies within our grasp for all the obstacles we meet in commercial life; these things were so clearly expressed that I simply must extend my hearty thanks to you in your successful endeavors to entertain the public.

Very truly yours,

Alfred E. Hardy

Editor.

A Proof of Success

The man who influences public opinion is in a position to know what the public wants. Therefore, the letter from Mr. Hardy, reproduced on this page, carries added weight. Mr. Hardy, besides being a well-known journalist, is also a lover of good pictures, and just one of thousands who have testified to our "successful endeavors to entertain the public." Every Mutual Masterpicture is just as impressive as the one that attracted him.

"The Flying Twins"

This four-act MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE represents the Thanhouser conception of the so-called "thrill picture." It abounds in novelty both in situation and in the exploits of the characters. There is enough exciting incident to more than satisfy, and the tension throughout is high.

At the same time, however, the story is so absorbing and the action so well-balanced that "THE FLYING TWINS" win interest and sympathy by their charming performance, well supported by a strong Thanhouser cast. An unusual feature of this production is its genuine circus atmosphere, which helps portray the lure of the saw-dust ring. "The Flying Twins" is a thriller-classic.

Q. 5—What is the next thing you would do if the machine is to be operated by the use of a rheostat?

A. 1—I would, after making sure that the electric wiring and other equipment is large enough to supply the number of amperes and proper voltage required by the machine, proceed to connect the machine switch with the current supply switch on the wall of the booth, using in no instance a wire smaller than No. 6 B & S gauge.

2—I would then run one of the asbestos covered cables from one of the lamp terminals to the other side of the machine switch, and from the opposite pole of the machine switch I would connect one terminal of the rheostat, and the other rheostat terminal would be connected to the other carbon holder of the arc lamp by means of asbestos covered cables, as illustrated, Fig. 4.

Q. 6—Having made proper connection, what would you do next?

A.—I would place in the carbon holders of the arc lamp the proper carbons as specified by the manufacturer of the machine. I would then close the switch and strike the arc. After allowing the arc to burn for a few minutes so as to form proper craters, I would open the dowser, then open the film gate and set the rotating shutter so that the light would pass through the motion picture lens. I would then focus the outline of the aperture plate on the screen and adjust the machine up or down or sideways, as the case may require, until the illuminated outline of the aperture plate would be located and focused on the screen in the desired position.

Q. 7—Taking for granted that the size of the aperture projected on the screen is satisfactory, what would you do next?

A.—I would coat the screen with whatever compound is to be used, if any, and then I would again project the outline of the aperture. After the machine has been solidly secured to the floor and permanently fixed, I would outline the illuminated field all the way around the screen with a piece of black chalk or a heavy pencil. The current could then be shut off, and for best results, the space between the outer edge of the screen and the outline of the illuminated field should be painted with a flat, dull black paint, such as lamp black mixed with water and sizing, for instance, or the outer edge may be outlined with black cloth, if desired, depending upon the ideas of the manager. I would make the width of the black border around the picture at least one foot wide, and for a very large picture exceeding 18 feet or so, I would make the black margin wider, possibly as much as two feet wide for a 20 to 24 foot picture, as illustrated in Fig. 5.

Q. 8—After you have in a preliminary way, as outlined above, located your machine and prepared your screen for service, what would you do?

A—I would bring the illumination on the screen up to the highest point of efficiency, that is, I would try to secure the most brilliant and uniform field of light upon the screen which the equipment on hand would give.

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

MISSOURI

The Lindell theatre, at Grand avenue and Hebert street, St. Louis, is another mixed bill house to go over to motion pictures. On June 13 the manager, A. J. Dervin, announced his intention of discontinuing the vaudeville, musical comedy and tabloid dramatic plays and inaugurating an exclusive motion picture program, running big features as the special attraction.

The Robin theatre, 2301 Robin avenue, St. Louis, has had alterations made and new equipment, including a new Minusa Gold Fibre screen.

On account of the long continued cool weather this spring many theatres in St. Louis that usually close for the summer have kept on showing to good audiences until the middle of June. Three such theatres, the Russell, 2100 South Broadway; the Chippewa, Broadway and Chippewa street, and the Shenandoah, Broadway and Shenandoah avenue, all without airdomes in connection, have just closed until September.

The Happy Hour theatre at St. Joseph, Mo., has been sold by D. A. Gordon and son to I. Fox, of the same city.

The Monroe airdome, of California avenue and Chippewa street, St. Louis, is now showing the program of the Monroe theatre, 2816 Chippewa street. It seats 1,200 patrons. Mrs. L. B. Stoddard is the manager of both theatre and airdome.

The Family theatre, Broadway and Miller street, St. Louis, which has remained open summer and winter for the past six years, has broken away from the old habit and has moved its program to a fine new airdome a short block away, at Broadway and Barry streets. The new airdome seats 2,400 persons and is managed by Christ Zotos, who also manages the Family.

There is one exhibitor of motion pictures in St. Louis who is so decidedly opposed to long features that he positively will not show any picture of more than three reels, and prefers one-reelers, or two, if he cannot do any better. Manager Wolf, of the Iola theatre and airdome, 2726 Lafayette avenue, is the exhibitor, and states that there is no diminishing in his audiences as a result of his short-reel program, and until his patrons demand big features he will continue with his present policy.

A very attractive new airdome, called the Parkview, has just opened to the public on Mississippi avenue, opposite Lafayette Park, St. Louis. The Parkview seats 1,200 patrons and shows an all picture program.

Frank Root, manager of the Eagle theatre, 1717 South Broadway, St. Louis, will give only one performance a week during the summer months, beginning June 20, a matinee on Sunday afternoon.

The Willis Wood theatre, of Kansas City, Mo., has contracted for ten Fox productions for the summer months, running each one a solid week. This theatre, formerly a high-class play house, is one of the finest in the state and has a seating capacity of two thousand. A remarkable business has been enjoyed by the management despite the fact that an admission of twenty-five cents has been charged.

The Iris theatre at Bucklin, Missouri, which has been closed for some time on account of weather conditions, is again open under the management of A. B. Cantwell.

The management of the Auditorium theatre at Excelsior Springs, Mo., has reverted to S. H. Snaverly, the owner of the building. Mr. Snaverly was former owner of the theatre, but sold out to Burt Jones, and it was under the direction of Jones until Mr. Snaverly repurchased.

OHIO

The Alhambra theatre, 146-48 West Fifth street, Cincinnati, has been recently remodeled so that its seating capacity is five hundred instead of three hundred. The stage was set further back and the lobby extended and widened. The interior of the theatre was redecorated throughout.

A new theatre is to be erected at Central avenue and East Fourteenth street, Cleveland, by O. G. and F. Melaragno. The building will cost $60,000, with offices over the theatre. Herbert J. Norris has financed the project through the Associated Investment Company. Contracts will be let at once and the new picture house will be open for business in the fall. Architect Nicola Petti has drawn the plans.

TEXAS

Colonial Park, Houston's new playpark, with free motion pictures as the stellar offering, received an enthusiastic welcome from Houstonians in June. Music from an eight-piece orchestra, dancing, roller skating, coasters, merry-go-rounds and picnic grounds and children's playgrounds are a few of the other attractions.

A new motion picture theatre will soon be in operation at Idabel, Oklahoma, owned and managed by J. B. Lee.

L. A. Buvens has purchased equipment for a new motion picture house at Houston, Texas, which will seat about 350.

Mrs. J. Carl Robinet has purchased opera chairs, projection machines, a large automatic orchestra for the Gem theatre at Whitesboro, Texas, and will soon open the theatre.

The Lyric theatre at Clifton, Texas, has changed hands, the new owners being Griffin Brothers. Fred Nelson, former manager, is now devoting all of his time in the lumber business at Clifton.

H. J. Rickelman is the new owner of the Lyric theatre, Riesel, Texas, having bought it from the trustee of Otto Nehring.

Sailer and Ladig are the new owners of the Novelty theatre, Sealy, Texas, purchased from J. J. Piper.

G. C. Carter has sold the Dixie theatre at Mart, Texas, to J. M. Reynolds, who is making a number of improvements.

The Wonderland at San Antonio, Texas, has been changed to the Odeon, and will be managed by the Royal Amusement Company, of that city, operating the Royal also.

C. L. Hilger has bought the Pastime at Collinsville, Texas, and has planned some needed improvements.

G. W. Trammell has sold the Crown theatre, of Timpson, Texas, to W. R. Mills.

E. H. Hulsey, who operates the Queen theatre, Houston; the Hippodrome, Waco; Queen, Galveston; Old Mill and Queen, Dallas, has bought the Newport theatre, of Dallas, Texas, which is a five-cent house located next door to the Queen.

David Bernbaum is now sole owner of the Dixie theatre, Dallas, Texas, having bought the interest of Jesse Warden recently. Warden is now managing the Newport theatre in Dallas for E. H. Hulsey.

Joseph Rotramel has bought a half interest in the Lyric at Sulphur Springs, Texas, and is now managing the house.

Ray and Coleman have opened a new house at Midland, Texas, known as the Dreamland, which is modern in every detail.

H. W. McSpadden and Son have leased the opera house at Colorado, Texas, for motion pictures, and have employed Sam Majors as manager of the theatre, with F. McSpadden in charge of the operating booth.

W. R. Jackson and O. T. Smith have bought the airdome at Moran, Texas, from J. L. Terry, and are remodeling.

Adolph Fertsch and J. A. Sommerlatte have leased the airdome at Hallettsville, Texas, to Ben A. Burkhardt.

P. N. Steadman is now running the Alberta theatre and airdome at Sinton, Texas, which he bought from R. A. Abbey.

E. B. Goldschmidt and L. E. Shaw are operating a new airdome at Strawn, Texas, and another is soon to be in operation, owned by Gustav Peterson and Horace Crum. The former seats eight hundred and the latter will seat about six hundred.

Fitting the Winter Theatre for the Summer

DOING the usual things in an unusual way, is the plan of George Schoettle, manager of the Forest theatre, Forest avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, one of the most successful suburban motion picture theatres of Cincinnati.

"There is always room for improvement in the old methods of popularizing your theatre," says Schoettle. "A manager cannot always be expected to evolve new ideas calculated to attract patronage. He is supposed to do something original once in a while, but I maintain that originality in developing old ideas is equally as important as doing the absolutely new thing."

As an indication of how his principle works out, Schoettle points to a popularity contest, which he recently held at the Forest. "This is about the oldest idea in the show business," he said. "In fact, it is so old that my using it last week made a direct appeal as a novelty."

Ballots and Tickets

Mr. Schoettle announced on his screen two weeks in advance of the beginning of the contest that he would give a valuable prize for the most popular young woman in the suburb, the decision to be made by the patrons of the theatre.

Balloting was done by means of admission tickets, a printed ballot being given to the purchaser of each ticket. The young women were required to enter the contest several days before it began. When the voting started there were six candidates for the honor. Schoettle played to capacity houses every night during the week of the contest, and on the closing night the demand for seats was so great that the operator was forced to work overtime for an extra performance.

FOREST THEATRE, CINCINNATI, OHIO

Male ushers have been done away with by Schoettle and girls now serve in this capacity.

"Girl ushers in Cincinnati are out of the ordinary and the character of the Forest's patronage is such that no supervision of the audience is necessary.

Girl Ushers a Success in the Forest

"A neatly uniformed young woman, in white apron and black dress, who courteously leads the patron to his or her seat, creates a very favorable impression. Boys are absolutely needed as ushers to handle crowds in some districts, but I think girls are better in a theatre of this kind."

The theatre was built by the Forest Amusement Company and represents an investment of about $80,000. The front is of a subdued gray tint with sand stone columns, and when the seven boulevard cluster lamps in front of the house are lighted it presents an imposing picture. George Schoettle, the manager, was formerly connected with Keith's theatre. He had been in the theatrical business for fifteen years.

The theatre will seat six hundred people and is electrically controlled throughout. The ticket seller, in the ticket booth to the east side of the first foyer, is of the newest type made by the National Cash Register Company. The ticket is printed electrically as it climbs out of its little space in the same fashion that a receipt is printed in other cash registers.

The picture machines, and there are two of them in the cabin, are controlled by electricity. The question of ventilation is solved by the cooling system which has been installed. And the windows, which rest near the ceiling, are handled in such fashion that when one is open all of them have to be opened. This is true of both sides of the house.

Effective Ventilation

The proscenium arches are put to good use in that the heat which is blown out from a large fan and serves to make the patrons of the Forest comfortable comes out of the arches. The gas furnaces are located in the front part of the house and the heat is drawn through pipes to the upper part of the stage. After traveling through a series of pipes the heat is then thrown against the fan, which, in turn, throws it into two tunnel-like pipes leading to the ventilators in the proscenium arches. This system can be used in the summer and ice water can be run through the pipes so as to make the house cool and inviting when the thermometer shows a desire to climb.

Manager Schoettle said that in case this was done during the summer when rain suddenly sprang up the audience could quickly move into the theatre proper and avoid any inconvenience.

The house as it stands now has six side exits and the four big doors in front can easily be pressed into service in case of absolute necessity. There are ladies' and gentlemen's rest rooms located on the left or eastern side of the house. The ladies room can be reached in the theatre proper while the gentlemen's room is reached through the second foyer.

The building is one story high with the exception of the extreme front and back. In the front Manager Schoettle's office and the operators' cabin are located above the entrance, while the fan for heat and air and the motor for the Wurlitzer organ are established in what might be termed the second floor, in the rear.

The Forest issues a program carrying the titles of the pictures that will be shown during the succeeding eight days.

The house has a frontage of one hundred feet on Forest avenue and runs 130 feet deep. The empty lot that rests directly next to the house and which, it is said, will be turned into an airdome is of about the same dimensions. The house is located near the brightest corner in Avondale, as it is just off of Reading road. However, this does not seem to have had any effect on the attendance. Ten cents is the charge that is made for admission.

New Hampshire Theatre, Seating 1,400, Nearly Ready to Open

THE feature service to be presented regularly at Goldstein Brothers' new theatre, the Strand, at Hampton Beach, N. H., will be the Paramount, Fox and World, with miscellaneous films from the open market. The house, to be opened June 27 and to give two shows daily, with a ladies' orchestra, is 125 by 60 feet, with a balcony and a total seating capacity of 1,400.

The theatre is of the most modern construction throughout, with roomy seats and broad aisles. The plans were drawn by Samuel Goldstein, treasurer of the company, who prepares the plans for all their new enterprises. The projection booth will be supplied by the Johns-Manville Company, of Boston, and equipped with two new Power's 6-A projecting machines, dissolver and spotlight.

The house is attractively but not guadily decorated. The owners, with home offices in Springfield, Mass., will continue to operate the Bijou and other amusement enterprises at Hampton Beach.

This company also owns a large New England circuit, including the Broadway in Springfield; the Plaza in Northampton; the Plaza in Springfield; the Westfield opera house; the Mountain Park in Holyoke, and the Exeter opera house.

New Speed Control Device for Simplex 1915 Projector

THE Precision Machine Company, of New York City, manufacturer of the Simplex Projector, has announced the perfection of Frank B. Cannock's latest invention, which constitutes a new and novel type of speed-controller for the Simplex motor-driven projector. This new Simplex mechanical speed control is now ready for the market, and it has been my good fortune to see it and to make a careful examination and test of the same.

The following description, with illustrations, is intended to give a clear and concise idea of its construction and operation. Referring to Fig. 1, there is illustrated a complete latest type Simplex projector with the new mechanical speed control applied.

The first point which strikes one upon an examination of the illustrations is the control handle or wheel which extends just above the mechanism base within convenient reach of the operator. By means of this wheel any speed from that at which the fire shutter will drop to the maximum speed which one could ever imagine a film to be operated can be obtained.

The speed changes are infinitesimal or so graduated that you can hardly detect a change in speed unless the movement is made very suddenly. From the view point of simplicity it appears to be perfect. The device can be applied to any of the present type of Simplex projectors within a few minutes, and it is not necessary to remove or disturb any part of the machine or mechanism. The controller looks as if it would last a lifetime with a very small amount of repair.

Referring to Figs. 2 and 3, the operation is as follows:

By means of control wheel A the members C, D, E, F and G may be moved forward or back relative to the main support L, which holds disc B and idler I. The movement of these parts is under tension of spring H, which will always give flexibility to the belt tension.

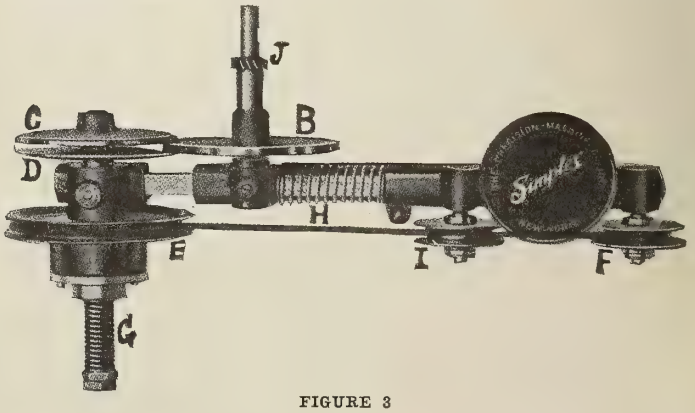

FIGURE 3

Friction disc B is really the driver of the mechanism which is connected at gear J. This disc B is made of the finest phosphor bronze and is driven by the flexibility mounted discs C and D, which are made of cast iron and are held under spring tension G against the sides of disc B. The shaft upon which is mounted disc C and D is driven by pulley E by means of the belt which passes over idlers I and F onto the motor pulley.

While Fig. 3 does not clearly show the shape of the inside surface of discs C and D, I may state that if you remove disc B these discs will touch in the center and be slightly tapered so that on the outer edges they may be ⅛ inch apart. You will note that the disc B has a small rim about 3/16 inch deep, which is the only part of B engaged by the rotating discs C and D.

With the above description you can readily understand that when the motor belt drives pulley E the spring controlled discs C and D will drive friction disc B and consequently the mechanism at the highest speed when set in the position illustrated in Figs. 2 and 3.

This device is so arranged that in the position illustrated the disc B will run at the same speed as pulley E. Now if you turn the control wheel A so as to pull the friction discs C and D towards B, then due to the discs being tapered the disc B will spread C and D apart, which is allowable under spring tension G.

But in so doing the rim on disc B will be engaged by a smaller diameter until C and D have been pulled all the way over towards B, when the slowest speed will be obtained, which actually gives 4 revolutions of E to 1 revolution of B, or, in other words, a 4 to 1 speed control. This ratio might be transferred to actual crank turns which would mean 25 turns per minute for slow speed and 100 turns per minute for high speed.

You understand that by merely changing the size of the motor pulley a higher speed than 100 can be obtained, but in all instances the slow speed will be ¼ of the high speed and you can secure any degree of speed between low and high in the smallest fractions.

I understand there is to be no additional charge for this great improvement on the motor-driven Simplex projector and that it can also be applied to any of the old type Simplex projectors, whether of the hand or motor-driven type. With A. C. motors, which cannot very well be subject to a great range of speed control, this device is of great value.

Why the Machine Rattles; How to Remedy the Trouble

Ray Irwin, Operator, Scenic Theatre, Elkton, S. D.—I received copy of Motion Picture News, and can say that I am pleased with it. In looking through the Accessory News I notice that you answer all questions asked by operators. I have been operating a 1914 model Motiograph for the past three months.

Sometimes it runs very quiet, and again it seems to make a great deal of noise. This machine has only been used a couple of years, and has always been kept well oiled. Can you tell me what causes it to rattle, and how I can remedy the trouble?

Answer.—The Motiograph machine should last many years with good attention and care. Like all other machines it is likely to wear in time, and it may be that one or two parts require replacement. I have had a great deal of experience with the Motiograph, and have found that in case of a peculiar rattling noise, which only happens sometimes, it is well to first of all tighten the fly-wheel.

Next see that the fly-wheel shaft bushing is not worn. Perhaps the bushing should be loosened by unscrewing the set-screw so that any end shake in the fly-wheel shaft can be removed.

Next I would examine the ball arbor which connects the mechanism socket immediately under the shutter with the ball arbor socket on the framing device.

The Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago, have made two distinctly different design ball arbors, or ball shafts, as they are sometimes called. The first kind had square blocks of hardened steel swiveling on steel pins, riveted in each end of the shaft. It may be that these square blocks are loose on the pins, due to wear.

You may remove the ball-shaft and gently tap with a small hammer on the head of the pins, which will slightly spread the pin, preventing the square block from rattling. Be sure, however, that you do this gently and a little at a time so that the block will not stick, but can still be worked with your fingers.

This will temporarily at least remove shake in the square blocks of the ball arbor shaft. It may be that the slot for the square blocks on the ball arbor in the sockets have worn, due to the constant action of the machine, so that there is a perceptible shake at the ball joint. The only remedy is to remove the old sockets and put in new ones.

We Put Theory Into Practice

PROFESSOR SIMON H. GAGE says in Optical Projection, "Every care should be taken to render the surface as smooth, white, and opaque as can be made, in as much as the brilliancy and perfection of the picture will greatly depend on the whiteness, and the sharpness of outline upon the smoothness of the screen."

In some of the Motiograph sockets there is a small piece of leather driven into the shaft which holds the socket. The object of this leather is to furnish a cushion to prevent the slamming of the ball arbor due to side shake. On some of the models there is a small spiral spring pressing against the ball arbor.

This spring is inserted in a hole drilled in the shaft which holds the socket. If you have another type of ball arbor which was also made instead of the blocks, there will be pins inserted with flat sides which engaged the slots in the socket. This type you cannot repair. It is best to get a new one.

The Motiograph is one of the easiest machines there is to repair and adjust, but you must thoroughly study each adjustment, and I am sure that you will secure perfect results, and that you will eliminate the noise of which you speak.

If I were you I would write to the Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago, and ask them for one of their brown paper covered "Hand Books," which they will gladly send you free of charge. The parts which I have referred to are fully and clearly illustrated on pages 49 to 53, inclusive.

The fact that the noise appears only at intervals proves to me that the above remedy ought to help you. You may prove this yourself in a small way by cranking the machine with film in it, or even without film; then shift the framing lever in different positions, and there may be one or two positions in which it will run quietly in another, or maybe several, positions where the machine will rattle. Usually the rattle happens when there is a great deal of end shake and lost motion in the ball arbor.

Best Coating for the Wall

J. F. S., Hazleton, Pa.—Please advise what is the best coating for a wall in order to bring out a picture sharp and clear. My picture comes out clear but very dull, not sharp. There are times when the picture does not seem to have enough light.

My wall is pure white, and is not soiled or dirty. I have considerable trouble with pictures that are dark in photography, and it is to get the best possible results with such pictures that I am asking for expert advice. If you would advise a particular coating for the wall I would be thankful to you.

ANSWER.—Your complaint is an important one, but it is difficult to answer in detail without further information. Kindly write the following information:

First, distance from lense to screen and width of the theatre; second, size of picture; third, make and style of machine; fourth, make M. P. lense; fifth, make, style and size carbons used; sixth, give the kind of current supplied by the electric company, and the means you have installed for controlling the current at the arc, and also state, if you know, the amperes which you maintain at the arc.

Upon receipt of this information I will give you an answer in detail, but in the meantime all I can do is to recommend that you install one of the good screens, of which there are now several kinds on the market, with metallic coated surface. They can be had at all prices from 35 cents per square foot up to $1.05 per square foot.

The price paid for the screen generally signifies its ultimate value to you. Therefore it is safe to say that the better screen costs more money. Do not attempt to coat your wall with any kind of aluminum or metallic paint, of which several kinds are offered for sale. It is almost impossible to secure a paint which will not turn gray or very dark after it has been applied. You will secure further information upon receipt of the information asked for.

Power Receives Grand Prix at the Panama Exposition

THE Nicholas Power Company has been awarded the Grand Prix, the highest honor, for its splendid display of projection equipment in the Palace of Liberal Arts at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. This concern also has a display in the Palace of Machinery, both of these being in charge of R. W. Horn, who went there as special representative of the company for the exposition period.

A Power's Cameragraph No. 6-A has recently been installed on the historic old battleship Oregon, which lies at anchor off the exposition grounds, and entertainments are given there three times a week.

Indianapolis Airaome Licenses Held Up by Dispute

OWING to a dispute as to the amount of license that should be charged for an airdome, the city controller of Indianapolis refused to issue such licenses until a decision was given by the city legal department.

The city council passed an ordinance recently fixing an annual license of twenty-five dollars for moving picture shows, but the ordinance provides a license shall not be issued until the "room or building" in which the show is to be located has been inspected and approved by the city building commissioner.

The city controller's office decided that the ordinances applied only to indoor shows and that an airdome would have to be licensed the same as a side show or carnival at the rate of ten dollars a day. The airdome men naturally objected and the matter was put up to the city legal department.

The city legal department gave an opinion this week to the effect that airdomes should pay an annual license fee of twenty-five dollars and an issuing fee of one dollar, the same as motion picture theatres.

General Ordinance No. 7, 1915: An ordinance licensing and regulating moving picture shows.

Section 1. (a) Be it ordained by the Common Council of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, that every person, firm or corporation desiring to operate or conduct any moving picture show within the City of Indianapolis shall first secure a license so to do and make application to the Commissioner of Buildings so to do. (b) Said Commissioner of Buildings, being satisfied with the fitness and safety of such room or building where such moving picture show is proposed to be held, shall issue approval for said license, and upon the presentation of said approval to the City Controller and upon the payment of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) said Controller shall issue to said person, firm or corporation a license to operate or conduct such moving picture show for one (1) year from date of issuing of such license. (c) Said license shall set forth the exact street location of such motion picture show, and no removal shall be made to any other location under such license. (d) No person, firm or corporation shall operate more than one (1) motion picture show under any one license. (e) No license shall be issued for a period of less than one (1) year, and said license shall not be issued until said fee of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) is paid in full.

Section 2. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to operate or conduct a motion picture show without being licensed as provided for in Section 1 of this ordinance.

Section 3. Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall, upon conviction, be subject to a fine of not less than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars nor more than one hundred dollars ($100.00), to which may be added imprisonment for a period not exceeding six (6) months.

Section 4. All ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with the provisions of this ordinance are hereby repealed.

Section 5. This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication once each week for two consecutive weeks in "The Indianapolis Commercial," a daily newspaper of general circulation printed and published in said city.

Theatre De Luxe Opens in Montgomery

ONE of the largest and finest appointed theatres in the South, the Strand, in Montgomery, Ala., opened June 12 with "Salambo."

A NEWS correspondent visited Montgomery recently and had a chance to see first-hand the construction in Court square on what the owners say is to be "the Strand of the South." Truly, it is a Strand, THE Strand of Dixie.

Conveniences galore have been provided for patrons. One enters on a level with the sidewalk. The seats are comfortable, and space enough exists between each row to admit of passing without standing up. The rows are placed in circular formation, so that it is not necessary to turn in your seat to see the screen from any part of the house. Chairs have deep, curved backs, and besides a hatrack there is a footrest.

All along the wainscoting on either wall, and in sections of the floor, registers, through which is continually forced pure fresh air, are placed and this air is drawn through pipes from an upper story opening and distributed throughout the auditorium by oscillating and ceiling fans. In the ceiling proper are six large ventilators, part of which afford a natural escape for accumulated heat. Powerful, noiseless exhaust fans draw out the foul and stagnant air. Thus the theatre will be free at all times from foul air.

On the left side of the spacious lobby is provided a ladies' rest room with a maid constantly in attendance. On the right side of the lobby is the manager's office. His office, the operating room and the orchestra pit are all connected with a telephone system which is expected to keep things together in perfect working harmony.

"Salambo," the opening bill, was projected on a Day and Night screen. The Strand selected this screen as the best in the business, Manager Hix said.

The proposed orchestra will consist of the orchestra at present playing at the Orpheum theatre, augmented by other professionals. Roy Mullendore, a well-known organist, has been selected to play the new pipe organ.

In an effort to install "super-sanitation," the walls of the Strand are tiled five feet from the floor and the aisles are covered with a special floor covering, all of which will be washed daily.

In the operators' room will be installed two Power's 6-A projecting machines.

The Strand Amusement Company on the eve of opening its new show have made this announcement:

"The Strand will offer its patrons daily attractions obtainable only in a manner based on years of personal experience in the picture business, through close study of the many issues involved, and, as you know, could not be achieved were our business run upon the basis of a 'side line.'

"The Strand Amusement Company has made the investment which will stand as a monument to the picture business in Montgomery, and evidence of the confidence which the owners have in the Montgomery public, who can and will show their appreciation of the best in this line of amusement."

Michigan Fire Marshal Warns Against Lax Methods

HEREAFTER picture theatre owners of Michigan who violate the law will be severly dealt with by the state fire marshal's department, is the announcement just made by John T. Winship, fire marshal of Michigan. Heretofore warnings sent by mail or delivery through fire chiefs have been used, but now Fire Marshal Winship says he will act differently.

"The terrible death of Bernard Ohman in a Hancock, Mich., theatre should serve as a warning to exhibitors," said Mr. Winship. "It should also show them the necessity of complying with all of the provisions of the theatre law, especially that section which prohibits the employment of operators under eighteen years of age. Statements differ as to how the film caught fire, but an investigation by this department shows that the boy had charge of the booth but a few moments before the fire."

All theatre owners have been notified many times of the provisions of the law and there can be no possible excuse, according to Mr. Winship. Arrests will be ordered where boys under the legal age are allowed in picture booths. Theatre owners, operating in violation of the law in case of accidents, will face not only prosecution and damage suits, but will have their licenses revoked, says Winship.

$30,000 Milwaukee House, the Regent, Opens

ONE of Milwaukee's most up-to-date outskirt theatres is the new Regent, corner of Fortieth street and North avenue, which opened Saturday evening, June 12.

The house, which cost $30,000, has a seating capacity of nine hundred. The theatre, 55 by 120, is of terra cotta and hytex brick construction.

THE REGENT THEATRE, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

"From the Valley of the Missing" was the opening attraction. Sunday "The Clemenceau Case" played to big business, while on Wednesday "The Spoilers" was presented.

South St. Louis Will Have $35,000 Theatre

A BEAUTIFUL new theatre is being built at the corner of Thirty-ninth street and Shaw avenue, St. Louis, by Meyer Brothers & Pracht, who own and operate the Knickerbocker theatre and airdome at 3145 Park avenue.

The new theatre will be built with all the latest devices known to modern theatre construction, with drinking fountains, retiring rooms for both sexes, a roomy operating booth, a completely appointed managerial office, and everything needed to conduct an exclusive motion picture playhouse. The new house is to be absolutely a motion picture house. There will be no stage at all in the theatre, consequently no vaudeville or other spoken plays will be shown.

Meyer Brothers & Pracht are well known in St. Louis amusement circles, and the location they have selected for the new house denotes sound judgment and business acumen. There is no theatre within walking distance of the Shaw avenue site, and as the neighborhood has been built up within the last three years and is fast becoming an active business district, the location is an ideal one.

The theatre will be built in the same style of architecture that characterizes many of the big houses built in St. Louis during the past year, one feature of which is that the seating space is all on one floor.

Strict Building Laws Passed in Portland, Ore., Exchanges Also Affected

FIRE MARSHAL STEVENS and other fire officials of Portland, Oregon, have recently passed rigid regulations concerning picture theatres. One of the rules provides for the inspection of each theatre throughout—lamp house, balcony, stage and so forth, each night, with rigid enforcement as to buckets of water, sand and so forth, always being close at hand. But the latest comes in the shape of an ordinance ready for the City Councel on Wednesday, June 16.

On Tuesday, June 15, at noon, film exchange men were notified of the proposed ordinance, and finally succeeded in securing a copy of it. The substance of the matter is that if the proposed ordinance does go through, all the exchanges will have to move out of the city limits, with various other rules to go by.

Acting on a precedent established by Seattle, Wash., Portland exchanges have gotten busy with the Chamber of Commerce of Vancouver, Wash., a nearby town, asking what arrangements and what inducement would be offered if the exchanges all moved to Vancouver in a body.

Vancouver notified that they would donate six acres of ground, put up a building for the exclusive use of the exchanges and complying with all requirements, together with six months' free rent.

Upon receipt of such an offer in writing by the Seattle exchange people from the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce, Seattle's mayor immediately vetoed the ordinance, saying they could not afford to drive away so large an industry. Vancouver people have promised to provide Portland with a written agreement as to their promised inducements.

Pearce Puts Gold Fibre Screens in Two More Theatres

JOSIAH PEARCE & SONS, the most extensive exhibitors of motion pictures in the South, who own and operate twenty-two theatres, and who standardize all of the houses under their control as to policy, management and equipment, have just given the Bijou and Trianon, two theatres controlled by them in New Orleans, a thorough overhauling, and have added many improvements, which included the installation of specially built Minusa Gold Fibre screens in each house.

This will make the Bijou and Trianon uniform from a projection standpoint, with the other theatres in the string.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres throughout the country. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, and this department fails to record the fact, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

ALBERTA

THE Bijou theatre, the oldest photoplay house in Edmonton, Alta., changed its policy, starting June 21, after a career of five years as the pioneer of this far northern city in the field of motion pictures, and is devoted to musical stock and two reels of films.

John Hazza, who has managed the Bijou and Empress, has placed Mr. Fiddes at the managerial end of the Bijou under the new policy.

ALABAMA

It is understood from reliable sources that citizens of Selma, Ala., are behind a movement to have Elkdale Park renovated and made into an up-to-date amusement park. Moving picture theatres will be one of the chief attractions, the promoters say. The park is owned and controlled by the Selma Suburban Street Railway Company, and has an ideal location for the many amusements the promoters are understood to be planning.

CALIFORNIA

The Alhambra theatre, Los Angeles, has been sold by E. J. Tally to an organization composed of Charles Greenburg, T. H. Butcher, Owen C. Emery, George Newberger and Frank Hawkins, which will be known as the Alhambra Theatre Company. The last named party will act as manager of the theatre, and the new owners took over the property the first of last week. Mr. Hawkins was formerly connected with this theatre in the capacity of manager. The present policy of the theatre —that of using V-L-S-E subjects, together with "The Goddess" serial—will not be changed at the present.

The Parnassus theatre, located in the Sunset District, San Francisco, has been reopened by Auddifred & Stanley.

J. Hayes has closed the Dreamland theatre at Woodland, Cal., and will remodel this house for use during the coming winter. He has taken over the Laugenour airdome and will conduct this during the summer months.

Plans are being prepared by Architect B. J. Joseph, new Call building, San Francisco, Cal., for a new theatre to be erected by A. Bernheim at Vallejo, Cal., during the present summer.

The Liberty theatre, Sacramento, Cal., has made arrangements to show the first run V-L-S-E productions in that city. Its proprietor, Charles Goddard, former president of the state league, was in San Francisco recently arranging for bookings.

The new house of Charles Mosher on Telegraph avenue, Oakland, Cal., is known as the Central theatre. It was opened about the middle of June.

The Hippodrome has been opened at Oakland and moving pictures are being featured jointly with vaudeville.

An airdome has been opened at Lodi, Cal., by P. M. Hunt and associates.

P. S. Braun has opened a moving picture house at Rio Vista, Cal., for the summer vacation season.

The announcement is made that the Fink theatre at Gridley, Cal., will be ready for occupancy early in July. William Fink is the owner.

INDIANA

The first moving picture theatre in Burnettsville, Ind., will be opened soon by Anton Perrigo, who will run a show Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights. The nearest moving picture theatre is at Monticello.

The Skydome, in Eleventh street, Richmond, Ind., was opened recently, with a six-reel show every night.

Vaudeville has been added to the program of the Dome theatre at Clinton, Ind., in addition to the moving picture program.

The Walois theatre, which seats 175 persons, was opened recently at Indiana Harbor.

John S. Purnett, of Jeffersonville, Ind., has leased the Hartford building on Main street, at Shelbyville, Ky., and will convert it into a motion picture theatre. He will take immediate possession and work on the necessary alterations at once. It is expected that the new place of amusement will be opened some time in July.

Guy Kinman and Carl Thompson are building an airdome in Sullivan, Ind., at Main and Wall streets.

The airdome at Rochester, Ind., opened recently with "The Gilded Fool."

Fred Beckenrager, manager of the Colonial theatre, Evansville, Ind., has employed private detectives to assist the city and state authorities in finding incendiaries who set fire to his theatre recently, which caused a loss estimated at $1,000.

The Irvin theatre at Winchester, Ind., one of the best theatres in the state in a town the size of Winchester, will be opened shortly by John Stark, one of the proprietors of the Rex theatre at Decatur, Ind., as a moving picture and vaudeville theatre. Mr. Stark will devote his time to the Irvin theatre for the time being, while his partner, Mrs. Kirschner, operates the Rex theatre.

The Lyric theatre, Indianapolis, which has been running photo dramas and vaudeville during the last season, opened June 20 as an exclusive motion picture theatre for the summer months, showing "Graustark," the six-act production of the Essanay company in which Francis X. Bushman is featured.

The Elite theatre, Eighteenth and Montcalm streets, Indianapolis, has been reopened by McDonald & Holland after having ben closed for improvements

Zaring & Rhoades have sold the Delight theatre, Twenty-fourth street and college avenue, Indianapolis, to J. Woolley. The theatre is running the Kriterion program.

The big double exits at the Palms, a moving picture theatre at 136 North Illinois street, Indianapolis, averted a panic in the theatre one night last week when a roll of film exploded in the operator's booth. The exits were all opened and the crowd walked out quietly. While the patrons were going out without confusion, A. R. Strickley, the operator, had a busy time trying to extinguish the flames. The reel was destroyed, causing a loss of five hundred dollars. The moving picture machine also was badly damaged. Strickley was not injured.

A moving picture theatre owned by Frank White, at Monroeville, near Fort Wayne, was destroyed by fire June 17 when four buildings were destroyed. The fire started in a lunchroom and threatened to wipe out the business district until firemen and apparatus was sent from Fort Wayne.

IOWA

Frances Groom, one of the ladies who have entered the motion picture field in the Middle West and made a big success of it, has opened an airdome at Clarinda, Ia., where she owns the Bon Ton. The airdome is modern in structure and conveniently located. Clarinda is one of the busy county seats of Iowa.

A. F. Larson has bought the Iris at Hamburg, Ia., from J. K. Fisher.

E. H. Bennett has bought the Grand theatre at Cedar Falls, Ia. He is improving it and redecorating the interior. He has introduced World pictures into the town of Cedar Falls.

The Midwest Amusement Company, of Missouri Valley, Ia., has recently completed the erection of a combination airdome and theatre which they will operate this summer. On bad evenings the show will be in the theatre; on good evenings out doors. This is a new idea in this part of the country.

KANSAS

H. E. Herbert, owner of the Gem at Newton, Kan., opened his new theatre on Main street, June 2, with the feature "A Fool There Was." This is said to be one of the finest picture play houses in the state. Mr. Herbert will use Fox features.

A new airdome has been opened at Clyde, Kan., by L. W. Bloom. Mutual service will be used exclusively.

H. L. Bourne, Delphes, Kan., has changed the policy of his house and will in the future show every night instead of three nights a week as heretofore.

The J. W. Admire theatre at Hiawatha, Kan., has closed temporarily for remodeling.

L. W. Miller, manager of the Princess theatre at Hiawatha, Kan., has discontinued his policy of vaudeville for the summer and is running high-class features, changing three times weekly. He is using the Fox features. Mr. Miller has let a contract for a large moving picture theatre to be erected on Douglas avenue with a seating capacity of fifteen hundred. This will be completed some time this fall and will be devoted exclusively to feature films.

The Empress theatre, in Kansas City, formerly a vaudeville house, has opened with pictures. The Pathé "News," along with the "Who Pays?" features, make up the program.

Manager Bartlett, of the Lyric theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ky., has purchased a new Wurlitzer Unit Orchestra.

After trying summer vaudeville, which has not proven entirely satisfactory, Keith's Louisville theatre inaugurates a policy of photoplays beginning this week. According to present plans, this house will show pictures only until the advent of the regular vaudeville season in the fall. Admission will be five and ten cents.

J. L. Shrode, of the Cooperative Photoplay Company, of Hopkinsville, Ky., is seeking to purchase from George Bleich both the Empress and Queen theatres at Owensboro. Mr. Bleich denied a few days ago that any deal had been made, but admitted that a handsome figure had been offered him for his two houses.

Mr. Shrode states that he has an option on both theatres which he expects to close within a short time. The Cooperative Photoplay Company was formed a few months ago with the idea of establishing a chain of motion picture theatres in southwestern Kentucky. The company is at present planning to put up a modern house on Main street, Hopkinsville.

be installed by July 1. J. E. Pearce will appoint one of the best known organists in New Orleans.

Efforts of William Weisfeld, the New York motion picture producer, to make of the Athenaeum, the largest club in New Orleans, one of the largest screen palaces in the South has failed dismally, and as a result Mr. Weisfeld is several thousand dollars loser. Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland" proved a good drawing card. Among the reasons given for the failure of the Athenaeum was that it was too far away from the business district.

MAINE

A. L. Ehrgett, manager for the General Film Company in Bangor, has returned from a trip to Tenant's Harbor, a summer resort, where Mrs. Glenn Ross is planning on opening with pictures soon. The place has never had a theatre and the outlook is good, as a big summer business is anticipated.

Paul Demmons is about to open the town hall at East Machias with performances two nights a week.

Joseph Emery, manager of the Star theatre, of Bar Harbor, was a business visitor at the Bangor office of the Universal Film Company last week, and says that the summer resort is already well filled for the season.

The management of the Star theatre in Fairfield has just increased its service and business is booming in that town.

On June 14 Manager Henry J. Thibodeau opened the Strand theatre between Main and Water streets, in Old Town, Me. This is not to be an airdome, but a first-class, $10,000 house, showing only the best films. A big feature of the house is the Sturtevant system of heating and ventilating, providing warmth in winter and coolness in summer, with a change of air supply every two or three minutes.

A concrete conduit encircles three sides of the building, under the floor. A blower takes the air from outside generators, drives it through the conduit and a system of distributors to all parts of the theatre. The auditorium will seat 720. A Radium Gold Fibre screen has been installed. The front of the building is finished in white stucco, with cupid decorations surmounting an arch. A concrete sidewalk has been put in, with a concrete crosswalk to the opposite side of the street. A motor generator set will be used. A stage will be built this season for addition of vaudeville to the bill. Prices are popular; performances thrice daily. E. E. Boucher is proprietor.

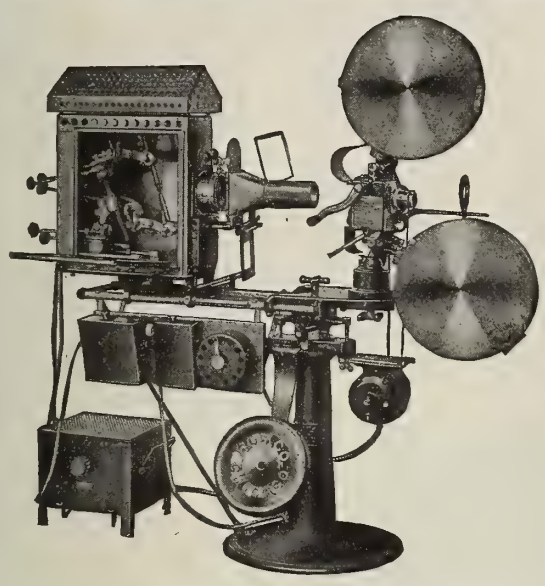
MASSACHUSETTS

The Bayside theatre at Allerton, Mass., has just been opened for the summer season. Manager D. J. Murphy runs this house only for the summer, at a straight admission of fifteen cents. The house seats six hundred and uses the General service.

Lexington Park, a summer amusement place near Boston, opened last week. John Benson is again manager of the picture house, which is using Universal service.

Manager Dodge has opened Paragon park, Nantasket, Mass., for the summer. The Scenic theatre inside the park is at present running vaudeville, but will go into motion pictures later.

The enterprising city of Lawrence, Mass., famous as the place where the Lawrence strike was fought out, and recently awarded a civic medal at the San Francisco exposition, will on September 1 witness the opening of the new theatre built by Toomey and Demara. The house will seat 3,000 and an unusual feature will be the escalators which will carry the crowds to and from the balcony.



This firm also owns the Colonial and the Broadway, which, with the new Empire, form a trio of the biggest theatres in the city. A paper called "The Spotlight" is published in the interests of these three theatres. It has a circulation of 5,000 weekly. The new theatre will be equipped with a big organ, not yet chosen.

V. J. Cohee, manager of the Olympia theatre on Washington street, Lynn, Mass., will close his house June 26 to remodel the front and install a Hutchins organ like the one in the Scollay Square Olympia, Boston. Mr. Cohee speaks highly of Lynn, which is famous for its shoe manufactories, as a film show town.

The Shawmut theatre in Roxbury, Mass., is to be enlarged from a seating capacity of six hundred to three thousand two hundred. J. Lourie, proprietor, says the Shawmut will be the largest one-balcony theatre, with one exception, in New England. C. H. Blackall, of Boston, is architect for the alterations.

Music and the Picture

Luz, Loew Director, Joins "News" Music Staff

FOLLOWING its policy of rendering every possible business service to the exhibitor that may contribute to the success of his theatre, MOTION PICTURE NEWS takes pleasure in announcing the engagement of Ernst Luz, general musical director of the twenty-five theatres which comprise the Marcus Loew Circuit, to conduct the Music Department of the Accessory News section.

The place of music as a factor in the satisfaction of a theatre audience and the consequent success of a picture is now universally recognized. Every exhibitor now takes care to provide some kind of music with the pictures that form his program—even if it is the wrong kind of music.

But appropriate music is, after all, an essential. And to get this, and know when he has it, is a problem that every exhibitor who is not as good a musician as he is a business man, has to meet.

It is to guide the exhibitor in the selection of his music, to supply helpful hints and suggestions to his musicians, to put at their disposal and his the services of an expert, whose entire time is devoted to composing musical programs to accompany motion pictures, that MOTION PICTURE NEWS has engaged Mr. Luz.

Mr. Luz is more than a musician. He is a motion picture musician. The difference is just about as pronounced as the difference between a stage star and a screen star. He has specialized for several years in music for the photoplay, and this specialized knowledge he will place at the disposal of every reader of MOTION PICTURE NEWS every week.

ERNST LUZ

What is probably Mr. Luz's most important contribution to the field of photoplay music is the invention of a system by which he can supply, at short notice, the appropriate music for any theatre program in the country.

His method of orchestration makes it possible for any theatre, no matter what its musical facilities may be, to use his musical programs and adapt them to their needs.

The result of this for the readers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be that, whether they are using a piano, a four-piece orchestra or a twenty-five-piece orchestra, an organ or a one-man orchestra, Mr. Luz's instructions can be followed equally by all.

In addition to the musical program data which Mr. Luz will contribute regularly for the benefit of our readers, he will undertake to answer all inquiries relating to the musical phase of the photoplay theatre's life. Space will be set aside for the answering of these queries and all exhibitors are invited to avail themselves of his musical ability.

Mr. Luz was born at Allentown, Pa., February 15, 1878, of German parents. He received his musical education from experienced teachers, and first entered the field as a professional in 1892, at Niblo's Gardens, Houston street and Broadway, which, in its days, was well known throughout the country, first gaining its extensive reputation by the production of "The Black Crook," the first ballet of any importance introduced to the public on a large scale in the United States.

Mr. Luz entered the picture musical field in April, 1912, making a study of dramatic cuing of pictures with an augmented orchestra. He became musical editor of "Moving Picture News" in August, 1912.

Mr. Luz's studies required the entire knowledge of picture making from the scenario to the assembling department.

Mr. Luz has always considered motion pictures as the ultimate expression of dramatic expression, and advocates the treatment of the subject as an art demanding the highest talents from those engaged in its various departments. He believes in the best in motion pictures and music for accompanying them.

Mr. Luz became musical director for Loew's Broadway theatre, New York, in March, 1913. Nine months later he was made general musical director, and now has a score of assistants under his direction.

Mr. Luz was the first musician to agitate the prepared orchestral and musical illustration to picture action, and the first to accomplish it with augmented orchestra in daily change programs.

In the position of musical director for the entire chain of theatres of Marcus Loew, numbering some twenty-five in New York City and vicinity, Mr. Luz personally views all the films of the different programs as well as many feature films. In fact, every film that is shown in any of the Loew theatres has first been viewed by Mr. Luz.

Mr. Luz makes notes while viewing the films; these notes are turned over to his assistants, who in turn select from a library of over 10,000 volumes, Mr. Luz's personal collection, representing many years of research, the musical selections called for by these notes. How he does this and by what method he formulates the music plots used in connection with all the pictures shown each day in every Loew theatre will be illustrated in his contributions to this department.

Musical Program for "Hypocrites" is a Success

THE following musical program, prepared by Philip H. Aldrich, director of the Orpheum theatre, Flint, Mich., was successful for "Hypocrites," a Bosworth film, when it was put on at that theatre:

Reel I.—"Nearer My God to Thee," hymn (once through). 2. "The Rosary," by Nevin (when Gabriel is seen at his work). 3. Largo by Händel. 4. "La Belle Roumaine," waltz by Ivanovici (for fête scene). 5. "Artist's Reverie," waltz by Aubrey (as soon as people become angry with Gabriel's statue and start to mob him begin at the Valse and play according to action on screen).

Reel II.—6. "Artist's Reverie" (continued on through scenes in same manner until Truth passes through gates). 7. "The Lost Chord," by Sullivan (during scenes of faces of congregation in modern church). Play No. 7 until the minister steps in front of altar, then end it with a chord—"A-men" fashion—and when the choir starts to march out play 8, "Onward Christian Soldiers," hymn, by Sullivan. (Play No. 8 once through and soften as choir disappears.) 9. "Melody of Peace," Martin.

Reel III.—10. "Melody of Peace" (continued 'till Gabriel's spirit arises and points upward); then 11, "Lead Kindly Light," hymn (once through); then 12, "Illusion Waltz," by Neve (until Gabriel and two girls reach flat place on mountainside); then 13, "Lead Kindly Light" (twice through—first time mf—second P.P.; then back to 14, "Illusion Waltz" (until one girl reaches top of hill and stretches forth her hands for help; then 15, "I Need Thee Every Hour," hymn (once through); then back to 16, "Illusion Waltz" ('till end of reel).

Reel IV.—17. L'Amour le Dira," waltz by Brown. (Play until Society scene); then back to No. 1 of Waltz. As soon as two dancers appear jump to second strain of No. 1 and play Allegro and forte until Gabriel and Truth; then soften and slow down 'till Love scene; then 18, "Love's Old Sweet Song," by Molloy (just a few bars of chorus) and run back into 19, L'Amour le Dira" ('till Modesty); then 20, "Hesitation Waltz," by Casella (played in 2/4 and 3/4 tempo, according to action on screen, until The Home; then 21, "Home, Sweet Home" (just a few bars); then back to 22, "Hesitation Waltz" (played according to action until scene in church); then 23, "Melody of Peace," by Martin (until minister is found dead); then 24, "Abide with Me," hymn (until end of reel).

Even a small reed organ works in with nice effect on some of the scenes.

Bartola Instruments Installed in Many Theatres

ON Wednesday, June 16, the Bartola Musical Instrument Company formally opened its new Chicago demonstrating hall and offices on the seventh floor of the Mallers building.

An excellent musical program was provided and Margaret Rebou supplied vocal music which added considerably to the entertainment. Among those present were: Val A. Reis, the largest piano dealer in St. Louis; Mr. Bennett, of the Twentieth Century theatre, Gary, Indiana; George Hines, of the Auditorium theatre, South Bend, Indiana; Isadore Bernstein, who operates two houses in Springfield, Illinois, and some fifty other prominent exhibitors.

The Glenn theatre, which has just been completed at Ninety-third street and St. Clair avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, and will be operated by Mr. Kausek, has been equipped with a Bartola Grand.

A Bartola Grand has been sold to Howell Graham, of the Majestic theatre, at Chattanooga, Tenn.

St. Louis Airdome Uses Two Orchestras

THE North Grand airdome, at Grand avenue and Natural Bridge road, St. Louis, under the management of Warner Brothers, is a very large place, and in order to make the attractiveness and enjoyment of the outdoor theatre as great as possible, two orchestras have been employed, one playing near the screen and the other near the operating booth in the back.

In this manner the patrons who come late and have to sit in the rear hear the music as well as those sitting down nearer the screen. The orchestra near the booth can also be heard from the street, which adds not a little as a drawing card for the airdome. The lighting system is arranged in a very clever way at the North Grand.

Instead of overhead wires the lights are placed on posts at intervals inside and all around the airdome, and is considered much safer than the other way in case of storms causing wires to break.

Many Pittsburgh Theatres Use Only Organs

MANY of the theatres in Pittsburgh have done away with orchestras at present and are using their organs exclusively.

There are very few of the theatres not equipped with organs in that section and these are proving big savers of money at a time when the summer parks are doing business and the theatres in the hot town are being deserted for the cooler sections of the park.

Russian Pianist Is an Added Attraction

AS an added musical feature at the Boston theatre, Boston, where Caroline B. Nichols and her Boston Fadettes orchestra play for the pictures, Josef Martin, a Russian pianist, who at the beginning of the war barely escaped arrest in Berlin, has just filled a return engagement.

Piano solos by an expert form an innovation in New England motion picture houses.

Minusa Screen Sold to Government for Pacific Coast

THE United States Army has ordered a ten by twelve-foot Minusa Gold Fibre screen to be shipped from the St. Louis offices of the Minusa Cine Products Company, to the office of the Quartermaster General in San Francisco, Cal. The screen will be used for the entertainment and instruction of the Coast Defence troops.

THE BARTOLA ORCHESTRA

Do you want a musical instrument for your theatre that leads all others in simplicity of operation, and beautiful tonal effects minus the trouble that goes with rubber tubes, belts, pulleys and paper rolls?

Seldom is it that a story is found big enough to comprehend all the versatile breadth of Marc MacDermott's living art, but "Eugene Aram," story of stories, vibrant with pathos, glorious endeavor, tender love, and ignominious death for the guilt of another, rings with the power of Marc MacDermott's portrayals, the heart-reaching insight of a master story teller of an age that is gone—Bulwer Lytton—and heightened, beautified and intensified with the skill of Director Richard Ridgley. The ever-appealing Mabel Trunnelle, the deft Edward Earle, the convincing Bigelow Cooper, winsome Gladys Hulette, Herbert Prior and George Wright to round out and give added power to this tragic life story.
